II. God taught him by a beautiful natural parable.—He was bidden to stand at the entrance to the cave, but this he hesitated to do, until afterwards. Did that hesitancy arise from a guilty conscience, reminding him, that all was not right between him and God?

Presently there was the sound of the rushing of a mighty wind, and in another moment a violent tornado was sweeping past. Nothing could withstand its fury. It rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the Lord; the valleys were littered with splintered fragments; but the Lord was not in the wind. And when the wind had died away there was an earthquake. The mountain swayed to and fro, yawning and cracking; the ground heaved as if an Almighty hand were passing beneath it; but the Lord was not in the earthquake. And when the earthquake was over there was a fire. The heavens were one blaze of light, each pinnacle and peak glowed in the kindling flame; the valley beneath looked like a huge smelting-furnace; but the Lord was not in the fire.

How strange! Surely these were the appropriate natural symbols of the Divine presence. If we had been asked to describe it we should have used these first of all. But, hark! a still, small whisper is in the air—very still, and very small, like the trembling echoes of a flute which is being played among the hills. It touched the listening heart of the prophet. If the more tumultuous outburst of power had expressed the storm and passion of his nature, this elicited and interpreted a sweeter, nobler self, and cast a softening spell over his tempest-tossed spirit, and seemed to be the tender cadence of the love and pity of God which had come in search of him. Its music drew him from the cave, into the innermost recesses of which he had been driven by the terrible convulsions of nature. "And it was so, when Elijah heard it, that he wrapped his face in his mantle, and went out, and stood in the entering in of the cave."

What was the meaning of all this? It is not difficult to understand. Elijah was most eager that his people should be restored to their allegiance to God, and he thought that it could only be done by some striking and wonderful act. He may have often spoke thus with himself, "Those idols shall never be swept from our land, unless God sends a movement swift and irresistible as the wind, which hurries the clouds before it. The land can never be awakened except by a moral earthquake. There must be a baptism of fire." And when he stood on Carmel, and beheld the panic amongst the priests, and the eagerness amongst the people; he thought that the time, the set time, had come. But all that died away. That was not God's chosen way of saving Israel. And because He did not go on working thus, Elijah thought that He was not working at all, and abandoned himself to the depths of despondency.

But in this natural parable God seemed to say:—"My child, thou hast been looking for Me to answer thy prayers with striking signs and wonders; and because these have not been given in a marked and permanent form, thou hast thought Me heedless and inactive. But I am not always to be found in these great visible movements; I love to work gently, softly, and unperceived; I have been working so; I am working so still; and there are in Israel, as the results of my quiet gentle ministry, 'seven thousand, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him.'" Yes, and was not the gentle ministry of Elisha, succeeding the stormy career of his great predecessor, like the still small voice after the wind, the earthquake, and the fire? And is it not probable that more real good was effected by his unobtrusive life and miracles than was even wrought by the splendid deeds of Elijah?

We often fall into similar mistakes. When we wish to promote a revival, we seek to secure large crowds, much evident impression, powerful preachers; influences comparable to the wind, the earthquake, and the fire. When these are present, we account that we are secure of having the presence and power of God. But surely Nature herself rebukes us. Who hears the roll of the planets? Who can detect the falling of the dew? Whose eye has ever been injured by the breaking of the wavelets of daylight on the shores of our planet? "There is no speech, nor language, their voice is not heard." At this moment the mightiest forces are in operation around us; but there is nothing to betray their presence. And thus was it with the ministry of the Lord Jesus. He did not strive, nor cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the streets. Whilst men were expecting him at the front door, with blare of trumpet; He stepped into his destined home in the disguise of a peasant's child. His going forth is ever prepared as the morning. He comes down as showers on the mown grass. His Spirit descends as the dove, whose wings make no tremour in the still air. Let us take heart. God may not be working as we expect; but He is working. If not in the wind, yet in the zephyr. If not in the earthquake, yet in the heart-break. If not in the fire, yet in the warmth of summer. If not in thunder, yet in the still small voice. If not in crowds, yet in lonely hearts, in silent tears, in the broken sobs of penitents, and in multitudes, who, like the seven thousand of Israel, are unknown as disciples.

But Elijah refused to be comforted. It seemed as if he could not shake off the mood in which he was ensnared. And so when God asked him the second time: What doest thou here, Elijah? he answered in the self-same words, with which he had tried to justify himself before. "And he said, I have been very jealous"...

It is pleasant to think of those 7000 disciples, known only to God. We are sometimes sad, as we compare the scanty number of professing Christians, with the masses of the ungodly. But we may take heart. There are other Christians beside. That harsh-seeming governor is a Joseph in disguise. That wealthy owner of the garden in Aramathea is a lowly follower of Jesus. That member of the Sanhedrim is a disciple, but secretly, for fear of the Jews. For every one entered on our rolls of communicants, there are hundreds, perhaps thousands, whom God shall reckon as his, when He makes up his jewels. But, if you, dear reader, are one of that number, I entreat you, do not remain so; it puts you in a false position; it robs the cause of God of your help and influence; it is an act of treachery to Christ Himself. Beware lest, if you are ashamed of Him, the time may come when He shall be ashamed of you.

We are all doing more good than we know. Elijah thought that he was doing nothing except when battling with idolatry and sin. He never thought how often he was helping those 7000, by the indirect influence of his example. We, perhaps, accomplish less by our great efforts, than we effect by a consistent life, a holy character, a daily shining. Lighthouse keepers never know how many weary longing eyes turn in the darkness to the silent light they maintain through the dark night.

III. God sent him back to work for Him.—"Go; return." It was very good of God to use him again at all. He would have been justified in dismissing his servant, who had failed in so important a juncture. But notice, He did not employ him again in the post he had deserted. Nor does Elijah ever seem to have been entrusted with the same widespread national influence, after the flight from Jezreel, that he had been honoured with before. Indeed, he was here commissioned to anoint the three men who were to share amongst them the work which he might have accomplished, if only he had been true to his opportunities. "Go, return on thy way to the wilderness of Damascus: and when thou comest, anoint Hazael to be king over Syria: and Jehu, the son of Nimshi, shalt thou anoint to be king over Israel: and Elisha the son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah shall thou anoint to be prophet in thy room." Does it not remind you of the case of Moses, who, for one sin, was forbidden to enter Canaan; and was commanded to resign the post which he had held so long to his servant Joshua?

One solemn lesson remains. Let us beware. God will never put us away as his children; but He may put us away as his servants. Who does not recall the names of some, once eminently honoured, but now laid aside? Let us beware lest this fate befall any one of us. It may. One false step; one hurried desertion of our post; one act of failure; one outburst of passion; any one of these may be enough to force our heavenly Father to cast us away, as Samson did the jawbone of the ass, with which he had slain heaps upon heaps.

We may not forfeit heaven; that is guaranteed to us too certainly by the blood of Jesus. We may even be favoured by a glorious and triumphant entrance thither in an equipage of flame. But never again shall we stand on Carmel's height, with such an opportunity of usefulness. Others must take up the work as it drops from our hands.

ANCHORAGE MISSION.—We are requested to state that all letters as to the admission of young women to this Mission be addressed to Mrs. Stuart-Wortley, Rosslyn House, Grove End-road, N.W. Questions connected with the legal part of the work (affiliation cases) may be addressed to Colonel Stuart-Wortley.

MONTREAL SHELTERING HOMES.—A large company assembled on the occasion of the recent dedication of two houses for rescue purposes. Miss Barber, who has many ladies associated with her, and is heartily supported by the W.C.T.U., has long been engaged in work amongst the fallen, and the scheme she has been devising whereby unfortunate women, on their release from prison, could be sheltered and cared for, and led to lead a new life, has now taken practical shape. She could not be discouraged as to the work, she said, so long as she knew that Jesus came "to seek and to save that which was lost." Over the door is the motto in gas, "God is love," placed there in imitation of Mr. Moody, who once said if he could not preach the words into the hearts of the people, he would burn them in. Bishops Bond and Ussher and other leading men of the city took part in the dedication, and expressed their warm sympathy with the work.

ITALIANS IN LONDON.

Dear Sir,—It may be interesting to some of your readers to learn that evangelistic work has been carried on among Italians in London, and blessing vouchsafed in connection with it during the past quarter of a century. A Bible-class is held each Sunday afternoon by Professor Leone Levi (honorary secretary of the Mission), and there is a Sunday-school, conducted by other devoted friends. The President of the Society is Professor J. H. Gladstone.

There has been a constant house-to-house visitation by the missionary, Count V. di Sergolina, who has truly had a chequered history, having sacrificed all earthly possessions to his love for his countrymen. He was condemned to the Papal dungeons (with the confiscation of all that belonged to him) by Pio IX., and suffered much misery. The following brief narrative was related to some of our committee by a lady, who is well known as an earnest and self-denying friend to the Italians at home and abroad. I give it in her own words:—"I was sketching by the roadside near Bagni di Zucca, a lady sitting beside me distributing Bibles, when a poor workman passed us. My friend offered him a Bible. He said, 'You need not give me one. I was in England for eight years, and attended the Sabbath-school in Hatton-garden, and there learned to love my Bible. I brought it to Italy, and now, in my home in the mountains, I read it with my wife. We have given up confessing to the priest, and confess and pray to God alone.' You may be sure I listened with interest, and found that Count Sergolina had been his teacher. I have been looking out for the Count ever since, and only a few months ago made his acquaintance, and found him to be indeed a saint well disciplined in the school of suffering."

This is one testimony out of many to the watering of the seed sown. The committee has met with severe loss within the last two years in the death of two of its most valued members—Mr. J. H. Fordham and Mr. Robert Glover.

Yours faithfully, J. G. Robertson.

Oak Hill Park, Hampstead, N.W.

◆

A NEW TRANSLATION.

[Literally from the Hebrew.]

2 Samuel xxiii. 1—5.

1.—Now these, of David, are the latest words:—
David, the son of Jesse, hath declared,
Even the man exalted hath declared,
Touching the Anointed One of Jacob's God,
The pleasant theme of Israel's [sacred] psalms:—
2.—The Spirit of Jehovah spake in me,
And on my tongue was his prophetic word.
3.—To me said Israel's God, Israel's Rock
Spake of a ruler over Adam's race,
A righteous ruler, reverencing God.
4.—And as the light of morning shall He rise,
Sun of a morning unobscured by clouds;
By [whose] bright shining after copious rain,
The tender herbage [springeth] from the earth.
5.—Although my house be not so with [my] God,
Yet hath He made a covenant with me,
Eternal, ordered in all things, and sure,
[Which] though all my salvation and delight
He will not cause it, yet, to issue forth.

Blackheath. W. C. S.

MR. & MRS. WOODFORD FAWCETT, Bressay House, Tulse Hill, recently gave their annual tea and garden meeting to the servants in the immediate neighbourhood. Two hundred and eighty invitations were accepted, and tea was provided on the lawn. A Gospel temperance meeting was afterwards held in a tent, presided over by Mr. Josiah Nix. Addresses were delivered by Mr. and Mrs. Hind-Smith, Mrs. Golding and Mrs. Fawcett. Fifty-five pledges were taken and several professed to decide for the Lord.

FROM THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

The following is from a missionary who went out from Mr. Guinness' Training Institute:—

I came to this country about five years ago and commenced labouring in the Gospel chiefly among the English people who are scattered over the vast plain of the Argentine Republic, where by the grace of God I was permitted to see some fruits of my labours. After three short years I was compelled to return to England in consequence of broken-down health, the resul of overtaxing my strength, in endeavouring to reach the solitary families who had never been visited, and who were too far out ever to reach a place of worship.

I am thankful to say that something is being done for the spread of the Gospel in this city, and some three or four places in the interior. In Buenos Ayres, Rosario, and a few other towns, services have been held, but the only permanent efforts for the spread of the Gospel among the Spanish multitudes of the Republic are in Buenos Ayres and Rosario, as far as I can gather. But Spanish Scriptures have found their way into many towns. When we consider the immense tract of country—the Argentine Republic being more than nine times the size of Great Britain—and the many towns still without the Gospel, we see how great the need is.

One striking feature at the present time is the readiness of the people here to listen to the Gospel. Not long ago they were as difficult to reach as the people of their mother country, Spain; now they seem to have very little respect for the priests, disregarding their teaching, and disbelieving it too. They are ready, no doubt, for the Gospel; but, if still left without it, will, I fear, soon sink into the grossest infidelity.

Yesterday the sad news reached me of the death of a young Spaniard—the first-fruits of my work in Spanish. He avoided any who were likely to speak to him of salvation. Alas! there were very few to avoid; but desiring to learn English, and I not speaking Spanish at the time, he kept as much as possible with me, when near. I learnt a portion of Scripture to repeat to him, and that was all the Spanish I knew at the time. God owned the Word in blessing to his soul. He at once began to serve the Lord, living on his own private means. He was very bright and intelligent, with a great power of attraction, so that many gathered round him to listen. God blessed him, and made him a blessing.

When I was leaving this country, as he and I walked up and down the landing-stage, he suddenly stopped, saying, in Spanish, "Tell me, Brother Ewen, are there no Christians in England?" "Yes," I answered, "hundreds of thousands." "Then," with a most sad face, he continued, "why do they not come out here? Do you know that Buenos Ayres is so ready for the Gospel that you have only to announce a meeting, and the people crowd in until there is not room to stand?" After serving the Lord faithfully, he entered into his rest, after a few days' illness.

We much need the prayers of the Lord's people for our work here, and we long to see many labourers sent forth into this ripe field for Gospel work.—Yours faithfully in the Lord,

J. H. L. Ewen.

Poste Restante, Montevideo, Uruguay, S.A.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BIBLE AND PRAYER UNION.—The object of this Union is to help young people so to use the Word of God that it may send its clear light upon their daily path, and also assist them to prove the efficacy of prayer. Like all others established with this object, the Union works in a very important sphere, and, as shown by many letters received, has already been the means of much blessing. The little publication, Lighted Footsteps, contains besides a monthly letter, much that will interest and instruct. It is published at a farthing, the yearly subscription, including postage, being fourpence. Communications to be addressed Rev. W. Darlow Sarjeant, Greenwich.

WATCHING FOR SOULS.

The bulky volume giving an account of Gospel effort in connection with the Evangelistic Mission, just issued by Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, director, is very aptly designated by the words at the head of this notice. In all the places referred to, where the work of evangelisation has been going on in connection with this Mission, there has evidently been an earnest "watching for souls," and in many cases a precious ingathering.

The work, both in London and the provinces, is of a very comprehensive and far-reaching character. In the Metropolis there are some ten centres constantly occupied. Kilburn Hall (opened in 1868) is the first to which reference is made, and a very encouraging fact in connection with the work here carried on is that the members and workers are themselves the spiritual fruit of the ministry of the Gospel preached under that roof. A Sunday-school, with an average attendance of three hundred and fifty, mothers' meeting, young women's Bible-class, and other agencies, are actively carried on. Malden Hall, between Haverstock-hill and Kentish-town, is another hive of Christian industry. Here there is a men's Bible-class, with a weekly attendance of sixty or seventy, and a Sunday-school, with about five hundred children; and a large amount of open-air and evangelistic effort is continuously in operation. During the winter children's special services are held every Tuesday. The personal testimonies added to the notice given of this work, are of the deepest interest. This hall, it is added, is too small for the many claims upon it, and more accommodation is urgently needed.

Turning in another direction we come to Bignold Hall, Forest-gate, which, in its enlarged form, capable of holding 700 persons, was opened in 1884. About thirty of the new converts last year formed themselves into an open-air band of evangelists, holding services twice a week. The mothers' meeting here has been very greatly blessed, and there is, besides the regular Sunday-school, a Bible-class for women, the number regularly attending being between fifty and sixty. Dalston Hall was opened in 1882, and some very interesting cases of conversion are given in connection with the work here.

From 1874 to 1885 services were held during the winter in the Oxford Music Hall, and, like the theatre services generally, were made the means of spreading the Gospel news amongst large numbers of persons who seldom or never attended a place of worship, and who had long been strangers to the truths of the Bible. Other music halls were also similarly made use of by this Mission. At West Kensington Hall, again, where Dr. Popham labours with unremitting energy, frequent services are held in the week, as well as on the Lord's Day, and have been abundantly blessed.

The account of work in the provinces is even more extensive and certainly not less interesting than of that in London. The Wiltshire branch of the Evangelistic Mission was commenced at Swindon in 1880, and since then the Central Hall has continued to be the centre of numerous Christian agencies, by which many have been led to Christ; some in wonderful ways. The workers go out into the streets and surrounding villages, and cottage meetings are frequently held. At Stretham, near Ely, Cambridgeshire, there is also, in connection with this Mission, a mission-hall and workman's reading-room, where the Gospel is faithfully preached, the services and meetings being well attended. It is a cheering sight, wrote a visitor, "to find about one-third of the population of a large village gathered into the pleasant well-arranged mission hall on Sunday nights to hear the simple preaching of the Gospel, while goodly numbers also assemble at morning and afternoon services in the same place." From this place also the Gospel is carried to many villages around.

Then there is in this volume, which we heartily commend to the attention of our readers, a cheering record of occasional missions in various counties. In glancing through it, it is impossible not to feel deep thankfulness as we see in how many and varied ways the Lord has blessed these labours of his servants to the salvation of men and women. The book is published by Messrs. Shaw & Co., 48, Paternoster-row, or it may be had at the office of the Mission, 164, Alexandra-road, St. John's Wood, N.W. (1s.)

◆

PRINCESS MARY VILLAGE HOMES.

OPENING OF THE CHILDREN'S CHURCH.

These Homes are charmingly situated at Addlestone, on reaching which the visitor will get some glimpses of lovely scenery—of the winding Thames, of the green Surrey lanes, and of a wood, from amidst the cool depths of which rises the red tower of the village church. Entering the gateway of the Homes, on our left is the church, the dedication of which on Wednesday last week drew together a large company of visitors. In front is the lawn lit up with flowers, and around are the houses in which, now gathered in families, reside two hundred of the children of the criminal classes—some whose parents (one or both) are in prison, others who have been rescued from cruel and wicked guardians, and from a career of infamy for which they were intended. Each Home contains ten children of varying ages, and is presided over by a "mother," who, as letters from some who have left the Homes testify, well and truly acts this part to those committed to her care.

The Homes, which on this occasion were thrown open to the inspection of visitors, were spotlessly clean, and, in contrast with the scenes from which the children have happily been rescued, must be paradises of peace and joy. The children are educated, and trained in laundry-work, and as domestic servants.

The church, which cost £1200, will hold about 350 persons, and a portion is set apart for the inhabitants of the locality. The Princess Mary of Teck, and a number of aristocratic visitors were present, and the event occasioned great interest in the locality, the building being quite full. Very pleasant was it during the service, in the prayers and in the singing, to hear so clearly and harmoniously the children's voices. An anthem sung by them was admirably rendered.

The Bishop of Winchester, in a brief address at the close of the service, dwelt especially on the value of Christian education for the young. It is impossible, he said, to conceive a better investment than that of depositing Christian truth in the hearts of the young, and it is equally impossible to say how great will be the return for that investment by which one child is taken from poverty and evil surroundings and trained in right principles. The responsibility of Christians, then, in this matter is as plain as is the reward.

Sir H. Selwin Ibbetson, the treasurer, drew attention to the remarkably good reports received from Her Majesty's and the diocesan inspector, and referred to the financial position of the Homes. Mrs. Meredith also mentioned as a most important fact that, of the hundreds of children who have passed through the Homes, not one per cent. has gone back into paths of degradation and vice.

ANTI-TOBACCO SOCIETY.—The nineteenth annual report of this Society states that there are now over five hundred members, sixty-six having joined during the year. A large number of telling tracts and pamphlets on the question of smoking, especially as it relates to juveniles, has been issued and circulated. It is a promising sign that the demand for this literature is increasing, and the effort to meet it forms a prominent feature in the Society's operations. The committee suggest the adoption of a pledge against tobacco as well as drink, by Bands of Hope, and that instruction on the nature and effects of tobacco might be included in ordinary Sunday-school addresses. Mr. Frank Spence, 56, Peter-street, Manchester, is the hon. sec. of the Society.

BIBLE STUDY.

WITHOUT THE CAMP—WITHOUT THE GATE.

I.—Without the camp; the leper's position—type of the sinner (Lev. xiii. 45, 46).

(1) Clothes rent.—"All our righteousnesses are as filthy rags" Isa. lxiv. 6). "When the King came in to see the guests, He saw there a man which had not on a wedding garment....Then said the King to his servants...Cast him into outer darkness" (Matt. xxii. 11—13).

(2) Head bare and lip covered—signs of mourning.—"The wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked" (Isa. lvii. 20, 21). "The way of the wicked is as darkness" (Prov. iv. 19). "Destruction and misery are in their ways; and the way of peace have they not known" (Rom. iii. 16, 17). "The wages of sin is death" (Rom. vi. 23).

(3) Unclean.—"We are all as an unclean thing" (Isa. lxiv. 6). "They are altogether become filthy; there is none that doeth good, no, not one" (Ps. liii. 3).

(4) Cast out.—"Without the camp shall his habitation be" (Lev. xiii. 46). "There shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth" (Rev. xxi. 27). "Without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie" (Rev. xxii. 15).

II.—Without the gate; where Jesus suffered.—(In type): "The bullock for the sin-offering, and the goat for the sin-offering, whose blood was brought in to make atonement in the holy place, shall one carry forth without the camp; and they shall burn in the fire their skins, and their flesh, and their dung" (Lev. xvi. 27). (In fact): "Jesus also, that He might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate" (Heb. xiii. 12).

THE OUTCAST SINNER MEETS THE OUTCAST SAVIOUR.

He is (1) Covered.—"He hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, He hath covered me with the robe of righteousness" (Isa. lxi. 10).

(2) Rejoicing.—"He hath put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God" (Ps. xl. 3). "Because thy lovingkindness is better than life, my lips shall praise Thee"...My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness; and my mouth shall praise Thee with joyful lips" (Ps. lxiii. 3—7).

(3) Cleansed.—"Ye are washed...ye are sanctified...ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God" (1 Cor. vi. 11). "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John i. 7). "Washed...from our sins in his own blood" (Rev. i. 5).

(4) Brought nigh.—"Now, in Christ Jesus, ye who sometimes were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ" (Eph. ii. 13). "Where I am, there shall also My servant be" (John xii. 26). "These are they which...have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb" (Rev. vii. 14). Janet Clark.

INVALIDS' AUXILIARY TO MISSIONS.—The Edinburgh Medical Missionary Society have for some time had in working a plan what might well be adopted on a large scale. It is that of enlisting invalids to aid those who are suffering and in spiritual darkness, by their work. Many who are quite laid aside by ill-health are yet able to do a little needlework, and quite a number of invalid ladies are enrolled as an auxiliary of this Society. Their work is sold once a year at a bazaar, held usually in November, and last year the total proceeds amounted to £130, which was distributed in sums of from £15 to £5 amongst sixteen different missions in various parts of the world. The work, by giving something of interest to the broken life, must be beneficial to the invalid herself, and the report shows how much of blessing there is in this watering of parched ground, almost, it might be said, with tears. Miss Cowan, Westerlea, Murrayfield, N.B., is one of the secretaries.

THE PURITY CRUSADE.

FOREIGN TRAFFIC IN YOUNG GIRLS.

A special meeting of the committee of the National Vigilance Association was held last week to hear a report from Mr. Coote, the secretary, who has recently been to Rotterdam, with the object of moving the authorities there on this subject. From what transpired it appears that numbers of English girls, from representations made by German agents here, are engaged nominally to sing at cafés chantants in that city, as well as in many other places on the Continent. Too late they find out that for the most part these places are dens of infamy. Many sad cases were mentioned in which girls have been ruined as a result of having been thus entrapped.

After considerable discussion it was resolved to memorialise Government with the view to an international law to the following effect:—"That it shall not be lawful to employ any girls (minors) of any nationality foreign to the country in which they are proposed to be employed, in any place of entertainment where spirituous liquors are sold, unless they can produce proof of the consent of their parents or guardians; such consent to be properly ratified to the satisfaction of the consul."

A telegram was handed to the secretary at the close of the meeting which ran as follows:—"Many thanks; friends have prevented girls from going." This related to a case where it had come to the knowledge of an employer that some girls in his establishment had been engaged by a firm on the Continent. He wrote to Mr. Coote for particulars as to the character of this firm, the result of which justified the gravest suspicions. The girls were thus prevented from running into a snare of the most dangerous kind. This, obviously, is a field of investigation in which employers and friends of those who are tempted to undertake service in foreign lands may unite with the Society in ascertaining such particulars as will effectually safeguard the girls. The office of the National Vigilance Association is 267, Strand, W.C.

LADIES' NATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

A very earnest and serious spirit pervaded the proceedings of the annual public meeting, on Thursday last, of this Association for abolishing State-regulated vice. Mrs. Josephine Butler, who presided, said this was the first meeting of the Association since the great repeal victory. Some of the repeal societies dissolved in consequence of that victory, but the instinct of the Ladies' Association to keep together had been justified by events. There is a great work yet to be done, not only in vigilance effort at home, but in securing repeal for India and the British Colonies. There are indications on the part of some professed repealers, especially on the Continent, to favour compromise; on the other hand, the system is in danger of being revived in this country in another form. On the Continent, unhappily, there is a defection from the high ground of stern, unbending principle; the miasma that surrounds this system of regulated vice seems to have blunted the moral perceptions of some of the friends there. We, therefore, need to pronounce once more with great distinctness on this vital and central point. The International Conference of the Federation comes off at Lausanne in the first week of September, and Mrs. Butler hoped there would be a large attendance of British repealers. She read the first resolution, which, among other things, strongly protested against the exercise of any discretionary power, in regulating public morals, on the part of the police.

Mr. Stansfeld, M.P., explained that while Prof. Stuart, M.P., as a younger man, had now taken the lead of the Parliamentary agitation, he was ready to stand by the Professor's side and render all the help he could in this warfare. He contended that not only the repression of crime but the discouragement of vice is a part of the work to be undertaken; this latter function cannot safely be entrusted to policemen or to magistrates, but rather to the watchful action of the Christian public. In earnest and eloquent language Mr. Stansfeld urged that we must never rest till we get perfect equality as between man and woman on all moral questions. He held up to scorn and contempt "the gross, and monstrous, and brutal iniquity of men who dare to invade the sanctity of womanhood, merely to gratify their degraded passions." Referring to the Cass case, he protested against the morality of a district and the liberty of innocent women being at the mercy of a tainted man like Constable Endacott.

The resolution was cordially supported by Prof. Stuart, M.P., Mr. Rowntree, M.P., and Mr. C. B. McLaren, M.P. Mr. Rowntree thought that the decision of the House of Commons in the case of Miss Cass was among the brightest spots of the present session. He did not remember any previous instance of the House of Commons adjourning simply to vindicate the cause of a wronged and innocent woman. All these three honourable members expressed the strong opinion that the voice and influence of women will never have their due weight on these moral questions till they enjoy the Parliamentary franchise.

A resolution supporting the thorough repeal of the system in the British Colonies was moved in a pathetic speech by Miss Helen Taylor. The long oppression to which women had been subjected, she said, had taught them the truth on these moral questions, and it was now time that they should teach their teachers. A "morals police" is needed, but the best morals police in the world are the virtuous women. In earnestly supporting the resolution Mr. Crossley, M.P., said the initial cause of this evil was the large standing army and navy. When, he asked, will the day come when international differences are settled in a peaceful manner, and thus remove a perennial cause of sin and wrong? Mr. H. J. Wilson, M.P., followed in the same line of remark, and urged the need of vigilant action both at home and abroad. He made the excellent and practical suggestion that the promoters of repeal in this country should provide their friends in the Colonies with an ample supply of such literature as will inform their minds, and arouse them to earnest co-operation.

In moving a resolution with respect to India, Mrs. Pearsall Smith said that while sitting in the meeting she had seemed to hear the cry of millions of her helpless sisters in that land. Without any voice of their own that can reach the powers that be, we must speak on their behalf. She pressed home upon her English and American sisters their responsibility to do something in this matter, and said that when Mrs. Butler gives the word of command, all must be ready to act.

Mr. Bhaget Ram, barrister of the Middle Temple, in supporting the resolution, read an extract from a Lahore paper, describing the excesses and enormities of the "morals police" in India, as an illustration of the need of reform. He pleaded most pathetically for the cause of his oppressed and degraded countrywomen.

Prof. Stuart, in giving a brief résumé of the present state of the repeal movement in Parliament, said that Repeal has been obtained in Jamaica, Barbados and Trinidad through the Colonial Office, and it is in process of accomplishment in other places. In Malta, Fiji Islands, and in Hong Kong there is as yet no movement in this direction, and our attention must be given to these places, especially to Hong Kong. We have as yet gained nothing in India. Three years ago an effort was made under the viceroyalty of Lord Ripon, but as yet the authorities have not moved a step towards repeal. The independent colonies cannot be directly acted upon from Parliament, but we can move them by example and persuasion. The great obstacle rests with the permanent officials who uphold the system, and we must hammer into them the fact that this nation will not endure the continuance of these ordinances. We must, if need need be, endeavour to "stop the supplies" in Parliament, in order to get rid of this horrible system of conniving at and bolstering up iniquity.

THE GOSPEL IN FRANCE.

Sir,—At a time when Popery is making so much apparent progress in England, it will be interesting to your readers to notice what is done in a neighbouring country to enlighten the heathens of Rome, and to plant the flag of the Gospel in France. The report of the Société Evangélique de France for 1887, just published, will be interesting to English readers, not only because it speaks of faithful work done for the advancement of our Lord's kingdom, but also as a warning. If Popery is allowed to gain strength in England, the religious condition of the country in the future will be similar to that of France, where the supporters of evangelical truth encounter enormous difficulties. The aim of the Society is to form amidst the Romish population evangelical churches. By the clear, simple preaching of the Gospel, one by one souls are converted, and then set free from Rome's thraldom. Such converts are often still very ignorant, and need much patient teaching and loving encouragement. Nearly always a sharp persecution is immediately raised against them by their family and the Romish devotees, but such is the Lord's power to keep even the weakest of his sheep, that they are enabled often to face and overcome all. Slowly, but steadily, such small churches are formed; they begin to have on a Sunday regular services, then twice a day, often a week-day service. This year's report shows that they have felt the need to multiply prayer-meetings, and great results are expected from these.

Of course no opportunity is lost to preach the Gospel to larger congregations. Purely religious conferences are held in town halls, in barns, in dancing-rooms, &c. Funerals generally bring together large congregations, and often the Word spoken before an open grave is found to be the means of the conversion of a precious soul. The need of a fresh and powerful baptism of the Holy Ghost is much felt and desired; in one instance, at Tonquerve, the answer to long-continued prayer seems to have been given. A revival has taken place, and many conversions have been obtained. In the other stations, the Lord does not try his servants' faith over and above what they can bear, and He allows them to see here and there precious tokens of his presence.

This Society has also schools in several localities. The influence of religious education thus given is incalculable. It is much to be regretted that our restricted means prevent the opening of such evangelical schools at all our stations. They are the great need of France. Notwithstanding much opposition of the efforts made by the Government officials and priests, the schools are doing very well against the crushing competition of Government schools.

Many most interesting incidents of the work are given in the report. Those able to read French might obtain a copy by sending a postcard to Mons. le Pasteur Mouron, 76, Rue d'Assas, Paris, Secretary and Director of the Society.

C. W. Cremer, Pasteur.

ANCIENT JERUSALEM.—Herr Tenz is desirous to arrange a series of exhibitions of his famous model of Jerusalem, during the ensuing autumn and winter seasons. With the proceeds he hopes next spring to revisit his native country, Switzerland, and there also give lectures and exhibitions with the view of awakening an interest in Scripture. Three years ago he was grieved to find religion so little regarded, and that young people were rapidly drifting into indifference and infidelity. And it is in his mind that in the way already referred to, and by describing the discoveries made by the Palestine Exploration Fund, he may secure the attention of the Swiss people, and lead some to think of their spiritual condition. The object will doubtless commend itself, both to those who are already familiar with Herr Tenz's admirable models, and to those also who would thus aid the spread of the Gospel light in Switzerland. His address is 21, John Campbell-road, Kingsland-road, N.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we hope to give portrait and sketch of Rev. Dr. T. B. Stephenson, of the Children's Home, Victoria Park.

A contemporary speaks of an article by Rev. H. C. G. Moule in the July Churchman as "a kind of sermon" upon 1 John i. 7. It is something very different. It is a careful examination of the true meaning of the expression, "And the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin." Mr. Moule gives a useful catena of the New Testament passages which speak of the blood of Christ, and shows that it always refers to the blood as shed, not to it as in the body. It always refers, that is to say, to the atoning work of Christ.

Mr. Moule further slightly examines the usage of "cleanse," pointing out that when it is connected with "blood" it also always refers to atonement; and he eventually comes to the conclusion that the whole sentence does not speak of Christ purifying our motives, affections, &c., but of the continual application of his atonement. It is true that the life of the exalted Head flows to and through his believing members, united to Him by the Holy Spirit. This passage, however, looks another way; it means very directly, simply, and singly, the believer's shelter, daily and hourly, within the sprinkling of the propitiatory blood; within the application of the merits of the atoning death.

A lady subscriber, resident in Cork, writes to us with respcct to the cruel practice of compelling young women serving in place of business to stand behind the counter all day long, with only a brief interval for rest. She speaks of several who, during the past week, have been invalided through debility resulting from this continued strain. The question was fully ventilated in these and other columns some time since, but we do not know that any distinct advance was gained in the direction of a more humane treatment of those young people. Many employers seem to have no heart and no conscience as to what they owe to those in their service.

We would suggest that in large towns, where the wearing pressure of this constant strain is most deeply felt, Christian women should meet to consult, and should take united action in practically impressing the heads of firms with the absolute necessity of providing seats for young women engaged behind the counter.

At the conference of the Association for the Reform and Codification of the Law of Nations, Mr. H. Richard, M.P., offered statistics in relation to the military armies of Europe which may be relied upon. They justify the plea for arbitration unless the nations are prepared to see their industries shattered, and the interests of Europe brought to ruin by debts which now amount to £4,500,000,000. Surely the words of the prophet respecting the unrighteousness of human politics are becoming portentously true—the world is "wearied with the length of its way." It is so far gratifying to know that the conference, composed of men of mark from Europe and America, came to a unanimous vote in favour of settling international disputes by arbitration.

Intelligent young men who hear much of the scepticism of certain literary circles may be urged to read an article in the new Quarterly Review on Mr. Cotter Morrison's "Service of Man." While the book is said to be the most bitter and unscrupulous attack which has been made on Christianity in England during this generation, it is shown to be a tissue of misrepresentations, feeble and illogical in argument, and a disgrace to the writer as repeating objections to which unanswerable replies have been made, but which the author has not taken the trouble to read.

The recent unique success of Miss Ramsay in the Cambridge Classical Tripos suggests a word of warning against the danger of allowing mere intellectual studies to exclude the cultivation of the spiritual gifts and qualities. The tendency of much of the present-day education is to run off the lines of sound religious teaching. The enlargement of the mind and accumulation of knowledge are excellent things, but they should be the means rather than the end. That is the only real "higher' education" which leads from the intellectual to the spiritual.

The late Bishop Wordsworth struck the true key-note when he said :—

> If woman is rightly trained, her body will be subject to her soul, her soul will be informed by her mind, her mind will be warmed by her heart, and all will be refined, sublimed, and transfigured by the Holy Ghost. In physical science the study of God's works will lead her upward to admire their Divine Author. She will long to contemplate hereafter those Divine attributes and qualities in the Divine mind which are the cause of these glorious visible effects. In the study of history she will trace the Divine footsteps. In the reading of wise amd noble poetry her imagination will be disciplined to be a handmaid of her faith.

In Mr. Augustine Birrell's recent Life of Charlotte Brontë (Walter Scott, 1s.), it is stated that her father asked an elder sister of Charlotte what was the best mode of education for a woman, when the young girl replied, "That which would make her rule her house well." Without adopting this as adequate, it may be supplemented by the conclusion to which an excellent article on the subject arrives, in the new Edinburgh Review. If the destiny of woman is, to regenerate the coming age, and to infuse a nobler, more gracious, and less sordid spirit, women must do this, not by trying to become men, but by being more than ever women : by purity, self-restraint, gracious innocence, tenderness, reality, and truth." The young women of this age will make a fatal mistake if, for the sake of cultivating manners, or intellect, they pass over the cultivation of those moral emotions which have in all ages made woman an angel of blessing and influence among men.

This is holiday time. To those who are contemplating a visit to the Continent (from which they will probably return jaded and dissatisfied), it may opportunely be said, Why not try England? There are numbers of beautiful spots on our own coasts and in our own valleys where really healthful rest and change can be had. Seek out one of these. The motto of too many holiday-seekers is, "Anywhere, anywhere out of England." They will talk glibly of the Alps, Normandy, or the Riviera, whilst knowing nothing of their own country. Let such for once cast off the wretched fear of being thought "out of fashion," and spend one year's holiday in their own island. They will be gainers in health, contentment, and purse.

Thus far by way of protest; now for a plea. Let those whom God has blessed with ample means and opportunity for holidays, leave a mite behind them for the poor children of our joyless courts and dark alleys, to whom "a day in the country" is a green spot in the memory for many a week. Let them remember, too, the many over-worked ministers and helpers in the East of London and in our large towns, who, wearied in brain and body, cannot afford the sorely needed rest and change. To have helped to light up a young life for a few hours, or to give a brief respite to some struggling worker for God, will lend an additional sweetness to the giver's own holiday.

The season for this "Day in the Country," we may add, is fast passing away. Our fund has yet not reached the needful limits, and we should be glad if those friends who purpose helping in the matter will kindly do so speedily.

In a letter to Cardinal Rampolla, just published, the Pope, after alluding to his relations with Italy, France, Austria, Spain, and Belgium, expresses a wish that the good influence of "the Church" may be felt in other Catholic States, "and in the English Colonies." May this wish never be fulfilled! To flourish upon the decay of others has always been the characteristic of Roman Catholicism, and a slight perusal of history suffices to show its blighting effects. Pope Leo further says that it is the duty of the See of Rome "to strengthen religion in all parts of the world." But let it ever be remembered that to all true Roman Catholics "religion" means only their religion, and that the progress of this has in all countries run parallel with national deterioration.

The present year is the tercentenary of the death of John Foxe, the martyrologist. Though three centuries have passed since the old writer penned his graphic narratives of those who were faithful unto death—"the martyrs of Jesus," as the inspired Apostle designates them—the volume has lost none of its interest, and its perusal is as necessary to-day as ever it was. There can be no real communion between light and darkness, and those who in the pages of old Foxe find Rome "drunken with the blood of the saints," will do well to remember that if she seemingly is less cruel to-day it is only because she lacks opportunity.

A little volume which has recently been issued by the Irish Association for the Prevention of Intemperance, gives the results of over eight years of labour with regard to the Sunday closing of public-houses in the sister island. The record is indeed a cheering one, seeing every result achieved has been reached in spite of the strongest possible opposition. There was an immense decrease in the number, not only of Sunday, but of week-day arrests. If the five large cities and towns had not been exempted from the operation of the Act, doubtless still more striking results would have followed. As it is, the figures are full of encouragement to all who desire to see Ireland progressing, and who cannot fail to observe that drink is one of the most potent of the evils under which she is suffering.

When it is remembered that about one hundred and fifty members of the House of Commons are in one way or other connected with the drink trade, it becomes less hard to understand the difficulties with which the temperance party in Parliament have to contend. Yet day by day it is more clearly seen that before England can make any further great and lasting progress she must be freed from the crushing burden of the drink bill and its attendant consequences. There is little use in increasing the national wealth so long as that wealth is taken from those who can least afford it, in exchange for a commodity which degrades them.

The Presbyterian Orphan Society of Ireland, under whose care during the past twenty-one years, nearly eight thousand orphans have been sustained and educated, finds difficulty in securing suitable situations for the girls who are supposed to be sent out into the world at fourteen years of age. It has, therefore, been decided by the committee to establish a Training Home to which, at the age in question, the girls will be drafted and there instructed in cooking and domestic work, and the mending and making of their own clothes. Already approving friends have subscribed nearly £3300 towards the erection of a building in Belfast for the purpose.

We heartily commend this example to other societies. The supply greatly exceeds the demand so far as the shop-girl class is concerned; and in regard to most employments which are considered suitable for females the labour market is greatly overstocked; whereas there is a lack of well-trained girls for domestic employment. Unfortunately the prejudice against domestic service as being less "respectable" than an engagement in a shop will take some time to overcome, but there is no reason why our large societies should not combat it by supplying girls who have been trained to look upon it as desirable and honourable. In a Christian home the position may be, and ought to be, a happy one, and Christians, by paying some attention to the temporal and spiritual needs of those employed in their homes, may do much to remove the prejudice to which we have referred.

Who can estimate the money locked up in art collections? Of late years many of these have been scattered under the auctioneer's hammer, and the prices paid, whether taken singly or collectively, give a striking view of England's wealth. They also give a view of the tastes of the upper classes, which is far from reassuring. Of this we have an instance in point, in the recent sale of the Lonsdale collection at Christie's. A portrait of Madame de Pompadour, 78 inches by 62, was there knocked down at £10,395! It is painted by Boucher, an artist whom she befriended in her career. The position of La Marquise de Pompadour (can titular gilding cleanse a sepulchre?) was purchased and maintained by the sacrifice of all that was pure and noble in woman. We may safely say that Louis XV. would have been a vastly better man had he never known her. We do not care to name the reputed purchaser. What surprises us is that anyone should wish to possess the picture of a courtesan, infamous beyond her peers; and more, that they should value it at such a price!

Mr. Ruskin, in an admirable passage which will be found in "The Queen of the Air," dealing with the subject of indiscrimate charity, congratulates certain persons on the freedom of their conscience from that sin, his own, "being bitterly burdened with the memory of many a sixpence given to beggars of whom I knew nothing, but that they had pale faces and thin waists." The kindly sage is not the only charitable person who feels the problem of the street beggar to be a difficult one, and any attempt at its solution is, therefore, of more than passing interest.

One such experiment is now being tried in Dublin. The committee of a Boys' Home in that city have issued shilling books of twelve tickets, each ticket entitling the bearer to a good meal, or two tickets to a meal and a bed. The plan is an excellent one, and we trust it will be successful in enabling people to avoid on the one hand the pain of refusing charity to mere children who, in many cases, are really destitute and deserted, and on the other, the danger of deception, and of the encouragement and support of professional vagrancy.

A domestic servant writes to say that a sick club, where she could pay a small sum weekly so as to be able to draw out something when obliged to leave a situation through sickness, instead of sinking all her savings, is a great desideratum. She thinks thousands would be glad to join it, and it would be a good way for servants to help each other. We shall be glad if any reader can inform us whether such an institution exists.

It was scarcely to be expected that the movement for amalgamating the Wesleyan and New Connexion Methodist bodies would approach an issue at the Wesleyan Conference just concluded. But the spirit in which the project was discussed was on the whole gratifying to the friends of union; the labours of the committee appointed to consider the subject must surely tend in the same direction. In these days of infidel and Papist activity it behoves all true disciples of Jesus Christ to sink minor differences, and, banding together, fight shoulder to shoulder against their common foes.

In this connection the results of Methodist union in Canada and Ireland may be of interest. Since the union took place it is agreed on all hands that greater energy and prosperity have resulted from the concentration of effort and purpose. The friction formerly caused by the existence in the same village of more than one Methodist community has been smoothed away; strife and rivalry have vanished; Sunday-schools are more efficiently conducted. There is greater zeal and unanimity in the management of the various church enterprises; while the ministers are better paid, and, having smaller circuits, can devote to the rescue of souls the time formerly spent in travelling far afield.

Dr. Joseph Parker's noonday, and midweek, service in the City of London has been an undoubted spiritual factor in the lives of many during the past eighteen years. The best proof that it has met with continued acceptance was to be found in the sight afforded by the City Temple on Thursday week, when the spacious building was as full as on a Sunday morning. The Doctor's last exposition, prior to his lengthened visit to America, was most evangelical and practical, even when stripped of its rhetorical and dramatic robing. We note that The New York Evangelist, referring to Dr. Parker's rumoured settlement in the late Mr. Beecher's pulpit, wonders whether his evangelical tone will please the Brooklynites. The Doctor himself says he hopes to resume his London ministry early in April.

We have seldom read a more discreditable report of a meeting on a grave public question than that which appeared in The St. James's Gazette of Friday last, of the anniversary of the Ladies National Association for abolishing State-protected vice. The animus which runs through it, not to speak of several gross misstatements, is a scandal to any respectable journal claiming to exercise an elevating influence on the community.

Several correspondents of The Brighton Times write to that journal, circumstantially accusing Mr. Wood (the self-styled "King Solomon") and his assistants at the hall in Edward-street, Brighton, of bribing the police, so as to wink at their blasphemous performances and protect them from a too inquisitive public.

The friends of humanity and of the lower orders of creation are deeply indebted to M. Lutaud, the French doctor, who, last week in the Princes' Hall, exposed so thoroughly the Pasteurian experiments in the treatment of hydrophobia. From a close personal investigation of the matter, he was able to show that, instead of the number of deaths from rabies having diminished, they have actually increased under the speculative régime of M. Pasteur. Moreover, his experiments have introduced a new and serious peril, occasioned by the frequent inoculations; and the lecturer was not slow to assert that some of the cases of death resulted not from the bites of rabid animals but from this laboratory poison introduced into the system.

The report of the English Government Commission, of which we have heard so much, was ridiculed and riddled to pieces by M. Lutaud; if the facts he stated can be well put before the British public—as we believe they will be—we may safely say that M. Pasteur's vivisective treatment for hydrophobia will be relegated, so far as this country is concerned at any rate, to the limbo of exploded delusions.

A friend, in sending a second contribution to the fund for engaging the services of Rev. G. Mabbs as lecturer on the Opium Question, says:—

> I have much pleasure in doing so, as I consider it is high time that pressure were put on our Government, and that our nation wash its hands of this abominable traffic.

Sunday Tennis parties are fast becoming fashionable, if we are to believe the Society journals. A contemporary, not in that category, states that on a recent Sabbath there were a number of receptions; one club had a special musical entertainment; another had a concert; a third had a glee party engaged; and that there is some talk of Sunday dances. These people may pay their servants for the additional labour, but they rob them of their God-given rest, and take from them that which money cannot compensate them for.

St. Giles' Christian Mission.—Owing to the long absence, through illness, of the Superintendent, Mr. Geo. Hatton (who is now in greatly improved health, and it is hoped will soon be able to resume his work in St. Giles), the funds of this Mission are entirely exhausted, and the Committee make an urgent appeal for help to carry on the work. Donations should be addressed as usual to Mr. Geo. Hatton, Superintendent St. Giles' Christian Mission, 4, Ampton-street, Regent-square, W.C.

"NOTHING TO DO."

Walking through Bedford, the other day, I encountered a young corporal of the militia. We had met a little before, in the Soldiers' Home, at Aldershot, when, together with several of his comrades, he had come to our mission services. Something in his manner, as well as in his honest face, had drawn my attention to him, and seldom had I heard a lad more quaintly express his feelings in prayer; so that it gave me the greatest pleasure to meet with him again, and to take the hard hand he stretched out to give me a soldier's greeting.

"I am going into the 'Sixteenth.'" "Is your mother willing?"

He had before told me how his mother's wishes had kept him from enlisting in the "regulars," and I now saw that his face grew grave at the mention of her name. "Nay, I cannot say she is willing," he replied, "but she feels that now she must give her consent, for I can get nothing to do."

Poor lad! As I wished him "God-speed," and, with his face towards barracks, and his back towards home, he hurried on to enlist, I felt a peculiar sadness settling down on my own soul. I had grown accustomed to hear the same words, "Nothing to do." "Nothing to do;" but I had never more thoroughly realised the agony held in them, than when thus made to ponder the enforced separation of that young militiaman from his mother.

A few weeks before, I had heard a poor father attempt to commend his son to God ere letting him start for a foreign shore, and, oh! how the old man's voice had faltered! He fain would have kept him at home, and the lad would fain have stayed; but, though strong, steady, and industrious as any young man in his native shire at home, he could find "nothing to do."

Time was when in the summer months the labourer could in some measure make up for what he had lost in the winter. From the hoeing of the early spring, to the reaping of the autumn, with mowing, or haymaking between, he found himself in constant request. It is not so now. The hoe is not used half so much as it was, while the mower and reaper are fast disappearing from the fields, elaborate machinery being made to supplant the scythe and the sickle.

"How long have you been out of work, John?" I asked an old Befordshire man a few weeks since.

"Oim sure I do'ant know, master; it's so long that Oive forgotten count."

"Stooping is too hard for you, Archibald," said my wife to another old man of the same county, who was pulling up weeds at a lady's garden gate. "Ha' woodn't moind hard work, mum, if Oi could get it to do, but this is the fust job this wick." It was then Saturday morning, and I don't believe the British Isles could produce a finer specimen of the typical English labourer than that old man had been.

"What does this mean, Philip?" I asked one of our parishioners, only last week, whom I met with a bucket of water in his hand.

"Nothing to do, sir," said he, sadly. "For two and twenty years I worked for the same old master; he has gone, and now I've nothing to do." Had I been asked to have given Philip a character, I should have written him as "sober, steady, honest, and industrious, having brought up his family respectably in a cottage as cleanly kept as any in the county." Yet such a man had to tell the same sad story—"Nothing to do; nothing to do."

Some blame the times, some the landlords, some the farmers, and some the labourers themselves. The times are said to be exceptionally hard; the landlords to be too slow in lowering the rents that had been unduly raised in seasons of prosperity; the farmers are charged with refusing labour to the hurt of the farms and themselves, and the labourers are told that they now reap the fruit of what they sowed when, yielding to the advice of professional agitators, they claimed higher wages a few years ago.

I will not now attempt to show whose the fault may be, or where it may be found, if it should lie in circumstances rather than in persons. I only wish to call attention to the fact that our country parishes are becoming depopulated, and while the best of our villagers are being driven away to other lands, others are being compelled to crowd into already crowded towns, to increase the poverty and misery already found there to such a frightful extent. The land, too, is becoming most awfully impoverished. "We used to have nine loads to the acre from that field," said an old farm baliff to me the other day; "now," continued he, "they count it a good crop when they get three." I fear it will be long, poor souls, ere they find "the cow," but if the present system of farming is to be continued, our villagers must have the "two or three acres," and at a very moderate rent, too. I scorned the idea when it was first mooted; I now believe that if generally adopted it would long delay the evil day that I fear will, sooner or later, dawn on Britain. Something must be done; all will not be able to emigrate, nor will those who remain at home patiently submit to the starvation of their loved ones and themselves.

Poor people, numbers of them have been compelled to part with their independence; their sturdiness of character has been broken down by the necessity of getting employment, and as farm bailiffs, foremen, and others, who have managed to secure a little power, with place, naturally demand an acknowledgment of their own dignity, it often fares ill with poor Hodge when he ventures to say more than that his soul is his own; and he can only say this at his peril.

Some may ask, "But what has all this to do with Christianity"? I answer, "Very, very much." To say nothing of the world outside—if the Church had made more of the royal law—"Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself," we should never have arrived at the present state of things. There have been among us noble exceptions to the rule; but, as a rule theory-mongering has been more popular with us than practical Christianity, and as the salt that should have seasoned the world has been losing greatly in savour, so the world again has been fast yielding to the corruption that is ever caused by selfishness. I hope yet to find opportunity for bringing the sorrows of the poor under the notice of their richer neighbours, to the benefit of both. John E. Linnell.

Pavenham Vicarage, Bedford.

FRIENDLESS AND FALLEN.—Mr. E. W. Thomas, 203, Euston-road, N.W., writes:—Since returning to town last autumn, after a brief period of rest, great and signal mercies have been vouchsafed by God in the prosecution of the work of the Homes and Open All-night Refuge. The work of 1886 may be briefly summarised thus: 537 young women and girls were admitted to the Homes; and 648 were received into the Open All-night Refuge; 2,964 Gospel, temperance, and other classes and services were held in the Homes, very many by ladies. The new Preventive Home at Parson's Green has been opened, the costs for building and furnishing being fully met.

SEVERED TIES.

A few more sweet and sacred ties
  Time's ruthless scythe shall sever,
Then we to that bright land shall rise
  Where partings shall be never.

The blossoms fair that round us bloom
  Are soon all withered lying;
We sadly place them on the tomb,
  Fit emblems of the dying.

The streams which quench our thirst to-day
  To-morrow cease their flowing;
Dark night o'ertakes the brightest way,
  Its sombre shadows throwing.

O land whose blossoms never fade—
  Thou land whose breezes vernal
The richest perfumes ever lade;
  Dear home of spring eternal—

Thy river's clear and crystal tide
  Doth never cease its flowing;
By that fair stream so deep and wide
  The tree of life is growing.

Thou realm of everlasting day,
  Thou land of light undying,
Whose bliss shall never pass away,
  Where songs shall be for sighing;

Blest sunny land! whose golden gate
  Nor sin, nor sorrow enter,
While 'mid these tearful scenes we wait,
  Our hopes on thee we centre.

—New York Observer.

FAMINE IN CENTRAL TURKEY.

Sir,—The appeal of Lords Ebury and Kinnaird and others, on behalf of the sufferers by famine in the province of Cilicia, has been responded to in a measure, but it received less attention than it deserved. The distress all over that region is very extensive and very severe, and there are signs of epidemic disease, which, in the emaciated condition of the people, is sure to be extensively fatal. Out of a population of 200,000, at least 70,000 are absolutely dependent upon charity. It is to the credit of the Turkish Government that they are awake to the urgency of the case, and have sent supplies of food. But their utmost efforts are altogether inadequate, and, unless help comes from Britain and America, it will be impossible to cope with the evil and save the lives of the famine-stricken people.

The American missionaries are nobly exerting themselves, and using the contributions which have already come from the United States. But England and Scotland have yet to show their practical benevolence. By instruction of my committee I have just remitted a first contribution of £50, but what is that among so many necessitous people?

Tarsus is in the very centre of Cilicia; will not the words of the man of Tarsus, when pleading for the poor Christians of Judea, move many to a similar exercise of liberality?

T. W. Brown, Secretary,
Turkish Missions' Aid Society.

7, Adam-street, Strand, W.C.

HEBREW NEW TESTAMENTS.—Rev. J. Wilkinson, of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews, 79, Mildmay-road, N., writes:—The Lord is marvellously answering prayer, and opening doors for the distribution of the Hebrew New Testaments abroad; we ask friends of Israel to praise God, of to continue in earnest prayer for showers and blessing.

THE BRITISH CONFERENCE OF Y.M.C.A.'S will be held this year at Dundee, September 6 to 9. Among the subjects to be discussed are:—"The place prayer ought to hold in Association work, and how best to conduct prayer-meetings." "How can the Y.M.C.A.'s protect young men on entrance to city life, and provide for their social intercourse?" "The qualifications for soul-winning, and how best to develop and train workers." "The place and importance of the Bible-class and fellowship meeting."

MR. MOODY'S SUMMER SCHOOL.

A striking feature of this Conference, as of its predecessor last year, has been the interest manifested in the mission field. Many of the students present had offered themselves for work abroad before going to Northfield, and a good many more have given themselves since Conference began. Three meetings were set apart to receive reports of the foreign field, and these occasions were most interesting. Powerful addresses were delivered by Dr. Chamberlain, from India, Mr. Joseph Cook, of Boston, and Dr. Pierson, of Philadelphia. At times the enthusiasm manifested was very great.

Dr. Chamberlain said he had been in India for twenty-five years. Doors are now open all over that country. The moral condition of the people is very low. The two great obstacles to Christianity are caste and endowed temples. Thirty-five missionary societies are at work. All India is in a state of ferment. Hinduism has lost its hold in most of the provinces, but the people are veering towards infidelity. They say that preachers come often enough to shake their faith in Brahminism, but not often enough to accept of Christianity. We have seized the strategic points, but we are too weak to make the assault, and so we send back for reinforcements. Send your choicest sons and daughters, exclaimed the speaker, and let the shout be heard that reinforcements are coming. We want 5000 missionaries within the next five years. A hundred thousand young men have been brought into the Church in India, but have not yet developed into workers. We must have a work that will reach them by a loving presentation of the Word of God.

Mr. Joseph Cook followed, in the line of missionary work and its importance. Both infidelity and Christianity, he said, are now preparing for a final assault on the whole world. The next fifty years are likely to be the best that most of us have seen on the globe. Providence, in the present political and social circumstances of the world, calls upon every one to cherish, not national, but international schemes for the propagation of Christianity. In our days, such is the velocity of travel that the whole of the globe is not so large as the outskirts of the Roman empire were to the city of the seven hills. Why should we not lift the whole world into our bosoms? It is very important to break into the educated classes of India, China and Japan, with the whole power of the Gospel. The door to the educated classes is through the students. Young men are the best agents to preach to young men. In the headquarters of Hindooism, English is understood. English is the key to commercial advancement and society. Think how immense this opportunity is to you who speak the English tongue, who have no prejudices to encounter in India. I advise you, young men, to be Pilgrim Fathers, not only of the next age in America, but of the next age in Asia.

Dr. Pierson said: If you oppose this movement it will grind you to powder. If you are indifferent toward it, it will sweep by and leave you where you were before. If you co-operate with it, it will bear you on to triumph and glory. It is of immense importance that we should discover what that plan is. After showing several of the providential signs of the times, he continued, If you come to present yourselves to the boards of the various churches, and they meet you with the response that they have no funds to send you with, go, if necessary, as the China Inland missionaries have gone, in the belief that God will prepare the way; or, as that grand man, Bishop Taylor, ventured into the heart of Africa, depending on Almighty God.

On Sabbath afternoon, July 10, a missionary meeting was held, when delegates from different countries were present and took part. There were Mr. La Flam, from Canada; Mr. Robinson, who leaves soon for Syria; Mr. Moore, from Alaska; Mr. Macfie, from Cambridge, England; Mr. Forman, and others. After the addresses a number of young men gave brief testimonies. It may be stated that during the twelve days of the Conference a good many men have offered themselves for the mission field.

One of the acceptable speakers of the Conference was Mr. H. L. Hastings, of Boston, who gave rousing and very able, argumentative talks on Christian Evidences. He combated infidel objections, and defended the Bible in a way with which many on this side the Atlantic have recently been made familiar. Another strong advocate of the evangelical faith was Dr. Townsend, also of Boston, who delivered an impressive discourse on "Primitive Orthodoxy." Mr. Joseph Cook gave some specimens of his splendid skill as a defender of the faith. His lines of argument and exhortation are well-known to those who have read his Boston Monday lectures.

The last Saturday of the Conference was almost wholly given up to recreation and games, and was a lively time. The athletic programme concluded with the "tug of war," in which representatives of New England and of Old England, were pitted against each other. The champions of the Mother Country had rather the worst of it.

On the last Sunday the meetings were largely attended. Buggies came from all parts of the district filled with the farmers and their families. In the forenoon, Mr. Moody, by special request, gave his well-known address on "The Work of Holy Spirit." The evening address was delivered by Professor Drummond, on "Love." It was, perhaps, the best of all the able addresses delivered by the popular young Professor from Scotland. Mr. Moody at the close hoped that all those present would read 1 Cor. xiii. every week, and live it out in their lives.

Monday forenoon was given over to answering questions. Two hours were taken up, and Mr. Moody was in his happiest form. Many of the questions had reference to the work of the Y.M.C.A. In answering these, Mr. Moody again and again referred to the importance of effort among young men, and told how much he himself was indebted to the Association. Mr. Moody manifested much interest in the formation of Mizpah bands, and got representatives from the old country to tell of the bands in London and Glasgow. At the evening meeting Professor Drummond took farewell of the delegates, and received a perfect ovation.

Tuesday was the "last day of the feast," and was the crowning point of the Conference. At ten o'clock, in the Stone Hall, most of the two hours were spent in prayer, waiting upon God for a baptism of the Holy Ghost. It was a very solemn time. Mr. Moody suggested that the next hour should be spent alone with God, waiting for the promise of the Holy Ghost. It was touching to see the young men making for their own rooms, climbing the mountain side, or seated under some tree, reading the Bible and engaging in prayer.

In the afternoon "the boys," to the number of 250, met Mr. Moody at his house, and climbed the mountain at the back of the seminary to have a Bible reading. All had their Bibles with them, and the Sermon on the Mount was read from beginning to end. Comments were made from time to time, and when the Lord's Prayer was reached all repeated it aloud. Many of the brethren led in prayer, and all descended, going down much quicker than they went up.

The final evening session was a praise-meeting. Testimonies were given as to blessing received, and during the two hours allotted to this part of the proceedings seventy-two delegates spoke. They represented different colleges and Y.M.C.A's. Many testified to the blessing received at the Conference last year, and how much had been done in the colleges by the representatives when they returned. Before closing, Mr. Moody read the greeting from "Mildmay," and, by a unanimous vote, the thanks of the Conference were given to the friends in London, and an expression of Christian love accorded. The "boys" started for their homes next morning, and the small country station was a lively scene. For more than half-an-hour, college songs and hymns were sung. Mr. Moody and other friends were at the station; many and hearty were the good-bye greetings they received as the cars moved off.

CHURCH PAROCHIAL MISSIONS.

In their annual report of the Church Parochial Mission Society the Committee state that although Missions no longer possess the charm of novelty, yet well-prepared and well-conducted effort is always accompanied with manifest tokens of the Divine blessing, and leads to as much permanent result as in the earlier times. During the year nearly two hundred missions have been held; one of exceptional interest was a "flying mission," covering two Welsh dioceses, those of St. David's and Llandaff. Though but a day or two was spent in each place, yet there was much encouragement for an extension of the movement, and for holding regular missions in the more populous parishes.

Attention is drawn to the fact that much of the missioner's success depends largely upon his "helpers in Christ Jesus." And we are also reminded of the far-reaching influence of such missions, manifesting itself often in most unexpected quarters. Rev. W. Hay Aitken is the general superintendent. The secretary (Rev. S. W. Darwin Fox) should be addressed at the office, 21, John-street, Adelphi, W.C.

BRUSSELS CITY MISSION.

This Mission, begun in 1880 by a few Christian brethren from England and Brussels, and, continued by the Dutch Evangelical Church, has wonderfully extended and become a rich blessing. Besides the regular work of evangelising and colportage, the Flemish Training School plays a very important part, and is likely to do so still more in the future. Several young men have gone forth from this institution to labour in different parts of the country for the extension of Christ's kingdom, and have proved themselves good and successful evangelists.

In four suburbs of Brussels there is a hall or tent in which services are held every evening in the week. These have been opened one after the other, as the work extended and opportunity offered, and many persons have been there led to a knowledge of God, and to trust in the Saviour. The colportage work is very extensive and successful, and there is also a good deal of evangelisation among children at the various halls. It is hoped that soon it may be possible to open a central hall, a Christian boarding-house for women, a library for young men and children, and an establishment for the sick and convalescent. Communications should be addressed to Mons. N. de Jonge, pastor, 38, Rue de Berlaimont, Brussels.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

The Church Army.—In various parts of the country a number of tents, in which the evangelists of the Church Army are working, are attracting large crowds, and much blessing is attending their efforts to rescue the careless.

Somersetshire.—A six weeks' mission, in a tent, has been held at Keinton Mandeville, by Mr. Hilton, of the Evangelisation Society. He is a very attractive speaker. The meetings were well attended by villagers and those living in the vicinity. All sections of the Church united. We have great reason to praise God for what has been accomplished, and that ever Mr. Hilton was sent among us. When the mission was closed the tent was taken down and erected at Castle Carey, where the work is now being carried on with encouraging prospects. S. J. Matcham.

Edinburgh. — Mr. David Buchan, of 25, Springwell-place, Edinburgh, sends particulars of mission work amongst the labouring classes in a poor locality in that city, conducted by Rev. Pressley-Smith, of the Scottish Episcopal Church. This mission (the St. Martin's) has been carried on in a small hall, and has grown in two years from fifteen communicants to about one hundred and fifty, not including a large attendance. An iron church has been bought for the accommodation of the rapidly increasing congregation, whose esteem the minister has gained by his self-sacrificing efforts.

INFIDEL LITERATURE.

The circulation of infidel literature has increased to alarming proportions. Throughout the English-speaking world there flows a constant undercurrent of vile, corrupting, indecent, immoral, sceptical publications. The ordinary public are somewhat familiar with the polite sneers of scientific scepticism and the infallibility claimed for a few of the unbelieving literati of the present day by men who know little of the Bible, and simply repeat the baseless arguments and self-sufficient assumptions of their sceptical prophets; but ordinary Christians have no conception of the sewer-currents of infidel filth and immorality which flow beneath their feet. They do not read such publications. Unfortunately, there are people who do read them, and millions of them are sent out from the press every week. The issues of benevolent societies shrink almost to insignificance, in comparison with the vast amount of this abominable literature, which is neither catalogued, advertised, nor sold by respectable booksellers, but which, nervertheless, makes its way and does its work.

It has been found in New York that the walls of immense buildings have sunk, in consequence of their foundations being eaten into and undermined by myriads of rats! The foundations of religion and social order are being similarly undermined. Multitudes of people are as truly beyond the reach of religious influences, as though they were in heathen lands; and, while Christians and ministers are writing thoughtful essays on "How to reach the Masses," and talking of amusements, entertainments, athletics, and the like, they seem to be overlooking the real fact, that "the masses" are becoming not only indifferent, but infidel, agnostic, atheistic, and ungodly. Men cannot read from week to week the millions of sceptical, atheistic, socialistic, and immoral publications which are issued from the press, without undermining the foundations of all faith, debauching the conscience, and sinking into immorality and anarchy. Especially is this true when, through intemperance or business depression, poverty prevails, and the pressure of untoward circumstances tries the faith of the most devout, and breeds discontent among the poor and suffering.

The workshops of every great metropolis are saturated with scepticism and infidelity. What are Christians doing to meet it? They are treating objections with silent contempt. They are sending out pleasant little tracts, which infidels use for lighting their pipes. They are talking Christian evidences in places where infidels do not come. They are writing expensive books to gather dust on the shelves of ministers' libraries. They are uttering polite and polished platitudes in the ears of men who curse their religion, and sneer at them as fools and hypocrites. And while sceptics are plying them with questions which they do not answer, and making assertions about the Bible which are absolutely and palpably false, they are, in some cases, making apologies and concessions, and talking "higher criticism," to men who care no more for their words or their arguments than leviathan cares for the tickling of a straw.

Is it not time for some change of programme? Is it not evident that this battle must be fought on somewhat different lines? Is it not time to take the offensive, and adapt ourselves to the circumstances of the case? If Christian men are to stop the mouths of unbelievers, and rout their motley hosts, they must have the courage of their convictions, know their ground, understand what they believe, and why they believe it, and be not afraid to speak plainly. It must be done by the using of the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, and carrying the war into the enemies' camp. The work will not be accomplished by conciliatory concessions, which are only met by blasphemy and vituperation; nor will it be accomplished by discussing the personal character of a few unsavoury infidel leaders, who glory in their shame. It must be done largely by brief, cheap, pointed publications, which lay solid foundations, and do positive work in the defence of the Gospel of Christ. These publications should be scattered by millions, not only wherever the English language is spoken, but in every country over which infidelity is spreading its slimy trail. These publications should show the falsity of infidel assertions; the absurdity of the scientific guess-work which infidels accept; the beneficent influence and power of Christianity; and the horribleness of heathenism and infidelity. Plain, pointed, terse, and vigorous tracts, dealing in facts which cannot be denied, and arguments which cannot be resisted, should be produced cheaply, and sent by millions through the world.

Out-and-out atheists are comparatively few, but they are exceedingly busy, and their profane sneers, ribald jokes, false assertions and wild theories are scattered by millions through the land, and strengthen the hearts of the ungodly in their wrong-doing. And if Christians allow them to go uncontradicted, what can their readers say but that silence gives consent to such false statements. Is it not, then, high time that men who fear God recognise the presence of this fatal peril, and gird themselves for this conflict? Or, will they fold their hands, and allow the work to languish, embarrassed for lack of means and effort, until, as in France a century ago, the social fabric is rocked by convulsions, and submerged in seas of blood?—The (Boston) Christian.

◆

A MISSION TOUR IN INDIA.—4.

December 2.—At Arcot there is a branch of the Established Church of Scotland Mission under Rev. Mr. Rice and a native pastor, in which there seems to be a good deal of evangelistic, as well as educational, work done. I find the following remark regarding this Mission in the report for the year:—"Fifteen years ago it was as bigoted a place as any in this part of India. Everything done by us was met with the most strenuous opposition—opposition schools, organised opposition to the preaching. How different now! Our missionary and catechists welcomed; a native church, with almost thirty communicants, in the village itself."

I drove out in a "jatka" to Ranipett, the station of the Mission of the Reformed Church of America, and spent a delightful day with the missionaries, Rev. Mr. Conklin and his wife, and Dr. Heckhuis, a medical missionary. I visited Dr. Heckhuis's dispensary; he has been put in charge of the Government hospital and dispensary here, and is of course allowed to carry on his work as a missionary. Afterwards went with Mr. Conklin to his seminary and theological school. After breakfast a number of beggars assembled at the mission-house to receive alms; they come once a week, when they have the Gospel preached to them, and at the same time receive a few coppers each. Amongst them was a poor leper whose hands were in a fearful state; when it came to his turn to receive his money, the poor fellow, with a delicacy of feeling which it was touching to behold, covered up his poor maimed hands with the cloth which he had round him and then stretched it out. Dr. Heckhuis tells me there are many lepers in this district, and has kindly promised to inquire if there is any way in which they can be reached, as a special class. Afterwards there was family worship at the mission-house, in which the heathen servants were invited to take part.

In the afternoon drove round this very pretty little station, and saw the house which had been built by the Government to receive King Theebaw, when sent to India as a State prisoner, but which was never occupied by him, owing to some sudden change on the part of the authorities. Ranipett stands on high ground, and the climate is dry and good. Mr. Conklin and Dr. Heckhuis went off in the evening on an evangelistic tour, and I left for the railway station of Arcot, about four miles distant. It has been a truly missionary day, and I have enjoyed it immensely.

Dec. 3.—Arrived at Vellore railway station about 10 p.m., where I was met by Mr. Paterson's messenger, with a kind note of welcome. Vellore is a very pretty and interesting place; it is surrounded by low hills of a very rocky formation, and has an interesting old fort and pagoda which are worth a visit. The town is very clean and the climate is said to be good. There are two missions working here, the Reformed Church of America, with Dr. Scudder and family, and the Established Church of Scotland under Mr. Paterson. The Church of Scotland has a very fine school of nearly 400 boys, and also a girls' school with an average attendance of 80; I had the pleasure of visiting both. In the latter, where there was a Eurasian sewing mistress in charge, the girls sang two Tamil lyrics very prettily, also "Jesus loves me" in English.[*] Of the boys school the report for the year says:—"The chief object of the school is to give the pupils religious instruction. When the boys meet in the morning they assemble in the hall, and the school is opened with reading from the Bible and prayer. In the evening the boys assemble again, and the school is closed with prayer. Every class has a Bible lesson daily. Mr. Samuel and the other Christian teachers took these lessons." It is interesting to see five Christian natives at work in this school.

Mrs. and Miss Scudder have a girls' seminary here; but, my stay here being so short, I was unable to see anything of it, or of the other work of these well-known American missionaries, though I was glad to have the pleasure of making their acquaintance.

Dec. 5—Bangalore is one of the prettiest stations I have seen in India; it has magnificent trees and flowers, beautiful public buildings, and is kept like an English nobleman's demesne. The climate is exceptionally good, and is now cool enough to admit of our wearing ordinary English clothing. There are numerous missionary societies represented here, and a great deal of good work being done. Amongst others, I was able to call upon Rev. Benjamin Rice,[†] a veteran of the London Missionary Society, who has been labouring here for fifty years, and whose jubilee they were just about to celebrate; also on Mr. Slater, of the same Society, Mr. Henderson, of the Wesleyan Mission, and Miss Mullins, an honorary worker, who has already won her way to the native heart, and is a great favourite. It was curious to find a "Brixton Villa" in Bangalore, the name of her house. I am the guest here of Mr. Jollie, Scottish chaplain, and his good wife, and have had the privilege of joining in their Communion. Mr. Jollie has been here many years, and is, I believe, greatly respected, being an earnest and devoted labourer.

There is a very nice leper asylum here, belonging to the Mysore Government. A lunatic asylum stands on one side of a large enclosure, and the leper asylum on the other; both are beautifully kept. I was fortunate enough to find the doctor in charge going his morning rounds, and he kindly went round with me. There were twenty men and ten women in the leper asylum; men and women occupy quite distinct quarters. The doctor pointed out one man, and said, "That is a very good man, and he appears to be always happy whenever I come." I spoke to him for a few moments, and found out that he was a Eurasian, and a Protestant; the poor fellow did seem quite happy, but told me that he was greatly annoyed by not being able to feel the ground under his feet; in other words, he had no feeling whatever in his feet. What a comfort to such poor sufferers when they are resting in Christ, and what a blessed thing to be able to tell them of his love. There does not seem to be any special opening for work here at present, as the doctor in charge is opposed to missionary effort. Wellesley C. Bailey.

Secretary, Mission to Lepers in India.
17, Glengyle-terrace, Edinburgh.

---

[*] I am sorry to see by the report that this school is to be given up, and the money hitherto spent on it devoted to another department of work.

[†] Since my visit this aged servant of God has been called to his rest.

Notes on Daily Readings.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 7.—ECCLES. II.

1—11.—The Palace of Delights. "He enters thoroughly into an examination of the value of a magnificent home. The picture of the palace of delights here presented is very charming. There is nothing coarse or barbaric. Added to the delights of cultivated nature were the pleasures of art. In all the description there is nothing low-thoughted. The pleasures spoken of are not the pleasures of sin, but such as a cultivated, righteous, pure-souled man might rejoice in. The description presents a picture of a perfect earthly home, unsurpassed in all literature. Whatsoever mine eyes desired I kept not from them: I withheld not my heart from any joy: for my heart rejoiced in all my labour. He did not languidly test the enjoyment. He did not cultivate that contemptible spirit too often displayed by those to whom fortune has been kind, and look on all around with a supercilious coldness. Yet what is his conclusion? All was vanity, and a striving after wind (R.V.). To gain a delightful home is the universal aim. For this, God is neglected, the soul starved, sometimes bodily health is sacrificed, and even the moral law is broken. On the majority of surburban villas might be written, 'Vanity of vanities,' saith the occupier, 'all is vanity.' The description before us is painful in its exhibition of selfishness. Personal gratification is the one prominent idea. It presents a singular contrast to the account given by Job of his prosperity:—"I delivered the poor that cried, &c. The blessing of him that was ready to perish came upon me, and I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy, &c. (Job xxix. 11—16)."—J. H. Cooke.

12—26.—The Plain of Discontent. The pleasures of sense intoxicate: reaction, in the form of discontent, follows. I turned to behold wisdom and madness and folly. Failing of satisfaction in his home of pleasure, he goes outside to examine it. He feels that if he has failed no one else can succeed, for What can the man do that cometh after the king? If Solomon was unhappy amid his wealth, what hope for him that cometh after?

MONDAY, AUGUST 8.—ECCLES. III.

The Desert of Fatalism.—"The weary plain of discontent led on to the gloomy desert of fatalism. He could not rest in the dissatisfied spirit he has just described." He made an effort to find rest in honest toil, and the cheerful enjoyment of simple and ordinary blessings:—"There is nothing better for a man than that he should eat and drink, and that he should make his soul enjoy good in his labour." But it will not do. "This also is vanity and vexation." Then he flies to fatalism. Everything is fixed and foreordained. "To everything there is a season." Multitudes of all ages and classes are prone to fatalism. "What is to be, will be." "Every bullet has its billet," are popular expressions of this feeling. Even amongst Christians the doctrine of Election is sometimes perverted to almost pure fatalism, and, as a result, people have been heard to say:—"If I am to be saved, I shall be saved. If I am to be lost, I shall be lost." "Three rays of light came to the Preacher as he wandered in this dreary desert:—(1) God hath made everything beautiful in his time. The original plan was that there should be beauty everywhere; but there is not. Ugliness has crept in. This is not God's doing. An enemy has been here. (2) God hath set eternity in the heart of men. Such is really the correct translation of the clause in the eleventh verse. The one great distinctive feature (of mankind) is that man has ever a thought of eternity. (3) No man can find out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end. These three ideas united, the belief that God does all things well, that He has destined us for eternal existence, and that his glory is beyond our comprehension, must be found at the base of all right thought."—J. H. Cooke.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 9.—ECCLES. IV.

1—4.—The Gloomy Caverns of Infidelity.—Fatalism leads on to infidelity. There are three forms of it:—(1) Materialism (iii. 18—20): "As the one (the beast) dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence over a beast." This is exactly what our modern Materialists say to-day. If they are honest, they too will add, "All is vanity." (2) Secularism (iii. 21, 22): "There is nothing better, than that a man should rejoice in his own works; for that is his portion," &c. Take care of this world, and leave the next, if there be another, to take care of itself. This is a clear statement of that very secularism which is now so popular. (3) Pessimism, or religion without God, and, therefore, religion without hope (iv. 1—4): I praised the dead more than the living, &c. Pessimism is the natural outcome of Secularism. It asserts that life is not worth living, and is a reproach on God. It is the essence of both Buddhism, and of that New Buddhism which is now in fashion among many of the wise and learned of our land.

5—12.—The Garden of Friendship.—"One thing is evident—selfishness will not do. The fool foldeth his hands together, and eateth his own flesh. Better, &c. The man who grasps for himself all he can is a fool. Better share what you have with another. Half a portion with peace and affection is better than a whole with vanity and vexation."—J. H. Cooke. Two are better than one, &c. (9—12). For three reasons:—(1) If they fall, the one will lift up his fellow. Being all of us liable to mistake and folly, we need a friend to correct and rescue us. Woe to him that is alone when he falleth. (2) For the maintenance of the spirit's warmth: How can one be warm alone? Anything that keeps good people apart, lessens their zeal, and does the devil's work. (3) For defence: If one prevail against him, two shall withstand him. Our readers will discover for themselves how perfectly the Great Friend rescues his friends when they fall, warms and inspires their hearts, and defends them in the day of battle.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 10.—ECCLES. V.

1—7.—The Temple of Public Worship.—"The key to Ecclesiastes has been well stated to be the seventy-third Psalm. There Asaph looked at all things in a murmuring spirit, 'until,' said he, 'I went into the sanctuary of God.' Although as yet Solomon is far away from the peace of the blessed life, yet he here turns aside to the house of God and finds some help."—J. H. Cooke. Reverence in worship is the lesson taught here; not reverence in manner only, though that lesson is sorely needed, but the reverence of simplicity and truth. "Numbers of attendants at our places of worship can never have hought seriously over what they were engaged in. Were they invited to a palace to pay court to an earthly monarch, they would be more careful to be in time, to attend to the regulations, and regard the minutest point of etiquette. Reverence is the highest feeling man's nature is capable of, the crown of his moral manhood, the very essence of true religion."

In the multitude of dreams...vanities: but fear thou God. "Instead of fearing God and obeying Him, persons will dream dreams, and use a multitude of words. One man dreams he will get to heaven by his own sincerity. Another dreams that, at some future day, some great influence may come over him that shall lift him up into the region of true piety. Another dreams that he shall, by and by, find leisure and go heartily into religion. Dreams are worthless: words are empty air. Fear thou God!

8, &c.—The Mansion of Riches. Money is like sewage: pour it on your fields, and it will grow flowers and fruit; keep it in your home, and it breeds fever."—J. H. Cooke.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 11.—ECCLES. VI.

The Mirage.—"In the chapter before us, the pilgrim perceives that the glory of this world is a delusion. Riches and honour cannot satisfy the thirst of the soul. He who is turned aside by them finds life a failure. God giveth him not power to eat thereof (ver. 2). Possession and power of use are two very separate things. There are rich men who are using their riches in laying up treasure in heaven. Such a grace is rare, although almost everybody imagines he could use wealth well if he had it. Unless God gives the power, the rich man, like nine out of ten, like nine hundred and ninety-nine out of a thousand of the rich and famous people round about us, will find his wealth rule him, rather than he rule his wealth, and he will be fettered with golden chains. The terrible feature of the mirage is that it not only deludes, but attracts away from the right path. Listen to the prophet Jeremiah:—'My people have committed two evils; for they have forsaken Me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water.' Then to the Apostle John:—'Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.' But, above all, to Jesus Christ:—'If any man thirst, let him come unto Me, and drink.'"—J. H. Cooke.

12.—Who knoweth what is good for man in this life?—Contrast this with the Psalmist's assurance, "He shall choose our inheritance for us" (Ps. xlvii. 3).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 12.—ECCLES. VII.

The Dwelling of Sorrow.—"The preacher found vanity and vexation of spirit: the world's brightest promise proved but a mirage. Now he turns right round, and will inquire what trouble can do. After all, it is better to be good than to be happy. He must be nearer the chief good who has a good name, than he whose life is gay. So he begins: A good name is better than precious ointments."—J. H. Cooke. And the day of death.—If for and you read then, the sense is clear: "A good name is better than precious ointment, then the day of death will be better than the day of one's birth." See Phil. i. 23.

It is better to go to the house of mourning (ver. 2—4).—"It is needful that the sun should set, and the dark night come on, if we would see the stars. So sometimes the sun of feasting and laughter must decline if we would look at the skies. The rainbow is never seen unless there is a storm cloud."

Trials make the promise sweet,
  Trials give new life to prayer,
Trials bring me to his feet,
  Lay me low, and keep me there.

As the crackling of thorns under a pot (ver. 6).—"A brief flash of light whilst the food is being cooked; for which evanescent gleam men turn their backs on the Sun of Righteousness, the Light of the world."

Take no heed unto all words that are spoken; lest thou hear thy servant curse thee (ver. 21).—The ancient form of the modern proverb, "Listeners hear no good of themselves." We have seen engraved on an old wall: "They say. What say they? Let them say."

SATURDAY, AUGUST 13.—ECCLES. VIII.

1.—A man's wisdom maketh his face to shine.—He speaks of the beautifying power of true wisdom. We have often wondered to see how true religion will elevate and refine a face that hitherto has been coarse and uncomely. When the conscience is tranquil, the mind full occupied with pure and noble thought, and the affections entirely set on Jesus Christ Himself, the face grows sunny: wisdom maketh it to shine. Above all, communion with God, brings light and beauty to the face (Ex. xxxiv. 29, 30). What beauty there will be in that world where all are wise with highest and holiest wisdom, where the Lamb is the light which all behold, and where everyone is like Him! The boldness of his face shall be changed. Austerity is softened by the pure kindness of heavenly wisdom into gentle benignity. "The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good works" (Jas. iii. 17).

3.—Be not hasty to go out of his sight, rather "Be not terror-struck, &c."—Great men love to see self-possession and independence mingling with the respect which their servants show them. Sinners are terror-stricken before God, and would hasten from his presence. He would have them take hold of Christ, and be at peace with Him. He loves to see his children look up to Him with bright and trustful faces, saying, "Abba Father" (John viii. 33—36; Rom. viii. 2; 1 John iv. 18). He cannot be served acceptably by cringing slaves. We must first get the child's heart of loving fear and holy confidence. Then will our words and work be well-pleasing to Him.

Letters to the Editor.

CHRISTIANS AND SOCIALISTS.

Sir,—In The Christian, for June 24, you very kindly made reference to my gift to the Primitive Methodists in my parish for their school, and to my preaching to the Socialists of Norwich. In regard to the first of these, I have to say that our respected Member, Mr. Colman, has made the offer of subscribing ten pounds for every forty pounds collected up to a certain sum. I myself can only claim an inferior liberality, having given ten pounds to the building fund.

As to the second point, I must thank you for the thoughtful way in which you speak of the miseries and wretched surroundings out of which Socialism springs. My experience of the last few weeks teaches me that there is a great field still open for Christian effort among a class untouched even by the Salvation Army. Ought we not to be thankful that the Socialists of England claim a place in our churches, and come in their hundreds to listen attentively to the preached Word?

Are we not tempted to forget how much of our Lord's work on earth was eminently social and most intensely practical: He went about doing good? Are we not in danger of drawing too hard-and-fast a line between the deserving poor and the multitudes who, as we say, have only themselves to blame for their penury and need? In spite of the noble army of Christian workers labouring on all sides, is there not an ever-increasing self-indulgence among the wealthier classes? If we look at the lists of subscribers to our various Christian societies, whether for home or foreign missions, do we find the names of our nobility or of our merchant princes? Surely very few!

These are the subjects on which I have been speaking lately with the earnest hope of stirring up others to meet the Socialists half-way. For there are several features in their movement which are surely excellent. Their temperance (here in Norwich they meet at a café where no strong drink is sold), their readiness to hear when they are not lectured or preached at, their ardent desires for universal peace, for efficient education and the like;—surely all these healthy elements afford hopeful ground for Christian effort and Christian sympathy.

When we look abroad, and see in Germany, France, and Russia the repulsive form which Socialism takes, does there not seem to come to us across the silver streak, so conducive to our nation's peace, a voice of solemn warning that we strive to make the more healthy Socialism of England the object of our untiring labour, so as to make it in these democratic days the greatest force in the European politics of our day and generation? Would not the mere fact of Christian men laying aside all prejudice and sectarian spite, making now one brave simultaneous effort, open to us more widely the windows of heaven, bringing down in all its converting energy, the grace of the Eternal Spirit of the Father and the Son? Might there not be on all sides a gracious uplifting of the veil of the covering that is spread over the many souls whom the ministrations of individual ministers, however earnest, have as yet failed to convert?

I cannot but think that many of the problems connected with our legislation for the people will be solved by an enlightened Socialism. How much is now admitted on all hands to be within the range of statesmanship, such as education and the guardianship of the poor, which not so very many years ago was looked upon as outside its domain; and I for one have good hope that in the near future still more may be done by the State for the people of England.

Yours faithfully, J. J. Gurney,
Vicar of St. John de Sepulchre, Norwich.

ROMISH INTOLERANCE IN SPAIN.

Sir,—As you were kind enough to insert a letter containing an appeal for help to employ an advocate to defend the case of Maria Ripol, a poor woman at Puerta Santa Maria, who was cruelly treated by a priest, and then thrust into prison for refusing to kneel to "the host," I am thankful to say that I have received to date the sum of £38 7s. 10d. from one hundred and twelve contributors, but as some of those sent a collection, the number of subscribers is considerably more.

Rev. W. Moore, who first brought the case to public notice through The Standard, and who has sent me the latest information, reminds us that "Cosas de España," are proverbially and provokingly slow, so that the trial as yet has been only of the patience of the contributors, and not of the accused. Indeed, his impression is that the publicity of the case, both on the spot and in this country, has alarmed the authorities, and that they will now allow the matter to drop. It is understood that the judge who sent Maria Ripol to prison has got notice of removal, and it is rumoured that the priest who committed the outrage has been in some way reprimanded.

A singular fact, tending to confirm this, is that on the release of Maria Ripol on parole, through the efforts of the advocate engaged in her behalf, ten other prisoners, chiefly women, were liberated from the same prison, one of whom had been awaiting her trial for nine months, charged with gleaning grapes last vintage, and the others had been there for various periods on equally trifling charges. The people of Puerto Santa Maria give the credit of this remarkable jail delivery to the Prostestants, let us rather attribute it to Him who has said: "The needy shall not always be forgotten."

Meanwhile the fund remains in the hand of the treasurer, as no estimate can yet be made of the probable costs.—Yours faithfully,

Donald Matheson.
120, Queen's Gate, S.W.

SALVATION ARMY IN FRANCE.

Dear Sir,—Having been intimately connected for nearly five years with the Army operations in France, will you allow me to correct the statement as to officers having to depend upon the sale of En Avant to obtain their daily bread, which Miss Geldard, your correspondent, implied was the case. In any time of necessity officers can always apply to headquarters or to their local staff-officers. That there are cases where officers would rather undergo hardships and privations, to avoid asking for money where they know it is so scarce, is nothing more than significant of the glorious spirit of self-sacrifice and abnegation which predominates in our ranks, and to which certainly may be attributed one of the secrets, if not the secret of so much success, where others have so signally failed. This "shortness of bread," to which Miss Geldard refers, is the continual source of anxiety and trouble to the two devoted and dearly beloved leaders of the Continental ranks. And officers who have allowed, perhaps I might say, their zeal to get the best of their discretion, have often to be remonstrated with in consequence of allowing their bodies to suffer and to weaken, for not keeping their leaders informed as to their real position.

Fearing that others are placed in a similar position to myself, viz., of having loving parents at home who would be naturally much troubled on reading Miss Geldard's letter, I feel bound to say that the most tender-hearted of parents could not interest themselves more, nor look with more care after the temporal as well as the spiritual welfare of their children, than do Mr. and Mrs. Booth-Clibborn of the large number of young and devoted disciples of the Lord who place themselves under their direction.

Hence this beautiful spirit of union and love which penetrates throughout the ranks, uniting the officers to their leaders in the most tender bonds of affection.

It is not so much the Salvation Army which is going to bring poor ignorant and benighted France back to the Master's feet, but it is the "Army spirit:" i.e. the Master's Spirit alone, imbuing the soul with deepest realisations of entire consecration and lived out sacrifice, seeking alone the glory of God and the salvation of men.—Yours sincerely, in the Master's service,

Jersey. R. Greville Thonger.

LITTLEHAMPTON.

Dear Sir,—The letter from Rev. W. H. Simms which recently appeared in The Christian conveys a very incorrect and unjust impression concerning the extent of Gospel preaching in Littlehampton. It is true there is a Roman Catholic church here; it is true the parish church is what is known as "High"; it is, however, also a fact that at St. John's (Church of England), of which Rev. G. S. Jellicoe is incumbent, there is what Mr. Simms himself would not call other than "Gospel preaching." Dr. Hurndall, an unassuming man of great ability and eminent piety, has at the Congregational chapel the largest regular congregation in the town, and he preaches the Gospel with all plainness. A goodly number assemble at the Wesleyan chapel, and it goes without saying that there the preaching is Gospel preaching. I have no reason to doubt there being Gospel preaching at St. Saviour's Reformed Episcopal Church, where Mr. Simms has laboured for eight years; but it is not Gospel preaching to slander well-known, able, and earnest preachers and their co-workers in the manner Mr. Simms does in the letter referred to.

Yours very truly, Chas. H. Knight.
Littlehampton.

The Book World.

Winged Life in the Tropics. 2s. 6d. Longmans, Green & Co. This is a reprint from "The Tropical World," by Hartwig. Good pictures, accompanied by a readable description of the objects they illustrate, always find admirers, and these characteristics being prominent in this book, it will soon become a favourite with young and senior readers.

The Voice of Praise is the title of a new hymn and tune book published by the Sunday School Union. It is a large collection of popular and standard hymns, including nearly all the old favourites associated with Sunday-school days. An edition of words and music specially suited for use at the instrument contains each tune in the Old and Sol-fa notations. Price 4s. 6d.

Unpolished Gems of Scripture. Vol. i. By Rev. J. Hawker, Honiton. Elliot Stock. In this volume the survey is restricted to the Book of Job and a portion of the Psalms; the author's intention is to canvass the whole of Scripture, taking first in order the poetical books. We cannot doubt, from the result thus far, that the vein struck will repay working. The object is to brighten the precious Scriptural gems in those instances where the English rendering leaves them in the rough. For this task Mr. Hawker evinces competent scholarship, and considerable delicacy of perception. This is a book worth having, and we heartily commend it to our readers.

Wild Animals of the Bible; Domestic Animals of the Bible; Birds of the Bible. By Rev. J. G. Wood, M.A., F.L.S. 3s. 6d. each. Longmans, Green & Co. The writer of this excellent series of books has unwittingly appropriated for the third one mentioned, the title of a work by James Bowker, F.R.G.S., published by Messrs. Morgan & Scott; but each of these volumes is replete with description and illustration of a most interesting and instructive character, throwing light upon many obscure Scriptural allusions. The tone in which they are written blends the natural and the spiritual in such a way as to render them attractive companions to the Bible. The binding and style are good, and, separately or together, they would make very acceptable gift-books.

God's Provision for the Healing of the Nations. By Elizabeth Warmisham. 3s. 6d Marshall Brothers. The authoress in the preface gives us to understand that she was led to search into the foundations of the Christian faith in consequence of the mine of Darwinian theory having been sprung on an unsuspecting Christian public. In this work she shows how the whole subject of Christian evidence shaped itself to her mind, and, having herself found by this method "a divine harmony in the outer world with the reason of man and the statement of the inspired volumes," she hopes that the MSS. in which her convictions resulted "may prove beneficial to other minds in establishing their faith in the divine oracles of inspiration." On this point we are by no means so sanguine as the amiable writer herself. The work is exceedingly multifarious. Multitudes of topics are discursively glanced at, and none of them powerfully discussed. The book lacks grip and coherence of parts. We doubt not, however, that many readers will find it refreshing, although, for an apologetic work, we certainly desiderate far more pith and point and system.

Solomon: his Life and Times. By Archdeacon Farrar. 2s. 6d. Nisbet & Co. This addition to the useful series of "Men of the Bible" will be read with interest and profit. The knowledge possessed by the author of Oriental life and customs adds much to the reader's appreciation and understanding of the book. All the chief events in the life of the wisest of kings are dealt with in a masterly way, and much information is given which preachers will value.

Rock versus Sand; or The Foundations of the Christian Faith. By J. Monro Gibson, D.D. Nisbet & Co. 1s. 6d. We cordially welcome a third edition of this instructive and soul-strengthening manual; it has done good service in its former issues, and is bound to do yet more in these days of shifting beliefs. Dr. Gibson treats his theme with a thoroughness and force which are all the more striking because of the popular and interesting style in which he writes. It is weighty, but not ponderous; deep, yet clear, full, and not in any sense wearisome. Such books are in these days a real God-send, and have a blessed mission to fulfil.

The Atonement. By Henry Harris, B.D. Henry Frowde. This little volume purports to be an inquiry into the Scripture Doctrine of the Atonement, and its place in the Christian system. While admitting the ability of the writer, and the presence of some important truth in his argument, we have nevertheless read his book with little satisfaction. It fails to present the momentous theme on which it treats with anything like adequate clearness. The Atonement doubtless, as the author says, involves deep mysteries, but at the same time it is presented in the Bible with a fulness which imparts to the believing soul a rest and peace beyond that which this treatise would induce or sustain.

Freedom from Sin: What it is, and what it is not. By Clement Clemance, D.D. John Snow & Co. Dr. Clemance has conferred signal service on the Christian Church in the publication of these expository notes on Romans vii. and viii., presenting, as he does, a view of Scriptural holiness to which attention needs just now to be widely drawn. The doctrine of the eradication, in the believer, of the old nature, which lies at the root of so much present-day error, is working terrible mischief around us; a refutation of it, which at the same time shows a way of triumph over the presence of inbred sin, will be found in this valuable brochure. "To warn the formalist, to spur the sluggish, to lift up feeble and trembling souls," is the author's aim, as stated by himself; admirably does his tractate answer such ends, and very helpful will it prove to every prayerful aspirant after "true holiness."

The Church of England: Her Early History, Her Property, and Her Mission. By Rev. E. B. Trotter, M.A., Vicar of Alnwick. 5s. Longmans, Green & Co. These five lectures give, in a popular form, an answer to many questions which are daily asked. The first two, "The Making and the Organisation of the Church of England," are specially interesting, and as the writer quotes largely from such recognised authorities as Bright, Trench, and Lord Selborne, his statements may be relied on. Lecture iii. on "The Temporalities of the Church" deserves careful study. The least satisfactory lectures, to our mind, are iv. and v., the Duty of the Church to the World and her Duty to God, the first being too circumscribed, the second hardly spiritual. If the Church of England is to retain her candlestick, her missionary spirit must increase, her discipline be stricter, and her proclamation of God's truth be less mixed with traditions of men.

SOME AUGUST MAGAZINES.

THE EXPOSITOR

is solid and good, as it always is. It has a capital article, "Crucified and Risen with Christ," by Professor Beet, one of the clearest and most accurate of modern exegetes. Dr. McLaren continues his admirable Exposition of Philemon with great insight and spiritual power. The opening article, by Canon Westcott, on the Revised Version of the New Testament, is full of instruction for the Bible student. We give the following as a sample:—

"The rendering (in the A.V.) of two words by the one word 'crown' has been injurious. The common word for crown (stephanos)—the significant name of the first martyr,—suggested to the Greek reader simply the victor's wreath. This is the thought of 'the crown of life' (Rev. ii. 10); 'the incorruptible crown' (1 Cor. ix. 25); 'the crown of righteousness,' 'the crown of glory,' 'the crown of gold' (Rev. iv. 4—10); and the very crown of thorns, the victor's wreath of 'the Man of Sorrows.' But in contrast with this there is the 'Diadem,' the symbol of sovereign dignity. The word is found in the New Testament only in the Apocalypse, viz., Rev. xii. 3; xiii. 1; xxix. 12."

THE QUIVER

falls considerably below its own standard of excellence, and calls for little remark. We like best its "Notes of Christian Life and Work," and are also interested with a sermon by the late William Jay, of Bath, preached Feb. 9, 1840, on the occasion of the marriage of Queen Victoria, and now published for the first time.

GOOD WORDS

has a charming article, charmingly illustrated, by Charles Wymper, artist, on "The Harvest of the Woods." We are glad to see another paper on Nehemiah—"Nehemiah's Work," by the late Mr. Charles Reade. This number is valuable for its biographical paper on "James Russell Lowell," the American poet. This paper is as interesting as the subject of it is noble. We wish that our space would allow us to quote at length. We must be content to extract a few of his own lines, written when the hopes of the Abolitionists were low, and when it seemed as though the slave power of the Southern States would live and extend:—

History's pages but record
The death-grapple in the darkness,
'Twixt old systems and the Word.

Truth for ever on the scaffold, Wrong for ever on the throne;
Yet that scaffold sways the future, and behind the dim unknown
Standeth God within the shadow, keeping watch above his own.
Then to side with truth is noble, when we share her wretched crust,
Ere her cause bring fame and profit, and 'tis prosperous to be just.

FOOTSTEPS OF TRUTH

opens with an address by Mr. Hudson Taylor on "God's Infinite Resources," delivered at Kilburn Hall. This is just the sort of address one would expect from such a man—simple, searching, constraining, and full of spiritual power.

SUNDAY MAGAZINE.

We must mention first of all the story of Mrs. Tucker's Life, told by Dr. A. H. Japp. It has about it that peculiar inspiring power, that touch of fire, which always comes with a life of singular nobleness and self-denial. We prescribe this article as a capital tonic for jaded or dispirited Christian workers. The following passage suggests something of the general character of her life:—"It was her delight," says Mr. Tucker, then an Indian civil servant, but now Major Tucker, of the Salvation Army, "to reduce our expenses to the very lowest limit. When we were married I was anxious to make her as comfortable as possible, and had got together some fifteen servants; but she soon made havoc amongst them, and our expenses after marriage were much less than mine had been when I was alone. For this she was severely blamed. But it was her delight in this way to save money to help others. She was always planning to relieve real distress." It is interesting to know that afterwards, when they became poor, "the same liberality which she had shown towards others was shown towards her by others." She was gifted both as a speaker and hymn writer. The following verses are hers:—

Sometimes I'm weak and weary,
  And look and long for rest;
Then Jesus draws me closer
  To his sweet sheltering breast.

He whispers all his secrets,
  And I begin to sing,
And realise the shadow
  Of his almighty wing.

Oh, Jesus, blessed Jesus,
  How good Thou art me!
I'm in the land of Beulah,
  And soon Thy face will see!

Lovers of children, especially if they love poetry as well, will spend a delightful half-hour over Alexander Lamont's "The Poets and the Child-life." The pictorial illustrations of this article are exceedingly fine. The one on page 529 is worthy of a good frame. We must also mention Mrs. Pennington's wise little papers on "Starving Scholars." She writes with authority, for she is the moving spirit in the "Board School Children's Free Dinner Fund." She pleads for the abolition of school fees; telling of the bitter privations suffered by multitudes of the respectable poor in their struggle to keep their children at school, also of the ruinous lapse of attendance, and irregularity in attendance, springing from the same cause. But her chief plea is for manual training in the Board Schools. Believing, as we do, that this is one of the most pressing, and, at the same time, one of the most promising of all the many great social reforms that now claim our attention, we hail this timely paper.

The Young Standard-bearer (½d., Church of England Temperance Society) contains this month a touching and well-written poem in memory of "Daisy," by Ernest Rickman.

Lady Sophia Palmer contributes to the August number of The Quiver, a paper on "Jerusalem as it is," containing her experiences of the city during a recent visit to the Holy Land.

The Light of the Gospel (1d. Partridge & Co.) is capital story of how the Gospel light is spreading in the dark places of Ireland, where Roman Catholicism has long done its best to quench the light.

Davidic Strains from the Prophetic Lyre. By William Frith. Partridge & Co. 6d. An instructive and Scripturally sound exposition of the Second Psalm, well calculated to help the study of prophetic truth.

Light and Help to Cheer and Gladden. G. Stoneman, 67, Paternoster-row. 4d. Cloth, 6d. An admirable selection of Bible texts, accompanied by pointed appeals, and illustrative hymns, printed in large type, exactly suited for distribution among the aged and infirm.

Christ our Sanctification. By Rev. L. Price. 3d. Jarrold & Sons. The author shows what are the hindrances to faith, and then, very beautifully, the sanctifying effects of the blood of Christ, and how, according to the degree of our faith in Christ, we are made partakers of what we believe.

Buy your own Cherries. Jarrold & Sons. Dr. J. W. Kirton's charming story, which so admirably points its own moral, needs no commendation after this lapse of time. The illustrations, by Gordon Browne, with which it is now embellished, give it, however, a new value, and the little book now issued is a very attractive one. (4d.)

The Days of the Son of Man, Are they to be? By the Author of "Maranatha, Is it True?" S. W. Partridge & Co. 8d. Written in dialogue form, this volume presents, in a powerful and attractive style, the arguments to be adduced in proof of the pre-millennial advent and personal reign of our Lord. For young men of thoughtful and inquiring turn, it is just the book we should cordially recommend as adapted to guide them in their investigation of this momentous theme.

The Confessional. By Father Desanctis. 1s. John Kensit, 18, Paternoster-row. This is a valuable exposition of the Romish Confessional which, as is conclusively shown, is alike contrary to the Word of God and to the teaching of St. Chrysostom and others of the Fathers. The present cheap edition, scattered in numbers amongst our people, may do much to expose the system and to teach the true doctrine that confession should be to God alone, as from Him alone can the penitent hope for forgiveness.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

T. Fisher Unwin: Only a Curate, by E. G. Egemot. 6s.

Eyre & Spottiswoode: The Royal Album of Great Names, by L. Fewkes.

Thomas Laurie, 28, Paternoster-row: A Treatise on the Principle of Sufficient Reason, by Mrs. P. F. Fitzgerald.

Robert Banks & Son: Memoir of Bishop Titcomb, by Rev. A. T. Edwards. 2s. 6d.—My Jewels, by Sarah Sharp. 2s. 6d.

Messrs. J. Curwen & Sons, 8, Warwick-lane:—Common Praise: A Practical Handbook of Nonconformist Church Music, by F. G. Edwards. 3s. 6d.

Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co.:—Eternal Scenes from the Poets, and their View of the After-life: Studies in Criticism and Reflection, by J. Waldyve Willington.

Wesleyan Methodist Book Room: God and Nature, by Rev. N. Curnock. 1s.—Our Lovefeast, by John Brash. 1s.—Stories about the Early Christians, by A. F. Perran. 1s.

PAMPHLETS RECEIVED.

"Home Words" Office, 7, Paternoster-square:—Three Jubilee Notes: "Praise, Prayer, and Practice," by Rev. Charles Bullock, B.D. 1d.—National Temperance Publication Depôt, 337, Strand:—Communion Wine: A Lecture by Rev. Dawson Burns, D.D. 2d.—Messrs. E. Marlborough & Co., 51, Old Bailey:—The Sevenfold Law of Ministerial Training, and Can We be sure of God? by Rev. John Clifford, M.A., D.D. 4d. each.—Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co.:—The Light of the Gospel; or, The O'Tootles of Imaal. 1d.—Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co.:—The Rapture at the Coming of the Lord: Will it include all, or some only, of the Redeemed? by Frank H. White. ½d.—The Athanasian Creed, by F. H. Dinnis. Elliot Stock.—The Kingdom of God, by F. J. B. Hooper. 1s. Elliot Stock.—Lockett's Shorthand Instructor. 1s. 125, Longacre, W.C.

THE QUEEN OF ITALY possesses a large Hebrew library, containing the most recent works on Jewish literature. The Queen has a thorough knowledge of Hebrew, and reads the Old Testament in the original with much facility.—Christianisme.

JEWS IN FRANCE.—From a letter in the Christianisme it appears that an anti-Semitic epidemic is arising in France. Big volumes and small leaflets containing monstrous calumnies against the Jews, and exciting to pillage and assassination, are widely distributed in the streets and public places in Paris.

MR. W. MAPSTONE who has been for some years engaged as one of the Evangelisation Society's preachers, whilst holding secretarial engagements in the Y.M.C.A., is now desirous of throwing himself entirely into work, as an evangelist. He would be glad to hear from friends who are organising mission work for the coming autumn and winter seasons. Address care of Mr. Robert Burn, Y.M.C.A., 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C.

A CHINA MISSIONARY'S LETTER.

This interesting letter has been forwarded to us by the kind friend who forwards a copy of this paper to the writer :—

Amoy, May 30.

The Christian has been specially interesting of late for its missionary news. I have been wishing to show my gratitude by sending some information, so that the minds of its readers may be more than ever interested to seek the reign of Christ on earth.

I am just returned from a monthly missionary prayer-meeting, attended by missionaries, pastors, preachers, scholars (male and female) of five grades, also church members and inquirers, as well as outsiders. Our largest chapels are used for these gatherings. Each chapel of the three missions is taken in turn, for this monthly prayer-meeting is one of the best proofs of the unity of Christians here. Those who assemble are connected with work, and workers spread in the surrounding country to a great extent. Several millions of people are evangelised by these few missions; any news is always welcomed, and is a means of quickening. To-day a venerable pastor of the American Mission was, happily, present, and gave a considerable account of a great trouble through which some of his people had passed, in breaking away from ancestral worship. Long and wearisome was the trial of vexation and litigation which had to be passed through. It seemed again and again as if no help was to be obtained against the persecutors. At length, however, the light broke, and relief was secured.

I should like to point out that this endurance of suffering is one of the most certain proofs that the good spirit of patience is at work in the heart of the converts. True, through the influence of Christian natives, some countenance is secured for Christianity, but the trials of Christians are endless; and in many many cases they are enabled to give a good confession and to glorify God in the fires. Another sign of good is money-giving. Money is the centre of force amongst the Chinese. Now, amongst these three missions at work in Amoy, there is raised annually, say, some 5000 dollars for the furtherance of the cause of Christ. And this, not by force, as heathen contributions are raised, and not for benefits of a material kind. Even where a church cannot support or be supplied with, a pastor (that is, a fully-equipped minister), in many cases a preacher is selected, and supported. Under proper training, the Chinese are able to make wonderful progress in Christian duties of a business order, as well as in educational matters; by all which the better life is enlarged, enriched, and made more influential.

Another sign of good is the zeal shown in gathering in relatives, friends, and acquaintances. A Chinaman is hardly supposed to enter upon any serious proposition, except with those with whom he is acquainted. The greater the bond of relation or friendship, the more effective the appeal. Thus any Christian who is really alive, is a power for good amongst his connexions. There is less individuality than in the West, but, on the other hand, progress can naturally be looked for in an accumulated ratio. If you hear of some converts, you may readily hope and pray for more. I suppose most of the converts are brought in by relatives and friends, and there is yet all too much work to train and watch over them.

Another sign of good is the gracious spirit of tenderness and thoughtfulness which marks, at least, the more fervent Christians. Even if there is much less than we would see of this, yet it is very impressive at times. At the New Year's prayer-meetings, so sure as there is a quickening, do you observe the petitions sent up for mutual forgiveness, and cessation of hostilities between individuals and families. There is something to appeal to and to work upon in the Christian; and the volcanic passions of human nature have a check in the presence of Christ.

One more sign of good, viz., reforms, e.g., as to foot-crushing, the marrying of children into heathen families, the bringing up together of little boys and girls who are to be man and wife, the prevention of concubinage, of trade in children, of the murder of infant girls, the efforts for the education of women, for the defence of those who suffer from infant betrothals, such as you have heard of in India lately—all these and similar things are signs of good which may seem small to us, but is real and progressive.—Yours sincerely,

J. Sadler.

◆

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Rev. C. W. Fowell, vicar of Corton, Lowestoft, has seceded to the Church of Rome.

The Church Missionary Society's Home at Limpsfield, for the children of its missionaries, was recently opened.

Letters from all parts of India show that much interest is being aroused by the coming Special Winter Mission.

The Sunday afternoon open-air services on Douglas Head, Isle of Man, which were so popular under the late Bishop, have been resumed.

A new mission church has been opened at Spelter, in the parish of Llanfynwyd, by the Bishop of Llandaff, by the assistance of the Bishop's Fund.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and Mrs. Benson recently gave their annual garden party to the poor of Lambeth in the grounds of the Palace.

The Record says that Mr. Paget, the new vicar, has inaugurated his work at St. Pancras by adopting the Eastward position, and by abolishing the evening Communion.

The Bishop of St. Asaph has issued a notice, in which he enjoins churchwardens "to allow no person to shut their pews against any parishioner, or to fancy that they have any claim to more sittings than they can occupy" in pew appropriated churches.

At a mass meeting of the Church Army held recently at Preston, there were three or four hundred soldiers present, most of whom had been rescued from drunkenness and sin by the Church Army. A number of working men and others testified as to the blessing received.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Joseph Boyle has retired from his pastorate at Barbican chapel, which he has held for twenty-five years, and intends to spend the remainder of his life in semi-retirement in Scotland.

METHODIST.

A great camp-meeting has been held at Diss. It is computed that over 2000 persons were present.

The meeting for working men, at Rochdale, in connection with the Methodist Conference was a great success. The large chapel was thronged.

Nottingham Wesleyans recently held a very successful camp meeting, which formed the culminating point in an active aggressive effort carried on for some time past by the seven mission bands.

The Wesleyan Conference have formally appointed Revs. Hugh Price Hughes and Mark Guy Pearse to the West Central London Mission. Mr. Pearse was in the Conference on Tuesday, sunburnt by travel, but apparently in excellent health and spirits.

SALVATION ARMY.

Miss Eva Booth has for some time been, and is still, very unwell.

An Italian War Cry is now published at Rome. The first issue contains a portrait of the General.

The Stamford magistrates have sent another Army officer hand-cuffed to Leicester jail, for obstructing the thoroughfare.

As a result of a most successful three days' campaign at Ipswich, many are said to have yielded themselves fully to God.

The opening of a Salvation Army Hall, Amsterdam, is a great success. The hall has been quite full and great interest was manifested.

The Army is making rapid progress in Denmark. At first there was some trouble at Copenhagen, in consequence of the crowds who gathered about, but the police did there duty and now all is orderly.

The new opening at Longtown, in the Carlisle division, has been wonderfully blessed. More than one hundred and twenty have professed conversion in the three months, some of these the worst characters in the neighbourhood.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

When in America, Canon Wilberforce showed at once the largeness of his heart and his historic sympathy with those who fought side by side with his honoured grandfather, by addressing the graduates of Haverford College. While warning them against the unknown dangers of the future, and the foolishness of dependence on philosophic knowledge, he urged them to give space in their hearts to Christ. The future influence of America will be increasingly great, and he would advise them to take as their motto the word " consider.'

Those wishing to know how teetotalers can enjoy themselves should have accompanied Class I. of Birmingham Adult School on July 11 to Buxton, or Cambridge School to Claylieth, a week earlier, or Leeds School, class A, to Boston Spa. Malton, Radcliffe, and Scarborough Schools and excursions all teach the same lesson, and show the immense and increasing blessing flowing from the Friends' First-day Schools. The glorious weather all through completed the pleasure of these annual red-letter days.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. Dr. MacLeod, of Pont-street Church, London, is about to make a three months' tour in the United States.

About 12,000 members have been added to the Presbyterian Church in Canada during the past twelve months, and nearly 400 stations have been established in Manitoba in the same period.

Children's sermons, as a part of the Sunday services, are growing in favour. Among the Presbyterians in London Dr. Monro Gibson, for instance, has long set an example in giving a portion of the morning to them.

Dr. Walter Morison, of Westbourne-grove, has published the two Jubilee sermons preached by him. In one of these, Dr. Morison contends that "true politics, social science, and benevolence are applied Christianity."

BAPTIST.

Rev. Archibald G. Brown is expected to resume preaching at the East London Tabernacle, after his visit to the Continent, on Sunday next.

Mainly at the instigation of Sir Morton Peto, the Kent and Sussex Association has taken in hand the work of evangelising these two south-eastern counties.

Rev. W. Stott has completed the twenty-fifth year of his pastorate at Abbey-road, St. John's Wood. A largely attended meeting of the congregation was held to celebrate the event.

Revs. H. Grattan Guinness and W. Knight Chaplain have accepted a unanimous invitation to the pastorate of the church worshipping in the Poplar and Bromley Tabernacle, Brunswick-road, E.

"FALLEN ON SLEEP."

Mrs. Hargreaves, an active member of Park Church, Halifax.—Mr. Edward Cowdry, an earnest Christian worker at Sutton Veney, Wilts.—Mr. Jeremy Hunt, one of the oldest members of the Congregational body in Darwen.—Mr. Joseph Firth, of Morley, for sixty-four years connected with Gawthorpe Old Sunday-school, near Ossett.—Mr. George Jackson, an earnest worker of Princess-street Wesleyan Chapel, Sheffield.—Rev. George Curnock, of Middleton, a hard-working Methodist minister.—Rev. Philip S. Smith, of the Oxford Mission, one of the most lovable and devoted of missionaries.—Rev. Professor Wallace, who for over twenty years filled the chair of Christian ethics in the Belfast College of the General Assembly.—Rev. Canon Ware, Proctor in Convocation for the Archdeaconry of Sheffield, and vicar of Barnborough, near Doncaster.—Rev. Joseph Hargreaves, formerly a Methodist minister. — Rev. Francis Cameron, late rector of Charlton, Kent.—Rev. A. Wagentreiber, curate of Tunbridge Wells.—Mr. James Taylor, a prominent member of the Baptist Church at Rhyl.—Rev. John Rees, for twenty-one years minister of the Congregational Tabernacle at Rodborough.—Rev. T. J. Monson, rector of Kirkby Underdale, in the East Riding.—Rev. R. W. Dibdin, for many years minister of West-street Chapel, St. Giles.—Mr. James Leitch, for nearly fifty years a loved and valued elder in the Presbyterian church, North Sunderland.

◆

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

HOME.

The Women's Sunday Closing Memorial to the Queen has received an enormous number of signatures.

Sir G. Otto Trevelyan has strongly reasserted his opinion in favour of the Direct Veto.

The measure fixing the closing of public-houses in Scotland at 10 p.m. has passed the House of Commons.

The open-air meetings on Sabbath evenings, on Glasgow Green, are being continued with encouraging success.

During the recent Glasgow Fair 300 to 400 showmen were entertained to tea by the British Women's Temperance Association.

The Bishop of London is not ashamed of his teetotal principles. Nothing stronger than lemonade was served to the guests at a garden party recently held at Fulham Palace.

A Dorsetshire clergyman writes to The Church of England Temperance Chronicle that cider has caused the failure of his Band of Hope. Parents compel their children to drink it as it is given as part of their wages.

The prizes offered to medical students for the best essays on three lectures by Dr. Richardson have been awarded as follows:—1st, 10 guineas, Mr. Edward J. Pritchard, Westminster Hospital; 2nd, 5 guineas, Mr. Bedford Pierce, St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

FOREIGN.

In America there are now about thirty successful hospitals for inebriates

The second international meeting against the abuse of alcoholic liquors will be held at Zurich on September 8, 9, and 10.

The Canadian temperance party hope to prevent the re-election of any of the 112 anti prohibitionists now in the Canadian House of Commons.

The Union Signal states that the Temperance Hospital, Chicago, has successfully demonstrated that alcohol is unnecessary in the treatment of disease.

A sad accident occurred recently on the Danube; 400 persons were aboard a boat going a pilgrimage. The boat was overloaded and sank, 300 being drowned. The boatmen were intoxicated.

Mr. Matthew Burnett, at Wagga Wagga, made a very successful start on his mission in New South Wales; 400 persons took the pledge and donned the blue ribbon. He proposes to go through the towns and villages of New South Wales

A CALL TO PRAYER AND PRAISE.

Through the unspeakable mercy and goodness of God,

NINETEEN NEW HOUSES

(the gifts of as many generous donors) have been completed at THE VILLAGE HOME FOR ORPHAN, NEGLECTED, AND DESTITUTE GIRLS, ILFORD, ESSEX, and it has been decided to mark the occasion by inviting CHRISTIAN FRIENDS EVERYWHERE, who have taken for years a deep interest in the progress of this work, to meet at the Village on to solemnly Dedicate all these New Houses to the service of the Lord among His Little Ones, and to inspect the whole work thoroughly.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 6,

The New Cottages to be opened are Joicey, Pussy, Syndal, St. Helena, Oxford, Cairns House, Ivy, Mayflower, Cyril, Sir James Tyler, Ilex, Hope, Peace, Clement, The Burwell Park, Curling, Mickleham, Sweet Briar, Pink Clover.

The NEAR APPROACHING DEPARTURE of Dr. Barnardo for Canada makes Saturday, August 6, the only available date; and the Committee and Trustees earnestly hope, therefore, that notwithstanding the lateness of the season, the friends of Christ's work among the Children will rally to this Call, and gather in large numbers at the Village Home on the occasion.

The Programme for the day will include—
Inspection of the Cottages;
Promenade of the Village Grounds;
Dedication of Nineteen New Cottages;
Addresses from several well-known friends of Christ's work;
Some sweet Singing by the Girls;
A Procession of Little Ones to take possession; and Tea in the Cottages.

Fuller announcements of the Programme will be made in a few days; but meanwhile this is sent out as a first notification.

CALL TO PRAYER AND PRAISE

Trains will leave Liverpool Street Station (G.E.R.) at short intervals between 12 o'clock noon and 3 p.m. on the 6th August, and will be met at Ilford by carriages to convey Visitors to the Village.

The Proceedings will begin at 3.15 p.m., and will probably last two hours, so that Visitors could leave the Village between 5.30 and 7 p.m.

The Return Trains will be arranged for at short intervals to suit the convenience of Visitors; but it is important that those who propose to attend should order their tickets as soon as possible. Return Tickets for the Railway, including Coach Hire, will be supplied from the Office, as below, up to Thursday evening, August 4, at the following rates:

First Class Return, and Coach Hire, 3s. 6d. Second Class Return, and Coach Hire, 2s. 9d.

A nominal charge of Sixpence for admission to the Village will be made, to prevent the Grounds being overrun by mere holiday-seekers, who probably would take but little interest in the proceedings.

A cold Collation will be provided for Visitors in a Marquee on the grounds at 2/6 per head; also Tea in the Cottages at 1/.

Refreshment Tickets should be ordered at the same time as the Railway Tickets.

All communications to be addressed to

Dr. T. J. BARNARDO.

18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, London, E.

THE GOSPEL IN HIGHWAYS.

IN attempting to "preach the Gospel to every creature," the Open-Air Mission has had no mean share. The extent of its operations in proportion to its funds entitles it to a foremost place among present-day religious enterprises. The new report,* just out, is a singularly interesting record of last year's work. Its seventy-four pages are carefully divided into sections, easily found by an index, illustrated by sixteen pictures, and printed with great neatness and care.

The scene of Epsom race-course on the Sunday before "the Derby," proves the urgent need of such efforts as the Mission puts forth. An immense number of young men and women are attracted hither, so that at times it is difficult to move among the surging throng to distribute tracts. Opposite the winning-post some of the brethren are found preaching the glorious Gospel of the grace of God. That these efforts are not in vain is shown by the story related in the report of a betting man's conversion.

Many interesting details are given of the work in the 797 towns and villages where it was carried on in England, besides reports of foreign members. Those who judge mission work by results will not be disappointed in these pages. The 224 members who sent in reports were able to testify to many professed conversions within their own knowledge during the year. Specimens of these are given. The following is furnished by Mr. George Fuller, superintendent of the Sermon-lane Mission, Islington:—

"Among those led into our hall last summer by the open-air preaching was an infidel lecturer from America, who had often addressed large gatherings in different halls in America, and in the West-end of London, in Liverpool, and other places, as a paid Secularist lecturer. He is well educated, and has a good knowledge of Scripture. While listening to the open-air preaching, he was convinced of his sinful state, went with us into the hall, stayed for the service, and at the after-meeting gave an account of himself; and if ever a man prayed to God in earnest for mercy it was this man. With tears running down his face, he told of the evil he had done to thousands, and how he now hoped to be the means of blessing to thousands. He has now given up all for Christ, and has taken up the cross to follow where He shall be pleased to send him."

Another instance of blessing is thus recorded:—

"Some children are singing at an open-air meeting at Millwall, near the banks of the Thames, in East London. The captain of a coasting vessel is passing by, and attracted by the sweet voices of the children, he stops to listen. He is thus lured to come inside. There he hears the word preached in the power of the Holy Ghost, and it comes home to his heart. At the end of the service his conflict with the powers of darkness is so severe that he is compelled to cry aloud for mercy. The struggle is severe as he believes God has given him over in just judgment, and it is far into the night before he can be brought to trust the word of promise, 'Him that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out.' Whenever his vessel is near, he seeks again the humble mission hall where God met with him. Just before Christmas the friends associated there saw him again, when he was bright and happy in the work and service of God."

Preachers will peruse this report with special interest, and the chapters on "The Art of Securing an Audience," and "The Need of Adaptation" contain some timely hints. We earnestly hope that its circulation will serve to quicken the energies of the churches, and lead to more active efforts for the evangelisation of the masses.

---

* May be had at the office, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, London, W.C. Price, 4d. By post, 5d.

THE BROTHERS YOUNG, of the Working-men's Mission, Collingwood-street, New Cut, are holding six weeks' special Gospel services in a large marquee in the Lower Marsh, Lambeth. The attendances have been good, and many souls, it is believed, have been brought to the Saviour. The last Sunday in July was a time of special blessing.

Forthcoming Meetings.

THE EVANGELISATION SOCIETY will send evangelists to any part of England, Scotland, and Wales on due notice. Hon. Sec., 21, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.

THE IRISH EVANGELISATION SOCIETY will send evangelists to any part of Ireland on due notice. Apply to Mr. J. Barton, Hon. Sec., Dundalk, Ireland.

THE CHURCH ARMY will send evangelists (working-men) to any clergyman on due notice, for short or long missions. Hon. Sec., 128 and 130, Edgware-road, W.

THE METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE EVANGELISTS' ASSOCIATION will send lay preachers and evangelists to any chapel or hall of any evangelical denomination in London. Hon. Sec., 121, Camberwell New-road, S.E.

Y.M.C.A., NEW METAL EXCHANGE, Whittington-avenue, E.C.—Gospel services at Bermondsey, Sundays, 7 p.m., and Thursdays, 8 p.m. Mission work at Whitechapel, Limehouse, Canning Town, &c.

BIBLE READINGS for German governesses and others, Thursdays, 8 p.m. French Bible-readings for governesses, Saturdays, 3.30, except last of the month. French Bible-classes for maids and others, Sundays, 3.30, Y.W.C.A., Morley Halls, 316, Regent-street, W.

CONFERENCE HALL, Mildmay-park, N.—Sundays in August 3.30 and 7, Mr. Ned Wright.

CONFERENCE HALL AND Y.M.C.A., Stratford, E.—Prayer-meetings, Fridays, at mid-day; Saturdays, 7.30 p.m.; Sundays, 7.45 a.m. Bible-reading, Wed., 8.15 p.m.

GREAT ASSEMBLY HALL, Mile-end-rd., E.—Sun., Aug. 7, 11 a.m., 6 30 p.m., and week nights at 8, Mr. W. Bradlaugh.

Y.M.C.A., BURLINGTON HALL, 23, Savile-row, W.—Sunday, Aug. 7, at 3.15, address by Mr. W. Edwyn Shipton.

POWIS HALL, W.—Sunday, August 7, Captain Baring 11 and 7 p.m.

Y.M.C.A., THE PRIORY, 198, Upper-street, Islington.—Sun., Aug. 7, 3.15, special address, Mr. W. Haig Miller.

MRS. REANEY'S Sunday afternoon addresses to men and women, at Stepney Meeting House, are discontinued till September.

COMING CONFERENCES.—PAKEFIELD (Lowestoft), August 10 and 11. PERTH, September 13—15. SALISBURY, September 27—30.

MR. SHULDHAM HENRY at St. George's Hall, Langham-place, during August; Sundays, 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Wednesdays, 8 p.m. at Burlington Hall, Savile-row.

SEASIDE SERVICES.

AUGUST:—Messrs. C. H. and E. Collier, Herne Bay, to 16th; Mr. Banaster, Rhyl, to 14th, Bournemouth, from 15th; Messrs. E. Salisbury and M. J. Hall, Bournemouth, to 15th; Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Scarborough and Filey; Mr. E. T. M. Dennes, Whitby; Messrs. Hutchinson, Boutflower, Armitage, Bridlington Quay; Mr. Spiers, Redcar; Mr. A. E. Bellingham, Llandudno; Mr. H. M. Trickett, Eastbourne; Mr. H. W. Figgis, Brighton; Mr. W. F. Seagrove, Broadstairs; Mr. F. Pitts, St. Leonards; Mr. Hall, Southsea; Mr. A. Storrs, Sandown, I.W.; Mr. W. R. Moore and Dr. Carless, Ilfracombe; Mr. W. Huckett, Dawlish and Teignmouth; Mr. Geo. Bennett, Aberystwith; Mr. G. H. Chaplin, Felixstowe; Mr. Pericles Green, Weymouth; Messrs. Gibbert Hughes and Howard Staines, Worthing; Messrs. G. R. Kirlew, L. K. Shaw, and other friends from Manchester, Lytham, St. Ann's, and Blackpool; Mr. J. H. Greene, Saltburn; Mr. A. Haley, Whitley; Mr. Pring, Bude; Lieut.-Col. Drury and Mr. A. J. Barnard, Littlehampton; Mr. E. Hughes, St. Margaret's, near Deal; Mr. L. Carrott, Deal; Hon. W. G. Scott, Elie (Fife); Mr. Hindley Jones, Folkestone; Mr. W. Davidson, North Berwick; Mr. H. G. Harris, Weston-super-Mare.

Notices.

COMMUNICATIONS RECEIVED WITH THANKS.—D.B. W.G. J.C. J.R. S.J.M. H.S.W. Mrs. S. E.P. C.T. V.M.S. C.A.R. C.H.K. A.J.C. A.C.R. J.W. E.B. W.J.C. J.E.M. M.G. J.J.G. J.G.R. S.P. J.R. P.F. R.D.F. P.H. J.W. T.W.B. J.E.L. J.P.H. B.M. O. McE. C.S.S. W.C.B. A.K. C.E.C. R.G.T. A.D. H.V. D.M. R.P. J.T. A.B. R.C. R.S. E.S. R.C. A.T. G.H.P. D. McL. D.C.J. A.L.W. M.D. W.F.G. W.H. J.G.M. E.C.D. W.C.B. A.L.S. J.B. H.V. J.T.M. S.N. C.A.S. R.D. C.J.D. W.F. J.M. S.R. M.J.W. T.G.Y. Miss K. H.A.C. J.S. J.T.F.

APPLICANTS FOR TRACTS.—Henry Knight, 14, High-street, St. Albans; F. C Young, 151, Cable-street, St. George's East, E.; F. Sumner, Crofton House, Lennox-street, Weymouth; W. H. Carpenter, 26A, Sutterton-street, Frederick-street, Caledonian-road, N.; H. Wilson, 401, Rutherglen-road, Glasgow; E. Hannant, London House, Harrow; Miss S. Pattinson, Brook Cottage, Brough, Westmoreland; H. C. Curtis, East Harnham, Salisbury.

[As it is found that infidels and others send tracts to the persons whose names are inserted here, it is most important that all books and papers received should be carefully read before being given away.]

SOUL-WINNING PRAYER UNION.—Text for August 10 (Hosea xiii. 9):—"O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself; but in Me is thine help."

SUNDAY TRAINS IN IRELAND.—All friends of the Sabbath will rejoice to hear that an earnest effort is being made to induce the Northern Counties Railway Company to cease running cheap excursion trains on the Lord's Day. Already over three hundred of the shareholders have signed a memorial to the directors against Sunday excursion trains.

Subscriptions Received by Messrs. Morgan & Scott to Saturday, July 30, 1887.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders not by stamps.

	£	s.	d
Dr. Barnardo's Homes—J.G. £2; F.C. £5; M.E.D. 10s.; W.H. £2; F.B. 5s.; C.O. 10s.; T.C.E. 2s. 6d.; W.N. 10s.; M.H. 2s.; Waiting for the Master, £20	30	19	6
London City Mission—F.C.	5	0	0
Suppression of Opium Traffic with China (Travelling Agent)—J.H. £5; J.B.H. £1; Rev. R.W.B. £2; R.C. £5; A.R. 5s.; M.R. 1s.	13	6	0
Mr. Fegan's Home—M.E.D.	0	10	0
Mr. C. Cook's Work—W.M.C.	5	0	0
Day in Country Fund—M.E.D. 5s.; Mrs. W. 3s.; C.S. 2s.; D.X. £1; W.M.C. £5; F.J.W. 10s.; Mrs. H. 5s.; L.H. £1; J.H.F. and Family, £3; M.A.P. 2s. 6d.; Mrs. H. £1; A.G.H. 10s.; E. J. Surbiton, £1; C.M.P. £1; H.A.T. 10s.; J.W.W. £1 1s.	16	8	6
N. E. London Gospel Mission—F.J.W. 10s.; E.C. £1 19s. 8d.	2	9	8
Miss de Broen's Work, Paris—Prov. iii. 9	1	0	0
Families of Men lost in "Breeze"—Prov. iii. 9	0	4	0
Gospel Purity Association—M.G.H.	1	0	0
Bridge of Hope, Ratcliff—M.G.H. 10s.; E.E.S. 10s.	1	0	0
McAll Mission—C.J.A.	2	2	0
National Vigilance Assn.—E.V. £1; T.N.J. 10s.	1	10	0
China Inland Mission—W.H. £2; E.E.S. 10s.; J.G. £10; Waiting for the Master, £100; C.C. Pair of gold earrings, pearl, and diamond	112	10	0
Mildmay Msn. to Jews—W.H. £1; Clifton, £50	51	0	0
Female Education in the East—F.B.	0	15	0
Hitchin Colportage Association—M.S.	0	10	6
Working Men's Lord's Day Rest Association—M.E.O.	0	5	0
Labour Aid Society—M.E.O.	0	5	0
Church Missionary Society—E.E.S.	0	10	0
Thames Church Mission—E.E.S.	0	10	0
Friendless & Fallen—E.E.S.	0	10	0
Rescue Work at Reading—E.E.S.	0	10	0
Miss Daniell's Soldiers' Homes—T.N.J. 10s.; "A Broken Vessel," £10	10	10	0
Miss Sharman's Orphans' Home—T.N.J. 10s.; C.P., Worthing, 2s. 6d.; T.C.E. 2s.; Waiting for the Master, £20	20	14	6
Missionary Intelligence and Registration Office—T.N.J.	0	10	0
Soldiers' Home, Malta (Rev. Laverack)—C.P., Worthing	0	5	0
Italian Aid Society—C.P., Worthing	0	5	0
Gospel Hall for Constantinople—C.P., Worthing	0	3	6
Indian Colporteur Evangelist—C.P., Worthing	0	5	0
St. Giles' Christian Mission—C.P., Worthing, 5s.; "A Broken Vessel," £5; M.R. 2s.	5	7	0
Home for Aged Blind Christian Women—R.H. 5s.; C.M.P. £1	1	5	0
Congo Mission—C.M.P.	1	0	0
Defence of Spanish Woman—T.S.M.	0	2	6
Mrs. Ginever's Orphans' Home—"A Broken Vessel"	10	0	0
Miss Cole's Orphans' Home—"A Broken Vessel"	10	0	0
Rebuilding of Manuel Matamoros' House, Spain—"A Broken Vessel"	10	0	0
Germans in London (Young Girls)—"A Broken Vessel"	10	0	0
Salvation Army—R.J. £2; (R. C. S.) "A Broken Vessel," £10; (Slum and Gutter Work) "A Broken Vessel," £10	22	0	0
Sailors' Welcome Home (Miss Child)—"A Broken Vessel"	5	0	0
Mrs. Fisher's Work—"A Broken Vessel"	5	0	0
Work in the Brickfields, Southall—"A Broken Vessel"	5	0	0
Ragged Church and Chapel Union—"A Broken Vessel"	5	0	0
Mr. Pascoe's Work, Mexico—"A Broken Vessel"	5	0	0
Fridsberg Children's Home—"A Broken Vessel"	5	0	0
Mrs. Hilton's Crèche, &c.—E.H.	1	0	0
Rev. J. W. Atkinson's Day in Country Fund—B.	0	2	0
Y.W.C.A. (Holiday Fund)—M.R.	0	2	0
Paris City Mission—R.J.	2	10	0
Free Distribution of the Scriptures—R.J.	0	10	0
Moravian Missions—(London Association) R.J.	2	0	0
Asylum at La Force—R.J.	0	5	0
Turkish Missions Aid Society—R.J.	0	10	0
Ragged-school Union—R.J.	0	10	0
London Samaritan Society, &c.—R.J.	1	0	0
Special Religious Services in Theatres—R.J.	0	10	0
Watercress and Flower Girls' Mission—R.J.	0	10	0
E. L. Training Institute (Rev. H. G. Guinness)—R.J.	5	0	0
Home Teaching Society for Blind—R.J.	0	10	0
Costermongers' Mission (Mr. Penrose)—R.J.	0	2	6
Homes for Working Girls (Mr. Shrimpton)—R.J.	5	0	0
Sunday School Union—R.J.	2	5	0
Children's Special Service Mission—R.J.	0	10	0
Open-air Mission—R.J.	0	10	0
	£403	9	2

[ADVERTISEMENTS.]

Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen—The Director gratefully acknowledges the receipt of £95 from an anonymous donor for a specific object.

Evangelistic Mission—A Friend, 2s.

Bethnal Green Free Library, E. (towards £1000)—C.G.M. £5. F. A. Bevan, Esq., Treasurer, 54, Lombard-street, E.C.

London Samaritan Society (Convalescent Homes at Sandgate and Bournemouth)—Miss S. 5s.; Mr. J.C.B. £1 Mrs. P.S. 3s. 6d.

SOLDIERS' & SAILORS' REST, MALTA.

It has been decided to go
FORWARD IN THE NAME OF THE LORD,
And on August 8 we must pay down the Purchase Money—i.e.—

£3,000.

After all the help which we have received, and for which we are most thankful, it appears that, to enable us to secure the premises, we must borrow over half the amount.

Some friends and well-wishers to our work in the

ARMY AND NAVY

Will perhaps help us now it is definitely understood that the property is to be secured.

Cheques and Money Orders may be made payable to Rev. J. LAVERACK, Malta, and will be gratefully acknowledged.

"AN EXCELLENT TEXT-BOOK FOR BIBLE CLASSES."—Sabbath School Magazine.

The Number "SEVEN" in Scripture.

COMPILED BY SIR ARTHUR BLACKWOOD, K.C.B.

Tinted Covers, 1/- ; Limp Cloth, 1/6 ; Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2/6.

"Readers of history, and observers of nature alike, have often remarked on the frequency with which the number SEVEN occurs, and on the peculiar significance which, in all times, has attached to this number. Readers of the Bible, too, cannot well have failed to notice how frequently this particular number occurs in Holy Scripture; but many of them will be astonished to find the extent to which that number enters into the structure of God's Word, when they read a little book by Mr. S. A. Blackwood, C.B., entitled 'THE NUMBER SEVEN IN SCRIPTURE.' This gives a complete and exhaustive record of all the passages in which the number appears, quoting about three hundred instances in the Old Testament and one hundred in the New Testament. It will be found to run through the whole of the Bible, commencing with the institution of the seventh day, or Sabbath in Eden, and concluding with the various series of 'sevens' in the Apocalypse. The variety may be gathered from the following :—

Seven Utterances of God in Eden.
Seven Sayings of Christ on the Cross.
Seven Weepings of Joseph.
Seven Excuses of Moses when commissioned to [deliver Israel.
Seven Prayers of Jesus recorded by Luke.
Seven Miracles recorded by John.
Seven Resurrections mentioned in Scripture.
Seven 'Walks' described in the Epistle to the [Ephesians.
Seven Beatitudes in the Revelation.

"As the Author observes, 'We must surely acknowledge that a Divine design has caused this particular number to be so frequently employed, and to enter into the composition of the books of the Bible—books written by so many hands, and at such various periods. Whatever other object the Divine Author of the Bible may have had in view in making such frequent use of the number, it seems to be generally believed, for one thing at least, that it was intended to convey the idea of completeness or perfection. Its first employment on the occasion of the completed work of creation is strongly in favour of this presumption."—The Quiver.

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

CASTLE YARD MISSION.

Established Eighty-Five Years.

President—Rev. NEWMAN HALL, LL.B.

HELP URGENTLY SOLICITED towards Expenses of giving OVER 500 POOR CHILDREN a DAY IN THE COUNTRY, with GOOD DINNER AND TEA.

Friends now enjoying summer holidays, please remember these poor little ones pent up in the courts and alleys of Southwark.

Contributions will be very gratefully received and acknowledged by Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.; Treasurer, Rev. ROBERT TUCK, B.A., 23, Thornford-road, Lewisham-park, S.E.; Bankers, LONDON & WESTMINSTER, St. James's-square, S.W., Account, "Castle-yard Mission."

THE SALVATION ARMY in INDIA.

COMMISSIONER TUCKER
WITH FIFTY OFFICERS
Will leave for India on FRIDAY EVENING, August 5.

Previous to their departure
GENERAL BOOTH
WILL LEAD
FINAL FAREWELL MEETING AT CANNON-STREET HOTEL, CITY, ON
Friday Afternoon, at 4 o'clock.

Admission by Ticket, or on Payment of One Shilling for Reserved Seat.

NEW TRACTLETS BY REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A., LEICESTER.

The First Step into the Blessed Life.
Words of Help for Christian Girls.

½d. each; or 3s. 6d. per 100.

London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & Co., 9, Paternoster-row, E.C.

"THE HERALD OF MERCY," published monthly at One Halfpenny. Specimen copy sent, post free, on application to the publishers, Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.

SCRIPTURAL PROOFS

THAT GOD OFFERS US IN OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST PERFECT DELIVERANCE FROM ALL SIN, INWARD AS WELL AS OUTWARD, IF WE WILL BUT RECEIVE HIM AND BELIEVE ON HIS NAME FOR ALL THAT GOD HAS MADE HIM TO BE TO US. (John i. 12; 1 Cor. i. 30.)

BY

J. P. WILSON.

"Holiness by faith in Jesus,
Not by effort of thine own,
Sin's dominion crushed and broken
By the power of grace alone.
God's own holiness within thee,
His own beauty on thy brow;
This shall be thy pilgrim brightness,
This thy blessed portion now."

Miss HAVERGAL.

LONDON:
S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO., 9, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.
1887.

THE above is the title-page of a book of 408 pages, price in cloth two shillings, consisting of the contents of three little books, "First Sheets of Scriptural Proofs," "Further Sheets of Scriptural Proofs," and "Third Series of Scriptural Proofs," hitherto sent out separately, and only to applicants by letter for them, now put together for general publication. The object of the book is simply to direct attention to what God says in his Word on the extent of deliverance from sin given us in our Lord Jesus Christ. Many letters have been received from readers of the separate parts, showing that this object has been attained in their case. The following are extracts from a few of them :—

"Reading your books has driven me more to the precious truth; and our loving Father has opened more light to me—more than ever I expected to get. Praise his dear name!"

"I have read it carefully, and can find nothing of man in it, but all in it to be the revealed power of God. I have received great encouragement and strength from the reading of it."

"Thank you so much for your little book. It has helped me to realise more fully 'the glorious gospel of Christ.'"

"I have read the 'Proofs,' and they have opened my eyes greatly to what may be obtained by faith and prayer."

"I have read several parts of it many times over. It seems to me just the kind of book to put a solid scriptural foundation under the faith of those who are conscious of a real and godly change of heart, and of an eager desire to be wholly the Lord's."

"I rejoice greatly in it. It is well calculated to stimulate an earnest desire in the hearts of the Lord's dear people to search the Scriptures more diligently and prayerfully, like the Bereans, 'daily whether these things were so.'"

"I have read your little book, lent me by a friend, and I do desire heartily to thank my God that it was put into my hands.

"Though for years I have known my Saviour's love, and experienced the incoming of the Holy Ghost in power in my soul, yet since reading 'Scriptural Proofs' I have had a fresh revelation of what Jesus is to me in his capacity of Saviour; and I have been able to grasp Him in a fuller and more comprehensive faith as my deliverer from indwelling sin; and that on the truth of the living God as shown so clearly in your little book.

"My heart goes with every line of it. I do trust and believe it will be blessed wherever it is read: there is so little of man in it, and so much of God.'

GEORGE YARD RAGGED SCHOOLS, &c., Whitechapel, E.

GEORGE HOLLAND returns his sincere thanks to B., for parcel of Clothing.

The Infant Day Nursery. Free Ragged Day and Sunday Schools. Toy Classes. Work among Rough Boys. Mutual Industrial Classes for Lads. Meetings and Classes for Elder Girls and Young Women. Bible Class for Men. Evangelistic Services. Temperance Meetings. Open-air Services. Bible Class for Women. And other Missionary agencies in operation.

Friends are invited to visit the Institution any day but Saturday.

Post-office Orders should be made payable at 66, High-street, Whitechapel, E. Letters and Parcels should be addressed to GEORGE HOLLAND, The Ragged Schools, George Yard, High-street, Whitechapel, London, E.

"DAY IN THE COUNTRY,"

George-yard Ragged Schools, High-street, Whitechapel. E.

Received with many thanks from R., £1 1s.; C. C., 2s. 6d.; A. R. H., Keswick, 5s.; "Thank-offering," £1.

Friends are invited to visit the Institution any day but Saturday.

Post-office Orders should be made payable at 66, High street, Whitechapel. E. Letters should be addressed to GEORGE HOLLAND, The Ragged Schools, George Yard, High-street, Whitechapel, London, E.

THE BENEVOLENT OR STRANGERS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

Treasurer, Ald. Sir R. N. Fowler, Bart., M.P.
J. H. Anderson, Esq., Chairman.
Clarence Smith, Esq., J.P., Hon. Secretary.

For 101 years this Institution has visited and relieved the destitute sick, by an entirely unpaid agency, consisting of over 240 Christian men and women.

Funds are urgently needed.

The Committee will be thankful for the Society being remembered in the testamentary arrangements of the benevolent.—Office of the Society, 52, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

ANXIETY OF SOUL. — Any to whom the way of salvation is not clear, are invited to communicate, either personally or by letter, to W. S., care of Evangelistic Secretary, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

CONVALESCENT HOMES, at Bournemouth and Sandgate.—For particulars apply to Mr. JOHN JAMES JONES, Director of the London Samaritan Society, 98, High-street, Homerton, London, E.

THE BETHSHAN (Faith-Healing Home), late of 161, Islington, Liverpool, has been transferred to more suitable premises in Leeds. Divine Healing and Holiness Meetings: Sundays, 2.30 p.m.; Tuesdays, 2.30 p.m.; Thursdays, 7.30 p.m. Christian friends desiring to be received into the house, apply to Miss Gibbs, 10, St. John's-terrace, Belle Vue-road, Leeds.

MORLEY HOME for Aged Governesses, Needlewomen, and Servants, 25, Chatham-place, Hackney, E.—This Home, recently established through the kindness of the late Samuel Morley, Esq., M.P., has been planned to meet the necessity of aged Governesses, Needlewomen, and Servants, who may happen to be possessed of some small savings, to which friends might be willing to make up the small weekly payment necessary; or for others without means, for whom families, either separately or unitedly, would pay, in recognition of valued services in the past.

The terms are 8s. 6d. per week, including laundress.

In addition to these (and with a view to extended usefulness), there are other aged persons who have not filled either of the positions named. but who have passed through much sorrow, and whose friends cannot receive them into their own homes, but would be willing to pay for their support elsewhere. The charge to such would be 10s. per week, and as their numbers increase a separate house would be taken, so as not to encroach upon the prior claim of the others.

The chief object of this work is to benefit those who have been true women, and who are now in life's last years unable to care for themselves, to whom the reading of God's Word free from toil and anxiety would be valued; and to the faithful child of God who has reached seventy. and even eighty years, there may always be found something to do for the Master in the little vineyard around her.

In accordance with the wishes of Mr. Samuel Morley, no intoxicants will be introduced—to use his own words, "Such things were not required." It is scarcely necessary to add that his request will be faithfully carried out.

Subscriptions and donations will be thankfully received, and, through the kindness of Messrs. Morgan & Scott, may be sent to the Office of THE CHRISTIAN. Applications for admission (in the first instance by letter) should be addressed to the Hon. Superintendent, Miss E. COALES, Morley Home, 25, Chatham-place, Hackney, E. Proverbs iii. 6.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF CLOTHING for distribution among the poorer patients and their families are earnestly solicited by the Committee of the Ladies' Samaritan Society, National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, Queen-square, Bloomsbury.—Parcels should be addressed to Miss S. WHITMORE, Clerk to the Ladies' Committee, at the Hospital. Donations in money will also be thankfully received.

A FORTNIGHT in the country, free of cost, for invalid and elderly Ladies, earnestly solicited. They have no change. Invitations or donations thankfully acknowledged.

Miss FAITHFULL, Institute, 136, Regent-street.

URGENT APPEAL.—CLOTHING.—Help earnestly solicited for the many necessitous and invalid gentlewomen and children known to Miss FAITHFULL, The Institute, 136, Regent-street. The need is great. See Report.

BRITISH and FOREIGN SAILORS' SOCIETY.

LEGACIES RECEIVED for the VICTORIA and ALBERT MEMORIAL FUND, to assist our aged Missionaries (themselves chiefly sailors). Already upwards of £4,000 (equivalent) given and promised.

Patron—H.R.H. PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR.

LORD BRASSEY (President) "pleads with increased confidence."

LORD BISHOP OF LONDON (Vice-President), presiding at the Mansion House Meeting, "wished the Society's operations better success, and hoped the fund of £10,000 would be completed this Jubilee year."

Contributions may be sent to the Treasurer, THOMSON HANKEY, Esq., Bank of England; or to the Secretary, EDWARD W. MATTHEWS, Sailors' Institute, London, E.

BIBLE AND COLPORTAGE SOCIETY OF IRELAND.

AN undenominational Society, with Agents in all parts of Ireland. Carefully selected and trained Colporteurs are spreading the knowledge of Jesus by the living voice and the printed page. They have access to the people everywhere, and are not interfered with in their work. A contribution of £40 will secure a Colporteur for a year in any part of Ireland. Several additional Colporteurs have been recently appointed. Funds greatly needed.—Rev. H. M. WILLIAMSON, Belfast, and Rev. JOHN ELLIOTT, Armagh, Secretaries, by whom contributions will be gratefully received; or they may be paid at the Office of this Paper.

ZENANA MEDICAL COLLEGE, 58, St. George's-road, S.W.—The Committee will receive a Lady as Student, who can pay 50 guineas towards her two years' training (including board, residence, and instruction), the remainder being contributed by friends.—Address The HON. SEC.

DAY IN COUNTRY.—Voluntary Workers, Gee-street Mission, Goswell-road, solicit Funds to take poor Adults and Children to Epping Forest.—Donations thankfully received for HENRY RUDGLEY, Hon. Superintendent, second floor, 82, Wood-street, Cheapside; Treasurer, ROBERT BAXTER, Esq., 6, Victoria-street, Westminster. Bankers, Barclay Bevan.

MR. B. W. NEWTON'S Lectures in the Stafford Rooms on Tuesdays are discontinued until further notice.

Educational.

HOME SCHOOL for Girls. Limited number of Boarders. Good education, based on Bible teaching, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness." Pupils prepared for the various Exams. Kindergarten for Juniors. Terms inclusive. Recommended by R. C. Morgan and parents of pupils.—Mrs. SILVESTER, Clarence House, Pellatt-grove, Wood Green.

SUPERIOR EDUCATION for young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. WATKINS, F.S.Sc., Dyreham College, North Finchley.—Pupils prepared for public examinations. Fees, including music, French, and drawing, 14 and 16 guineas per term, prepaid.

"I have the greatest pleasure in recommending Mrs. Watkins' School to parents seeking a good Christian home and a high-class education for their daughters. The School is situated in a fine healthy neighbourhood."—Josiah Spiers, Children's Special Service Mission.

NONCONFORMIST LADIES' SCHOOL.
MACAULAY HOUSE, CAMBRIDGE.

Every educational advantage offered, with careful Christian training, and a refined, happy home.

Inclusive fees, 30 to 40 guineas per annum.

Reference kindly permitted to:—

R. J. Moffat, Esq., F.R.G.S., Cambridge.
Rev. T. Graham Tarn, Cambridge.
Rev. E. Henderson, Victoria-road, Clapham, S.W.
Rev. J. Rolfe Fisher, Burdett-road Congregational Church, E.
Rev. Dr. MacEwan, Trinity Presbyterian Church, Clapham, S.W.
Rev. C. A. Davis, King's-road Chapel, Reading.

For prospectus, address PRINCIPAL.

MR. E. J. KENNEDY, OF EXETER HALL, can highly recommend an educational Home for young Ladies, where only a few are received, and where the children have individual care and guidance, and all the comforts of a superior home, combined with excellent education. References to Judge Gates, Q.C., General Elder, and other parents of pupils.—D. C. L., Farley's Library, FitzJohn's Parade, Hampstead, N.W.

MORAVIAN LADIES' SCHOOL, St. Peter's, Bedford.—Accommodation for a limited number of Boarders and Day Pupils. Pupils prepared for Cambridge Local Examinations. For terms and all particulars, apply to

Miss SEIFFERTH, Principal.

BELLE VUE, AMBLESIDE.—Good School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. FLEMING. Healthy and beautiful situation; large rooms, garden, tennis. Careful Christian training, and thorough teaching. Cambridge Examinations. Resident foreign and English governesses. Masters. 50 to 60 guineas. Reduced terms for children under 12.

HIGH-CLASS CHRISTIAN SCHOOL for the Daughters of Gentlemen. — Miss PENN receives a limited number of pupils. Efficient resident governesses and visiting masters. Individual Christian influence. Home comforts. Large house and garden. Entire charge taken of pupils from abroad. Languages and music specialities. Young Ladies are also received to pursue certain studies only, or to take lessons in dressmaking, cooking, &c.

St. John's de Ocklynge, Eastbourne.

MODENA KINDERGARTEN TRAINING COLLEGE, Peckham Rye, London, S.E. Premium, forty guineas.—For particulars apply to the Principal, Miss E. M. LOTT.

SCHOOL FOR THE DAUGHTERS OF GENTLEMEN.

Prebendary A. writes:—I have great pleasure in bearing testimony to the Christian character and general qualifications of Principal. I make frequent visits to the school.

Mrs. C. H. (daughters were pupils):—Parents seeking thorough religious training for their daughters can, with every confidence, commit them to the care of Principal, with the assurance their highest welfare will be sought.

Rev. F. D., The Chaplaincy: — I have known Principal for many years, and can with implicit confidence introduce parents and guardians seeking for their daughters or wards highest educational advantages, based on practical Christianity.

C. B., Esq.:—I am much gratified with the progress made by my daughters. Thoroughness is a marked characteristic throughout all arrangements. The moral influence leaves nothing to be desired.

Rev. S. T., The Vicarage, desires to bear testimony to the worth of —— as an educational home. The excellence consists in the decidedly religious influence exercised, thoroughness of secular education, &c.

Dr. and Mrs. B—— feel they can but inadequately express their feelings of gratitude to —— for watchful, loving training of their niece. They will be gratified to be used as referees.

A Grateful Parent (as no formal testimonial) desires to bear testimony to the influence exerted over dear girls at the most important period of their life's history.—PRINCIPAL (120), care of Housekeeper, 13, Rose-street, Newgate-street, E.C.

ILFRACOMBE, 2, Oxford-park.—Home School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. RICHARD WARE. Careful Christian training and thorough teaching. Motherly care taken of delicate children. Good references.

MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE for Young Ladies, Larkbeare, Exeter, Devon.—Residents only received. Christian parents of high social position at home and abroad are referees. The buildings are considered the most complete of any private school in England.

EDUCATIONAL HOME for Girls, combining a first-class education, including languages and accomplishments, with systematic training in light domestic work and cooking. Evangelical ministry. Pupils prepared for the College of Preceptors' examinations. Inclusive fee 12 guineas a term, payable in advance.

W. S. C., 13, Rose-street, Newgate-street, E.C.

GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL, LEYTON.—Modern education with Christian training. Public examinations passed with success. Prize for singing. References: Rev. James Lunt, M.A., Rev. E. W. Bullinger, D.D.—Principal, Miss H. R. FORD.

SEASIDE EDUCATION.—An Officer can highly recommend a Christian Home School at Southsea for a few Girls of good position. Pupils have successfully passed R.A.M. and R.C.P. Examinations. Terms very moderate. Terms 40 guineas to fill a vacancy.—INSPECTOR-GENERAL GORDON, R.N., View Bank, Brechin, Forfarshire, N.B.

VEVEY, SWITZERLAND.—A few vacancies in an old-established, superior Ladies' Boarding School. Principal in London till 1st September. — Address by letter, Miss BABINGTON PEILE, 8, Ormiston-road, Uxbridge-road, W.

HIGH-CLASS SCHOOL FOR LADIES, Duffield House, West Norwood. Mrs. E. A. ANDERSON, Principal. Christian parents desiring for their daughters a thorough and refined education, with decided religious influence, will find their requirements met in this establishment Certificated governesses, resident, and eminent masters in daily attendance.

Miss ANDERSON receives a limited number of pupils at The Tower, Birchington-on-Sea, where delicate pupils can be transferred for three or four weeks, without interruption to study, the course of instruction being identified with the Parent School. — Prospectus, with terms and references, on application to Mrs. ANDERSON.

DEVONSHIRE. — Ladies' School, Heyop House, Axminster.—Principals, the Misses REECE. Careful Christian training thorough teaching. Home comforts. Pupils prepared for public exams. Governess - Pupil required on reciprocal terms. Another at small premium. The ensuing term commences September 14.

PREPARATORY SCHOOL AND HOME for the Sons (from five to thirteen years of age) of Officers and Gentlemen.—Entire charge of Pupils whose parents are resident abroad. References permitted to Dr. and Mrs. Monat, Bangalore, and other parents. The next term will (D.V.) commence on September 13.—For prospectuses and references, address Miss PRETIOUS, Eglinton Villa, Eglinton-road, Shooters'-hill, Kent.

FRAULEIN EIBACH, Villa Schönblick, Wiesbaden, Germany, receives a limited number of pupils. Professors attend, and there is a resident French governess. Great advantages for languages, music, singing, and painting. References and prospectus on application.

EDUCATION.—High-class School for Young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. HALE, A.C.P., 1, Carlton-mansions, Clapham-rise, London, S.W.—Visiting masters, certificated governesses, and careful personal supervision with home comforts. Pupils prepared for any examination. Instruction made pleasant, and no overworking countenanced. French, German, Latin, drawing, class-singing, and drilling are included in the school fees, which are moderate. Highly recommended by parents of pupils, and Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. Prospectus and testimonials on application to Principal.

"Balham, May 29, 1880.

"I am very reluctant to recommend schools because I am not always able to judge of the interior arrangements; but in this case I have the utmost pleasure in standing as reference. I can highly commend Mrs. Hale, and have the greatest confidence in her capacity, management, and character, having known her for several years."

C. H. SPURGEON.

SOUTHSEA, UPPER MOUNT, (formerly Holland House).—Educational Home for the Daughters of Gentlemen. Very highly recommended. Oxford Local and other examinations Prospectus, references, and all particulars on application to the Principal, Miss POYNTING.

EDUCATION.—The Principal of a select finishing school desires to receive a delicate or backward young Lady requiring maternal attention and personal supervision. Home comforts. Cheerful society. First-class masters Inclusive fee 25 guineas per annum.—MATERNAL, care of Mr. Pond, Stationer, St. Peter's-road Holloway, N.

SELECT GIRLS' SCHOOL,

Cambridge House, 113, Green-lanes, London, N.

Christian training. Motherly care. Home comforts Healthful situation. Preparation for Public Examinations, at which all the Pupils entered last Christmas passed. Reference to Rev. Gordon Calthrop, 3, Highbury-grange, N.; Doctor Pittock Margate; and to other parents of present pupils — Further particulars on application to the Principal

Mrs. BRODIE.

BRIGHTON.—High-class School for Girls. Healthy situation. Home comforts. Every educational advantage. Terms moderate. Good references to clergymen and parents of pupils.—The Misses NORTON, Farndon House, Stanford road, Brighton.

LADIES' COLLEGE, Ashton-upon-Mersey, Cheshire.—Good Home School for Girls. Every attention paid to health and domestic comforts. Careful Christian training, with thorough teaching, but no over-work allowed. Great advantages for the study of music, painting, and languages Eminent professors attend daily. Gymnasium. Good tennis and croquet lawns.

Principal, Miss BRADSHAW.

LADIES' COLLEGE, Goudhurst, Kent, near Tunbridge Wells.—A happy home and School for Girls, 420 feet above sea-level. College and Cambridge examinations. Terms, twenty-seven guineas per annum.—Miss R. KENDON, M.C.P., daughter of Rev. J. J. Kendon.

EDUCATIONAL ESTABLISHMENT for Young Ladies at Belle Vue, Corseaux sur Vevey, Switzerland.—Mlle. ALIDA CHATELAIN, having lived in England for many years, and being conversant with all the requirements of English pupils, offers a comfortable home with thorough education.—For references and prospectus apply to Mrs. Cubitt, Earlham Lodge, Norwich, and to Mrs. Brinkley, 93, Sydney-place, Bath.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL.

WELLINGTON, SHROPSHIRE.

Principal: DR. CRANAGE, M.A.

NEW COLLEGE,

Cliftonville, Margate.

Head Master: REV. G. HUGH JONES, F.A.S.

Classics, modern languages, science, and thorough English. Backward, delicate, and young boys have special attention. All Exams. A Commercial form. Decided Christian training. Splendid premises close to sea. Moderate fees.

BETHANY HOUSE SCHOOL, Goudhurst, Kent, near Tunbridge Wells. — Principal, Rev. J. J. KENDON.—Careful religious training, combined with a thoroughly sound commercial education. In the last three years 150 of the pupils were passed in the public examinations at the College of Preceptors, and the Local Examination of the University of Cambridge. Terms, twenty-seven guineas per annum.

YOUR BOYS will have a happy Home and sound Education with Mr. and Mrs. DIXON, Middle-class School, Kingston-on-Thames. Christian influence; unlimited diet, beautiful neighbourhood. 20 to 25 guineas.

A WIDOW LADY residing near Palmerston Park, Rathmines, wishes to receive two children to educate with her own. Good references, and educational advantages.

Mrs. H., 3, Windsor-road, Rathmines, Dublin.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school), is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED ON HIGH GROUND, WITH VIEWS OF THE SEA, on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and a first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this school that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS, together with the papers of Examinations passed and Honours gained, should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. THORN, Paddington, London.

MORAVIAN BOYS' SCHOOL, Ockbrook, near Derby.—Pupils prepared for London Matriculation and other examinations. Ockbrook presents the advantages of central position, and beautiful rural neighbourhood.—For prospectus apply to Rev. J. M. MALLALIEU.

MOUNT RADFORD SCHOOL, Exeter.—Boys are prepared for business or professional life. Many matriculate at the various universities. During the last twelve years pupils have obtained more than two hundred certificates (many passing in honours) in the Oxford, Cambridge, College of Preceptors', and London University Examinations. Special attention paid to juniors, who are taught by a lady. The Word of God is made the sole basis of a careful moral and spiritual training, and none but Christian teachers are employed. Cricket, athletics, &c.

Head Master, E. H. VINE, M.C.P.

EXCHANGE OF PUPILS desired by Principal of a high-class Boys' School in West London for two daughters, 10 and 12, together or separately. Christian training.

M., 9, Seymour-villas, Anerley.

MISS WATTS recommends a former pupil as Governess to young children, in a high-class Christian family.

The Laurels, Wetherden, Stowmarket.

A GENTLEWOMAN desires re-engagement as Governess. French, thorough English and music.—Miss G., 2, Dilston-terrace, Gosforth, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

A YOUNG LADY, aged 20, who has lived three years in Germany, seeks a situation as Nursery Governess to young children.

D. P., 26, Augustus-road, Edgbaston, Birmingham.

A LADY (aged 24) who has had some years' experience in teaching, requires a re-engagement as Governess. Acquirements, thorough English, music, French, drawing, and elementary German. Good references.

KATE, Paston, North Walsham, Norfolk.

TUTORSHIP, OR SMALL CLASS.—Oxford Graduate (married), with some experience in tuition, seeks re-engagement as Tutor, or opening for small class. Home or Continent.

W., 3, Zingari-villas, West Norwood.

PENSIONNAT EVANGELIQUE.—Wesleyan Young Ladies' College, Nimes, South of France.—Situated in one of the finest towns of the South of France. Has been in existence for more than forty years. Large premises; extensive garden. The climate of Nimes, remarkably dry and healthy, makes the residence in that city most profitable for delicate young ladies Moderate terms.—Apply for prospectus and admission to Pastor O. PRUNIER, Principal and Chaplain, 1, rue de Sauve, Nimes, France. The next term will begin on October 1. Pastor PRUNIER has a vacancy for two young ladies in his own house, if parents prefer a family home to a residence in the school, terms being a matter of private arrangement.

EXPERIENCED ENGLISH GOVERNESS seeks engagement in private school or family. French, German (Paris and Germany), music, singing, rudimentary Latin.—Miss MOLYNEUX, at Dr. Cranage, The Old Hall, Wellington, Shropshire.

MORNING GOVERNESS (Certificated Senior Cambridge. desires re engagement. English, French, German, singing, drawing (full South Kensington certificate), water-colour painting, good music (pupil of Lindsay Sloper).

K., 31, Loraine-road, Holloway, N.

GOVERNESS wanted, take entire charge four children, youngest child six. English, French, music, good needlewoman.—Mrs. COOKE, Kings Pyon, Weobley, Herefordshire.

CLIFTON, BRISTOL.—A few Resident Pupils desired. Locality celebrated for healthfulness and beauty. Instruction, training, companionship, personal, not delegated to others. Evangelical (Open Brethren).

Mr. HOWELL, Aberdeen-road.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Wanted.

YOUNG LADY (23) desires re-engagement as Lady-Help, Companion, or Amanuensis. Three years' reference. Good knowledge of cooking, and thoroughly domesticated.

Miss M., Burgh-common, Beccles, Suffolk.

A LADY WISHES to recommend a Boy of 14, for stables or garden. Has been in service for a year.

F. C., Mr. Hallett, Bladud Library, Bath.

FARMING.—A Gentleman wishes to place his Son with one who will conscientiously train him in its duties. Moderate terms. References exchanged.

G. S. W., 1, Sisters-avenue, Lavender-hill, S.W.

PARTNERSHIP.—A Gentleman of commercial experience, with small capital, seeks to join a conscientious man in any genuine established business, where energy and integrity would be appreciated. References exchanged. — W., care of Mr. King, 38, Hindman's-road, East Dulwich.

YOUNG SOLICITOR (23) requires Managing Clerkship. Well up in conveyancing, common law, and general office routine. Knowledge of Union accounts. Town or country. Highest references.

DONALD MACLEAN, Mount Hill, Carmarthen.

SECRETARIAL APPOINTMENT wanted. — The Secretary of the Bournemouth Young Men's Christian Association will be open for a re-engagement, either public or private, in September.—SECRETARY, Cairns Memorial House, Bournemouth.

AS SCRIPTURE READER, &c., under an Evangelical clergyman, wanted by a young man who has a love for souls.—S., care of Rev. F. Hart, Long Clawson Vicarage, Melton Mowbray.

VOYAGE TO INDIA.—Young Lady seeks engagement as Companion to elderly Lady, or to assist in the care of children during the voyage to India. Speaks English, German, French, and Hindustani. References exchanged.

CAWNPORE, 125, Brockley-road, Brockley, S.E.

EDUCATED LADY seeks employment. Mother's Help, or generally useful in any capacity. Very musical. Good references. Home more desired than high salary.

M. S., 82, Albert-road, Croydon.

GENTLEWOMAN (24), decided Christian, abstainer, five years' experience, seeks re-engagement as Governess to young children; or Mother's Help, where nurse kept. Highest references.

M., 18, Bentham-road, South Hackney, London.

LADY, HIGH-PRINCIPLED, most trustworthy, being alone, wishes appointment as Housekeeper, Companion, &c., in quiet Christian family. Advertiser will appropriate entire salary to Christian and charitable purposes.—Address in first place to

Q. R. S., 2, George-place, Gourock, Greenock, N.B.

A LADY, aged 29, desires a re-engagement in some Christian work, either in an orphanage, or Bible work among the poor. Good references.

A. B., 8, Ashbourne-grove, East Dulwich.

MISSION WORK. — Appointment wanted, City or otherwise, by young man. Fair speaker and singer. Good recommendations.

A. MARKS, 21, Clement-street, Bath.

A YOUNG CHRISTIAN relinquishing his employment as Barman for conscience' sake, seeks a similar situation in a Temperance Hotel. Can be well recommended.

C., Warren Mills, Wetherden, Haughley, Suffolk.

GARDENER, Single-handed or otherwise. Married. Long experienced in all branches. Twelve years last situation. Cause of leaving, breaking up of establishment. Good character.

H. MORGAN, The Green, Chingford, Essex.

GARDENER, single-handed, aged 34, married, used to bees, cows, and poultry. One year's good character, and eight years from previous place. Total abstainer, and Christian.

F. BARTLEY, Abbott's Ann, Andover, Hants.

AS PAGE or Stable Boy, or work under a Butler. Advertiser recommends a strong Lad, age 16. Total abstainer.

Rev. E. CADOUX, Warsash, Hants.

A LADY DESIRES to place a Girl (16), strong and willing, to work in a Christian home as Under- Nurse.

Mrs. HANDLEY MOULE, Ridley Hall, Cambridge.

A LADY seeks a re-engagement as Companion-Housekeeper, to either a Lady, Gentleman, or aged couple. Has served in a similar capacity for the last two years. No objection to invalids. Salary no object. Comfortable home most desirable.

H. L., 14, Blenheim-villas, St. John's Wood, N.W.

A MIDDLE-AGED LADY desirous of working for the Lord, would take pleasure in aiding any Lady so engaged, in return for board and residence. Earnest Christian. Bracing air necessary.—F. G. PADDON, Confectioner, 3, Victoria-street, Clifton, Bristol.

LADY STRONGLY RECOMMENDS very respectable person, has lived as cook in her family eighteen years, as Cook-Housekeeper to single Gentleman, Care of invalid person, or any post of trust.—Letter only,

Miss ROBARTS, East Heath, Hampstead.

A LADY WISHES to recommend a well brought up, educated girl of 18, as Schoolroom or Children's Maid. Good needlewoman. Fond of children.—The LADY SUPERINTENDENT, Crole-Wyndham Memorial Home, Shooter's-hill, S.E.

AS GENERAL SERVANT in a small Christian family away from Plymouth, for a girl (18) wanting to separate herself from undesirable companions.

Miss SPOONER, 23, Portland-square, Plymouth.

MISS SHERIDAN wishes to recommend a Christian Girl, aged 20, slightly lame, as good Sewingmaid. Can help well with dressmaking. Would not object to look after a child.

Frampton Court, Dorchester.

PLAIN COOK, by a young Woman, aged 21. Abstainer. Understands dairy work.—E. G., 3, Clarence-villas, St. Mary's-grove, Richmond, S.W.

COMPANION, AMANUENSIS, or Mother's Help. A young Lady wishes for engagement as above. Can teach music, French, and English well to young pupils. Has some knowledge of nursing.

L. J., Mr. Halliday, 88, Rathmines-road, Dublin.

GENTLEMAN (27) wishes situation as Bookkeeper or Cashier. Gave up last situation being connected with the drink traffic. Total abstainer. Highest references given if required.

J. R. KAY, Cockenzie, N.B.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Vacant.

MANAGER OF CHEMICAL WORKS.—Wanted, an able and energetic Manager of Chemical Works. Christian, and abstainer from alcohol and tobacco. Liberal salary to a good man.—Address, stating age, practical experience, and references, CHEMICUS, care of Housekeeper, 13, Rose street, Newgate-street, London, E.C.

R.N. PENSIONER wanted, a Christian Man and his wife, to take charge of the Newry Sailors' Home.—Apply at the Home.

AS ARTICLED PUPIL, wanted in a Christian Civil Engineer and Architect's office, a well-educated young Gentleman with a good knowledge of and taste for drawing. Every opportunity for acquiring a varied and extensive knowledge of the profession, and a Christian home found.

J. LONDON STRAIN, C.E., West Lodge, Buxton.

OFFICE JUNIOR wanted, quick at figures, good writer, and with first-class references.—Apply in own handwriting to BARRAUD & LUND'S, 49, Cornhill, E.C.

MATRON.—A thoroughly Christian Woman wanted, as Matron in Rescue Home. Accustomed to fine needlework.—LADY SUPERINTENDENT, Albion Hill Home, Brighton.

WIDOW OR SINGLE WOMAN, not under 25 years of age, wanted, to assist in training boys to kitchen and other household work in an Orphan Home and Industrial School. Salary £25 per annum, with comfortable board, lodging, and washing. Must have good health, be fairly well educated, and understand domestic duties, including cooking.—Apply by letter, stating qualifications, previous employment, whether widow or otherwise, and enclosing copies of testimonials addressed, HOUSEKEEPER, Boys' Home, Chelmsford.

UNDER MATRON.—Wanted immediately, for the Birkenhead Rescue Home, an experienced Under-Matron, accustomed to laundry work. Not under 27. Total abstainer.

Miss FRIPP, 40, Balls-road, Birkenhead.

CONVERTED COUPLE wanted (confectioners), or Saved Business Widow, to manage Temperance Tavern. Those accustomed to address evangelical meetings preferred.—Enclose photographs and testimonials to JOHN POTTERTON, Fison, Horningsea, near Cambridge.

A PRACTICAL PERSON wanted, to occupy a portion of her time in District Visiting, and to attend a Mothers' Meeting, &c.

M. B., 44, Central-road, Withington, Manchester.

A STRONG, active, Christian young person wanted, as Useful Help. Must be thoroughly domesticated and well recommended. Small family. Send carte and reference.

Mrs. D., 16, County-road, Walton, Liverpool.

CAN A LADY recommend a truly trustworthy, competent Cook-Housekeeper, to a quiet family. Must write good hand, and understand accounts. An abstainer, and under 40 desired.

H., Undercroft, Reigate.

A THOROUGHLY DOMESTICATED MOTHER'S HELP wanted. Must understand cooking, ironing, and needlework. Comfortable Christian home as one of family. Salary £16.

A., 33, Ferme-park-road, Stroud-green, N.

ATTENDANT to invalid Lady wanted August 20. Thoroughly good Christian woman, good reader, patient, obliging, total abstainer, good plain sewer. Not over 35. Salary £14.—Miss THOMPSON, The Hall, Desford, near Leicester.

HOUSE-PARLOURMAID wanted, for Tunbridge Wells. Help given. Small family.—Write for and with particulars, 58, Great Cumberland-place, Hyde-park.

NURSE, THOROUGHLY EXPERIENCED, to take charge of three young children, youngest (twins) 10 months old. Must be good-tempered and fond of children. Good needlewoman, not under 27 years of age. Total abstainer preferred.—Mrs. VULLIAMY, Springfield, near Douglas, Isle of Man.

COMPETENT NURSE required in September, in abstainer's family, for three little boys; youngest four months. Also good PLAIN COOK. Housemaid kept. — Mrs. ALEXANDER, Bridwold, South-park-hill-road, Croydon.

AN EXPERIENCED NURSE wanted, to live on the Continent. Must be well recommended.—M. C., Hiscoke's Library, Richmond, S.W.

WILL ANY LADY recommend a Christian young person as Nurse, to two children, and to assist in housework. Must be cheerful, and a good needlewoman.

Mrs. RUSSELL, Elmhurst, Harrow.

COOK.—Wanted, in a quiet country situation, trustworthy, good Cook. Age about 40. Three in family. Four servants. Half assistance. Small dairy. Man and wife might suit.

Mrs. SMALL, Claydon, Winslow.

HOUSE-PARLOURMAID wanted, in a quiet Christian family. Must be good waitress, quick, and of neat appearance. Very little housework, and man for boots, knives, and windows. Wages £20.

Mrs. H., 4, Cambridge-villas, Aldershot.

A HOMELY, kind, industrious, middle-aged Housemaid wanted, long character, for one invalid Lady. Country situation. Three servants kept.—Apply letter only, care of Miss W., 6, Banstead-road, Sutton, Surrey.

FACTORY GIRLS.—Will any Clergyman recommend a Lady, experienced with above, to work in Ipswich and manage club-room. Singing needful. Board and lodging provided.

Miss WALFORD, Bramford, Ipswich.

CAN ANY LADY recommend (for private house) a trustworthy, thoroughly respectable, steady person, for two Ladies at seaside, as General Servant. Housemaid kept. Must cook nicely, and well understand kitchen duties.—A. B., care of Miss Sherborne, 2, Atlantic-terrace West, Weston-super-Mare, Somerset.

A GOOD GENERAL SERVANT wanted, who can cook plainly well, by a Widow Lady without family. No fringe. Early riser, not over 35, very respectable and quiet. Parlourmaid kept.—F., Claybon, Cumberland-park, Acton, W.

A STEADY, INDUSTRIOUS MAN wanted, wages 16s., to attend to horse and trap, two cows, pigs, poultry, and gardening. Good character indispensable.—SAMUEL DOWDING, Vale View, Colerne, Box, Wilts.

GOOD PLAIN COOKS wanted (town and country), House-Parlourmaids, Nurses, good General Servants.—Miss MAULDEN'S (late missionary) Registry and Home, Church-street, Paddington-green. Please send stamped envelope for reply.

CHURCH ARMY. — Evangelists wanted, working men and others, not afraid of hard work or personal sacrifice for Christ. Not necessarily good scholars.—Apply for particulars to

Rev. C., 130, Edgware-road, W.

To Let, Apartments, &c.

PERCY'S HOTEL, LONDON.

40, Bedford-place, Bloomsbury-sq., W.C.

This First-class Private Hotel is highly recommended by the Bishop of Algoma; Rev. M. E. Thorold, M.A., Leicester; Dr. Georgens, Ouchy, Lausanne; J. Bevan and Mrs. Braithwaite, 312, Camden-road, and many others. Beds from 1s. 6d. Tea, 1s. 3d. Tariff on application.

Mrs. LLOYD HARRIS, Proprietor.

LONDON.

WEST CENTRAL HOTEL.

(First-class Temperance), 97, 99, 101, 103, Southampton-row, Russell-square.—Highly commended by Sir William Fox, K.C.M.G.; Rev. Charles Williams; Rev. John Cairns, D.D.; Rev. A. B. Grosart, D.D.; Rev. H. S. Paterson, M.D.; Rev. Forbes E. Winslow, M.A.; T. W. Russell, Esq., M.P.; Dr. Norman Kerr; Frederick Sherlock, Esq.; Dr. Ziemann; Miss Haslam, C.E.T.S.; Mrs. Lucas Shadwell, &c., &c. Plain Breakfast or Tea 1s. 3d. Beds, 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. Printed Tariff on application to FREDERIC SMITH, Proprietor.

LONDON. — First-class Private Hotel, 20, Bedford-place, Russell-square, W.C.—Patronised and highly recommended by Bishop and Mrs. Newman, Leamington; the Rev. J. R. O. West, M.A., Manchester; Tudor Trevor, Esq., Leeds; George Ward, Esq., Manchester; Thomas B. Dale, Esq., J.P., Warwick; James Baly, Esq., and many other friends. Tariff on application.—GRACE PERCY, Proprietress, late Librarian to the Warwick Library, and Grand-daughter of the late Rev. J. W. Percy, Warwick.

W. TAVERNER, Temperance Hotel, 41 and 43, Judd-street, Euston-road. Five minutes from G.N., Mid., and N.W. Railways. Beds from 1s. 6d. Plain breakfast or tea, 1s. Tariff and testimonials on application. Patronised by ministers of all denominations.

LONDON. — Insull's Temperance Hotel, 20, 21, Burton-crescent, Tavistock-square, W.C.—Five minutes' walk or 1s. cab fare from Euston, St. Pancras, King's Cross Railways; easily reached from other stations. Patronised by readers of THE CHRISTIAN.

HUTCHINSON'S PRIVATE HOTEL, 24, Guildford-street, Russell-square, the most central position for all parts of London; and at 24, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C. Extensively patronised and strongly recommended. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Weekly boarders taken.

LONDON.-LAW'S BOARDING HOUSE, 15, Thavies-inn, Holborn-circus.—Quiet and homely. Centrally situated for business or pleasure. Five minutes' walk of St. Paul's Cathedral and General Post Office. Terms moderate.

ST. LEONARD'S - ON - SEA. — A limited number of Ministers and their wives, and other Christians, are received at a comfortable private residence.—For terms address,

H., Fern Lea, Pevensey-road.

CROWBOROUGH BEACON, SUSSEX. Belle Vue Boarding House. Situated 800 feet above sea level; commanding extensive views, with air comparable to that of Braemar, N.B.—For particulars apply to Miss E. FERGUSON, Proprietress.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA, 88, Warrior-square.—First-class Boarding Establishment. Unrivalled position. Fine sea views. Liberal table. Late dinner. Inclusive terms from 25s. Clerical and medical references. Good tennis courts.—Address PROPRIETRESS.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—Boarding Establishment, Meliora House, 20 and 21, Carisbrooke-road. Conducted by the Widow of the late Rev. F. WAGSTAFFE, and Mrs. LOCKE. Good table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Near sea, gardens, and rail.

INTEMPERANCE.—A private Home at the seaside for limited number of the upper and higher middle classes in a cheerful little spot where Dipsomania, Choralism, Nervous Debility, &c., has been long and successfully treated. Christian influence; home comforts and amusements; highest references.—MEDICUS, Messrs. Pascoe, 28, Stokes Croft, Bristol.

BOURNEMOUTH. — Clergyman's Widow, who has had great experience in nursing, would gladly receive two or three Ladies, invalid or otherwise, in her comfortable home. Terms from 25s. South aspect.
Mrs. H., Estens, Surrey-road South, Bournemouth.

ILFRACOMBE.—Foster's Boarding House. Close to sea. Home comforts. Highly recommended by Clergy and Ministers. Conducted on Christian and Temperance principles. Terms, 52s. 6d. per week. No extras.

ANNESLEY HOUSE,
Residence for Lady Students & Christian Workers,
186, EUSTON ROAD, N.W.
Managed by a Committee of Wesleyan Ladies, but unsectarian. Terms moderate.
Apply to the Lady Principal, Miss SHILLINGTON.

BRIGHTON.—Sussex House Boarding Establishment, pleasantly situated in the Old Steine, having a sea view, and the beautiful Steine Gardens in front. Near to Pavilion, Aquarium, and piers. Liberal table, with every home comfort.
Mr. & Mrs. BOX, 58, Old Steine.

BOURNEMOUTH.—WESTON HALL. —En Pension. Close to sea. New house, newly furnished. Six public rooms. Forty bed-rooms. Lawn tennis. Excellent cuisine. From 44s. per week inclusive.

BLACKDOWN HILLS, Somerset. Three miles from Wellington.—To be Sold, a compact country Residence, with nine acres of land, and if desired, thirty-six acres of plantation adjoining. Contains four sitting-rooms and seven bed-rooms, besides excellent kitchen and offices. Roomy stables and outbuilding, with good cottage. Excellent water and drainage. Commands magnificent views.—For further particulars apply to Messrs. HARE & SON, Taunton.

MADEIRA.—A pleasant Home for visitors, summer or winter, at the house of a Missionary. Good table and attendance. Terms moderate.—D., 183, Rua dos Ferreiros, Madeira.

THE HOME FOR BEFRIENDING YOUNG SERVANTS (established by Mrs. Spalding, Ore-place, 1884), will now be carried on at Jeruel, Quarry-road, Hastings. Invalids, aged or others, requiring rest will be received.
Misses MARCHANT and HARDING.

BUXTON, Derbyshire.—Alpine Boarding House, Hardwick-square, most pleasantly situated near baths and gardens, with every home comfort.—Proprietress, Miss PALMER.

SURREY, near Box Hill. To be Let, from middle of August, newly furnished detached House with garden, two reception, four bed-rooms, for two, three, or four weeks as required.
F. A. P., 47, Eudell-street, W.C.

ILFRACOMBE.—Furnished House to Let, near Bathing Beaches. Two sitting-rooms, five bed-rooms, usual offices. August, five guineas weekly. If let for August and September, four.
Ashwell Lodge, Brookdale-avenue.

BOARD AND RESIDENCE for one or two Christian Gentlemen, at Sydenham, opposite Park. Five minutes' from station. Terms moderate.—First instance, apply by letter, HOME, 12, Kirkdale, Sydenham.

SEVENOAKS.—House to Let, furnished, for a few weeks, in this healthy locality, close to Knole Park. Two reception-rooms, four bed-rooms.—Write
J. M. S., 2, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

BRIGHTON.—Board and Residence offered to Ladies seeking comfortable, quiet home. Six received. References exchanged. Terms moderate and inclusive.
A. G., Shaftesbury Lodge, 10, Powis-square.

SUPERIOR APARTMENTS in country house. Situation high and pleasant, one mile from large town.—E. C., 18, Iron-gate, Derby.

INTEMPERANCE.—Private Home for six Ladies. Terms from 1½ to 3 guineas weekly. Highest professional references given, for which, with other particulars, apply to
Miss PUDNEY, Buxton House, Earls Colne, Essex.

WINDERMERE.—To Let, for a month or six weeks, pretty and comfortably furnished Cottage, containing sitting-room and three bed-rooms. Terms £2 10s. per week.
Mrs. MAWSON, Bread-street, Windermere.

TOOTING JUNCTION. — GOTHIC VILLAS, Robinson-road, to Let. Select, healthy locality. Healthy Christian surroundings. Good train service. Parish roads. Contains three bed-rooms, two sitting, bath-room, kitchen, scullery, &c. Every convenience. Plan of drains, certificate; side entrance. Large garden. Good landlord. Low rent. Free to Michaelmas.

A LADY residing in a pleasantly situated Villa, commanding view of St. Michael's Mount, would be glad to receive a Lady to share her home.—X. X., Marazion, Cornwall.

SEASIDE.—To Let, furnished, for August, or longer if required, a large House, replete with every convenience. Terms moderate.
G. R., York House, Whitby, Yorkshire.

BOURNEMOUTH, 1½ mile from Pier.—Two young persons can be accommodated with combined sitting and bed-room with homely family, where are several daughters. Terms from 8s. to 10s. 6d.—DELTA, London House, Winton.

HASTINGS.—The Mount Pleasant Laundry, St. John's-road, worked by the Association for Care of Girls (without intoxicants). Assists to support the Training Home, and also the Refuge. Manageress will send for visitors' washing on receipt of post-card.

BOURNEMOUTH.—To Let, Furnished, from August to September 12, a detached Family Residence, near the sea and pine woods. Large garden and tennis lawn. Use of bathing tent. Terms moderate.
D., Thorncliffe, Bournemouth West.

BUXTON.—A really comfortable Home offered in a Gentleman's family for one or two Ladies (sisters), with or without maid. Within three minutes' walk of baths and gardens.—Apply in the first place to
Mrs. M., Bow Wood Farm, Cromford, Derbyshire.

COUNTRY HOUSE wanted, within 100 miles of London. Healthy locality. Four large bed-rooms, two good sitting-rooms, large garden, stable accommodation; near railway station. Rent £25. If possible, few acres available.—Full particulars to
S. T., 3, De Beauvoir-square, Kingsland, London, N.

HYDROPATHIC HEALTH RESORT FOR CHRISTIANS.—Charming scenery. Moorland air among the Cotswold hills. Highly recommended.—For prospectus and terms, apply to S. PYALL DIPROSE, Pitchcombe View, Stroud, Gloucester.

MRS. PARSONS returns sincere thanks for all kindness from Christian friends, and begs to say she has removed to larger premises.—(Private) Convalescent Home, Shaftesbury House, Seaside-road, Eastbourne.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—Board and Residence in the house of a Christian Lady; or, if preferred, separate rooms without board. Permanency much desired. House prettily situated. Very near places of worship, and almost close to the sea. Kind and loving care would be given to an invalid.—Roselea, care of Miss Linney, Library, London-road, St. Leonard's-on-Sea.

FOLKESTONE.—Board and Residence during the summer holidays, on moderate terms. Special arrangements made for families. Good ground for cricket and lawn tennis.
PRINCIPAL, Grove House School.

ROOMS, clean, quiet, inexpensive, wanted by Christian young Man, engaged during day. No objection to share with another Christian man. Camberwell or neighbourhood.—All particulars to F. P., Chagford, Devon.

EASTBOURNE.—To Let, for a few weeks, in a good situation, a comfortable Residence. Two sitting, children's room, seven bed, and bath-rooms. Moderate rent.
R., 27, Hyde-gardens, Eastbourne.

BOSCOMBE.—To Let, furnished, Whole or Part pretty Villa. Near evangelical church, and sea. Good garden. Bracing air. Good attendance, and board if desired. Officer's widow. Moderate.—M., Cadogan Moor, Bournemouth.

A WIDOW with small means would be glad of a Home (country preferred) for an inebriate son. Strict vigilance required. State terms.
N. J., Mrs. Gerrard, 9, Dorset-street, Southampton.

TORQUAY. — To Tourists and others.—A home from home in a Christian family, on reasonable terms. Private bed-room and sitting-room if desired.—19 and 20, Fleet-street, Torquay.

HASTINGS.—To Let, furnished, for month or longer, detached Residence, commanding splendid sea and land views, near Hydropathic Establishment. Three reception, five bed-rooms. Rent moderate.—TRUTH, News Office, Hastings.

ROTHESAY, N.B.—House of Rest. A Health Resort and Hydropathic Establishment for Christians. Summer terms, board, lodging, and baths, from 30s. per week.—Send for prospectus to COLIN CAMPBELL, Argyle Lodge.

FOR SALE, OR LEASE, a large, well-built House. Good south frontage, and many rooms. Admirably adapted to Scholastic or Institution purposes. Good garden. Terms very moderate. ZETA, care of Housekeeper, 13, Rose-street, Newgate-street, E.C.

BOURNEMOUTH. — Furnished Apartments. Central, sheltered position. South aspect. Near pier and gardens. Hot and cold water baths. Terms moderate.
Mrs. MOON, Ootacamund, St. Peter's-road.

COMFORTABLE CHRISTIAN HOME, at a superior farm residence, for Lady or Gentleman, in healthy neighbourhood in North Hants. Bath-room, phaeton, shooting, fishing.
M. G., 20, Trafalgar-road, Old Kent-road, London.

WORTHING HOME OF REST for Christians. Close to sea, with good garden. Every comfort. Services on the ground. Terms 25s. to 2 guineas.—LADY SUPERINTENDENT, Rutherford Lodge, Worthing.

CROMER, 3, Suffield-park.—Furnished House to Let, containing nine bed-rooms, three large sitting-rooms, kitchen, and offices; garden.—Terms of Mr. MATHEWS, London-road, Reigate, Surrey.

Miscellaneous.

ANXIOUS INQUIRERS.—Numbers have received blessing through writing. All anxious ones are invited to write.—2 Cor. i. 3, 4.
EVANGELIST, Clapham, S.W.

ASTHMA.—Persons suffering from Asthma, Difficulty of Breathing, &c., are invited to try (free of charge) a remedy for affording immediate relief.—C., Mr. G. A. KEYWORTH, Hastings.

LITTLEHAMPTON.—The Summer Bazaar in aid of St. Saviour's Church will be held in the new Jubilee Hall, on Tuesday, August 9. Help from friends will be gratefully received.
Rev. W. H. SIMMS.

FLORIDA.—Mr. HUGH MACCALLUM, Solicitor, Winter-park, Florida, being on a visit to this country, will give reliable information regarding settlement and investment in Florida.
6, Thirlstane-road, Edinburgh, Scotland.

THE BELGRAVIA BAKERY COMPANY (Limited). Capital £100,000, in £1 shares.—This Company is formed under excellent auspices, on the lines of the Belgravia Dairy Company (Limited), and of the Aerated Bread Company (Limited)—namely, to buy well-situated, first-class London bakery businesses and to open new ones. The former Company pays eight per cent., and has a good reserve fund, whilst the One Pound Shares of the latter Company are value about £5 12s. 6d. each.

For Prospectuses and Application Forms apply to the Secretary (pro tem.), 84A, Gloucester-road, South Kensington, S.W.; to the Imperial Bank, South Kensington; to Frank Howard, 36, Leadenhall-street, E.C.; and to J. H. Alderton, 34, Western-road, Hove, Brighton

PORTABLE HARMONIUMS, ORGANS, PIANOS, &c. Mr. Gawin Kirkham, Open Air Mission, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, writes:—"I can bear personal testimony to the excellence of your instruments, which I consider the best and cheapest, shall have much personal pleasure in being your referee. Our members speak highly of them." Lowest prices.
CHARLES L. YOUNG, 21, High-street, Kingsland.

NERVOUS, TEMPTED, and despairing ones are invited to communicate with G. R. G., Keston House, Lady Margaret-road, N.W. (2 Cor. i. 4). Spiritual sufferers only. Stamps for reply.

ELEGANT COUNTERPANE.—Turkey twill and white calico. Coloured illustration, model, and instructions nine stamps. Artistic, short window blinds. No washing. Model and instructions, eight stamps.
CLIFFORD, Newport, Mon.

UMBRELLAS RE-COVERED FROM
2s. EACH.

IF YOUR UMBRELLA WANTS RE-COVERING send it by Parcels Post (with Postal Order enclosed) to STRONG BROS., Umbrella Makers, Redhill, Surrey, who will re-cover it and return it as good as new by next post, carriage paid. Good strong twill, ladies', 2s., gents', 2s. 6d.; good alpaca, ladies', 3s., gents', 3s. 6d.; strong durable silk, ladies', 4s. 6d., gents', 5s. Patterns post free. Reference kindly permitted to the Rev. W. J. Fowell, Redhill.

BYWATER, TANQUERAY & CO., 79, Queen Victoria-street, London (late BYWATER, PERRY & CO.), are Agents for Residents abroad Missionaries, Chaplains, &c., in every part of the world. Goods and Outfits supplied at Wholesale prices. Shipping and passages arranged. Banking in all its branches. Full descriptive Catalogue post free. Specially appointed Agents to seven of the leading English and American Missionary Societies. 2,000 References.

COLONIES.—Openings for Pupils on good stock and grain farms, and larger estates in Canada, the United States, and Tasmania. Pamphlet free.—FORD, RATHBONE & CO., 21, Finsbury-pavement, London.

A MARVELLOUS TEA. — Our "Combination" Blend at 2s. per lb. is not only economical, but is peculiarly adapted to the London and Suburban water. No householder should be without it. Our 1s. 8d. also strongly recommended. Teas suitable for Ireland at 1s. 6d., 1s. 8d., 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s. Any of above Teas can be had in 5-lb., 10-lb. tins, &c. (tins free), post or carriage paid anywhere in United Kingdom on receipt of cash. Agents wanted.—THE BELFAST ANGLO TEA COMPANY, 6, George-yard, Fenchurch-street, London.

TO LADIES WITH LIMITED MEANS. —The Advertiser's son, a tea planter, seeks well recommended Agents for the sale of his Teas. Liberal commission.
Colonel MORTON, 2, Priory-parade, Cheltenham.

UMBRELLAS RE-COVERED in Castle Silk guaranteed for twelve months. Ladies', 6s. 6d.; Gentlemen's, 7s 6d. Orders by post executed promptly, and forwarded post paid. Patterns sent on application.—W. DICKSON & CO., 47, Donegall-street, Belfast.

LADIES INTERESTED IN FANCY WORK, especially those wishing to make money thereby, should send for Dorinda's book, "Needlework for Ladies, for Pleasure and Profit." New Edition, 191 pages, price 1s. 2d., post free. Contains an enormous amount of information, ample instructions for every variety of work, innumerable recipes and directions, novel ideas, and practical suggestions.—Ringrose, Malvern Link.

PIANO.—A Lady leaving for Mission work in China, wishes to sell her Piano (Collard & Collard), £25.
Miss H., 25, Queen's-road, St. John's Wood, N.W.

A GENTLEMAN would like to correspond with a Christian Friend going to New Zealand, with reference to his son (22 years of age) joining him in the voyage.
N. Z., Brookville, Seascale, Cumberland.

TENTS AND FLAGS of all description on sale or hire. Good second-hand tents for sale cheap. Attractive Bazaar Stalls on hire.
J. H. BROWN, Railway-arches, Burdett-road, E.

NEAVE'S
FOR INFANTS,
INVALIDS,
GROWING CHILDREN,
AND THE AGED.
FOOD.

O'BRIEN'S
IRISH SHIRTS
UNSURPASSED FOR VALUE.
Their "SPECIAL," 39s. per half dozen, Carriage Paid. A Sample Shirt, 6s. 9d.
Sizes 14 in. to 16½ in. neck. Shirts made to order.
GEORGE O'BRIEN & CO.,
MANUFACTURERS, BELFAST.

MÖLLER'S
COD LIVER OIL.
WRITE FOR PAMPHLET, 43, SNOW HILL, E.C.

Publications.

17th Thousand. Price 1d.
THE NEAR RETURN OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST. By CHEYNE BRADY.
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO.

1d. Monthly. Vol. 1s. 6d.
BIBLE LIGHT,
For Truth Seekers & Christian Workers.
(Back Vols. at Half-price.)

SHAW & CO., 48, PATERNOSTER ROW.

NEW COPYRIGHT TREATISE.
BY A PRACTISING PHYSICIAN.
DYSPEPSIA:
WHY SUFFERED.
Also, reliable and fully detailed Dietary and Medicinal Treatment of Indigestion and associated disorders, affording an absolute remedy and cure.
64 pp. 8vo., 1s.; smaller size, 2d. post free from Publishers,
HAMILTON & CO., Oxford-street, Southampton.

Terms for Advertisements
IN
"The Christian"
(PREPAID)

Miscellaneous Advertisements in small type are charged at the following rates:—

Not exceeding 30 Words 3 0
" 39 " 3 9
" 48 " 4 6

And 9d. for every additional line of nine words or under, the address being in all cases charged for.

To prevent disappointment, it is necessary to say that in no case must Letters be addressed to a Post-office, unless permission be previously obtained at such Post-office.

The Publishers cannot undertake to receive and forward Replies to Advertisements.

☞ In order to secure insertion of Advertisements in the following number of THE CHRISTIAN, they should reach this office on or before Friday, and at the latest by Saturday Morning's first post.

CHEAP EDITIONS.

By REV. J. CULROSS, D.D., M.A.,

President of the Baptist Union, and Principal of Bristol Baptist College.

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED.

A Sketch of the Character and Works of the Beloved Disciple.

With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 2s.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us."
Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, in The Sword and Trowel.

Presentation Edition, with Two Chromo-Lithographic Views—Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

"BEHOLD, I STAND AT THE DOOR AND KNOCK."

Christ's Message to the Church at Laodicea.

With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"A book that throbs with spiritual life and tenderest love from the first line to the last."—The Literary World.

Presentation Edition—
Toned Paper, Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"THY FIRST LOVE."

Christ's Message to the Church at Ephesus.

With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"The glow as from a golden sunset, which his imagination shows over his style, gives it a great charm."
British Messenger.

WORKS ON ROMANISM.

THE VEIL LIFTED:

or, The Romance and Reality of Convent Life.

By ELIZA RICHARDSON,

Author of "Personal Experience of Roman Catholicism," &c.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"There is no raving, no exaggeration, nothing that savours of dark and mysterious insinuations, nothing but the expression of deep regret that, under the sanction of the religion of Christ, such a system should be tolerated."—Berwick Warder.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE of ROMAN CATHOLICISM.

By ELIZA RICHARDSON,

Author of "The Veil Lifted," &c.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"Its exposure of the secrets of priestly domination over the conscience, and of the practical working of the Confessional, is . . . effective and invaluable."
The Freeman.

EXTRACTED FROM THE ABOVE.

THE CONFESSIONAL:

A Thrilling Personal Narrative.

By ELIZA RICHARDSON,

Author of "Personal Experience of Roman Catholicism."

Neatly printed in Red and Black.
Suitable for enclosing in Letters.
Price 1s. per Dozen; or 7s. per Hundred.

"It was a dark page in my experience when first I knelt at the feet of a mortal to confess what should have been poured into the ear of God alone. . . Though I believe my confessor was, on the whole, as guarded as his manner was kind, at some things I was strangely startled, utterly confounded."—Extract.

CHRIST LIFTED UP.

By REV. ROBERT GILCHRIST.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.
Superior Edition—Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"Old-fashioned divinity presented in an attractive form. May its readers be many."—Sword and Trowel.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF JOHN B. GOUGH.

COPYRIGHT EDITION. REVISED by HIMSELF.
With Life-like Portrait.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.

"One of the most interesting and instructive biographies ever written."—Christian Week.

Superior Edition, with Four full-page Illustrations—
Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.;
Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

ORATIONS OF JOHN B. GOUGH.

COPYRIGHT EDITION. REVISED by HIMSELF.
With Life-like Portrait.

Containing the various Orations delivered in London and the Provinces.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.

"As one reads them over quietly now, the effect produced when they were delivered in our hearing rushes back, and we can hardly restrain our shouts of approval and acquiescence."—The Fountain.

Superior Edition—Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

JAMES SCOTT: A Labourer for God.

By REV. ANDREW A. BONAR, D.D.,

Author of "Memoir of Rev. R. M. McCheyne," &c., &c.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.

"Dr. Bonar was peculiarly qualified to write the life of Mr. Scott; and he has produced a very interesting and useful volume."—North British Daily Mail.

Superior Edition—Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS.

By JOHN BUNYAN.

With Thirteen Original Illustrations, specially drawn for this work.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 6d.; Fancy Boards, Cloth Back, 1s.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness. No home need now be without this wonderful work."
Oldham Chronicle.

Superior Edition—Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE

(Morgan & Scott's "Portable" Edition)

To the Old and New Testaments, with the Scripture Proper Names newly Translated by a Competent Scholar.

Strongly bound in Cloth Boards, 3s. 6d.

"The best Cheap Edition of 'Cruden's Concordance' that we have seen is the one published by Morgan & Scott."—The Christian Leader.

Cruden's Concordance may also be had at 5s., 7s. 6d., and 10s. 6d.
A Detailed Prospectus of the Various Editions will be forwarded on application.

THE BIBLE REMEMBRANCER

A Complete Handbook to the Old and New Testaments.

By means of this Handbook any Biblical incident or event may be readily referred to.

With Twelve Beautifully Coloured Maps.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"A more helpful book for Sabbath-school Teachers and others we can scarcely think of."—Presbyterian.

Superior Edition—Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, 2s.

By ANNA SHIPTON.

TELL JESUS.

Recollections of Emily Gosse.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 6d.

"We have read the book with deep interest. We would that indolent professors might read it and be quickened, and that suffering saints might read it and be comforted."—Christian Times.

Large Type Edition—Tinted Covers, 1s.;
Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s.

The SURE MERCIES of DAVID

or, God's Dealings in the Sanctuary.

Special Cheap Edition.
Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"It breathes a spirit of high-toned faith and fervour, impressing the reader with the earnest zeal which animates the writer."—Free Press.

Superior Edition—on Toned Paper, with Gilt Edges, 4s. 6d.

"ASKED OF GOD:"

Experiences of Answered Prayer.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"The many instances given of the success and prevailing power of prayer are very remarkable, and must confirm the confidence of all who believe in its efficacy, whilst they rebuke the doubts and unbelief of those who question its power. The little book is fitted to be eminently useful."—Preachers' Lantern.

Superior Edition—Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

"OUT OF EGYPT:"

A Series of Addresses and Bible Readings on the Exodus of Israel: and its Spiritual Lessons.

By REV. DR. G. F. PENTECOST, M.A.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 2s.; Cloth Limp, 2s. 6d.

"The more of such books the better for our common Christianity. Honour to God and blessing to souls must result from them."—The Sword and Trowel.

Superior Editions—Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.; Bound in White Parchment, 5s.

"IN THE VOLUME OF THE BOOK;"

or, The Profit and Pleasure of Bible Study.

By REV. DR. G. F. PENTECOST, M.A.

WITH INTRODUCTION BY REV. JOSEPH COOK and REV. J. H. VINCENT, D.D.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Limp, 2s.

"We strongly recommend this work, the main object of which is to encourage and direct young converts in the all important study of God's Word."—Regions Beyond.

NOTES for BIBLE READINGS

A Collection of over Six Hundred Subjects, carefully compiled and arranged by

S. R. BRIGGS and JOHN H. ELLIOTT.

WITH INTRODUCTION BY D. L. MOODY.

Suitable for Bible Readings, Cottage Lectures, Sermons, Addresses, Sabbath School Lessons.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 2s. 6d.

"This is a book which every Bible student should possess. It will be of special value to the class teacher, and an assistance also to the preacher. It brings together an immense number of subjects, with groupings of Scripture texts on each. It supplies valuable matter for private meditation; and those who conduct Bible Readings will find it most suggestive."
Christian Progress.

Superior Edition—Cloth Boards, Gilt [illegible] 3s. 6d

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; and may be ordered of an

This food should be tried, wherever other nourishment has not proved entirely satisfactory. It is already Cooked. Requires neither boiling nor straining. Is made in a minute.

ALLEN & HANBURYS'

Infants' FOOD

A nutriment peculiarly adapted to the digestive organs of Young Children, supplying all that is required for the formation of firm flesh and bone. Surprisingly beneficial results have attended the use of this Food, which needs only to be tried to be permanently adopted.

Medical Testimony and full directions accompany each Tin.

Price—6d., 1s., 2s., 5s., and 10s., everywhere.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—As a protection against Counterfeits, see that each Tin bears ALLEN & HANBURYS' Name.

LADIES ! ! YOU ARE INVITED TO SEND FOR PATTERNS (POST FREE) OF THE

DARLINGTON (GOLD MEDAL)

DRESS FABRICS.

SEASIDE and TRAVELLING COSTUMES, TENNIS, BOATING, CYCLING, &c.

A Charming Variety of DRESS MATERIALS, including PURE INDIGO SERGES for Ladies and Gentlemen. Warranted to withstand Sun and Sea Water. The new Autumn patterns, ready beginning of September, will contain some very charming novelties.

Any article changed within Seven Days. All Parcels Carriage Paid.
Illustrated Catalogue sent post free to any Address.

HENRY PEASE & CO.'S SUCCESSORS,
Spinners and Manufacturers, Darlington.
Sole Makers of the celebrated Cross-Warp Serges and Gold Medal Cashmeres,
Established 1752.

THROAT, VOICE & COUGHS.

TESTIMONIAL FROM CANON LESTER

St. Mary's Kirkdale, Liverpool,
March 31 1887.

"I have used lozenges now for many years with much advantage, but I never experienced so much and marked benefit as I did last Sunday from your 'MITRE' Lozenges. I had a cold and my throat was doubtful, and I feared for my voice, but after taking two I could speak with ease, and my voice was clear and strong. I recommend to my brethren a trial."

THE "MITRE" LOZENGE.

In Tin Boxes, 1s. 1½d. & 2s. 9d.

The Registered Trade Mark is a "Mitre," and is stamped on each genuine Lozenge.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS.

Manufactured for the Proprietors, J. & G. Hawke, by ALLEN & HANBURYS, LONDON.

Tonga

The SPECIFIC

For NEURALGIA.

"Tonga maintains its reputation in the treatment of Neuralgia."
Lancet.

"Invaluable in facial Neuralgia. Has proved effective in all those cases in which we have prescribed it."—Medical Press.

2/9, 4/6, & 11/. Of all Chemists.

A Pure, Soluble DRY SOAP, in fine powder. Softens Water, Lathers Freely in Hot or Cold Water.

Hudson's Extract of Soap

☞ Use it Every Day. For Clothes, Linen, Knives, Forks, Dishes, Saucepans, and all Domestic Washing.

USED BY HER MAJESTY'S SERVANTS.
Gold Medals and Diplomas of Merit at all Exhibitions.

Needham's Polishing Paste

Dazzling Mirror Finish.

The reputation of nearly a century as the most reliable preparation for Cleaning and Brilliantly Polishing BRASS, COPPER, TIN, BRITANNIA METAL, PLATINOID &c. Can be obtained Retail everywhere, in 6d. and 1s. Pots, 2d. and 1d. Tins, and 1d. Cardboard Boxes. Inventors and Sole Manufacturers—

JOSEPH PICKERING & SONS, SHEFFIELD.
St. George's House, Eastcheap, E.C.

ALWAYS ASK FOR

Cadbury's

Guaranteed PURE & SOLUBLE

Cocoa

(REGISTERED.)

Always examine your purchase. See that you have not been induced to accept an imitation, as the great esteem in which Cadbury's Cocoa is held has led to the most unscrupulous Copying of Labels and Packages, for the sake of extra profit.

Be wary of highly-coloured and drugged preparations offered as PURE Cocoa. Anything of a medicated character associated with Cocoa proclaims it at once to be an imposture.

PARIS DEPOT : 90, FAUBOURG ST. HONORÉ.

PEARS' SOAP

Fair White Hands.
Bright Clear Complexion.
Soft Healthful Skin.

The Christian:

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED "THE REVIVAL."

A Weekly Record of Christian Life, Christian Testimony, Christian Work and Missionary Enterprise.

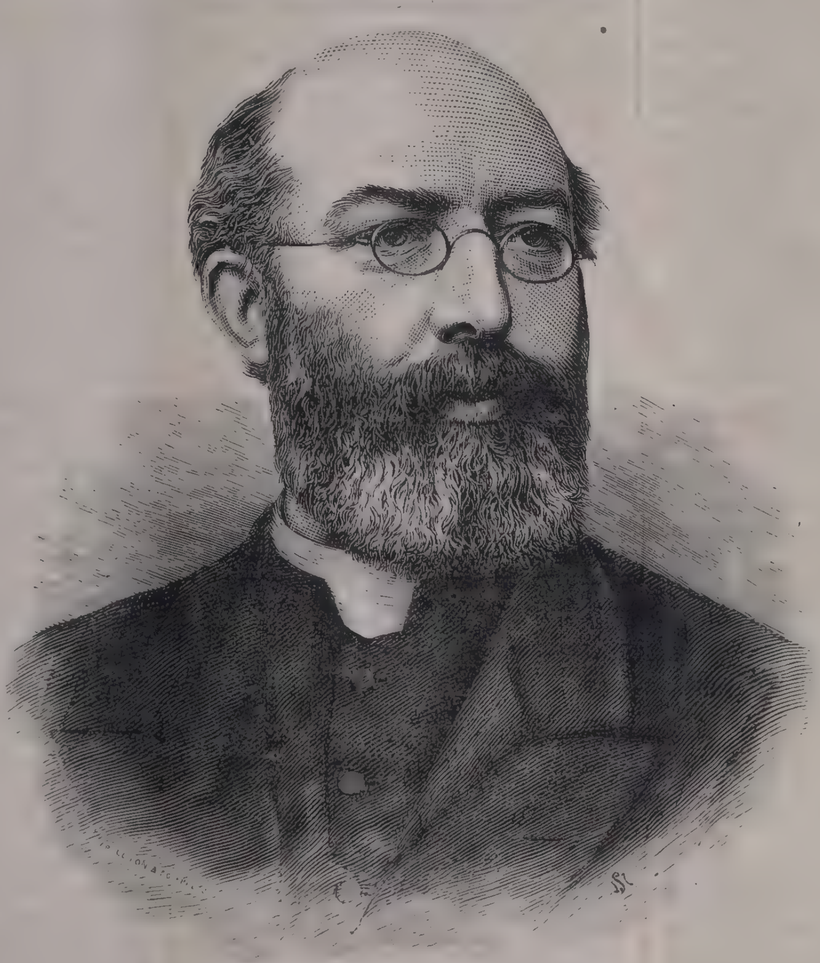
No. 915.] LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS, E.C. FRIDAY, AUGUST 12, 1887. REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. AS A NEWSPAPER. [ONE PENNY. POST FREE, 1½d.

REV. T. B. STEPHENSON, LL.D.

ONE of the most unanswerable arguments in favour of Christianity is found in the present attitude of civilised society towards the weakness of childhood, as compared with that which prevailed in the pre-Christian days. Never was the force of an eminent writer's statement more fully recognised than now: "The wealth of a nation consists not in its mines and manufactories, not in its armies and ironclads, but in the souls of the children who are born into it; and if the children are neglected the penalty must be paid in a thousand forms of national loss."

The founding of the Children's Home by Dr. STEPHENSON eighteen years ago is a powerful illustration of the influence of Christianity on child-life. This institution has now six branches, in addition to the London centre, and the story of its beginning and development is full of interest. Like the little seed in the parable, that became a great tree, because it had a vital force in it that nothing could kill, this idea of caring for the outcast and orphan children has assumed large proportions, because it has in it an expansive and living energy. Its vitality assures its growth.

Dr. Stephenson, who has been the principal of the Home since its commencement, was born in Newcastle-on-Tyne in 1839. He was educated at Wesley College, Sheffield, took his B.A. degree at the London University in 1859, and was trained for the Wesleyan ministry in the Richmond Theological Institution. His first sphere of labour was Norwich, and the influences by which he was surrounded in this city had not a little to do in shaping his after-life. Surrounded by working men on whom infidelity and socialism had gained a strong hold, he was led to turn his attention to the condition of the working classes, and the physical and moral destitution which he saw around him awakened his deepest sympathies.



(From Photograph by Messrs. Appleton & Co., Bradford.)

Removing to Lancashire, Mr. Stephenson passed through the horrors of the cotton famine, and was greatly troubled by the neglect of the children which was produced by the factory system. Though expecting to go to Leeds in 1868, he was appointed by the Conference to labour in London, where his fame as an enthusiastic and aggressive worker had preceded him.

A few months after his arrival in the Lambeth circuit, he entered upon the work for which God has so richly endowed him, and which has been crowned with ever-increasing success. He tells us that for months he had been going in and out amongst the wretchedness, vice, and crime that infest the neighbourhood of the notorious New Cut. There he became acquainted with comedies and tragedies in real life, the sight and sound of which brought to quick maturity the dreams, and wishes, and vague purposes of many preceding years.

Inviting two friends to meet him in consultation on "a new and interesting subject," the idea of a Home for destitute children took definite shape. Interesting and enthusiastic as was the immense meeting held a few weeks since in the Albert Hall, presided over by the Earl of Harrowby, it was not more interesting and enthusiastic than that first meeting of three.

With the exception of one or two voluntary agencies, scarcely anything was being done at that time to reclaim the outcast children who swarmed in the streets of London. The School Board had no existence, and it was possible for children to drift into the streets and to live there for years without home or protection, until they were driven by crime or disease to the prison or workhouse.

In a small house in a poor street of Lambeth the first children were received. One of the first boys was Harry, alias "Captain Boss," a well-known ragged fusee-seller at the "Elephant and Castle," whose home was a fish tub in the corner of an omnibus yard, a habitation which he shared with a wretched cur. After remaining in the "Home" for some years, Harry was one of the first batch of emigrants to Canada. A happy home was found for him there, where he remained for seven years, and not very long since he called on the resident agent of the Children's Home in Canada to ask for his advice in investing his savings, which amounted to £150.

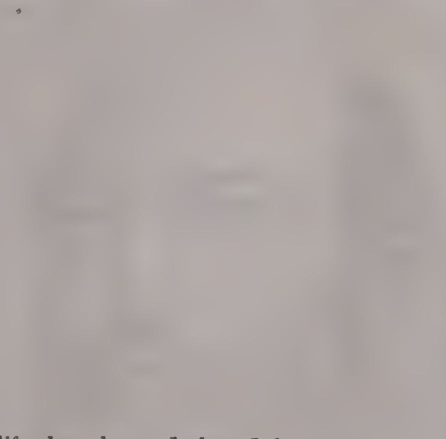
So desperate was the character of the mother of another of the first lads, that, had he been left in her hands, he could never have become anything else than a violent criminal, but Dr. Stephenson took this boy under his loving care, and a few years ago he came on a visit to England, a tall, well-dressed Canadian settler, with the blue ribbon in his button-hole, and full to overflowing with his plans and projects. He gave a temperance address at the Home in London, and no one could listen to him without seeing another illustration of the words, "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier the myrtle tree."

The little house at Lambeth was soon more than filled. The stable at the back was converted into a dining-room, and the hay-loft above it into a dormitory, the number of children having increased within twelve months from two to twenty.

From the first Dr. Stephenson has kept before him three cardinal principles in this work among the children. It is, first, a distinctly Christian enterprise, a mission from Christ Jesus to his neediest little ones. The children in the Home live in a religious and moral atmosphere. Religious services, Bible-classes, prayer-meetings are exercises in which they are brought up with regularity. The simplicity of many of their prayers is both touching and amusing. "O Lord," prayed a boy who had come from Newgate to the Home, "bless our fathers and mothers! and don't let them throw the poker at each other to-day, but may they be as tame as mice." Another of this boy's prayers is worth quoting for its quaint simplicity. At a time when the boys had established a prayer-meeting among themselves, he would go round to bring them to it; and on one occasion, having been somewhat unsuccessful, he prayed:—"Lord, bless all the boys, and make them want to come to the prayer-meeting, and don't let them say again, 'No, I can't; I've got to sew a button on my trousers.'" The last report of the Home says:—"We have good reason for thankfulness that so many of the children hold consistently a profession of faith within the limits of a child's capacity and practice."

The Home, in the second place, provides industrial training, which opens to the children spheres of permanent employment. Besides the necessary household work, the boys are employed in printing, carpentry, shoemaking, painting and glazing, and engineers' work. By this arrangement many of the boys acquire such a knowledge of their various industries that they are able to command good wages from the moment of leaving the Home. The girls are, as a rule, destined for domestic service. They are taught that such a sphere in life is to be welcomed, and that a domestic servant upon whose word and work equal reliance can be placed, is in a far happier and safer position than the machine or factory hand.

In the third place, the training of the children in family life is a fundamental principle of the Home. When Dr. Stephenson began his work, this principle was not so largely recognised as it has now become in the working of these institutions, and he was determined to reproduce, as far as possible, true family life in this Christ-like work among the little ones. The idea was borrowed, with adaptations and improvements, from Wichern's wonderfully successful experiment at Hamburg. The principle is very simple. The children have either lost the advantage of family care through the death of the parents, or they are without it through poverty or vice. The sorrow and peril of the children is that they are without a home. Christian love endeavours to supply what these lack by placing them in separate groups under the care of "mother" and "sister." Theoretically the number in a family is fixed at twenty, though sometimes, rather than neglect a needy child, this number is slightly increased. "All that is needed for the domestic life is provided in the house. Their meals are taken there; they sleep there; they pass their hours of leisure there; it is their home. And it is sacred to them; no other children being admitted except as visitors. In this way," says Dr. Stephenson, "we believe that we gain an individual knowledge of the children, and a specially appropriate dealing with each child, without which the best education of heart and conscience, as well as of intellect, can never be accomplished." One result of this system is that Christian women of a higher class than are usually engaged in such work are employed as matrons; the other is that houses can be built or purchased in succession, the cost coming within the amount which individuals or groups of friends feel at liberty to devote to such an enterprise. Dr. Stephenson says, very truly, "Surely there could be no better investment of money than in thus providing a home for successive groups of children, whose early life has been darkened by such heavy clouds of sorrow."



In 1871 the work of the Home was transferred to its present headquarters, Bonner-road, Victoria Park. At first there was but a range of workshops divided into suites of rooms by wooden partitions. As the work attracted sympathy and help, improvements and additions were made, and house after house was built, until now there are nine houses with adjoining workshops. Nor must we omit the Home Chapel, a beautiful though simple building, where public worship is held, and where great pains are taken to make the service interesting and effective, the singing being led by a carefully trained choir of the children.

One of the most interesting and successful branches of the Home is the Wheatsheaf Farm, Edgworth, Lancashire. This farm—consisting of 100 acres of land—together with £5000 in cash, was the gift of Mr. James Barlow, J.P., of Bolton. Here are six houses for the children—the foundation stones of two additional ones having just been laid—the Governor's house, and extensive farm-buildings, with labour-master's cottages, required for a training farm. The farm work is of a comparatively simple character, but fourteen years' experience at this branch of the Home proves that for lads of a restless, roving temperament, whose case nothing will meet but hard work in the open air, there is no employment so suitable or healthful as that which is here provided; while for boys who are suffering from weakness or bodily ailments no influence is so beneficial as that of kind Nurse Nature. Mr. Barlow, who lives near this branch of the Home, has more than once publicly stated that he has never had so much satisfaction from any of the good works which he has attempted to aid as from this enterprise.

At the suggestion of the late Dr. Punshon, who was then resident in Canada, parties of children were sent out to that great and enterprising country. Through Dr. Punshon's liberality and influence a commodious house, with eight acres of land attached, and situated conveniently near to the city of Hamilton, was secured as the headquarters of the Home in Canada. It is found that on the average the children do better in the colonies than in England. The boys go into the homes of Canadian farmers, where they are treated as members of the family; often proving to be the best kind of emigrant the Colonial Government can obtain. When the children have gone to their situations they are not lost sight of. By correspondence and inquiry, and by personal visits, the Canadian agent keeps himself acquainted with their circumstances and condition. He takes the kindliest interest in them and affords them constant assistance, until they have attained years at which they may be considered capable of managing their own affairs. More than one lad, safely and comfortably settled in Canada, has sent home money to bring out his mother or sister too.

The latest development of the Home is the special provision which has been made for orphan children. Mr. Jevons, of Birmingham, offered a few years ago the sum of £10,000 for the erection of an orphanage, on condition that a like sum should be contributed by those who were in sympathy with this special effort. The amount was secured, and on a beautiful site on the border of the well-known park of Sutton Coldfield, a block of buildings has been erected, which, when completed, will consist of twelve houses, with schools, chapel, workshops, and all needful appliances. There are about sixty children in residence, and no one can visit this branch of the Home without being impressed by the happy, intelligent faces of the children, and the atmosphere of peace and love that pervades the life of the institution, which by the Queen's special permission is called the Princess Alice Orphanage.

Other branches of the Home are found at Gravesend, where there is a large Industrial School, and at Ramsey, Isle of Man, where there is one of the pleasantest and most economical "Homes" in the United Kingdom.

The attention which was called in the summer of 1885 to the dangers surrounding the life of young girls, led Dr. Stephenson to establish several invaluable agencies for the protection and aid of girls and young women. Any girl going to London and finding herself homeless, friendless, or exposed to circumstances of peril, can be sure of temporary shelter and protection by night or day at the Children's Home. At the Inquiry Office reliable information can be obtained respecting the character of situations to which young women propose to go. Suitable lodgings are provided for girls in the interval of leaving one situation and entering another, and young women passing through London are met and piloted through its hidden but awful dangers. Dr. Stephenson is anxious to have Associates of this Girls' Helpful Society in every town and village in the land. This is entirely an unsectarian institution, and welcomes as its associates Christian ladies of any denomination, seeking only the moral and spiritual benefit of the girls without any regard to denominational interests.

A Girls' Parlour has also been opened in Bonner-lane, in the East-end of London, to meet the case of the thousands of young women who, from their surroundings, can know nothing of true home life, and who must spend their evenings in the music-halls, or in the streets, unless some provision is made for spending a pleasant evening amid influences not only morally safe, but elevating in their tendency and helpful in the highest sense. A bright, comfortably furnished room, with a piano, is placed at their disposal, and a few lady friends are present each evening to provide for the enjoyment of the girls, and to make them feel at home.

Dr. Stephenson needs nearly £15,000 per annum to sustain these organisations. As he depends on voluntary gifts, he believes it to be his duty to do all that Christian simplicity and propriety allow in bringing the claims of the work before the public mind, and at the same time to bring it before God in daily, hourly, believing prayer, that He may move the hearts of his people towards it. No day has passed since the foundation of the Home without united prayer on its behalf. Working on these lines, and carefully avoiding unworthy and paltry expedients to secure money, he has proved how "blessed is the man that maketh the Lord his trust." It is needless to say how much more good might be accomplished by a permanent increase of income, many worthy applicants being now refused admission through lack of funds.

It will be taken for granted that Dr. Stephenson has a large, loving heart, and a faith that laughs at impossibilities. God has richly blessed him with a sanguine temperament, and an enthusiastic spirit, both of which are indispensable in a work like his. "The wise and active conquer difficulties by daring to attempt them;" and while timid, calculating men are studying how to avoid one difficulty, Dr. Stephenson has overcome a score. He is exceedingly popular both with his own brethren and with the Methodist people at home and abroad, and there are already unmistakable indications that if his life is spared he will very soon occupy the highest position in the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

◆

Salvation Army in Switzerland.

MISS S. P. BLUNDELL writes:—Last night (July 31) the, Mayor of Chamouny having cheerfully granted the use of the Town Hall for a "Conférence populaire avec musique," we had one of the quietest, crammed meetings one could wish. The brass band of the town stood and played before the door to welcome two French travellers who had passed three consecutive days and nights on the highest summit of Mont Blanc. This, of course, brought all the population together, and when the two intrepid men had received the felicitations of the authorities, priests, and townsmen, the people were ready gathered to fill the hall.

About a hundred guides and others, with a sprinkling of women and children, thus heard, at the foot of Mont Blanc, of the mountain of Sion; the white-robed multitude washed in the blood of the Lamb; the great white throne; the awful judgment; the day of grace; the sacrifice on Calvary; the gracious invitation; and the Almighty power of the Spirit. Bright "Army" hymns, with violin accompaniment, floated out through the wide open windows, and echoed around.

*COMMUNION.

BY MR. WILLIAM STEWART, DUNDEE.

"Truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ."—1 JOHN i. 3.

THE Apostle John, above all others, is entitled to write upon the subject of communion and fellowship. Think of his life, and you will find how rich his experience was. In Jairus' home, in the west end of Capernaum, he is one of the few privileged to be present when the little maid is restored to life. When in the transfiguration glory, heaven came down and kissed Mount Hermon, and when the midnight of earth gave place to "the light that was never on sea nor land," John is present. In the upper room of Jerusalem, at the first Communion feast, he leans "on Jesus' bosom," and hears the beatings of that heart of love. In the Garden of Gethsemane, in the hour of deepest anguish, he is near. Outside the city gates, at the foot of the Cross, he stands, and alone, of all the twelve, receives a message from that Cross. Long years after, an exile on surf-beat Patmos, he holds high communion, and writes, "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's Day." No wonder John can write so well upon this lofty subject of fellowship. In the early Christian Church John is always represented by an eagle, and it was, indeed, on the strong eagle wings of faith and love that he soared into high and holy fellowship.

We should all strive after such fellowship with our Lord. True, we may not be like John, the disciple "whom Jesus loved." We may have no place among the sacred triumvirate, or among the Apostolic twelve. We may not stand among the seventy honoured in being sent forth as heralds of the Master, or among the one hundred and twenty, whose mighty, ten-day prayer-meeting was the prelude of Pentecost. We may not be numbered among the five hundred who beheld their risen Lord with transporting joy, on a mountain in Galilee; or among the three thousand who in one day were converted in Jerusalem.

Our life and our experience may be far removed from these, but as Christians it is our sacred duty and our blessed privilege to live in communion with our Lord. He is unchangeably the same as when a seraphic John or a consecrated Paul lived on earth in fellowship with Him. Passing generations have weakened none of his interest in his people, nor have rolling ages lessened any of his mighty love. "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, and to-day, and for ever."

What is communion? It is prayer. Then all Christians live in communion? Alas! no. Many are constantly doing what Peter, to his life-long regret, once did, but never repeated: they are following "afar off," and the danger is that they may grievously fall, and deny the Master.

Communion is indeed prayer, but prayer in its widest application, such as the Lord expressed: "Men ought always to pray and not to faint." It is prayer in its loftiest sense, as when the Apostle wrote: "Pray without ceasing." It is a living in prayer, holding converse with a Saviour dear and near. By day and by night; in the home and on the street; at work and when at leisure; in the church and during the sermon; in every place and at all times should the believer strive to maintain this "fellowship." Communion is, in one mighty sentence, being "filled with the Holy Ghost."

We speak of the wonder of saving grace and of redeeming love, and we do well so to speak, but the marvel does not end there.

How often do we find that men benefit some brother man in order to quiet his importunity, or to get rid of his presence. Yet how differently does the Lord deal with men, for He bestows the benefits of grace and salvation in order to bring men nearer to Him; and the nearer the better, as indeed his servant writes: "Ye were called unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord" (1 Cor. i. 9).

But how is this communion to be promoted? (1) The Christian must oftentimes be alone. This "aloneness" is necessary for prayer and meditation. The danger nowadays, amid numerous meetings and multiplied conferences, is to neglect this. We find Christ said to his disciples: "Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place and rest awhile." As one has well remarked, "the mystics and hermits forgot that word 'awhile;' but our danger is in neglecting the injunction altogether."

Study Christ's life-work, and see how much it presses this secret retirement and solitude upon us. At the beginning of his public ministry stands the solitary wilderness, while at its close lies the utter loneliness of Gethsemane.

Read the narrative of those three wondrous years, and see how the Saviour maintained fellowship with his Father. Over and over again He retires to be alone; and of all this He can say, as He did of one of the outstanding acts of his humiliation:—"I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done."

No house has He—then He betakes Himself to the mountain solitude. You find Him alone in prayer the whole night preceding the ordination of the twelve disciples. After feeding the five thousand He again retires to be alone. In Gethsemane's garden, consecrated by the blood of suffering, He was alone; for, although the chosen three were within "a stone's cast," they had deliberately shut themselves out of sympathy with Him in this the "hour and the power of darkness."

And He it is who speaks of the closet and its shut door and secrecy; and thus He teaches all his followers that such quiet retirement and prayer are a sine quâ non of all communion.

Such was the experience of Ezekiel, when the Lord said unto him, "Go forth into the plain, and I will talk with thee there." Divine converse and fellowship in the solitariness of the plain; not by the crowded banks of the river Chebar, where gathered the captive Jews. And such must be the experience of all true hearts that seek to know more of the love of God.

In the life of William C. Burns it is told that as he and his brother lay long awake one night in their common sleeping chamber in the quiet manse of Kilsyth, after some months of separation, talking eagerly of all their plans of life, they heard the well-known sound of their father's voice at prayer in an adjoining room. William Burns was hushed to a momentary seriousness, and whispered:—"There can be no doubt where his heart is, and where he is going." It was not long after, that his conversion took place. There ought to be nothing more natural to the man who has set his "affection on things above," and whose steps are tending heavenward, than living in communion with his God.

---

* An Address delivered at a Conference in connection with the Perthshire Christian Union, in the City Hall, Dunkeld.

(2) In order again to promote this communion, the believer must live on God's Word. This Word is the basis of fellowship, and without it the intercourse is impossible. You may as well clip the wings of the eagle, and expect the royal bird to soar into the illimitable heights of the blue heavens, as try without prayer and the Word to rise into fellowship. These are the two wings on which the earnest heart must rise. A boat with but one oar in the rowlocks will make no progress; there is only the useless turning round and round. But insert the other oar, and how easy to make progress. Prayer and the Word are the two oars, and faith and love the strong arms that use them; and when to these are added the Spirit's gracious blessing, the soul will move into the fulness of communion.

(3) Once again, communion must be promoted by growing into it. "Grow in grace." This is work not merely for the Sabbath day, but for every day, and for every place. Conversion may take place in one night, but communion is a constant and life-long work. And to the believing heart it is a blessed and joyful experience, as, indeed, John immediately adds, when speaking of this "fellowship," "And these things write we unto you, that your joy may be full."

Christian friends, strive after this communion; earnestly seek it, and it shall be yours; you will find that it will wondrously raise and ennoble life, and it will bring you many a moment of rapturous triumph and of jubilant victory.

◆

THE GOSPEL on THE WATERS.

I have returned from Folkestone after a three weeks' mission on board our new vessel. As an outcome of the third visit to this port, a resident Christian gentleman is having a Seamen's Bethel constructed at the North Foreland Coffee House, and employs a missionary to work among the fishermen, seamen, their wives, and families. He has undertaken the expenses and oversight of this local Seamen's Bethel; at the same time he wishes me to assist him as far as is practicable, by an occasional visit in our mission ship, Herald of Mercy, which has now sailed to other ports, for the preaching of the Gospel.

A letter from the captain of the Mystery, French mission schooner, now at Nantes, tells how the Lord is using this craft for the drawing in of the French people, to hear his word. He says:—"Since Sunday we have had crowded meetings every night, and hundreds disappointed; many waiting until 10 o'clock in hopes to get on board for the second meeting, which lasts until eleven at night. Souls we believe have been led to Jesus. The Lord is truly blessing us in our work here in connection with Messieurs Borel and Bisson, of Mr. McAll's Mission. The people drink in the water of life. If the ship were three times as large she would be filled with these French people."

The time is again drawing near for the relief of troops in India, &c., and the usual supply of bags (5 by 7 inches), Bibles, and Testaments, is much needed; also comforters and cuffs will be gladly accepted for the benefit of our fishermen and seamen, they prove a great comfort to these toilers on the deep. H. Cook.

Seamen's Friend, Gosport, Hants.

COLPORTAGE IN VILLAGES.—Mr. J. McAuliffe, of the Wayside Bible Carriage, Otley, Yorks., writes that during one week's work in the dales of Derbyshire, the total number of persons gathered in the open air was 2100; number of printed messages and cards sold and given away, 4370. On several evenings anxious souls were dealt with.

ELIJAH THE PROPHET.—13.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Leicester.

GO, RETURN!

1 Kings xix.

It is a very solemn thought, that one sin may for ever, so far as this world is concerned, wreck our usefulness. It is not always so. Sometimes, as in the case of the Apostle Peter, the Lord graciously restores, and re-commissions for his work, the one who might have been counted unfit ever again to engage in it. "Feed my sheep. Feed my lambs." But against this one case we may put three others, in each of which it would seem as if the sentry angel, who forbade the return of our first parents to Paradise, were stationed with strict injunctions to forbid any return to the former position of noble service.

The first case is that of Moses. No other man has ever been honoured as was he, "with whom God spake face to face." The meekest of men. The servant of the Lord. The foster-nurse of the Jewish nation, whose intercessions saved them again and again from destruction. Yet, because he spake unadvisedly with his lips, and smote the rock twice, in unbelief and passion, he was compelled to bear the awful sentence: "Because ye believed Me not, to sanctify Me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them." Most earnestly did he plead for a revocation of that terrible prohibition. But he was silenced by the solemn reply, against which there was no appeal: "Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto Me of this matter."

The second case is that of Saul, the first, ill-fated king of Israel, whose reign opened so auspiciously, as a morning without clouds; but who soon brought upon himself the sentence of deposition. Yet it was only for one single act. Alarmed at Samuel's long delay, and at the scattering of the people, he intruded rashly into a province from which he was expressly excluded, and offered the sacrifice with which the Israelites were wont to prepare for battle. "And it came to pass that, as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt-offering, behold, Samuel came. And Samuel said, What hast thou done? Thou hast done foolishly: thou hast not kept the commandment of the Lord thy God, which He commanded thee: for now would the Lord have established thy kingdom upon Israel for ever. But now thy kingdom shall not continue ... because thou hast not kept that which the Lord commanded thee." Thus early in his reign, and before his further disobedience in the case of the Amalekites: for that one act of disobedience, revealing, as it did, a sad state of moral decrepitude, Saul was rejected.

The third case is that of Elijah. He was never reinstated in quite the position which he had occupied before his fatal flight. True, he was bidden to return on his way, and work was indicated for him to do. But that work was the anointing of three men, who were to share amongst them the ministry which he might have fulfilled if only he had been true to his opportunities, and faithful to his God. God's work must go on; if not by us, then, through our failures, by others brought in to supply our place. "Go, return on thy way to the wilderness of Damascus: and when thou comest, anoint Hazael to be king over Syria: and Jehu the son of Nimshi shalt thou anoint to be king over Israel: and Elisha the son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room." Those words rang out the death-knell of Elijah's fondest dreams. Evidently, it was not for him to be the deliverer of his people from the thraldom of Baal. Others were to do his work; another was to be prophet in his room.

All those who hold prominent positions amongst us, as public teachers and leaders, may well take warning by these solemn examples, standing on the plains of time, as Lot's wife on those of Sodom. We may not all be tempted, as Elijah was, to unbelief and discouragement. But there are many other snares prepared for us by our great enemy, and strewn over with fair appearances, as the hunter strews earth and grass on the top of the pitfall, which he has cunningly dug in the pathway between the river and the lair of his prey. There is the adulation given to the successful man, in which so much of the human is mingled with thankfulness for the help or comfort given. There is the desire to be always prominent, foremost on every platform, and first in every enterprise, to the utter neglect of private prayer. There are the insidious attacks of jealousy, depreciation of others, comparison of their standing with our own. And, in addition to these, are other modes of failure, more gross and evident than they, to which we are all prone, and by which, alas! too many have been mastered. Any one of these may compel God to cast us away from his glorious service; employing us only in some humbler ministry, or to anoint our successors.

As children He will never cast us away; but as his servants, He may. Let us beware. One false step; one hurried desertion of our post; one act of disobedience; one outburst of passion: any one of these may lead our heavenly Father to throw us aside, as Samson did the jawbone of the ass, with which he had slain heaps upon heaps. We shall not forfeit heaven; that is guaranteed to us by the precious blood of Christ. We may even be favoured by a glorious and triumphant entrance thither in an equipage of flame. But we shall never again ride on the crest of the flowing tide, carrying all before us. Others shall finish our uncompleted task.

But with the danger there are sufficient safeguards. Let God prune you with the golden pruning-knife of his holy Word. Look into the mirror of revealed truth to see if there is any trace of blemish stealing over the face of the soul. Offer your spirit constantly to the Holy Spirit, that He may detect and reveal to you the beginnings of idolatries and heart sins. Be very zealous of anything that divides your heart with your Lord. "Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation." Have perpetual recourse for cleansing, to the blood shed for the remission of sin. Trust in Him who is "able to guard you from stumbling, and to set you before the presence of his glory without blemish, in exceeding joy."

But now, turning to the further study of the words with which God dismissed his servant from Horeb, let us notice three distinct thoughts.

I. The variety of God's instruments.—Hazael, king of Syria; Jehu, the rude captain; and Elisha, the young farmer. Each was as different as possible from the others; and yet each was needed for some special work in connection with that idolatrous people. Hazael was destined to be the rod of Divine vengeance to Israel at large; by whom God began to cut them short, and to make them like the dust by threshing. Ah! cruel indeed was his treatment of them! (2 Kings viii. 12, x. 32, xiii. 3, 7). Jehu was to be the scourge of the house of Ahab, extirpating it root and branch. Elisha's ministry was to be genial and gentle, as summer rain and evening dew; like the ministry of our Lord Himself, whom he prefigured, and of whom his name significantly spoke.

It is remarkable how God accomplishes his purposes through men who only think of working their own wild way. Their sin is not diminished or condoned because they are executing the designs of Heaven. It still stands out in all its malignant deformity. And yet, though they are held accountable for the evil, it is none the less evident that they do whatsoever God's hand and God's counsel determined before to be done. This fact is often referred to in Scripture. Joseph comforted his brethren, after his father's death, by telling them that though they thought evil against him, God meant it unto good, to save much people alive. David forbade his men to slay Shimei, because, though the cursing of the king was a foul act of treason, yet, probably, "the Lord had said unto him, Curse David." And our blessed Lord, when about to be delivered into the hands of wicked men, said that the Father was putting the cup into his hands (see also Acts ii. 23).

Men may do evil things against us, for which they will be condemned; and yet those very things, being permitted by the wisdom and love of God, are his messages to us. Before they can reach us, they must pass through his environing, encompassing presence; and if they do, then they are God's will for us, and we must meekly accept our Father's discipline, saying, "Not my will, but thine be done."

II. No one can entirely escape from God's personal dealings.—God's nets are not all constructed with the same meshes. Men may escape through some of them, but they cannot escape through all. If they elude the Gospel ministry, they will be caught by some earnest worker, apt at personal dealing. If they manage to evade all contact with the living voice, they may yet be reached by the printed page. If they evade all religious literature, they may still be the sudden subjects of the strivings of the Spirit. "Him that escapeth the sword of Hazael shall Jehu slay; and him that escapeth from the sword of Jehu shall Elisha slay."

We do not read that Elisha ever wielded the sword; and yet the ministry of gentle love is sometimes more potent in slaying souls than the more vigorous ministry of an Hazael or Jehu; and out of such slaying comes life.

Let us not compare man with man. Let us not despise any sect, or denomination, or body of Christian workers. What is inoperative with one, is God's voice to another. We are totally unable to estimate the essential use of men. And let us not envy one another; because each of us has some special gift, which qualifies us for the use of the dear Master, and enables us to touch some who would be unreached if it were not for us. "Many members, yet but one body. And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee; nor, again, the head to the feet, I have no need of you."

And as we look around on the entire range of ministry by which the world is filled, we may be sure that every one has at least one chance, and that God so orders the lives of men that once at least during their course they are encountered by the kind of argument, which is most appropriate to their character and temperament, if only they will give ear and yield.

III. God never overlooks one of his own.—Elijah thought that he alone was left as a lover and worshipper of God. It was a great mistake. God had many hidden ones. "Yet I have left Me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him." We know nothing of their names or history. They were probably unknown in camp or court; obscure, simple-hearted, and humble. Their only testimony was one long refusal to the solicitations of the foul rites of idolatry. They groaned and wept in secret, and spake often one to another, while the Lord hearkened and heard. But they were all known to God, and enrolled amongst his jewels, and counted as a shepherd tells his sheep. He cared for them with an infinite solicitude, and it was for their sake that He raised up the good and gentle Elisha to carry on the nurture and discipline of their souls.

It has often been a subject of wonder to me how these 7000 secret disciples could keep so close as to be unknown by their great leader. Otto of roses will always betray its presence, hide it as we may. When salt has not lost its savour, it cannot be hid. And the work of God in human hearts must, sooner or later, discover itself. It is to be feared, therefore, that the godliness of these hidden ones was very vague and colourless, needing the eye of omniscence to detect it. But for all that, God did detect it, and He prized it. He did not quench the smoking flax, but fanned it. He did not despise the grain of mustard-seed. He watched its growth with tender love and care. You may be very weak and insignificant, not counted in the numberings of God's captains; not deemed worthy of a name or place amongst his avowed servants; and yet, if you have but a spark of faith and love, if you strive to keep yourself untainted by the world, you will be owned by Him whose sceptre is stretched out to the most timid suppliant. But remember, if your inner life be genuine, it will not remain for ever secret, it will break out as a long-hidden fire; it will force its way into the light as the buried seed in which there is the spark of life.

It may be that God, by these lines, will speak to some backslider, saying: Go, return! Return to Me, from whom you have wandered. Return to my work, which you have deserted. Return to the posture of faith, from which you have fallen. Return to the happy, holy childlikeness of former years. "Return, ye backsliding children, and I will heal your backslidings." Oh, that the response may be, "Behold, we come unto Thee; for Thou art the Lord our God!"

NOVELS.—In Harper's Magazine Mr. W. D. Howells, himself a novelist, says some plain things concerning novel-reading. It may be safely assumed, he says, that most of the novel-reading which people fancy is an intellectual pastime, is the emptiest dissipation, hardly more related to thought or the wholesome exercise of the mental faculties than opium eating; in either case the brain is drugged, and left weaker and crazier for the debauch. If this may be called the negative result of the fiction habit, the positive injury that most novels work is by no means so easily to be measured. If a novel flatters the passions, and exalts them above the principles, it is poisonous; it may not kill, but it will certainly injure; and this test will alone exclude an entire class of fiction, of which eminent examples will occur to all. Then the whole spawn of so-called immoral romances, which imagine a world where the sins of sense are unvisited by the penalties following, swift or slow, but inexorably sure in the real world, are deadly poison; these do kill. The novels that merely tickle our prejudices and pall our judgment, or that coddle our sensibilities or pamper our gross appetite for the marvellous, are not so fatal, but they are innutritious, and clog the soul with unwholesome vapours of all kinds.

LIVING WORSHIP.

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which [marginal rendering] is your spiritual worship."—R.V.

King of heaven, dwell within!
Be this breast thy temple-home;
All my heart's affection win,
Never more from Thee to roam.

King of heaven, reign within!
Rule and order all my life;
Keep from each besetting sin;
Give me conquest in the strife.

King of heaven, guide my feet!
Make them swift to do thy will.
Through life's maze and mystery,
Sun of heaven, light me still!

O my King! I want to live,
Wholly taken up by Thee;
Every moment to Thee give,
For thy love, so full, so free.

Let my life my worship be;
Let my actions sing thy praise;
Till, in heaven's great symphony,
Hallelujahs there I raise!

A. S. D.

MRS. AMANDA SMITH.

In a letter lately received by Mrs. Davis, of Foxrock, co. Dublin, Mrs. Amanda Smith writes:—

"June 16, 1887, Duketown, Old Calabar.—You will wonder why I am here. I was obliged to have a change from the steady work from last November after my return from Lagos, and the rough travelling and exposure from March till the time I left Cape Palmas on May 7. I felt the Lord would have me do what I could in helping Bishop Taylor in his work of opening stations among the natives in Liberia so long neglected.

"He has, by the blessing of God, opened ten self-supporting industrial schools and missions. Travelling was rough on the river, and up the Crue Coast, all in an open surf boat; in the rainy season we were often drenched five or six hours at a time. Then on land we went through the bush up the hills and little narrow native footpaths, sometimes in a hammock with my feet up and head down, then down a hill so steep that I would be almost sitting straight up. Then sleeping in a native house, a good fire on the floor, but no sign of a chimney, and after my day's journey to have headache from the smoke, and cry for two or three hours. It was all new to me, but I asked the Lord to give me strength to go through it, and He did.

"For the first six weeks I seemed to improve, but I overdid myself, and caught cold, and suddenly I broke right down; it seemed as if I should die from sheer weakness and exhaustion, and I thought I had better return. As Bishop Taylor was leaving by steamer with a party of his missionaries for the Upper Congo, I went with him to Old Calabar. Mrs. Luding kindly took me into her very comfortable home, and has been most attentive; I have had quiet rest, and have done a little visiting among the poor women of the town.

"I left my work at Plukey, and my night-school at Cape Palmas in charge of a faithful sister, whose heart the Lord has touched. I told the Bishop about Plukey, and took him there; it is a large town, but they have no land for a school farm, so the Bishop thought it best not to take it up now, but go where there was plenty of land, so as to establish the principle of self-support in the beginning. I feel I cannot let this work drop there; poor hungry children must be fed, and the Lord will provide, so I hold on this year to see what can be done....

"The Presbyterian mission at Calabar is one hundred and ten years old, or near it, and has done a good work; but, oh! how much more there is to be done; pray for the work here."

Mrs. Davis will be glad to receive help to fill a box she is about to forward to Mrs. Amanda Smith.

TALKS ON SPIRITUALISM.

At the Y.M.C.A., 186, Aldersgate-street, on the last four Friday evenings, Mr. Oscar Owers has given a series of clear and trenchant addresses on this subject. The audiences have been large, although confined to men; showing that in the height of summer it is possible to secure congregations, if the subject is practical and interesting. Additional zest was given on these occasions by questions freely put by those in the audience, which were readily and clearly answered by the lecturer.

The course commenced by a Scriptural proof of the personality of the devil and demons; followed by evidence that spiritualism is exclusively evil and demoniac, that it contravenes the teaching of God's Word, and that it is condemned by God as an abomination. The third lecture showed how other modern delusions and beliefs opposed directly or indirectly to the teaching of Scripture, emanate from the devil. The concluding lecture pointed out the dangers by which men are at present surrounded, and the increasing perils that will probably gather in the near future; the only defence and security is a simple reliance on the inspired Word of God.

Many incidental proofs have already been afforded that the meetings have been eminently useful. Personal cases of impression will be followed up. Other Y.M.C.A.'s will find similar meetings profitable.

BIBLE STUDY.

OUR CONVERSATION.

(1) Before conversion.—"With their tongues they have used deceit; the poison of asps is under their lips: whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness" (Rom. iii. 13, 14). "An evil man, out of the evil treasure (of the heart) bringeth forth evil things" (Matt. xii. 35).

(2) The Christian's prayer.—"Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth: keep the door of my lips" (Ps. cxli. 3). "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer" (Ps. xix. 14).

(3) His manner of speech.—"Let your speech be alway with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man" (Col. iv. 6). "She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of kindness" (Prov. xxxi. 26). "Thy lips, O my spouse, drop as the honeycomb; honey and milk are under thy tongue" (Cant. iv. 11). (Honey and milk were characteristic of the land of Canaan—the Bride of Christ speaks the language of the heavenly country.) "The heart of the righteous studieth to answer" (Prov. xv. 28).

(4) The subject matter.—"Thou shalt talk of them (God's words) when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, &c." (Deut. vi. 7). "My tongue shall speak of thy righteousness, and of thy praise, all the day long" (Ps. xxxv. 28). "Talk ye of all his wondrous works" (Ps. cv. 2). "Speak not evil one of another, brethren" (James iv. 11). "Comfort one another with these words" (concerning the Resurrection and Second Coming) (1 Thess. iv. 18).

(5) The Lord's approval.—"Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before Him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels" (Mal. iii. 16, 17). "While they communed together and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near, and went with them" (Luke xxiv. 15). "He that loveth pureness of heart, for the grace of his lips the king shall be his friend" (Prov. xxii. 11).

Janet Clark.

HOME OF INDUSTRY.

NEWS FROM OUR CANADIAN FAMILY.

Our letters from across the sea are of the deepest interest, in summer arriving often twice a week. Mrs. Merry tells of lights and shadows; sweet surprises come just when we are bowed down by the bitter sorrows of many a poor child while rescuing the fifty-second family. This week a youth writes, "I never forget the Bible lessons, or the time of evening prayers," and asks to be prayed for, as he desires to become a true Christian. This lad works at a sawmill in the backwoods. Who will correspond with such, sending them light upon the way? Our correspondence is with hundreds of the young, and help is needed in following up this blessed work by letters and books. Another writes to the Home saying he has become a Methodist Episcopal minister, and has four appointments in the State of Pennsylvania.

My nephew, William Merry, reports hundreds he has visited this summer in the homes of the farmers, &c. His last letter tells of ninety-five visits, and he found only one doing badly; all the rest he reports as doing well and in good homes. The following are a few touches, written at the time:—One boy, who had gone to town with the "Boss," was spoken of by the people living near as one of the best boys in the neighbourhood. Another bright little fellow, who went out this year, is very much liked by his master, who says that if he continues as he is now, he will never want a good home. A girl who went to Canada in 1884 is in a home with people who love Christ, and are loving and training her for Him. A boy, who was just a year in Canada, was being induced to run away by a bad boy, when our visitor called and advised him to have nothing to do with him; which shows how necessary is good counsel from time to time. Another boy, who went out in the spring, is reported as "going to make a farmer," and is much liked by the master and mistress. A dear orphan and destitute girl who went out at the age of ten, thirteen years ago, is now teacher in a high school, and an earnest Christian gave (we are privately told) ten dollars (£2) to a widow in distress with a large family. How cheering, thus to see our children taking a real interest in the aged widow in her time of need. Rejoice with us, all ye that help us by your prayers and means to rescue one more. These home-touches of the poor and needy show how our God thinketh upon them. Let us praise Him together in our hearts for all the past, and trust Him "till He come."

The Home is like an inn, with the children coming and going, being placed and replaced, refitted, prayed again with, and sent on their various ways amongst these kind Canadians. We are looking to sail with the fifty-second party on August 18, hoping to return for the opening of the new Home at the end of October. We ask again the prayers of all who watch with us for precious souls among the young.

Annie Macpherson.

60, Commercial-street, E.

UNIVERSAL MERCY BAND.—By permission of Lady Ashburton, the annual meeting of the British Empire Division was held at Kent House, Knightsbridge, on Thursday afternoon, July 28, the President, Lord Mount Temple, in the chair. The report of the Secretary stated that in the Division over 100,000 members, in some 470 Mercy Bands, have taken the promise to try (hourly and daily) to be kind, just, and merciful to all human and dumb creatures, and to try to protect them from cruel treatment. The Bands make property safer, good order surer, and human and dumb life more sacred and happy in the world. The American Division has over 400,000 members in some 5700 Bands, whilst both have largely over 500,000 members, in over 6170 Bands. The president, officers, and others gave addresses. Rev. Thomas Timmins, 12, Argyle-square, King's Cross, London, W.C., is the secretary.

WORK IN CAPE TOWN, S. AFRICA.

Dear Sir,—Perhaps a few lines upon this subject may call forth praise to God for his unspeakable goodness. I started last year in August with Mr. Henry Varley for this place, and it has been my privilege to follow up the mission which undoubtedly paved the way for much of the result that has followed. As you have already heard, many gave themselves to the Lord under Mr. Varley's powerful preaching. Of these a goodly proportion have become workers, and are scattered about in different parts of the colony, and the day of the Lord will reveal how much work was really done.

After parting with Mr. Varley in December last, my time was much occupied with evangelistic work, both amongst soldiers and civilians; many more came out on the Lord's side, and almost every week since we have had professions of conversion. Out of forty-eight men who have been baptized, thirty-six are non-commissioned officers and private soldiers.

We are about to start on an evangelistic tour through the colony. Mrs. Osborn, 12, Camden-hill-terrace, Upper Norwood, S.W., could give all particulars about the work in South Africa. We ask for the prayers of your readers that many more souls may be born again throughout the colony.—Yours very truly,

Joseph Hannington.

A SOUTHWARK RAGGED SCHOOL.

The unsavoury district of Kent-street, behind the imposing church of St. George-the-Martyr, Southwark, retains many of the characteristics of the olden times, when, as the only outlet to the Old Kent-road, passengers to or from the south-eastern counties were compelled to pass through its squalid surroundings. It was in this street, presenting a picture of unparalleled squalor and degradation, that the heroic pioneer ragged-school teacher, Thomas Cranfield, commenced operations, about ninety years ago. His work was very far-reaching, and it may be said to have been taken up in the middle of the present century by those who erected the present school at Lansdown-place, where from three to four hundred children now receive Christian teaching.

The ragged-school tree has sent forth many branches, and one way of teaching the poor people to make home attractive, is represented by the art of window-gardening. How plants can be made to thrive in the atmosphere of such a locality is a mystery we will not attempt to explain; but all who looked upon the rows of plants that were arranged in the Lansdown-place schoolroom the other evening must have acknowledged that the teachers, who are chiefly made up of friends from the Metropolitan Tabernacle, had good reason to be proud of their pupils. The prizes, consisting of wearing apparel, &c., were distributed in a very graceful style by Mrs. James Stiff, who addressed a few words to each winner. The congregation of parents and children presented many of the characteristics of the ragged schools when Lord Ashley conducted the crusade forty years ago; and the sight of such an assembly suggested what a vast field of Christian enterprise such a locality as Kent-street represents. The fact that the Lansdown-place teachers remain bravely at their posts, notwithstanding every drawback, entitles their cause to support. The treasurer of the school is Mr. J. Passmore, jun., 4, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.

NORTH QUEENSLAND.—Mr. H. A. Chambers, evangelist, Johnstone River, Queensland, writes:—If ever earnest evangelists were needed, it is in this part of the colonies. There are many of the bush towns where the Gospel is seldom preached, and there are white people here living like heathens. The labourers are few, and help is much needed. I shall be happy to receive copies of Mr. Sankey's hymn-books, and tracts, from any friends who feel led to send them.

The Christian.

August 12, 1887.

CONTENTS.

Rev. T. B. Stephenson, LL.D. 1
Salvation Army in Switzerland .. 3
Communion 3
The Gospel on the Waters 4
Elijah the Prophet—13 4
Poetry—Living Worship 5
Mrs. Amanda Smith 5
Talks on Spiritualism 6
Bible Study 6
Home of Industry 6
Work in Cape Town, S. Africa .. 6
A Southwark Ragged School 6
Dr. Barnardo's Homes.......... 9
The Keswick Convention 10
Notes and Comments 12
For the Young—
  Benny's Temperance Watch ..14
Letters to the Editor—
  Judicial Oaths................15
  Mr. Gall and Millenarianism ..15
Poetry—The Cleansing Shower ..15
Evangelistic Notes..............15
Among the Churches............16
Temperance Notes..............16
Notes on Daily Readings 17
Notices..........................18
Forthcoming Meetings 18
Donation List....................18

UNIFORM WITH "BIRDS OF THE BIBLE,"

PERCIVAL'S PICTURE GALLERY.

An Entirely New Work by the Favourite Writer,

A. L. O. E.,

Author of "Pearls from the Parables," "The Shepherd of Bethlehem," "Rescued from Egypt," &c., &c.

Printed in very clear readable type,
With Carmine Borders,
Attractive Frontispiece,
Handsomely Bound.

VERY SUITABLE FOR A GIFT-BOOK.

2/-

Contents.

INTRODUCTION.
THE PASSAGE OF THE RED SEA.
KING DAVID'S MISSION.
THE CARPENTER'S DEATH.
HOMELESS.
LEGEND OF THE SELF-MADE GRAVE.
THE THREE "BIHISTIS."
LEGEND OF THE SHEKEL.
THE NIGHT AFTER THE CRUCIFIXION.
THE LEGEND OF THE ROMAN SOLDIER.
"FALLEN ASLEEP!"

"The volume is most beautifully got up, printed on fine paper with large margin; and most artistically illustrated. It will prove a very acceptable present to one who loves the beautiful, and who can appreciate A. L. O. E.'s tender and touching words."
Irish Congregational Magazine.

"This book is a gem. The invalid artist sketching his pictures and telling his wonderful stories is a tender and beautiful portraiture. The get-up of the volume is a credit to the Publishers. It will make a fine gift-book, fit for any recipient."—The Christian Commonwealth.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

TRACTS BY D. L. MOODY.

In Crown 8vo. size, 16 pp. each. Suitable for gratuitous distribution, or for Loan Tract Societies. Price One Penny each, or 7s. 6d. per 100.

TITLES.

Good News.
"Where art Thou?"
"There is no Difference."
Christ Seeking Sinners.
The Work of the Holy Spirit.
Let the Wicked forsake his Way.
Love that Passeth Knowledge.
Christ All in All.
The Two Classes.
Repentance and Restitution.
Dare to be a Daniel.
Plain Words on Conversion.

 The above may also be had in a packet in a neat tinted wrapper, price 1s.

Sowing and Reaping.
Lot.
"Turn Ye!"
John the Baptist.
Enoch.
Jacob.
Counting the Cost.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Tinted Covers, 1s.

READINGS FOR THE SICK-ROOM,

FOR

INSTRUCTION, COUNSEL, AND COMFORT

IN THE

HOUR OF WEAKNESS OR SUFFERING.

BY

ALEXANDER W. WALLACE, M.D.

FIFTH EDITION.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

SCRIPTURAL PROOFS

THAT GOD OFFERS US IN OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST PERFECT DELIVERANCE FROM ALL SIN, INWARD AS WELL AS OUTWARD, IF WE WILL BUT RECEIVE HIM AND BELIEVE ON HIS NAME FOR ALL THAT GOD HAS MADE HIM TO BE TO US. (John i. 12; 1 Cor. i. 30.)

BY

J. P. WILSON.

"Holiness by faith in Jesus,
Not by effort of thine own,
Sin's dominion crushed and broken
By the power of grace alone.
God's own holiness within thee,
His own beauty on thy brow;
This shall be thy pilgrim brightness,
This thy blessed portion now."
Miss Havergal.

LONDON:
S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO., 9, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.
1887.

The above is the title-page of a book of 408 pages, price in cloth two shillings, consisting of the contents of three little books, "First Sheets of Scriptural Proofs," "Further Sheets of Scriptural Proofs," and "Third Series of Scriptural Proofs," hitherto sent out separately, and only to applicants by letter for them, now put together for general publication. The object of the book is simply to direct attention to what God says in his Word on the extent of deliverance from sin given us in our Lord Jesus Christ. Many letters have been received from readers of the separate parts, showing that this object has been attained in their case. The following are extracts from a few of them :—

"Reading your books has driven me more to the precious truth; and our loving Father has opened more light to me—more than ever I expected to get. Praise his dear name!"

"I have read it carefully, and can find nothing of man in it, but all in it to be the revealed power of God. I have received great encouragement and strength from the reading of it."

"Thank you so much for your little book. It has helped me to realise more fully 'the glorious gospel of Christ.'"

"I have read the 'Proofs,' and they have opened my eyes greatly to what may be obtained by faith and prayer."

"I have read several parts of it many times over. It seems to me just the kind of book to put a solid scriptural foundation under the faith of those who are conscious of a real and godly change of heart, and of an eager desire to be wholly the Lord's."

"I rejoice greatly in it. It is well calculated to stimulate an earnest desire in the hearts of the Lord's dear people to search the Scriptures more diligently and prayerfully, like the Bereans, 'daily whether these things were so.'"

"I have read your little book, lent me by a friend, and I do desire heartily to thank my God that it was put into my hands.

"Though for years I have known my Saviour's love, and experienced the incoming of the Holy Ghost in power in my soul, yet since reading 'Scriptural Proofs' I have had a fresh revelation of what Jesus is to me in his capacity of Saviour; and I have been able to grasp Him in a fuller and more comprehensive faith as my deliverer from indwelling sin; and that on the truth of the living God as shown so clearly in your little book.

"My heart goes with every line of it. I do trust and believe it will be blessed wherever it is read: there is so little of man in it, and so much of God."

2s. 6d.

ISRAEL:

A

PRINCE

WITH GOD.

F.B.MEYER.B.A.

ISRAEL: A PRINCE WITH GOD.

THE STORY OF JACOB RE-TOLD.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

Full-page Illustrations of the River Jordan and Jacob's Well.
Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.; Cloth Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

CONTENTS.

I. First Impressions.
II. The Sale of the Birthright.
III. The Stolen Blessing.
IV. The Angel-Ladder.
V. The Noble Resolve.
VI. The Education of Home.
VII. The Mid-passage of Life.
VIII. The Stirring-up of the Nest.
IX. The Midnight Wrestle.
X. Failure.
XI. Back to Bethel.
XII. The School of Sorrow.
XIII. Glimpses of the Israel-Nature.
XIV. Rest, and the Rest-Giver
XV. Home: at Last.
XVI. The God of Jacob.

"This is a noble book, calculated to be of the highest usefulness, and we are thankful of the opportunity of commending it."—Baptist Magazine.

"With admirable tact the conduct of Jacob is depicted, and the application of its lessons to present day life vividly shown."—Footsteps of Truth.

"We cannot study the history of these Old Testament characters too deeply, and a very successful attempt is here made to reproduce the striking features of Jacob's life, presenting much that not only brings the story vividly before us, but draws out its lessons and meanings."—The Rock.

"No one can read these pages without being edified. The author's style is clear, vigorous, and interesting; and a thoroughly evangelical tone pervades the book. He gives one piece of practical advice to ministers of the Gospel, which many of our readers will be glad to see reproduced here: 'To recruit a dwindling congregation; to sustain interest in a crowded one; to awaken new devotion to the Bible; and to touch the many chords of human life—there is nothing to be compared with a reverent re-telling of the Stories of Bible Heroes and Saints.'"

"From first to last the book is richly suggestive and spiritually fruitful. We trust it will secure, as it deserves, a wide circulation."—Word and Work.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

D. L. MOODY At Home.

HIS HOME AND HOME WORK.

Containing a description of the Educational Institutions established at Northfield and Mount Hermon, together with some Account of the various Christian Conferences, and Reports of some of the most striking of the Addresses.

WITH EIGHT FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE IMPORTANT EDUCATIONAL BUILDINGS.

Tinted Covers, 2s. Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.
Presentation Edition.—Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

"This is a book calculated to interest and help Christian workers. They will find in it many thoughts that will arrest their attention and prove helpful and practical; some that may fitly be compared to 'Gold, Silver, and Precious Stones.'"—The Friend, July, 1887.

"A fresh and vigorous book, calculated to provoke unto love and good works. Preachers, Sunday-school teachers, and others will find many helpful thoughts here."—Footsteps of Truth, July, 1887.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Fry's Cocoa

·Pure·
·Concentrated·
·Cocoa·

33 PRIZE MEDALS
awarded to the Firm

FRY'S
PURE
COCOA

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR A SAMPLE & TESTIMONIALS

J. S. FRY & SONS, BRISTOL, LONDON, and SYDNEY, N.S.W.,
Makers to the Queen and Prince of Wales.

CONSUMPTION CURABLE!

"MR. G. T. CONGREVE on CONSUMPTION

AND ITS SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT.

Showing that direful disease to be curable in all its stages; with observations on

ASTHMA, CHRONIC BRONCHITIS, etc."

SIXPENCE (Post Free), or Large Edition (cloth), 1s. 3d., from the Author, Coombe Lodge, Peckham, S.E., and Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.

The Twenty-first Series of Weekly Cases is now publishing, from May to August.

NOTICE TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN," WHO MAY BE PERSONALLY OR RELATIVELY

INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED in this journal BEFORE, EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

ADVANCED CASE OF BRONCHO-PHTHISIS—MISS TIFFIN, OF COCKERMOUTH.

I have received a letter recently, March 23, 1887, from Mrs. Tiffin, High Green, Gilcrux, near Cockermouth, (the sister-in-law of this patient), in which, writing on behalf of another case, she says:—"We have seen the wonderful effect of your treatment on my husband's sister (Miss Tiffin, of Moorland Close, Cockermouth), who was at death's door, but is now strong and well."

The patient was under my treatment altogether for four years, but not regularly all that time. After getting better the medicine was discontinued for several months and resumed, and this on several occasions, but in the end she has thoroughly recovered, as above stated by Mrs. Tiffin, though from the brink of the grave.

CASE OF A CHILD AT SHIFFNALL.

The Mother, Mrs. Sarah Higgins, of Decker Hill, Shiffnall, writing me in March of this year says:—"I think it only my duty to write and thank you. My little girl was given up by two doctors, but has been completely cured by your excellent medicine. I wrote for your book in October last. She has taken the medicine all the winter, and is now perfectly restored, and goes to school as formerly.

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

ISSUE at PAR of £362,326 MORTGAGE DEBENTURES for seven or ten years, at 5 per cent.

THE CAPITOL FREEHOLD LAND AND INVESTMENT COMPANY (Limited).

Trustees for Debenture Holders.
The Right Hon. the Earl of Aberdeen.
Sir Wm. M'Arthur, K.C.M.G. | Q. Hogg, Esq.
Chairman—The Most Hon. the Marquis of Tweeddale.

This Company is now prepared to receive applications for the balance for its Mortgage Debentures, for seven or ten years, at 5 per cent. interest.

These Debentures can only be issued at the rate of 4s. per acre upon land actually conveyed, and are secured upon all the freehold lands and other properties of the Company, which are vested in the trustees for the debenture holders.

Forms of application and all information can be obtained at the Company's Office, No. 139, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

By order, HENRY BOWMAN, Secretary.

John Heath's PENS

Turned-up Point, Bronzed
Fine or Medium, 2s. 6d.
Golden Coated, 3s. 6d.
Per Gross.

Side View—Showing form of Turned-up Point.

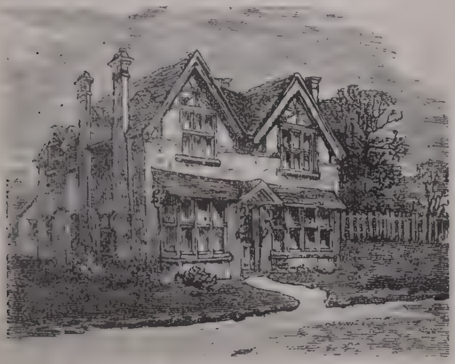
Registered TELEPHONE PEN.

Or in 6d. and 1/- Boxes. All Stationers. Sample Box (24 kinds) 7 stamps. Birmingham.

DR. BARNARDO'S HOMES.

FETE AT ILFORD.

It would have been well worth going down to Ilford on Saturday, even in such awfully sweltering heat, to see the array of "little women" that crowded the raised platform in the tent; and to hear their sweetly harmonious voices. An outsider can, indeed, know but little of the plenitude of prayer and pains that must have been expended, before the flotsam and jetsam of our city streets and slums could have been so marvellously transformed. Society thinks it does well if it pays the bill; and if Dr. Barnardo happens to sound an unusually shrill note of appeal, that selfsame society is a little prone to complain at the disturbance. If society would graciously condescend to do the real work of these Homes for a month or two, it would probably return to its function of supporting the work, with a sigh of relief, and congratulate itself on having to carry the lightest part of the burden by far.



ONE OF THE NEW COTTAGES, ILFORD.

The narrative that Dr. Barnardo had to tell to his assembled friends on Saturday, as to the origin and growth of these Village Homes was truly a wonderful one, marked by the clearest tokens of the Divine interposition and the Divine approval. We felt a special interest in the story of the first Cottage, as this journal had a small share in the transaction, and we mean to reproduce it at length some day soon. Suffice it for the present to say that, in 1874, the ground on which the Village stands was a ploughed field; now it is one of the handsomest, largest, and most promising institutions of the kind to be found on the earth's surface. The earlier cottages were erected in the shape of a parallelogram, but the dormant artistic instincts of the Doctor rose in rebellion against the purism of his architect; the recent additions have entirely changed the aspect of the place, and almost completely rubbed off the "institutional" trade-mark of precision.

On Saturday no less than nineteen new cottages were formally dedicated and opened for use, some of them, however, having been for a little time in occupation. These nineteen beautiful Homes, for the most part, have been built, through the generous kindness of individual friends, who desired, in this appropriate way, to erect a lasting memorial to some dear departed one. The finest house of all is "Cairns' House," set in a conspicuous corner, fitly perpetuating the name and memory of one of the best friends Dr. Barnado's work has ever had. Having inspected some of these new cottages, we can only call them gems, for beauty of arrangement. We would repeat a remark we recently made regarding a similar Institution, that many English girls, who are supposed to be beyond the need of a helping hand, might well wish to be born destitute, if they could ensure their being taken in hand by Dr. Barnardo, and given a place in one of these charming poetically-named cottages at Ilford.

Dr. Barnardo is the Oliver Twist of philanthropists. When he may get to the end of his tether no sane person would venture to guess, but as yet he has never been within sight of satisfaction: he is always audaciously asking for more. When one remembers, however, the object of his persevering solicitude, all remonstrance is instantly cut short; we certainly hope and expect he will get all he asked for on Saturday. First of all he wants to build on the one vacant corner of his Village a Jubilee memorial, to be called "Queen's Villa." If Her Majesty would graciously consent to go down and lay the foundation-stone, the money for that would, we think, be speedily forthcoming; for, of course, every donor would be presented to the Queen. We make Dr. Barnardo a present of the suggestion. Then he wants to build a Hospital, at a cost of £3500, of which he has £2000 in hand. A Children's Church, too, he insists on having, and that will swallow up another £2700—cheap at the money, as he told us. Once more he purposes to erect a Quarantine House, where the human material, in which he deals so largely, may be received in the rawest of its raw state, and scrubbed into shape a bit before entering in any of the more refined processes of schooling and training, which make the girls ready for being transplanted to Canadian soil.

After seeing the girls themselves, and hearing Dr. Barnardo's lucid and telling narrative, of course nobody present on Saturday wished to perspire in the tent any longer; still they patiently sat and listened while Lord Kinnaird, Mr. Gurney Sheppard, and Mr. Henry Varley added their earnest advocacy to that which had gone before. Lord Kinnaird asked for special prayer, in view of the near departure of Dr. Barnardo for Canada with a party of boys. This was not forgotten, and after the tent proceedings were over, the company dispersed to have tea in the various cottages, and to enjoy a last inspection of the Village before returning to town.

BOY EMIGRANTS HIVING OFF.

The noon-day prayer-meeting at Aldersgate-street was monopolised on Monday by Dr. Barnardo and a detachment of his lads, who left Euston on Wednesday as emigrants to Canada. An unusually bright appearance was lent to the hall by such a contingent of young fellows, all of whom were attired in white sailor suits. The crowded audience evinced the liveliest interest in the proceedings.

Mr. M. Hodder, as chairman, introduced Dr. Barnardo, who delivered a stirring little address upon various aspects of his emigration work. The present party, consisting of 157 members, is the eighteenth that has left the Homes since 1882. 2483 boys and girls have been emigrated since the commencement of the work, including 626 sent out in the sixteen years prior to 1882, so that the party now en route will bring the total up to 2640. Of the 157 it appeared that 107 had been taken directly from the streets of our large cities; 61 were complete orphans; 52 had a father only; 27 a mother only; while 17 had both parents alive, so that 72 per cent. were either orphans, or had only a mother living. Dr. Barnardo emphasised the fact that no boys were ever emigrated who had not been carefully tested by residence in the Home, as to their moral fitness, and as to their physical capacity. The result had been that out of the large number of children already sent out, 99 per cent. had absolutely succeeded in life. It was mentioned that donations to defray the cost of emigrating one hundred and twenty of the lads (£8 10s. per head) had been already received, leaving thirty-seven lads then to be provided for.

The party were earnestly commended in prayer to God, and the meeting closed with the singing of various hymns by the boys, which were much appreciated. A large farewell meeting, presided over by Sir R. N. Fowler, M.P., took place on Monday evening at the Edinburgh Castle, and a special meeting also was held in the Board-room, at Euston Station, just prior to the departure of the boys for Liverpool.

MR. STANLEY—Letters have been received at Stanley Pool from Mr. H. M. Stanley, stating that he arrived at the falls of the Aruwhimi River on June 18, and was preparing to begin the overland march. All was going well with the expedition.

THE RAILWAY SERVANTS' ORPHANAGE at Derby was recently opened. The work of this Institution was commenced only eleven years ago, but having steadily increased, the new building, which will accommodate 300 children, became a necessity.

THE GOSPEL IN FRANCE.—With reference to Pasteur Cremer's letter in our last week's issue, Miss Sophia Burgess, of 7, Christchurch-road, Hampstead, writes us that friends not able to read French will find extracts from the recent reports of the Société Evangélique de France, and other Continental Societies in the report of the Foreign Aid Society. A copy will be sent to any friends really interested in the work if early application is made.

MR. W. SPENCER WALTON will hold Gospel missions at Wakefield in September, and at Leamington in October. At the close of the missions, Conferences on the Christian life and the evangelisation of the world will be held; the dates of the Conferences are: Wakefield, September 20—22; Leamington, October 18—20. Rev. F. B. Meyer is expected to speak at the former; Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, Mr. Radcliffe, and Rev. J. Gelson Gregson at the latter.

A SURGEON'S HEROISM.—Mr. W. C. Lysaght, M.R.C.S., assistant medical officer of the Bristol Royal Infirmary, has sacrificed his life in an effort to save a patient. About a fortnight ago a man was admitted to the infirmary suffering from an affection of the throat, supposed to be diphtheria. The operation of tracheotomy was performed by Mr. Lysaght; but, the tube becoming choked, the last chance of saving the man's life was for some one to apply his lips to the tube and suck the moisture. This Mr. Lysaght did, but without avail, for shortly afterwards the patient died of suppressed scarlatina. Mr. Lysaght caught the disease in its worst form and died. A window is to be erected in the infirmary to his memory.—Pall Mall Gazette.

EVANGELISTIC MISSION.—The usual Bank Holiday Conference in connection with this Mission was on August 1, at Kilburn Hall. Workers, converts, and friends from all parts of London, and some places beyond, assembled in goodly numbers. Mr. Greene's account of experiences in Spanish evangelisation, and of the work amongst Jews in Jerusalem, was listened to with evident interest, which was also the case with Mr. Lord's recital of his travels in Palestine. Weighty addresses were also given by Mr. G. Hucklesby, Mr. Walter, Dr. Sinclair Paterson, Mr. Henry Varley, and Dr. Donald Fraser. Some of the addresses will be found fully reported in next numbers of Footsteps of Truth.

THE FERNLEY LECTURE. — Dr. Dallinger, F.R.S., the Governor of Wesley College, delivered the Fernley Lecture in the Grosvenor-street Chapel, Manchester. The spacious building was crowded in every part, many of the ministers and representatives attending the Conference being present. The subject of the lecture was "The Creator, and what we can discover of the method of creation." The existence of the Creator was defended by many exhaustive arguments based upon scientific deductions. Current theories were examined and tested in a masterly manner, and set forth with a force and perspicuity that repeatedly evoked applause. All attempts to account for life in any other way than as springing from a Creator had broken down. The difference between existence and non-existence was immeasurable. The disparity between matter and mind was infinite. There was no "evolution" that had not first been "evolved" by the infinite mind. There was evidence on every hand of "concurrent adaptation," but whether the creation of man be mediate or intermediate the demonstration is all the same. The Creator is Divine. Between man at his best and the highest intelligence of the ape there is an infinite gulf. The true crown of manhood is the soul.

THE KESWICK CONVENTION.

EARLY MORNING PRAYER-MEETINGS.

These gatherings were felt by many to be not the least profitable of the Convention; indeed, but for them, subsequent meetings would not have been so heartily enjoyed. The quiet calm of the morning hour, the beginning of the day with God, the mutual sympathy with fellow Christians in presenting their requests at the throne of grace, and the helpful words of counsel and encouragement from the appointed speakers all combined to open the heart for the reception of the Lord's truth at the later gatherings of the day.

On Tuesday morning the address was given by Rev. F. B. Meyer, who, in dealing with some of the initial truths to be learned, spoke, (1) of the right place to be in; (2) of the right ground to be on; (3) that we should look for the answer to our prayers to the right quarter; (4) that we should seek the answer to our prayers for the right end; (5) that we ourselves should be in the right attitude.

Our judicial standing and our personal experience are two different things. If the soul rests in this thought, our own judicial position before God is not affected by our personal experience. Let us be clear why we want blessing. Do you want it so that you may be on the same level as your friends? or that you may be more comfortable? I do not say God will not meet with you on that ground, but that is not the highest motive. If you want to see God's truth, say, Lord, I want to know Thee for thine own glory's sake, that Thou mayest be glorified. This is the loftiest motive for which we can live.

On Wednesday morning, Rev. Hudson Taylor spoke from Genesis xxii. a very special word of comfort and help. The temptation of Abraham was an act of confidence in him by God. The very trial He is sending you is a vote of confidence in you. He can trust his reputation in the hands of some when He cannot in others. Then there must be an emptying before there can be a filling, and there can no more be a vacuum in the kingdom of grace than in that of nature. If you take a glass of water, you may empty it by upsetting it, or you may put mercury into the water, and it being a heavier substance will displace it. So also God's good grace will, if we will let it, displace the world and sin.

On Thursday, Rev. Geo. Head, of Hampstead, gave an exposition of the miracle of feeding the multitude, and the lessons therefrom. Our Lord anticipates the wants of his people. "Whence shall we buy bread that these may eat?" If it were bread, He created it; if a home for his mother, He found one. He has opened the way for you to come here and learn more of Him and find special grace for perhaps special need. Notice how Phillip looks into the old purse, and says, Whence? He puts the purse on one side, and the bread on the other. You are face to face with that difficulty at home or in your work, and God has brought you here that you may try Him and his power. Phillip reckoned without God, and so with us; often the Lord has assisted and helped us, and yet, some new and special trial opening on us, we go back to the old thing and say, "I cannot." The moment the loaves got into the hands of Jesus they met all the need of the multitude. Jesus lets us know the whence, but the how is hid from us. The whence is Himself, and so the great secret of all joy is to realise that all our need is satisfied in Jesus Christ. The question is, What is my Lord? Is Jesus sufficient? If we have Him we have that which will send us to our homes with joy and gladness, and our need will always be met.

On Friday Rev. Colin Campbell spoke upon the widow's cruse of oil, and, judging from the frequent allusions to it in subsequent testimonies, the message was evidently used to the blessing of many. He pointed out that it was not until the last vessel had been produced that the supply of oil ceased. The faithfulness of God exemplified in that far-off age may be realised in the experience of every believer to-day. We may be poor and needy ones, but "God shall supply all our need, according to his riches." The supply of the Holy Spirit of God, as typified by the oil, is only limited by the extent of our capacity to receive it. Then, having received the supply of oil, the widow was to sell it, pay her debt, and live. The Holy Spirit is given unto us to help us to live the Divine life, and to discharge our indebtedness to our fellow men.

MEETINGS FOR YOUNG MEN.

These were held on two mornings, in the Lecture Hall, seating about 300, owing to the number of persons unable to get into the tent. They were seasons of deep searchings of heart, of humiliation and confession, and resulted in many restorations and great blessing.

Those present were invited first of all to state in a word or two of prayer any known causes of failure, and among those given were idols in the heart, self-consciousness, neglect of private prayer and Bible-study, and, in Christian work, pride of eloquence, thought, or style. Then followed testimony, which was given with great spirit. Many laid stress upon "the morning watch" as a great channel of power if kept, and an immediate cause of spiritual declension if neglected. The power of sin was also exhaustively considered, evil thoughts being the chief source of trouble. Many testified to the keeping power of the Saviour to preserve his children even from these. A distinction was drawn too between thoughts and trains of thoughts. An evil thought may not ripen into sin if instantly checked, but if allowed to form one of a train the harbouring of such is sin, and often bears fruit in evil deeds. Among other useful and practical hints which fell were these:—To realise the presence of Christ; the presence of man often restrains us from sin; how much more should that of Christ. To keep the body in subjection, as regards exercises, habits, and diet, all of which have a great deal to do with the force of many temptations.

LADIES' MEETINGS.

The ladies' meetings, held daily during the time of the Keswick Convention, were very full of the presence of God. Their object was to form an after-meeting, in which the truths of yielding to the Lord could be dwelt upon, and pressed more in detail. The first meeting opened with an address from Miss Nugent, and was followed by a few words from Mrs. Tottenham, on the subject of Expectation and the need of waiting definitely on God for blessing (Psalm lxii. 5). We need him to make us thirsty, and He makes us hunger and thirst that we may be filled. But waiting times need not be idle times. Are we willing, like Elijah, to go on waiting, going again and again to God, although at first there may seem to be nothing? (1 Kings xviii. 42—45). They whose eyes are upon the King must get blessing (Psalm cxxiii. 2). Don't let us miss God's lesson through hurry. The disciples lost a first sight of their Master by hurrying on too fast (John xx. 10, 14; Prov. viii. 34).

The next day Mrs. Bannister spoke on the subject of Altars (Gen. xxxv. 14, and Joel i.), tracing how, through sin and neglect, God's altars lacked the meat offerings and the drink offerings, and how the land had lost all its fruitfulness as a result; and urged strongly on those who had gone back, or never yielded to the Lord's claim, the necessity of at once giving Him all, and again giving Him the drink offering of a poured-out life.

On Thursday, Mrs. Tottenham and Miss Trotter both gave short addresses, the former on Psalm lxxxiv. 2 (R.V.), "Singing for Joy," and spoke on the joy of Christ's service, and how God wants our lives to be songs of praise. Then, when we yield to Him, He will speak through us and our lives will set others singing too. Miss Trotter's words on John vi. 16 were full of power, as she pleaded that the Master's voice of comfort might draw many hearts to Him, and that the weary toiling ones might take Him into their hearts, and so find rest. Mrs. Bannister spoke briefly on Luke xiv. 26, 27, 33—the three "Cannots."

On Friday, the closing meeting was taken up with a few words on the joy of whole-hearted surrender to the Lord of everything, leaving Him to apply the tests of its reality, and trusting the Master to put his yielded tools to the best use: Mrs. Tottenham closed with a few words on the abundant blessing offered by God to those who look for it (Psalm lxv. 9, marg.). A spirit of deep earnestness was felt throughout all these gatherings, and we have much reason for praise.

AFTERNOON MEETINGS.

On Tuesday Rev. J. A. Jacob spoke from Ps. lxxxi., from which he deduced some important lessons. The Psalm begins in a joyous strain, but ends in grief; the major followed by the minor. This characterises many Old Testament utterances, but in the New Testament we find generally that joy succeeds sorrow. Christians should be an essentially joyous people. Certainly this is a mark of those who attend Keswick Convention year by year—their happiness arises out of a life of victory. Is not this a thing to be thankful for amid so much sorrow and trouble? The world is sad because it has lost sight of God, and of a sense of his love.

When spiritual joy wanes, Christians often throw blame on God, and undervalue their privileges instead of confessing their shortcomings. The Israelites were to blame: they had experienced the goodness of God, but instead of valuing and enjoying their privileges, they let them go. Then there is the sad lament in vers. 8, 9 for those who might have been so different from what they were. Such a life is not only sad to the individual, but it is a loss to the cause of God, inasmuch as we cannot work for God if we are spiritually out of joint. There may be troubles and clouds, but these are but as the tunnels on the railway, and we do not give up our journey because of them. We must trust God in the darkness as well as in the light, for He is with us there, even in the valley of the shadow of death.

Rev. John Sloan followed with some solemn and searching words from 2 Tim iii. 1—8. The first weapon the devil used against the Church was persecution, but after a while that lost its effect, and ceased, and religion became fashionable. Now it is by cunning, and not by force, that he seeks to conquer. Alas, there has crept in "the form of godliness," without its power. The world is perishing for lack of knowledge of the love of God, and as it looks at the professed people of God, does it see a people who, as they go through life, bear all its troubles and trials with calm serenity, their minds set on things above? Or do they see that Christians set their affections on things of earth; that they are as much cast down if business goes wrong as other men? If so, why is it? Because they do not believe that God will supply their need abundantly, nor that He is quite as good to them as He said He would be. The magicians of old did what Moses did, and Pharoah was not convinced. So the devil has his sham Christians to-day who "withstand" the true work of God, and the world looks on in wonder and contempt. It is an awful thing to "have the form of godliness" without its power.

On Wednesday, Capt. Baring, speaking from Prov. xxii. 17, said that man by nature carries his head too high to hear what God would say to him. Low down is the best place for hearing, and for seeing. If we occupy this position we shall be able to preach the Word effectively.

Mr. William Sloan also spoke very suggestively and helpfully on Eternal Life, from Rom. vi. 23. Eternal life is the gift of God, not only in its initial stage of conversion, but all through, moment by moment; and if He be the giver, and we the receivers, then must we always be dependent upon Him. The characteristic of the new life is that we should be dead to sin, even as by nature we were dead in sin. Our experience of death to sin will be in proportion to our life in Christ.

On Thursday, Rev. Colin Campbell said that God's people must launch out into the deep and seek the regions beyond. We want to get back to the earlier experiences of the Christian Church. The book of Joshua is a wonderful parable of the book of faith, a shadow of the better land. But after the blessed experiences of victory in Joshua comes the sadder experiences of failure in Judges, where we have a picture of the life lived by the majority of Christians. Times of victory are alternated with grievous falls. Conquering to-day and conquered to-morrow. How then can we know the blessed life that is a stranger to defeat? The remedy for failure is to be found in union with Jesus. In Joshua we find Jesus as our Captain, but if we would stand fast we must bring Him into closer relationship as the Bridegroom of our hearts. Our resting place is the heart of Jesus; there it is that we know the rest of which we have been hearing. We must get low down to his feet, and He says "I will make the place of my feet glorious."

Rev. Hudson Taylor, followed upon the subject of abiding in Christ taking for the ground-work of his discourse John xv. What is meant by abiding in Christ, and how to abide in Him are questions that arise in many hearts. God has, however, fully answered them in his Word. This subject is closely connected with the feeding of the multitude in John vi. Those who had been fed followed the Lord Jesus, and were exhorted to seek "the true bread which cometh down out of heaven, and giveth light unto the world." And again he says "I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." As a father makes provision for his children, so has God done for each of us. The Lord Jesus delights in comparing and contrasting God's gifts to us in Christ, with those natural gifts with which we are all familiar. We have often drunk of natural supplies, and have thirsted again; but He has promised us that if we drink of the living water we shall never thirst. Then He contrasts natural food with the supernatural food with which He fed miraculously the millions of Israelites in the desert, and when we go to Christ there is ample provision for all conceivable needs. He is Himself the Bread and Water of Life, and this receiving of life is not the privelege of any spiritual aristocracy, nor an exceptional attainment of exceptional Christians, but may be enjoyed by the humblest believer.

Nor is it by a process of striving and wrestling that we grow. No, but we all, mirroring as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into his likeness. It is what He is, not you. There is fatness in the roots of the vine. How may I get it? By union with the vine. The branch has not to strive, but simply to abide in the vine. If a person banked some money to the credit of the China Inland Mission, but did not advise us of it, we should not draw, because we did not know of it; so, to abide is to live on the constant knowledge that I and the Lord Jesus are one. This will be strength in need.

A TESTIMONY MEETING.

Friday afternoon being the last, was given up to testimony, which must have caused joy in the presence of the angels. Short, clear, bright words, indicated that many souls had leapt into the blessed liberty of the life of faith, or had quietly and restfully stepped out into the ocean of God's fulness and love. We can only quote a few. It was interesting to trace, from the allusions and quotations in these testimonies, the particular points in the various addresses which had especially given light.

A lady thanked God for the revelation of Jesus as a Saviour mighty to keep. Since last year she had been in great darkness of soul. It was like going through a tunnel (an illustration which had been used by one of the speakers) which was very dark, but she was on the rails all the time. Now she had got light and power.

A minister said he had been trying to consecrate himself instead of trusting Christ. A number of resolutions were pasted up in his study which he should tear down immediately he got home. His whole life had been revolutionised.

Another minister said:—I have chiefly been enabled to see in the Lord Jesus a supply for every need. The temptations and cares of life seem wonderfully taken off when one realises that He shall supply every need.

Perhaps the most touching was the case of a minister from Ireland, who said:—I belong to the Disestablished Church of Ireland, but, thank God, my visit to Keswick has established me. I came to see the scenery, but I have been so entranced by the meetings that I have not been a mile out of Keswick. I wandered about the town for some time, and could not get lodgings, and at every house I heard of this Convention. At last I got a little bedroom, 8 feet square, and came to the meetings. Here I got a great blessing to my soul, and spent the night in praising God, and that little room was the most blessed place I was ever in.

Some scores of other most interesting testimonies were given, of a very varied character but showing that during these days the Spirit of God had been at work in blessing many with deeper, fuller views of Himself as their all and in all.

EVANGELISATION OF THE WORLD.

This meeting on Saturday morning, coming as it did at the close of such a week of blessing, proved to be of very deep and solemn interest, and a sacred seal to the consecration of hearts and lives which had taken place during the week. But it should have a special interest to the readers of The Christian from the fact, which was mentioned in the meeting, that the report of the similar meeting held last year was written by the invalid daughter of the late Canon Battersby. It was her last work for Christ on earth, for very soon after last year's Convention she entered into the jöy of the Lord she loved so well. Few knew what a labour it was for her with her feeble fingers to do much writing, and none can tell what a deep love she had for the work of Christ abroad. But her devotion to her Master's cause should stir all of us up to give the powers we have to Him.

Mr. Reginald Radcliffe opened the meeting by an earnest plea for Christ's millions. He said there are two great hindrances, which seem, more than others, to interfere with the sending of the Gospel to the heathen: (1) The difficulty which we all have in realising the needs of those far off, when we have so many wandering sheep around our doors; (2) the traditions which are growing, thick as weeds, in the Protestant churches of England and America. The Word of God comes as a rebuke to us to-day, "Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect through your tradition" (Matt xv. 6). What a change would take place if we were to leave the tradition, and take our commands direct from the Word of God. When a church is formed in any place, is it only to cultivate that little parish? Never. When a soul comes to Christ it should be a well of living water. If a clergyman, with his staff of workers is merely cultivating their parish, he is a warrior without generalship. It is not Christ's war. If a man is converted, and understands that Christ is his keeper, he must have the mind of Christ with regard to the heathen.

A few weeks ago I had to do with one of the largest parishes in the world, not West Africa, not the Sahara, but the Soudan. It is 2000 miles long and 500 miles broad, and contains a population of from 50 to 70 millions, proselytised by Mohammedans, and as yet never touched by us. What have all the Protestant churches of England and America given to this land? Only two lads, who a few weeks ago sailed down the Mersey on their way to Africa. One was young Wilmot Brooke, and the other a Soudanese lad, who, after seeing his father murdered before his eyes, and having been sold as a slave, was at last rescued and brought to England by the Rev. C. T. Wilson, of the C.M.S. And yet with all this we say, "Lord Jesus, come quickly." It was not Christ's command which sent us to Africa in the first instance, but the tragic death of Livingstone. With one of the many church steeples in this land we could supply 10 missionaries in China, and so in many cases, instead of pointing the road to heaven, they are blocking up the way.

Rev. J. Hudson Taylor said: I have just received a letter from my daughter, who is working in China alone, in a district as large as Wales. Thank God, He is making her a blessing there. But think how few are the workers. What are we doing for the heathen? Some of us came up here hungry and thirsty, and we all delight to sing—

I came to Jesus, and I drank of that life-giving stream.

But now the Master is Himself thirsty. He is still asking of you and me, "Give Me to drink." He is thirsting for souls. Shall we do nothing to satisfy his thirst? Parts of the world may be very dear to us, but they are not the whole world. We do want to get into sympathy with "Our Father," and whilst we remember the needs at home, let us think that there is no one in England who is not within easy reach of some one who can point him to Christ. But in France, Germany, India, Africa, China, &c., there are millions who will never hear the Gospel unless we take the Gospel to them. Will you not try to satisfy Him who gave his life to satisfy you?

To some who have it in their hearts to offer themselves to the Lord for missionary service I should like to say a word. Thank God, we do not live in a world of accident. God rules and guides all. It remains for us to work where we are, until God opens the door. Wait on the Lord. Perhaps He has some lesson to teach you in your present sphere, some work not finished, some duty neglected. We ought to be more urgent to learn the lesson than to get the trouble past. Children, don't lay aside any God-made barrier. Beloved parents, shall we say, "God take this thistle, but don't take the fair flower from my home?" Shall we not say, "Master, take the very best treasure?" Shall we not slake the thirst of our Saviour by giving our best to Him?

Mr. Eugene Stock said Mr. Radcliffe had been speaking of new fields of work, but we must not forget the old fields. The appeal, he said, which had reached the convention from Jaffa, asking for ten ladies to go out at once to Palestine, was made entirely apart from the committee, for the letter came to the chairman directly from China. May God send out the ladies, and, if any are unable to support themselves altogether, the C.M.S. Committee will be glad to make up the deficiency. Dr. Jukes, from India, sends this message:—"Urge those present not to hinder the going out of those who should go." The February simultaneous meetings of the C.M.S. have borne abundant fruit. The congregation of St. Paul's, Onslow-square, have given an offering of £3000 in addition to their ordinary collections. This is to be applied to sending ladies to East Africa, and volunteers are urgently needed.

Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe asked prayer that God would lead some ladies to offer for the work in East Africa, saying that whoever were sent would have the very earnest prayers and sympathy of his congregation.

Deeply interesting personal testimonies followed from Miss Trotter, who hopes shortly to take up missionary work in North Africa; and Miss Campbell, who is leaving soon for work in connection with the China Inland Mission. Miss Clay, of the Punjaub Village Mission, said more workers are needed among the villages of the Punjaub. There are hundred of villages where no worker has ever been. Now in these districts there are many inquiring the way of life. There is a great work going on, and now is the time to reap the sheaves, as well as to sow the seed. Rev. James Johnson, of Lagos, spoke of the necessities of Africa, and Mr. T. W. Piggott, of the China Inland Mission, advocated the claims of that vast field. Towards the close of the meeting Mr. Radcliffe invited (1) all missionaries present who had actually been out in the field to rise, that they might be seen and prayed for. There were twenty or thirty. (2) Then he asked any to rise who were fully resolved to go out if God opened the way. Over fifty persons at once stood up, and "Thank God" burst involuntarily from hundreds of lips. There was perfect quiet; not the smallest excitement; but tears stood in many eyes at the sight. (3) Once more, Would those who desired guidance about the future rise? Fifty or sixty more stood up. Rev. F. B. Meyer concluded with an earnest appeal that there might be real practical results. Fruit of this impressive meeting has already been seen.

[We are obliged to hold over for a week our notes of the Bible Reading by Rev. Hubert Brooke.]

Notes and Comments.

OUR next issue will contain portrait and sketch of the late Professor A. Hodge, of Princeton University.

A correspondent sends to us a contribution to several home and foreign mission agencies, as a birthday thank-offering, and suggests that other friends might adopt this method of celebrating their natal day.

The Church Missionary Society Gleaner has a good suggestion with regard to old missionary magazines. It is that they should be sent to hotels in the tourist districts. In such places English visitors are often at a loss for something to read in the evenings, and they would be specially glad of anything that would give fresh information about the Master's work, or recall to the memory facts and needs easily forgotten. We believe the hotel-keepers would not, as a rule, make any objection to receiving and placing on their tables interesting missionary papers.

Through the death of Mr. John Swift, the oldest of the magistrates at Eastbourne, the British and Foreign Bible Society gains a contingent interest in £300,000. We are told that Mr. Swift was a quiet, devout, Christian; doing good, without any flourish of trumpets, and not allowing his left hand to know, as it were, the beautiful deeds of his right. Locally beloved, his life was a chapter in moral equity. Old age mellowed and strengthened his Christianity. This good magistrate undoubtedly lived near God; and God gave him a spiritual and charitable mind.

The musical enthusiast who once said he did not care who made a nation's laws, so long as he could write its ballads, could not have anticipated the mischievous song-lore of the present day. That the giddy multitude, not spiritually in communion with Christ, should sing songs of a vicious sort, only illustrates the natural downward tendency of unregenerate tastes. Still, it is an unwelcome sign of the times that the most popular melody of the street crowd just now, should treat pugilism and animal brutality as a mere passing joke. Never since drunkenness received musical endorsement by irreverent song-writers a few years ago, has melody been so much prostituted to unworthy purposes.

This question of popular song-writing is a serious one, as many of the compositions undoubtedly assist in the moral deterioration of the masses. The music-halls, with their demoralising associations, do much to promote vice by insidious appeals to men's worst thoughts and passions. The olden cleanness of sentimental and patriotic poetry, sad to say, finds no place in these morally and socially damaging productions.

It is painful to reflect upon the fact that the world of fashion continues to patronise the pigeon-shooting tournaments at Hurlingham and other centres where "sport" simply means a heartless butchery of birds. A country correspondent says that since the rejection of the Cruelty to Animals Amendment Bill, two years ago, these trap-shooting matches have increased to an alarming extent; so much so, that very soon the harmless dove will be a scarce object. Let all who love the Master plead and protest against cruelty so selfish and baneful.

"The annual congregation of stray cats in the West-end squares has already commenced" reads like a sentence from Punch. But it is no laughing matter for the cats. It means that, owing to the thoughtlessness of many who now leave town, or to the worse than thoughtlessness of the caretakers left behind, hundreds of cats are now starving. We have known even true Christians commit such a sin against these domestic friends, more from ignorance, of course, than wilful cruelty; still these things ought not to be. Far better put them to a merciful death by sending them to the Dogs' Home at Battersea, than let them starve by slow degrees. We are thankful that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is on the alert.

Mr. Ruskin has lately been persuaded to state his views on early marriage. He urges that "no man should marry till he has made himself worthy of a good wife, and is able to maintain her and his children in comfort." Good advice, indeed, so far as it goes, though few will heed it. We would supplement it by asking the young among our readers not to forget the Scriptural admonition about believers not being "unequally yoked." Many a good, well-dispositioned young woman incautiously weds a careless and irreverent man, because he happens to be earning good wages, and can start a home. In not a few of these ill-conditioned alliances the woman's weak nature, harrassed by family trials, yields to evil habits. In a few years all the happy and hopeful spirituality of the once devout maiden is gone.

The strange ideas and assumptions of some of the Ritualistic clergy are strikingly illustrated by a controversy being carried on in the columns of The Standard. Presumably under the impression that the baptismal ceremony is an infallible passport to salvation, they have taken to refusing to read the burial service over unbaptized infants. But, as the clergy are compelled by law to read this service over baptized adulterers, profligates, thieves, and even condemned murderers on their way to the scaffold, it seems very strange that they should have any scruples about doing so over the bodies of children, who have never broken a single commandment in the Decalogue.

Are we not hearing a little too much of "Artisan Atheists" and of working-men sceptics of all kinds? Whatever amount of atheism there may be among the artisan and labouring classes, we are afraid there is very much more in middle-class society; and it would be only fair to our toiling friends that another side of the case should be stated. The uneducated irreligion of the workman may be, and is, bad enough, but it is by no means so evil in its effects as the educated, though none the less ignorant, scepticism of his master.

A question has come to the front which the friends of Evangelical Protestantism need to watch anxiously. The Vatican makes the minimum of reconciliation with the King of Italy to be the sovereignty of the pontiff over the City of Rome. It is urged in influential quarters in England and Italy that a civil governor might rule in the name of the Pope, and that such a compromise would solve what has been regarded as an insoluble problem. With the example of the past before our eyes, we may be justified in holding doubts as to any equitable rule where priests have a controlling influence. Those who lived in Rome when the Pope was its temporal ruler know well that of religious liberty in any true sense there was none. It was hard to get even a Bible through the Custom House, and not a copy could be bought. The police were the creatures of the Papacy, and to complain of injustice was dangerous. We must think of good men who have witnessed for the Gospel in Rome, and at such a time must stand by them.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson's righteous indignation has quite excusably been aroused by the incessant postponement of much-needed reforms in the regulation of the drink traffic. On his motion, a resolution in favour of Local Option was passed in the House of Commons in 1885, and twice subsequently endorsed there, but Government still defers any attempt to give effect to these expressions of opinion. Bills for conferring the blessings of a sober Sunday, and for shortening the hours of sale on week days, have been immolated upon the altar of some more clamant, though not more important, question. It would be strange if sobriety-loving Englishmen did not begin to manifest some impatience at this continued neglect of their crying needs. The time cannot be far distant when a serious attempt must be made to secure attention for such vital issues, and a legislative solution of what might well be called the "English question."

Those of our readers who are interested in the sad statistics of the drink traffic and its results should study an interesting paper entitled, "Toxicopolis," from the powerful pen of Dr. B. W. Richardson, which appears in the current number of Longman's Magazine. Although great prominence has been given to the extent of the trade in intoxicating liquor, few persons will be prepared for the facts as summarised by the writer, and we are sure they will be received with much surprise. If all the public-houses in the United Kingdom were grouped together, says Dr. Richardson, they would make a city of 180,000 houses, with 900,000 inhabitants; and with attendants and frequenters a city the size of the Metropolis would be the result.

The Doctor adds that although these inhabitants would in some respects differ little from those of other great cities, they would differ materially in the "commercial value of life," which would be so low as to be "practically uninsurable." "When the curve of suicide rises, the curve of the increase of revenue derived from Toxicopolis is a tower of strength to the Revenue Department." He might have gone a little further and shown easily that whenever the Revenue from drink increases, the outlay in the repression and prevention of crime, the relief of poverty, and the treatment of insanity and disease increases in proportion.

From the summary of crime in France, which has just been issued as an official paper, it appears that homicides have largely increased, and suicides nearly doubled during the last nine years. The number of accidental deaths is abnormal, and the Minister of Justice surmises that many suicides are hushed up as cases of natural death. Furthermore, deaths from delirium tremens are in many cases included among the accidental, and the great accretion of lunatics is to be largely attributed to alcoholic excess.

But the most serious aspect of the report is the alarming tendency to the exculpation of homicide, which, as The Times very justly points out, throws into dismal relief the degeneration of popular sentiment. Seventy-four per cent. of convicted homicides are declared by juries to be more or less excusable, and of the small residuum over four-fifths are reprieved from execution by the intervention of Government. Truly this is an alarming picture, and one which might well be taken to heart by those who scoff at the religious devotion and solid characteristics of Englishmen. We learn from these facts that irreligion is the foster mother of murder and suicide, and that the vices which Frenchmen lightly dub "vivacity" and "spirit" are sure passports to present lunacy and violent death, followed by the certain degradation and degeneration of the race.

It would appear from the columns of the extremer Romanist organs that the Popish antics of the Ritualists have in no way conciliated for them the mammon of unrighteousness which they seem to take for their model and guide. Could anything, for instance, be more venomously direct and offensive to them than the words of The Universe, which paper contemptuously asks whether anyone can be

> Such a greenhorn as to suppose that an Anglican with Ritualistic symptoms is anything more than a dishonest heretic subscribing to what he does not believe, and promising to fulfil certain duties which he deliberately intends to neglect.

We would commend this passage to the attention of those "greenhorns"—to adopt the choice phraseology of the Romanist organ—who have lately been airing their Utopian schemes for the reunion of Christendom with the ingenuous impression that the friendship and sympathy of Rome would impel her to abate one jot or one tittle of even the least extravagant dogmas for the benefit of incorporation with them.

The scandal of the threatened duel between two leading French statesmen is difficult to reconcile with the boasted civilisation of the nineteenth century. If it were not so melancholy an evidence of savagery and false views of "honour," the whole affair would be supremely ridiculous. The extreme publicity given to it, probably necessitated by the political intention of the affair, was very effectively ridiculed by The Times, when it suggested that the duel should be put off until the railway companies had had time to organise special excursions to view the interesting contest. Without being accused of Pharisaical self-righteousness, we may congratulate ourselves that this iniquitous and barbarous system has effectively been put down in our country, not only by legal sanction, but by public opinion and common sense as well.

The Church Missionary Society reports that the opposition of the Turkish Government to their Mission Schools in Palestine, so far as the education in them of Mohammedan children is concerned, has culminated in an order from Constantinople forbidding the attendance of Moslems altogether. At this we are more grieved than astonished. It was not at all likely that a bigoted Mohammedan power would be pleased at the influence of Christian teaching, through schools, on its children. Nor do we see that anything can be done by this country officially to cause the decree to be reversed. But this we can secure, that, save as regards the teaching of Mohammedan children in schools the missionaries are left wholly unfettered and unmolested. We fear that this has hardly been the case of late.

The following, from The Church Missionary Gleaner, is good advice :—

> The best way, while still engaged in a home occupation, to qualify yourself for missionary work, is to do thoroughly whatever you are doing, to study the Bible systematically, and to seek to bring souls to Christ. A knowledge of practical teaching may be useful; and of nursing, &c.; and, of course, of cooking, and all household work. Speaking and writing any foreign language, also, is a good preparation for learning another by and by.

We presume that the counsel is intended for an intending lady missionary, but, mutatis mutandis, it would apply equally well to men.

Quite a flutter of surprise, and not a little regret has been caused among the coteries of English capitalists, by intelligence that the Chinese Government have granted large monetary concessions, including the establishing of a bank with a capital of £200,000,000 sterling, to an American financial syndicate. Is it not just possible that the feelings which animate the Chinese authorities towards this country, on account of the opium traffic, may have had something to do with the loss of this large transaction to the financiers of Lombard-street?

In his forty-eighth annual report of the Scriptural Knowledge Institution, just published, the venerable George Müller, stating the various objects aimed at in his missionary tours, says :—

> I aim at the removal of sectarianism, at promoting brotherly love amongst true Christians. With this object in view, I go amongst all real believers, by whatsoever name they are called, provided they are sound in the foundation truths of our holy faith. Though not agreeing at all with some of their opinions and practices, I nevertheless preach amongst all; having seen for many years how greatly the heart of the Lord Jesus must be grieved by the disunion that exists among his own true disciples. On this account, therefore, I have sought (in my feeble measure) to unite all true believers; but, as this cannot be done by standing aloof from our brethren in Christ, until they see eye to eye with us in every point, I have gone amongst them, and have united with them, in so far as nothing has been required of me which I could not do with a good conscience.

We commend these weighty and seasonable words to our readers as an example of practical dealing with the question of Christian Unity. Would that all Christians of every denomination were like-minded!

Before returning to India last week, with fifty additional mission workers, Colonel Tucker of the Salvation Army was interviewed at the office of The Pall Mall Gazette. He gave his questioner a glowing account of the great progress the Army had made in carrying the Gospel to the natives of our vast dependency, and spoke with an unhesitating enthusiasm of its future. "We will never give up the fight," he exclaimed, "until we have won India." We quote one short paragraph which seems to us to carry an implied impeachment of all Indian missions in the past. If Mr. Tucker is right, the well-worn methods that have hitherto been followed had better be abandoned at once. The English and American Churches certainly cannot afford to subscribe large sums of money for the support of missionaries in India, if the result is, as Mr. Tucker asserts, to create a "chasm" between the foreign teachers and the natives who are supposed to be taught. This is what he said, according to The Pall Mall :—

> We are bridging the chasm that has hitherto yawned between the English and natives in India. The English look down upon the natives; the natives detest the English. The English despise the native habits; the native resents English arrogance. Thus it is that between the two there is no bond of union. We are creating that bond. The natives are learning with amazement to recognise the fact that there are English who for sheer love of their souls, are ready to cease to be English, in order to meet them as brothers on common ground, and to most of the natives it is a revelation indeed. They think we are a different kind of English to the others.

Mr. Tucker at any rate may claim the credit and the courage of having put his own principles into practice; which is more than can be said for all the advocates in this country of extremely self-abnegating methods of mission work in India. But we should like to have the views of some who have laboured long in that field, as to their being "no bond of union" between the natives and those who are preaching the Gospel in their midst. The charge is a serious one, and it ought to be met.

There would seem to be another side to Mr. Tucker's operations, if we may judge from the following editorial note, which appears in The Indian Witness, of Calcutta, dated July 9 :—

> We are glad to see that a benevolent English gentleman has given £5000 to the Salvation Army for the promotion of their work in India. As a sincere friend of the Army, and with an unselfish desire to see them prosper, we urge General Booth to use part of this money in paying Mr. Tucker's passage away from India, and sending out some person to take his place who can distinguish between peculiarity and piety. Unless something of this kind is done, the work in India will sink into obscurity. There must be some control in England, or the Indian "Army" will be badly disorganised.

The reception which the Papal manifesto, conveyed in the now famous letter to Cardinal Rampolla, has obtained at the hands of the Italian press is very encouraging to all who have the Protestant cause at heart. Official, independent, and provincial papers alike unite in a chorus of condemnation of the Papal pretensions. "These proposals," says the Opinione, "would entail the destruction of the nation." The Venezia asserts that at all hazards the "tangibility of the national unity" must be maintained. Even the Ultramontane journals are dissatisfied with the attitude of the Pope, and find no words to palliate his indiscretions.

A lesson in chivalry and unselfishness is often taught us by what we are pleased to call the "lower animals." The other day a little girl fell into a canal in one of our large manufacturing towns. Several men were standing by and viewed the event with indifference. One said it was no business of his, and another callously remarked that he had enough trouble with his own "brats" at home without bothering himself about other people's. At this moment a large Newfoundland dog arrived upon the scene, and without a moment's hesitation plunged in, bringing the child to land. Surely it is a crime morally removed but one degree from murder, tamely to stand by and let a fellow-creature die. Had the poor child not found so gallant a rescuer in her four-footed friend, it must be surmised that it would have gone hard with the culpably timid spectators when they came before the coroner's jury.

For the Young.

BENNY'S TEMPERANCE WATCH.

Two lads were standing in the street, near a shop-window, talking. They were both about the same age. One, slightly the bigger of the two, was decently dressed, though in several places his clothes had been carefully mended. The other seemed to have been far less fortunate. Squeezed into clothes that were too little for him, his limbs had resented by bursting through in several places, particularly at the elbows and knees. A hurried attempt at patching them had also proved a failure, and a dirty shirt peered out lower down. Poor fellow! one or two of his toes were peeping out from each worn-out boot. It was altogether an interesting contrast.

"My father came home drunk last night," said the latter one, not as though it were a subject for regret, but in quite a matter-of-course way. It was evidently a commonplace thing, and he was not old enough to understand the difference it made to him. This was plainly shown by his next remark: "I shall get drunk when I'm a man, like my father;" and he began to stagger about, in imitation of what he hoped to do in the future.

"But I shall not get drunk," replied the other, "'cause I'm teetotal. And my father never gets drunk, 'cause he's teetotal. We're all teetotallers."

"Humph!" returned the first, with a sneer, "I wouldn't be teetotal." He had by this time ceased his staggering, and come back to the window, just in front of his companion.

Taking hold of his coat, and looking him straight in the face, the bigger lad asked, with energy in every word—

"Wouldn't you rather have a watch than get drunk?"

"Eh! wouldn't I! I would, I think," he replied. His eyes glistened at the mere thought, and he capered about as if it were already in his pocket.

"Well," said the other, "and so would I. My father's promised that if I save all my pocket-money, and keep my pledge, he'll buy me a watch when I'm big enough to take care of one;" and then, with the air of one who has vanquished his opponent entirely, he added: "I'd a lot rather have a watch than get drunk."...

Benny Clark, the lesser and more poorly-dressed of the two boys, was sitting at home, looking thoughtfully into the fire. His father had just finished his tea, and was pulling his chair towards the fire to indulge in his usual nap, when Benny startled him by saying: "Father, I do wish you were like Arthur Wilson's father."

After the first surprise was over, he asked: "What for, Benny?" Benny was a little reluctant in replying, but drawing his little stool close to his father's knee—for James Clark was an indulgent father, and had never ill-used his wife and children, even when in drink—he looked up into his father's face, and said, rather shyly; "'Cause then I could have a watch when I'm big enough, like Arthur Wilson." His father indulged in a laugh, but it was not a hearty one. Benny related what Arthur Wilson had told him, leaving out his own share of the conversation.

"Whatever made you begin talking about all that, Benny?" he asked, carelessly.

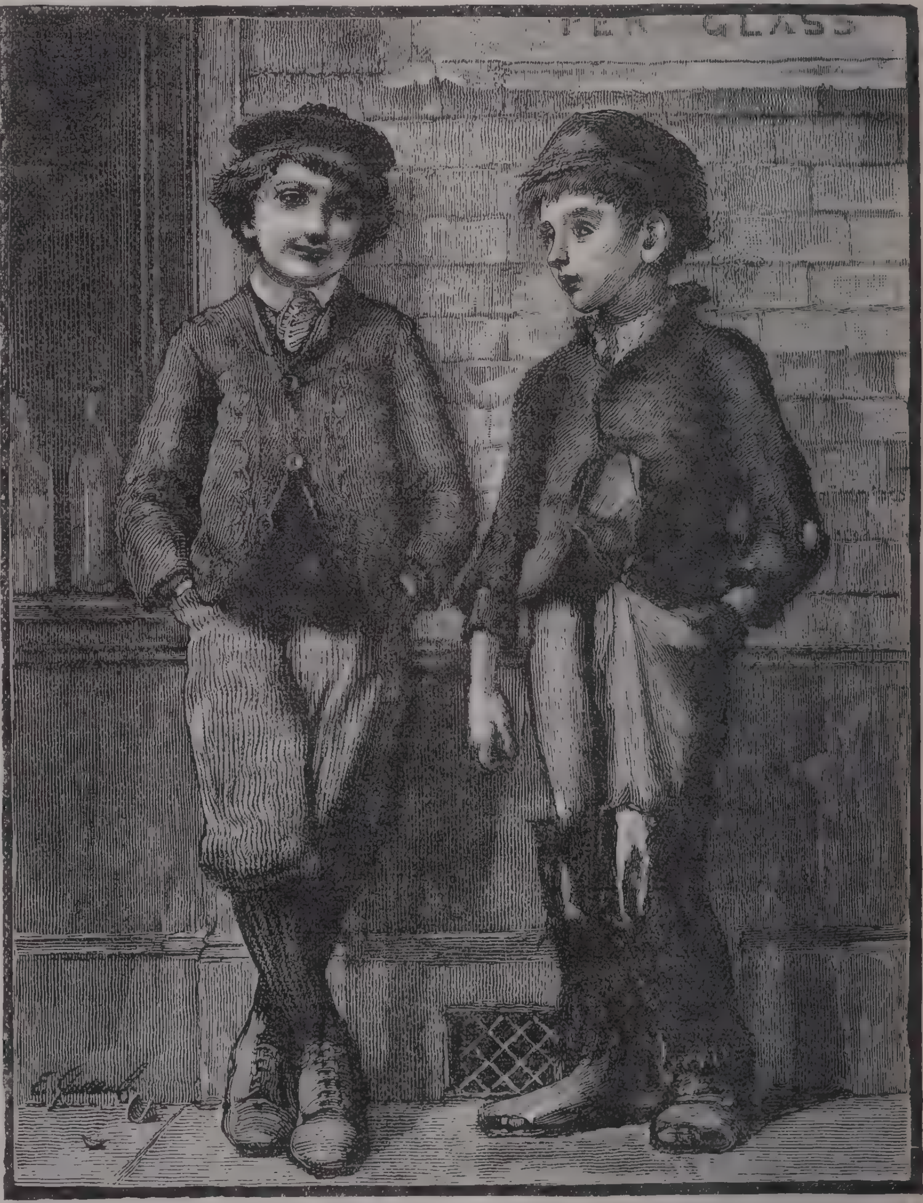
The boy's face flushed. He already felt ashamed of his first words to Arthur Wilson, and did not like to repeat them to his father. But Mr. Clark, not understanding his embarrassment, and being more interested than he cared to admit, said: "Come, what was it?"

"Well," said Benny, hanging his head, "I had been saying that when I was a man I should get drunk, like you do sometimes, and Arthur Wilson asked me if I wouldn't rather have a watch than get drunk." He raised his head, and added, more energetically: "But I've changed my mind; I'd a deal rather have a watch."

What was it that made James Clark suddenly push back his chair, and look so very hard in his son's face? He saw nothing there but the simplicity of childhood. Ah! the shaft had struck home! What! his Benny be a drunkard! "Get drunk like you do sometimes," he repeated to himself. Was his son following—would he follow in his steps? It had never struck him like this before. He could not bear to think about it. Rising hastily from his chair, and going to Benny, he put his hand on the little fellow's shoulder, and looking into his fair, brown eyes, said in a hoarse whisper: Benny, you must never get drunk, do you hear? never."

Meeting-time came, and found Benny with a bright and happy face amongst the pleasant group of children on the platform. His father was also there. Half-ashamed of being found in such a place, and persuading himself that he had only come to listen to Benny, and satisfy the boy, he had taken a seat about half-way down the school-room, where he would not be much noticed, and could see and hear all that went on.

Benny's recitation was soon called for. It was repeated without a mistake, and when at the close of it the people cheered, Benny turned his eyes to where his father sat to see if it met with his approval. His father smiled, and Benny was satisfied.



"I'D A LOT RATHER HAVE A WATCH THAN GET DRUNK."

Benny did not understand his father's strange look, but he replied: "No, father, I'll never get drunk, and you'll perhaps buy me a watch, will you?"

"We'll see," replied his father, and strode out of doors. But not away from his thoughts.

The next day the two boys came home from school together. "Wouldn't you like to come to our Band of Hope to-night, Benny?" said Arthur; "I'm going to say a recitation."

"I haven't signed," said Benny. "But you could come without signing, if you like.

The Band of Hope meetings took a strong hold upon Benny. He was a regular attendant, and when one night the chairman gave him a recitation, telling him if he learnt it well he should say it at a public meeting, his joy knew no bounds. He rushed off home, read it aloud to his mother, and set to work to learn it at once.

At the close of the meeting James Clark was halting between two opinions. Should he decide now, and sign the pledge, or go on in the old way? He felt dissatisfied with himself and his mode of life, yet scarcely dare venture on the new path opened before him. In this state of mind he stood waiting for Benny when the meeting was dispersing. Soon Benny made his way over the empty forms, past the groups who were discussing the meeting, straight to his father."

"Didn't I say it right?" he asked, proud of his success. "You did, my lad. Splendidly!"

"Yes; I shall never get drunk, father, I won't ever taste;" then lowering his voice almost to a whisper: "and I do wish you wouldn't either, father.

It was the turning-point that decided the fate of that father. Looking into those eager eyes, he felt that for his sake, and the sake of his boy, he must decide at once. The answer came, firm and straight—

"Well, I won't."

A beam of joy lit up Benny's face. "And you'll sign now?" he asked, eagerly.

"Yes," replied his father; and they passed forward to the table, where James Clark signed the pledge.

Gradually a revolution took place in the home, as the pratical benefits of the pledge made themselves felt. The watch left the pawnbroker's care, and again took its place in the owner's pocket. Benny's garments were exchanged for good serviceable clothes, while Mrs. Clark's face assumed a pleasant and contented smile. Nor was Benny's watch forgotten. Carefully he saved up his spare pence, and deposited them in the savings bank. His father added to the sum occasionally, not merely to gratify the boy's wish, but as a mark of love and esteem for the son whom he now loved more than ever. The friendship between Arthur Wilson and Benny was continued, and ripened with their years.

At length Benny's sixteenth birthday arrived. As he came downstairs he met quite a chorus of "Many happy returns of the day." The table seemed covered with birthday presents, but most of all a neat little case attracted his attention. He opened it, and found inside a wash-leather pocket a beautiful silver lever watch. After looking the long-waited-for treasure over and over, he opened its case, and found inscribed thereon, "Benjamin Clark, with father's love."

He was not long before taking the news to his friend, who, after congratulating him, said, "Shall I show you mine?"

"What! have you got one, too?"

"Yes; I got mine a few days ago, on my birthday. See, here it is." Another watch, with Arthur's name inscribed on it, but otherwise similar to Benny's, lay before him.

"Well, haven't they arranged it nicely? Shall we call them 'temperance watches'?"

"Yes, we will. It's a good idea."

And so the two watches received the name of "temperance watches," and splendid service they have both done and are still doing in the temperance cause.—Band of Hope Review.

ONE LITTLE RHYME.

One little grain in the sandy bars;
One little flower in a field of flowers;
One little star in a heaven of stars;
One little hour in a year of hours—
What if it makes or what if it mars?

But the bar is built of the little grains;
And the little flowers make the meadows gay;
And the little stars light the heavenly plain;
And the little hours of each little day
Give to us all that life contains.

St. Nicholas.

SEASIDE SERVICES.

August:—Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Scarborough and Filey; Mr. Hutchinson, Bridlington; Mr. Dennes, Whitby; Mr. Spiers, Redcar; Mr. J. H. Greene, Saltburn; Mr. Haley, Whitley, Newcastle-on-Tyne; Captain Chapman, Cromer; Mr. Chaplin, Felixstowe; Messrs. C. H. and E. Collier, Herne Bay; Mr. Seagrove, Broadstairs; Messrs. Carrot and E. Hughes, Deal; Mr. Trickett, Eastbourne; Mr Figgis, Brighton; Mr. Pitts, St. Leonards; Mr. Barnard, Littlehampton; Messrs. Gibbert Hughes and Howard Staines, Worthing; Mr. Hall, Southsea; Mr. Salisbury, Bournemouth; Rev. A. Storrs, Sandown,; Mr. Pericles Green, Weymouth; Mr. Symonds, Swanage; Mr. Huckett, Dawlish and Teignmouth; Mr. Harris, B.A., Weston-super-Mare; Mr. Moore, Ilfracombe; Mr. Bellingham. Llandudno, Colwyn Bay, Llanfairfechan, &c.; Mr. Greening, Tenby; Messrs. Kirlew, and K. Shaw, Lytham, St. Ann's, Blackpool, &c.; Hon. W. G. Scott, Elie (Fife).

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sunday, August 14, Matt. xiii. 1—17; Monday, August 15, Matt. xiii. 18—30; Tuesday, August 16, Matt. xiii. 31—43; Wednesday, August 17, Matt. xiii. 44—58; Thursday, August 18, Matt. xiv. 1—12; Friday, August 19, Matt. xiv. 13—23; Saturday, August 20, Matt. xiv. 24—36.

Letters to the Editor.

JUDICIAL OATHS.

Dear Sir,—I should be glad if some of your readers will be good enough to reply to the following:—Does a believer in Christ do right or wrong in taking an oath in a County Court for proof of a debt owing to the firm by whom he is employed? I am aware that Scripture states, "Swear not at all," but yet it also says, "Obey those who are in authority over you." This matter has been on my mind, and I should be glad of light upon it.—Yours respectfully, Frederick J. Bantin.

253, Oxford-street, London, W.

"Mr. GALL AND MILLENARIANISM."

Dear Sir,—Under this heading Mr. Forth alleges that I have given the promise contained in Ps. cx. 1, an application which it was never intended to bear; and that it does not contain any pledge that the Father will make Christ's enemies his footstool before returning to the earth again. His first argument is, that "sitting at God's right hand" refers to dignity, not locality; consequently Christ could be sitting at God's right hand, and reigning on earth at the same time. I readily acknowledge that God being a Spirit cannot literally have a right hand; the expression, therefore, must be figurative; but it must be figurative of something, and, as Christ is man as well as God, there must be locality. I might quote many passages on the subject, but two are sufficient. The first is Mark xvi. 19, "So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, He was received up into heaven, and sat down at the right hand of God." Surely that proves that "sitting at the right hand of God," whatever it may be, is a heavenly state of some kind, and in heaven. This is confirmed by Heb. viii. 1, where it is said that our great High Priest "is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens;" proving, not merely that Christ was in heaven, when He sat down, but that the throne on which He sat down was in heaven. When He leaves heaven, therefore, He leaves the Father's throne. The passages which Mr. Forth quotes to prove that the right hand of God is not necessarily in heaven are Luke xix. 27, Matt. xxiv. 51, and Rev. i. 7, which speak of the last judgment. As for 2 Thess. ii. 8, which he quotes in the old version, I have shown in my book that it is a gross mistranslation, and that it does not refer to the Second Coming at all.

Mr. Forth's second charge is that I exclude Christ from all part in the subjugation of his foes, because the Father is said to do this. This assertion is not only incorrect, but is the very opposite of what I have stated. So far from holding that Christ will not overthrow his enemies by executing judgment upon them, my whole argument is based upon the fact that that is his peculiar function.

Making Christ's enemies his footstool must mean either "executing judgment upon them" or "making them loyal and obedient subjects." Millenarians hold that it means "executing judgment." I hold that it means "making them loyal and obedient subjects." First, because it is the Father that is to do it: and as "the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment to the Son," and as the Father's work is peculiarly evangelistic, it cannot be by executing judgment. Second, because I have shown that throughout Scripture "the footstool" is always spoken of in connection with homage, never judgment. Third, Paul in 1 Cor. xv. 25—28 gives an inspired comment on the passage; and he there tells us that the subjection of Christ's enemies is to be a moral and political subjection, the same in kind, though not in degree, as the future subjection of the Son to the Father. In ver. 28 he uses the very same verb for both (hupotassō). Mr. Forth suggests that it is not at all certain that it is really the Father who is to make Christ's enemies his footstool; inasmuch as there are some things, such as creation, the resurrection, &c., which are attributed to both. But Paul emphasises the fact, that it is the Father who is to do it, from which he infers (ver. 27) that "He is excepted who did put all things under Him."

Your respected correspondent thinks that I "unduly press" this passage; but when he reflects that it is five times quoted in the New Testament, besides being referred to in other ten passages, chiefly in connection with the Second Coming, he will see that it is worthy of the prominence that I give to it.—I am, &c., James Gall.

Edinburgh, August 3.

THE CLEANSING SHOWER.

The dust was thick on the garden flowers,
For summer's drought was long;
And the high-road passed near the leafy bowers,
And the stormy winds were strong.

But there fell a shower of refreshing rain,
And the drooping flowers looked up,
And washed their beauty till fair again,
With a full and o'erflowing cup.

My heart is a garden, beside the path,
With many a dust-stained flower;
And in summer's season it often hath
Great need of a cleansing shower.

For the dust will settle as days go by,
And the soul's bright beauty dies;
But a shower of blessing from yonder sky!
And anew its beauties rise.

Lord, send the shower on the sunburnt leaf;
Let the cleansing waters fall;
And the gathered dust of care and grief—
One moment will purge it all!

Showers of blessing—oh, then life's cares,
And worries, and fears, will end;
While the fragrant sweetness each blossom bears,
Will freely to Thee ascend.

William Luff.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

The Church Army.—A branch of the Army has been at work for some weeks in Belfast with marked success.

Dr. H. Grattan Guinness commenced a Gospel mission in the Poplar and Bromley Tabernacle on Sunday last.

Rev. J. F. T. Hallowes' recent mission in Sligo was in every respect successful. Professing Christians were edified, and others were brought to an open declaration that they would serve God in the discipleship of Christ. Christians of all Protestant denominations took part in the meetings, and all reaped much spiritual benefit from the visit of this devoted mission preacher. Mr. Hallowes will conduct a mission in Belfast, Donegall-street Church, in September (11 to 18).

Tent Services.—Evangelistic addresses were given from July 17—29 in the villages of Middleton, Blaxhall, and Stratford St. Andrew, by Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh of the Evangelisation Society, the vicar of each parish attending the meetings. At Stratford the Methodist Chapel was closed on Sunday, the 24th, and in consequence large congregations sat in and around the tent. Rev. A. J. Begbie, Vicar of Framsden, and Dr. Brodie also spoke. The tent has now moved to Ipswich.

Oxtead, Surrey.—A mission has recently been commenced in this picturesque country parish by local friends. Open-air meetings are held both morning and afternoon on Sunday, and in the evening a cottage service is held. Some who before the mission was started were habitual frequenters of the public-house, are now found at the meetings. In these "droppings of the rain" our hearts are filled with gratitude to God for his mercy.

14, High-st., St. Alban's. H. Knight.

Mr. W. E. Bailey, the sailor evangelist, has recently been holding a series of ten days' Gospel meetings at Miss Daniell's Soldiers' Homes, at Aldershot and Colchester, and is proceeding to Chatham for similar work. His testimony has been much blessed, several soldiers in each place having come out decidedly on the Lord's side, and many have also donned the blue ribbon. All who know this brother's hearty, natural, and simple way of testifying and preaching will rejoice in these tokens of the Master's favour. R. B.

For Readers in Scotland.—Mr. G. Kirkham, secretary of the Open-air Mission, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, London, W.C., desires to ascertain whether any friends in Scotland will arrange for him to give addresses on his far-famed picture, "The Broad and Narrow Ways." The fact that he has expounded it in public 817 times in eighteen years may be taken as an indication of its fitness to convey instruction. God has used this lecture to the salvation of souls. Any minister who wishes his people to have an interesting and instructive evening, or any committee in charge of a home mission, would do well to arrange for the lecture.

KESWICK CONVENTION.—The price of special issue for September, of The Life of Faith, containing addresses at the Convention will be 4d., not 2d., as stated in our last.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Westminster Abbey is once more open for "Divine service," after being closed to the public for thirteen weeks in connection with the Jubilee services.

Rev. Glanffrwd Thomas, of the Cathedral at St. Asaph, held an open-air Welsh service, on the common there, on Sunday week, which was attended by some five hundred people.

A correspondent of The Freeman states that in Merionethshire, with a population of 38,133, there are two Episcopal livings of the value of £5842 per annum, the gross congregations only reaching 627.

Rev. William H. Metcalfe has resigned the rectory of Everton, near Retford, as he finds that he holds views which he does not consider in accord with the doctrines of the Anglican Church. Strangely enough he is the patron of the living, and has presented another incumbent.

The Council of the Church Association have appointed Mr. R. Stewart Clough as their organising secretary. The Church Intelligencer says that Mr. Clough is "a veteran in work of this kind, having served as organising secretary to the Spanish and Portuguese Mission for a long series of years."

Bishop Lightfoot, preaching at Lichfield Cathedral recently to upwards of 200 clergymen and students, said that the term "missionaries" fitly describes a large proportion of the English clergy to-day. The sudden massing together of large populations at the great industrial centres causes a practical heathenism, he said, which is the problem with which they have to cope.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. G. S. Barrett, of Norwich, has declined the call to Allen street, Kensington, much to the delight of his present congregation

Rev. Henry Batchelor, formerly of Blackheath, has resigned the pastorate of St. James' Church, Newcastle-on-Tyne, where he had ministered about six years.

It appears from the annual report of the London Missionary Society just issued, that the two Congregational churches that raise most for foreign missions, are Highbury, Bristol (Rev. H. A. Thomas's), over £1000; and Bowdon, Cheshire (Rev. Dr. Mackennal), a little under £1000.

The British Weekly says:—It is commonly reported that Congregational pastorates are much shorter than they used to be. Notwithstanding the difficulties connected with the removal of ministers, considerably more than half the Congregational ministers have changed their sphere of labour within the last ten years.

METHODIST.

A Conference of Methodists from all parts of the world is to be held in New York, on similar lines to the Œcumenical Conference of 1881, held in London.

Mr. Chas. Garrett, who has for some years been an agent of the Manchester Wesleyan Mission, and formerly secretary of the Bristol Y.M.C.A., has decided to devote himself entirely to special evangelistic work.

Rev. Owen Watkins, who was recently sent out to the Transvaal to look after the gold-mine discovered on the property of the Wesleyan Mission at Barberton, has returned and was present at the Conference on Friday week.

A speaker at the recent Wesleyan Conference said he had attended a Diocesan Conference lately held in York, in which it was urged several times that they should guard against Methodism and its doctrine of conversion. And some of the least fair were sons of Methodist preachers.

For the real solution of all delicate and momentous questions, says The Methodist Times, the supreme necessity is a deepening of the spiritual life. Let Scriptural holiness revive among us, and all difficulties will disappear. Christlikeness will both purify our hearts and illuminate our minds. We believe, that we are on the eve of a great revival of religion. Our prospects are growing brighter every month. The decisions of the Wesleyan Conference are full of hope and joy. All signs point to the best and happiest days we have ever known.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Principal Rainy is to reside at Kingussie during the next two months, and will preach in some Highland place of worship every Sunday.

Next year is the jubilee of the Presbyterian Church in Victoria, and a beginning has been made towards raising a thanksgiving fund of £60,000.

Dr. Kerr, the English Presbyterian missionary in Morocco, is successfully carrying on medical work, which has gained for him the esteem of the people.

The Established Church of Scotland are about to establish a Deaconess Home. Miss Alice Maxwell, daughter of Sir William Maxwell, of Cardoness, has been appointed superintendent.

Dr. Oswald Dykes is convener of a sub-committee which has been appointed to draw up a well-considered set of questions in regard to methods of home mission work among the non-churchgoing.

The Established Church of Scotland Foreign Mission Committee have appointed Rev. William S. Sutherland, who is now on their Indian Mission staff, to succeed the late Rev. William Macfarlane at the University Mission, Darjeeling, Bengal.

The Free Church of Scotland contemplates an extension of evangelistic work in India, and towards the outlay Mr. J. Campbell White, of Glasgow, offers £1000, and Principal Miller, of Madras, has promised £600 if the Assembly sends a missionary to the Conj-veram district. Home congregations are being urged to form missionary associations to aid the work.

BAPTIST.

The debt of the Missionary Society has been reduced to about £400; in April it was £2385.

Rev. W. Williams, of Upton Chapel, Lambeth, has completed ten years of his ministry there. Nearly 700 have been added to the church during this pastorate.

Arrangements have been made for the departure for the Congo of Messrs. Harrison and Brown, on the 24th inst., by the African mail steamer Nubia, sailing from Liverpool.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

A new meeting-house has been opened at Saltburn-by-the-Sea.

The returning missionaries from Madagascar are expected home about the 23rd inst. A medical missionary is much needed there.

The calls from all parts of the State of Oregon are, "We want you Friends to come and organise a Friends' church." About 300 members are there now.

The Hobart annual meeting, recently held, was encouraging. Adult schools are needed, and there is some prospect of a quarterly periodical for Australasia.

The use of tobacco among Friends in Canada is likely soon to be dealt with as an offence for Christians. A committee was recently appointed to draw up a minute advising against its use.

Of the Western Indians under the care of American Friends, there appear to be at schools, day and boarding, an average attendance of 400 pupils, and in five meetings 335 members within the limits of Kansas yearly meeting. The year's increase is 100.

The priests in Matamoros, Mexico, are opposing Friends and Presbyterians. Excommunication is hurled against their aiders and abbetors. Yet they thrive. Julia L. Ballenger has 315 names of scholars on her roll. There is a boys' school with 70 pupils, and 80 to 100 Sabbath-school scholars.

SALVATION ARMY.

Doncaster has been much blessed in connection with a visit from Mrs. Booth.

Commissioner Davey, late of Exeter, is about to proceed to Jamaica, to begin Salvation Army work there.

It is proposed to secure a hall in a district of South London, where the Army has at present no work going on.

Australia has sent a reinforcement of fourteen officers to India. They have also remitted £400, with a promise of more.

The War Cry announces that five hundred soldiers are wanted at once to sell that paper in London slums, streets, and suburbs.

The new barracks at Wimbledon will be ready for opening in about a fortnight. The Army have had to preach there in the open-air for the last two and a half years.

A lady in Scotland has resolved to celebrate the Queen's Jubilee by sending a thankoffering of £200 to the Army, to be divided equally between France and India.

We are pushing on into Mormondom, says The War Cry. When Provo City, Utah, was opened the other day, the Mormon high priest billeted the Divisional Officer and another Mormon the captain.

A correspondent says there is a great work to be done in Denmark by the Army, and it is sure of a rich harvest. During the past nine weeks nearly three hundred have been brought to anxiety of soul through the meetings.

The Salvation Army, says Mr. William M. Noble, are doing a real, sterling work in Melbourne, and one cannot speak too highly of the influence they bear. The Rescue Brigades, Homes of Hope, indeed all the various depôts, corps, and associations of the work are in full swing—exercising a wonderful power for good.

Speaking in Georgia recently, Rev. Sam Jones said:—"We have some preachers in Georgia, who do not do much themselves, and consequently do not like the Salvation Army. Some day a member of the Army will be sitting close up to God, while many a 'D.D.' will be away off in a corner feeling very lonesome."

"FALLEN ON SLEEP."

Rev. Thomas Shadforth, rector of Beckley, near Rye.—Mr. John Shields, senior deacon of Kingsfield Congregational Church, Southampton.—Mr. J. W. Webster, of Abbey-road Church, Barrow-in-Furness, one of the founders of the Baptist cause in that town.—Mr. Benson, of Small Heath Congregational Church Birmingham, an earnest worker in the district.—Mr. Thomas Haworth, a prominent member of the Wesleyan body in Accrington.—Dr. Engall, for some years an elder in Rev. Z.B. Woffendale's church at Somers' Town.—Rev. W. Hammond, Primitive Methodist minister of Beccles.—Rev. Samuel Nicholson, of Lisburn, Ireland, for forty-four years an earnest and devoted preacher of the Methodist New Connexion, in the Irish mission field.—Rev. W. F. Satchell, late English chaplain and missionary in Brazil.—Mrs. Louisa Marshall, an earnest worker of the Baptist Church at Watchet.—Rev. W. H. Beever, rector of Llandyssil, Montgomeryshire.—Mr. John Shaw Brown, an elder in the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, and a liberal giver to all its schemes.—Mr. David Guthrie, a member and liberal supporter of the Free Church, Stranraer, N.B.—Rev. Colin Campbell, of the Established Church, Kilninver, N.B.—Dr. Andrew Fergus, a member of Dr. Marcus Dods' congregation, and one of the greatest authorities on sanitary matters in Glasgow.—Mr. William B. Smith, poet and evangelist, and one of the office-bearers of Rev. Dr. Scott's (Free Church) congregation, Saltcoats.—Rev. Peter Maclaren, of Fraserburgh, N.B., a zealous minister of the Established Church.—Rev. Alex. Millar, for a short time minister at Banchory Ternan.—Rev. Robert Best, an ex-president of the Lancashire Congregational Union, and a widely esteemed minister of the denomination.—Mr. Daniel Jones, for more than thirty years a deacon of the Welsh Methodist Church at Aberavron.—Mr. Dan. J. Davies, founder of the Welsh Sunday-school Union for Cardiff.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

In connection with the exhibition at Adelaide, South Australia, a three days' temperance convention is to be held.

The Queensland Temperance Record laments that over ten millions of the peoples' wages are swallowed up in drink.

The Wesleyan Conference had a discussion on the drink trade with native races, and it was resolved that a remonstrance on the subject should be sent from the Conference to the Government of the Transvaal.

A Danish gentleman, writing in The War Cry, says:—"For its size, Denmark is the most drunken country in the world. There are 10,000 licensed houses—one for every 200 people! Thirteen hundred of these are in Copenhagen."

A resolution of the Bombay Government on the Abkari Policy of the Government has been published. One of the prominent ends to be aimed at is "to secure to consumers a supply of raw toddy at low prices." The Bombay Guardian asks if this is the kind of victory that honours Government?

On Sunday night a large open-air gathering, outside Hoxton Hall, was addressed by Mr. J. F. Shorey, of New York, and Mr. William Noble. Mr. Shorey, who is shortly leaving for America, again delivered a pointed and earnest address. Mr. Noble is about to undertake some extended missions in the North of London.

The bar-room has gone from Atlanta for ever, says The Atlanta Constitution, and the people with remarkable unanimity say amen! There is very little drinking in the city. Our experience has demonstrated to us beyond a doubt that a city of 60,000 inhabitants can get along and advance at a solid and constant rate without the liquor-traffic.

Mr. Samuel Smith, M.P., has received another long letter from Rev. Thomas Evans, missionary at Ootacamund, South India, in which Mr. Evans answers the question, "Has the out-still system resulted in the increase of drinking and drunkenness, or not?" He holds that it has, and cites the opinions of numerous observers in different parts of Bengal. He appeals to English people to put a stop to the cause, even if it involve a falling off in the excise revenue.

The Indian Witness is grieved that the Army Tota Abstinence Society has undergone a change since Rev. J. Gelson Gregson left, by substituting "temperance" so called for "total abstinence" as the condition of membership. We believe, adds The Bombay Guardian, this to be a step in the wrong direction, and fear it may be a fatal one. Situated as the soldier is, the only temperance for him is total abstinence.

CONTINENTAL & FOREIGN NOTES.

IT IS A FACT worthy to be observed, says a correspondent, that the religious radical party in France is losing ground both in number and in influence. Many men who were lights of the party some twenty years ago have either adopted another profession or joined the evangelical ranks.

THE CHRISTIAN SOCIETY for the Promotion of Public Morality in Germany is doing good service. It is publishing tracts for young merchants, for artists, for soldiers, for fallen girls, and for parents. It is also urging the importance of some supervision being exercised by the State over the railway bookstalls.

NEW YORK.—Thirteen hundred employés of the Elevated Railroad on the Second and Third Avenue lines in this city have signed an application to the directors of the company for the opening of a branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, and have agreed to pay twenty-five cents a month, provided a branch is opened for their use.

ITALY.—An interesting account of the Genoa Harbour Mission, under the direction of the Rev. Donald Miller, Presbyterian Minister at Genoa, has lately been published. From it I see that 6176 sailors attended during the past year the services held on the missionary boat, The Bethel. The average attendance at the services on Sunday evenings was from 60 to 100—809 availed themselves during the season of the use of the reading-room in the evening. Many captains, who make no profession of religion, speak in praise of the Mission and its good effects on the sailors. Signor Cappellini has left Rome for the north of Italy, where he is indefatigably working, as usual amongst the soldiers in camp.—Record.

JEWS AND THE GOSPEL.—From the report for 1886, issued by M. Fattin, a missionary to the Jews at Kischineff, Bessarabia, we learn that he had had interviews with 131 Jews from several different parts of the Russian Empire. Several of these had been baptized, and 2667 books and tracts had been distributed. An agricultural colony is in formation, where a certain number of these Christian Israelites who are without resources may be able to earn a living. There are, the Report states, symptoms of a remarkable religious movement in all parts among the Jews; they are seeking the truth, and many are very near accepting the Gospel, simply through reading the New Testament. This impression is confirmed by some interesting details in the Réveil d'Israël. This spiritual fermentation is very much the result of the testimony to Jesus Christ borne by Rabbi Lichtenstein, Hungary, as well as to the Kischineff movement.—Journal Religieux.

Notes on Daily Readings.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 14.—ECCLES. IX.

1—6.—One of the mysteries of Providence is here boldly stated. All are at the Divine disposal, and yet to all, the wise as well as the foolish, there is given one common lot. No man knoweth either love or hatred, &c. The R.V. is better: "Whether it be love or hatred, man knoweth it not; all is before them" (ver. 1). No man can tell what favour or disfavour will be shown him in the future: all is in God's hands. We cannot make our own future. "There's a divinity that shapes our ends." This is an evil, &c. (ver. 3). To Solomon the fact that "there is one destiny to the righteous and to the wicked" was a great stumbling-block; and little wonder, since his views of the future life were so dim and dark. Madness.—"In this book madness sometimes denotes unreasoning and obstinate folly in refusing to obey or submit to God." For to him that is joined to all the living there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion.—In life there is hope, consciousness, power of enjoyment, and the possibility of reaping the fruits of one's toil. Whereas, to him, the dead seemed to be altogether cut off from life, knowledge, power, and reward. Better be a dog, the meanest of the beasts in the estimation of an ancient, and live, than be a lion itself and be dead. "Heaven had not yet dawned before the eyes of men, as 'the Father's house of many mansions.'" For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing, &c. (ver. 5). The knowledge that they must die should induce in the living sobriety and gravity of life. It should also lead them to a wise and thankful use of the present with all its good.

7—10.—Go thy way, eat thy bread with joy, &c. —This, at least, is certain, the gloom of death should not cloud the present, which God has given us to enjoy. This passage, taken in all its connections, does not mean that we should drown thoughts of death in dissipation, only that we are to be full of natural activity, and enjoying gratefully the natural joys God has given.

MONDAY, AUGUST 15.—ECCLES. X.

1.—Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour, &c.—A very little folly will spoil a noble name. As "one sinner destroyeth much good," so "a little folly" is strangely powerful for evil. The higher a man's reputation, the more effectively does the indiscretion, or the foolish madness, do its evil work. How often is the life-influence of a true-hearted Christian spoilt through some little fault—some weakness which he despises as too small for very serious notice!

2.—A wise man's heart is at his right hand; but a fool's heart is at his left.—"Right and left are used metaphorically for dexterous and unskilful." The meaning is, "A wise man will use his understanding dexterously; a fool employs his to no purpose, or to a bad one."

3.—A fool...saith to every one that he is a fool. —This may mean that he thinks that he only is wise, and so speaks of all others as fools—a sure sign of folly! Or it may mean that his conceit, forwardness, and loquacity are ever urging him to such self-revelation, as brings him shame. Self-conceit is as certain a mark of folly as humility is of wisdom.

4.—Leave not thy place, &c.—If a foolish ruler be angry with thee, don't throw up your office suddenly in a fit of responsive anger. Restrain yourself, and pacify him by gentleness and wisdom.

8.—Whoso breaketh an hedge, a serpent shall bite him.—Hedge, or fence—a thick, quick-set hedge, or an old wall, perhaps. In either case the haunt of snakes. God's laws—his moral hedges—have serpents, which bite all who break them. "A serpent shall bite them."

TUESDAY, AUGUST 16.—ECCLES. XI.

1—6.—Cast thy bread upon the waters, &c.— "The main object of this passage is to inculcate an unanxious and unwearying beneficence. The 'casting of bread,' and 'the giving of a portion,' point, especially, to deeds of kindness and liberality; whilst the 'sowing' and 'reaping' may be regarded as pointing to well-doing in general. The whole passage seems to be a protest against that despondency and over-anxiety which are so apt to lower our generosity, and to relax our faithfulness in duty. It is ours to sow: the harvest is with God. No doubt we ought to sow as wisely as we can; but we ought to remember that the harvest may be different from what we anticipate. If we begin to calculate too much, we shall calculate badly. Do good in faith. Be venturesome in your beneficence. Be generous without calculation."—J. C. Finlayson.

2.—Give a portion to seven, &c.; for thou knowest not what evil shall be, &c.—"Many men are prevented from doing a great deal of good in the day of their prosperity by their anticipation of a possible day of adversity. Their thought is, 'We must take care of ourselves; we know not what might happen.' 'Just so,' says Ecclesiastes, 'You do not know what will happen; and this is the very reason why you should do your duty now, without over anxiety as to the future.'"—Idem.

4.—He that observeth the wind, &c.—I.e., with inactive anxiety, being always afraid of destructive storms. The lesson is: Be hopefully, boldly industrious both in benevolence and in ordinary duty.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 17.—ECCLES. XII.

5.—The almond tree shall flourish.—The almond tree, covered with its pink-white blossoms is a charming figure of an aged saint. But Jewish writers state that the clause should be, The almond tree will be despised. If so, it will refer to that loss of delight in objects of beauty which frequently comes with the extreme feebleness of great age.

6.—Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, &c.—"In the centre of the house there used to hang a golden lamp suspended by a silver chain...Now light comes from it no more, the chain and the lamp are broken, the light of life has gone out for ever. Just without the house there is the well; over it was the wheel by which the pitcher was lowered...The pitcher will be needed no more, it is wrecked; the wheel can be used no more, it is destroyed. The activities of life exist no longer."—J. H. Cooke.

13.—Let us hear the conclusion, &c.—"If, as I venture to imagine, the book called 'the Song of Solomon' is really a continuation of this, and describes a pilgrim's progress, not in this world to find out what it can give, but in the region of Divine love, to enjoy its rich banquets, then we may account for the frigidity of the counsel. In the following book he enters a new region where, not knowledge, but love is to be the pursuit. Instead of finding but vanity and vexation of spirit, he is filled with satisfaction and joy."—Idem.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18.—CANTICLES I.

1.—The Song of songs, which is Solomon's.— Written probably by Solomon, but certainly under inspiration; whence "a greater than Solomon is here." The text which gives the key both to the meaning and purpose of the book is John iii. 29: "He that hath the Bride is the Bridegroom." Compare also 2 Cor. xi. 2; Eph. v. 25, and similar passages, for "proportionally no book of the Old Testament is so frequently referred to, implicitly or explicitly, in the New Testament as this one."—Hengstenberg. The Bride is Israel, but not "Israel after the flesh," but the people of God, the believing remnant (Zeph. iii. 13; Rom. xi. 5), with whom believers from amongst the Gentiles are now associated as "fellow-heirs, and of the same body" (Eph. iii. 6). In other words, "the Israel of God" (Gal. vi. 16). The Church which Christ loved, and for which He gave Himself (Eph. 5. 25).

2.—Let Him kiss me with the kisses of his mouth: for thy love is better than wine.—"We love Him for the sorrows He has endured, and He loves us who thus prize his love (John xiv. 21). If these affections be not understood as passing between Christ and the saint, if we do not, without reserve, allow this satisfaction in each other, our souls will not enter into much of that communion which the Scripture provides for. We want these affections to make us happy and to set us free. It is a divine method of delivering us from the tyranny of carnal or worldly desires."—J. G. Bellett.

4.—Draw me...the King hath brought me into his chambers.—See a prayer for this drawing (Eph. i. 17), and then the bringing in to the King's chambers (Eph. i. 20—ii. 7).

5.—I am black, but comely.—Black by nature, comely by grace, "perfect through my comeliness which I had put upon thee" (Ezek. xvi. 14).

12.—While the King sitteth at his table, my spikenard sendeth forth its fragrance (R.V.).— The spiritual lesson will appear by comparing John xiv. 23 and Rev. iii. 20. So long as the heart has such a guest, the graces of the Christian may well emit their fragrance.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 19.—CANTICLES II.

1.—I am a rose of Sharon, a lily of the valley (R.V.).—"The district intended by Sharon is one of which Eusebius and Jerome speak, between Tabor and the lake of Tiberias, for Shulamith is a Galilean, she calls herself a flower from the neighbourhood of Nazareth."—Delitzsch.

2.—As the lily among thorns.—Thorns are the emblem of the children of this world. The curse under which they lie, and their repelling attitude towards all overtures from God being thus described; see 2 Sam. xxiii. 6, 7.

3.—As the apple tree.—"The word here rendered 'apple tree' is mentioned four times in the Song, and again Prov. xxv. 11, and Joel i. 12. The Targum identifies it with the citron, of which Virgil praises the fragrance, the tenacity, and density of its foliage, and the reviving, healing power of its fruit."—S. C.

I sat down under his shadow with great delight. —Such is the sin-convinced sinner's reason for coming to Christ, the shade or protection which He affords from the intolerable rays of God's justice. But these very rays ripen the fruit found in Christ to refresh the weary soul.

8.—The voice of my Beloved! behold He cometh. —Delitzsch and others who attach importance to the dramatic structure of the book find here the beginning of the Second Act. Six Acts are thus arranged, i.—ii. 7, ii. 8—iii. 5, iii. 6— v. 1, v. 2—vi. 9, vi. 10—viii. 4, viii. 5—14. These may, however, be regarded as separate Idyls.

10.—Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away.—"The Spirit of Christ invites his saint into the liberty of the present time. All the darker and colder age is passed. All that dispensation which kept the soul in bondage and fear is over. 'The darkness is past and the true light now shineth.'"—J. G. Bellett.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 20.—CANTICLES III.

1.—By night on my bed I sought Him...but I found Him not.—In ver. 14 of last chapter, "The Beloved has asked to see her countenance, and hear her voice, and the Bride answers... insinuating the vineyard duties imposed on her by her brethren (i. 6.) which prevent her from immediately joining Him." — S. C. This delay in responding to his invitation induces the slothful slumber from which she now rises to find Him, who (as in v. 6) "had withdrawn Himself." If Christ's call to communion with Him in heavenly places be refused, even on the ground of vineyard duties, it may sink the soul into slumber from which it may not be so easy to rise to find Him, but let ver. 5 encourage those who are searching for Him "with all their heart" (Jer. xxix. 13).

5.—Nor awake my love, till He please.—This charge to the daughters of Jesusalem marks the close of an act or idyl; it occurs besides at ii. 7 and viii. 4. It should be, "Nor awake love till it please" (so R.V.), "that love should not be awakened out of its sweet dream."—Delitzsch.

6.—Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness?—The commencement of a new idyl or act, the subject of which "is the Bride's entry into the City of David, and her marriage there with the King. The Christian Fathers make most things here refer to the espousals of the Church with Christ in his death and resurrection."—S. C.

11.—The crown wherewith his mother crowned Him in the day of his espousals.—The Jewish Church, "of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came" (see Rev. xii. 5), crowned Him with a crown of thorns, fitting emblem of the 'curse' which He was then "made for us" (Gal. iii. 13).

Appeals.

Lavender Bags.—Mrs. Stanley Puckle, The Hollonds, Langton, Tunbridge Wells, Kent, appeals for lavender with which to fill bags to be sent to India, Burmah, Gibraltar, and other places to sick soldiers in hospital. A text is attached to each bag.

Southsea, Portsmouth.—Mr. John Denning, Ebenezer Cottage, Inglis-road, Southsea, Hants., says, "During the past three years we have desired to build a new mission hall for Christian work at Southsea. About a month ago we invited tenders for the erection of the same, and it is now in course of erection. The cost of the whole will be about £880, and we have received towards this sum, in donations and promises, over £700. To open it free of debt, which we are most desirous to do, we shall need about £180."

Boys' Home, Southwark.—During the last few weeks we have been much embarrassed by poverty. Of late our receipts have day by day dwindled down to almost nil. We have yet two most trying holiday months before us, and I am most anxious that we should not drift into serious debt, with its hampering, wearying anxieties. Will you kindly consider our perplexities at this season, and try to help us to tide over our difficulties, so that our Homes may still be a boon and blessing to thousands of waifs and strays? Yours faithfully, J. W. C. Fegan, 95, Southwark-street, S.E.

HOP PICKERS.—By means of Gospel books, meetings, free teas, gifts of old garments, and personal conversation, we hope to carry on our mission, as in former years, amongst the hop pickers in these parts during September. We shall be grateful for help from your readers again. Parcels of clothing, &c., may be sent viâ Wrotham, London, Chatham and Dover Railway.

Plaxtol, Sevenoaks. Geo. Gillingham.

ULSTER SOCIETY FOR DEAF, DUMB, AND BLIND.—The annual report of this excellent non-sectarian Society is issued, and shows that during the past year 121 pupils, of whom 24 were blind and the remainder deaf and dumb, received training in the Institution. The children are well taught in Scripture, English history, geography, &c., and are also instructed in some trade by which they will be able to support themselves in after life.

THE OTHER SIDE.—A police official, writing in The Pall Mall Gazette as to the mistake in the Cass case, says:—"Often an officer has apprehended women on the first occasion of public wrong doing, and in many instances in this way has been instrumental in saving them from ruin. If they are not caught on their first appearance in the streets their ruin is inevitable. They are rarely molested afterwards, for they take care to give the police no cause for arresting them; and a good constable, ever ready to prevent crime, seeks to nip it in the bud."

RESCUE WORK IN DUBLIN.—The rescue work of our Vigilance Committee has grown so much in the last three months, it has been found necessary to have a "Residence" on the family principle, for those who are rescued. A lady who has been working for the past twelve months amongst our rescued girls, has offered her services to reside with the girls, thus bringing them into a sympathetic Christian influence. From past results, we look forward to a good work being done among our fallen sisters, by this means. To carry out out our intentions we need help from our English friends. Yours faithfully.

58, Lower Gardiner-st., Dublin. Russell Dowse.

"ARETHUSA" AND "CHICHESTER" BOYS.—In our issue of the 29th ult. we referred to Mr. W. Williams as the secretary of the Reformatory and Refuge Union. It should have been "National Refuges for Homeless and Destitute Children"—the Institution so many years associated with labours of the "Good Earl," Lord Shaftesbury. We are glad to hear that Lord Jersey, who has succeeded Lord Shaftesbury in the honourable post of President of these refuges and ships, is taking great personal interest in the inmates of the several branches of the Society, and occasionally provides them with a day's outing at his country-seat at Osterley-park.

SUNDAY POSTAL LABOUR.—The Commons' Committee on this subject have met to consider its report, and it is understood that two recommendations were adopted. One is to the effect that in provincial towns a special meeting shall be called to consider the question of the Sunday delivery of letters, and that a majority of two-thirds of those present, if they constitute a majority of the whole body, shall be deemed to settle the matter. In rural districts the question will be decided by a majority of two-thirds of the ratepayers, a proviso being that in villages where the delivery of letters is discontinued, the letters shall continue to be distributed at the post-office window.

Notices.

Will Mr. G. E. Wilder please send us his address.

Magic Lantern.—Pastor G. Pons, "Chiesa Valdese, San Tommaso, Naples," would be glad if any Christian friend could direct him where to obtain, at the lowest price, a magic lantern with slides of the Pilgrim's Progress, views in the Holy Land, &c.

Communications Received with Thanks.—E.F.H. J.H. F.J.B. E.A.D. A.N. W.K.C. J.E.L. S.C.J. H.K. C.M. J.L. M.B.G. C.R.H. A.L.W. G.H.M. M.C.W. W.F.H. W.L. C.T. T.T. J.S. W.A. J.G. R.D.F. S.J.C. A.M. A.B. J.J.P. N.L.B. T.R.P. J.H.G. G.K. H.V. J.W.B. J.H.I. W.K. F.H.W. A.H. W.H. W.A.B. S.A. J.G.M. A.Y. E.S. G.G. D.S. E.J.W. T.M. J.D. T.W.B. J.T.B. W.F. C.M.M. A.J.B. R.C. J.T.H. J.W.A. J.B. E.A.S. D.P.L.H. Mrs. F. A.A.H. J.L.S. J.J.B. J.E.M. N.J.R. S.B. H.B.W. M.B. C.A.C. H.M.B. J.C.W.

Applicants for Tracts.—A. Clark, Evangelist, Park View, Tonbridge; Miss Edwards, care of Mr. R. W. Jones, draper, Criccieth, North Wales; Jennie Haigh, Evangelist, 63, Wylam-street, Gateshead; A. Wilson, 65, Cromwell-road, Peterborough; T. Pearce, Gospel Hall, East Ferry-road, Poplar, E. (English and Norwegian); G. Beale, Melbourn-street, Royston, Cambs.; A. Solomon, 28, Falkland-road, Kentish Town, London, N.W.; M. A. Edmunds, The Priory, Abergavenny, Mon.; L. Wareham, Castle-street, Bampton, Devon; H. C. Keen, 1, Wellesley-place, Maldon-road, Kentish Town, London, N.W.; E. Gladman, 40, Buross-street, Commercial-road, London, E.: E. E. Tresidder, 53, Redman's-road, Stepney, E.; Mrs. Fifield, Pirbright, Woking (Soldiers); N. C. MacDonald, Doune Cottage, Carloway, Stornoway, N.B. (Gaelic); Mrs. Wheeler, 28, Salop-street, Dudley; United Christian Mission, Chapel-street, Goole; E. Peters, High-street, Stevenage, Herts; W. Barrett, 1, Orchard-lane, Sittingbourne; W. A. Derby, 96, Lambeth-road, Liverpool, N.; J. Savage, 30, Waterloo-road, Runcorn, Cheshire; E. H. Arnot, 2, Matilda-road, Pollokshields, Glasgow; L. Lowrison, 5, Thornton-buildings, Selby; N. J. Raven, 6, Castle-street, Douglas, Isle of Man.—The Weekly Tract Society is just now making special grants of its tracts at one-third of the published price. Application should be made to the Manager of the Weekly Tract Society, 62, Paternoster-row, London.

[As it is found that infidels and others send tracts to the persons whose names are inserted here, it is most important that all books and papers received should be carefully read before being given away.]

Forthcoming Meetings.

The Evangelisation Society will send evangelists to any part of England, Scotland, and Wales on due notice. Hon. Sec., 21, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.

The Irish Evangelisation Society will send evangelists to any part of Ireland on due notice. Apply to Mr. J. Barton, Hon. Sec., Dundalk, Ireland.

The Church Army will send evangelists (working-men) to any clergyman on due notice, for short or long missions. Hon. Sec., 128 and 130, Edgware-road, W.

The Metropolitan Tabernacle Evangelists' Association will send lay preachers and evangelists to any chapel or hall of any evangelical denomination in London. Hon. Sec., 121, Camberwell New-road, S.E.

Y.M.C.A., New Metal Exchange, Whittington-avenue, E.C.—Gospel services at Bermondsey, Sundays, 7 p.m., and Thursdays, 8 p.m. Mission work at Whitechapel, Limehouse, Bermondsey, Canning Town, &c.

Conference Hall and Y.M.C.A., Stratford, E.—Sunday, August 14, 3 and 7 p.m., Mr. John Bennett. Young Men's Bible-reading, Tuesdays. 8.15 p.m. Missionary Prayer-meeting, Mondays, 8.30 p.m. Tract Society, Wednesdays, 8.30 p.m.

Conference Hall, Mildmay-park, N.—Sundays in August 3.30 and 7, Mr. Ned Wright.

Mr. Shuldham Henry at St. George's Hall, Langham-place, during August; Sundays, 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Wednesdays, 8 p.m. at Burlington Hall, Savile-row.

Edinburgh Castle, Limehouse, E.—Sunday, Aug 14, 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., Mr. H. Grattan Guinness; 3 p.m., Rev. Henry Bright.

Great Assembly Hall, Mile-end-rd., E.—Sun., Aug. 14, 11 a m., 6 30 p.m., and week nights at 8, Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh.

Coming Conferences.—Y.M.C.A. Dundee, September 6—9. Perth, September 13—15. Wakefield, September 20—22. Salisbury, September 27—30. Leamington, October 18—20.

Home of Industry, 60, Commercial-street, Spitalfields, E.—Monthly meeting for Christian workers, Wednesday, August 17; tea at 6, meeting at 7. Dr. McKilliam will give an address on "The Hope of Israel." A party of young men leaving shortly for China will be present. A party of boys leaving the same evening for Canada will be present to say farewell.

DRUMMOND'S TRACT DEPOT, STIRLING.—The foundation-stone of the new and much larger depôt, which it has been found necessary to build, was laid on Saturday last, by Mr. George Williams, of London.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on a tent mission and beach services at Newquay, Cornwall, to 21st inst., conducted by Mr. John Lomas, of Falmouth.——For blessing on special services at the Riding-school, Torquay, being conducted by Mr. John Elliott.

Subscriptions Received by Messrs. Morgan & Scott to Monday, August 8, 1887.

 We would respectfully urge all our friends, when remitting to us, to make Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders payable to Morgan & Scott, and to cross them "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss of same.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders, not by stamps.

	£	s.	d.
"W.D.A.F."—Please send full address.
Day in the Country—W.F.K. £1; A.K. £1 1s.; R.G.W.R. £2; C.S. 1s.; A.M.H. £1 1s.; T.B.N. 5s.; Worthing, 10s.; A.W.W.J. 2s. 6d.; Hackney, 5s.; J.M.R.H. £1; S.M.G. 1s.; A.L. 5s.; L.E.S. £1; O'C. £2; Capt. B. 7s. 6d; Maggie, 4s. 6d.; Knutsford, 7s. 6d.; T.S.M. 2s. 6d.; A.D.A. 10s.	12	3	6
Pastor Rodriguez's Work, Spain (Vilabertram)—Mrs. K.	1	1	0
Grat. Circ. of The Christian—C.J.A.	0	0	6
Fresh Air Mission—Miss A.B.	0	15	0
N. E. London Gospel Mission (Holiday Home)—A.M.H.	1	1	0
Shoreditch Mission (Mr. Knowles)—S.S.S.	1	0	0
Spitalfields Gospel Mission—S.S.S.	1	0	0
Congo Mission (Rev. H. G. Guinness)—Samuel, £5; Knutsford, 10s.	5	10	0
Suppression of Opium Traffic with China—J.F.B.T. 10s.; (Travelling Agent) E.J.D. 10s.; F.J.B. £2 2s.; W.B. £5; W.H. £1; W.S.S. £1	10	2	0
Dr. Barnardo's Homes—L.H. 2s. 6d.; S.S.S. £1; J.O. £1; Widow's Mite, 2s. 6d.; D. McL. £5; O. £1; X.Y.Z. £1 1s. 6d.; H.G.M. £2; M.C. £4 5s. 9d.; O'C. £3; D.L.O. £10; M.A.K. £1; C.J.H.B. £1; A.E.H. £1	31	12	3
Cairo Mission (Miss Whately)—Samuel	5	0	0
Christian Vernacular Educational Soc., India—H.M.A.S.	1	1	0
McAll Mission, Paris—Samuel	5	0	0
Miss de Broen's Work, Paris—Samuel, £5; O'C. £2	7	0	0
Famine in Central Turkey—B.W.S. 5s.; Three Widows, 5s. 6d.	0	10	6
St. Giles' Christian Mission—L.H. 2s. 6d.; D. McL. £5; X.Y.Z. £1 10s.	6	12	6
Miss Sharman's Orphans' Home—T.O. 5s.; Hackney, 5s.	0	10	0
Poor Children's Dinners—Hackney	0	5	0
Mr. Eoll's Work, Port Said—L.E.S.	2	0	0
Mr. Fegan's Homes—O'C.	3	0	0
Bridge of Hope, Ratcliff—E.M.S. 5s.; M.A.K. 10s.	0	15	0
Mildmay Msn. to Jews—L.H. 2s. 6d.; Samuel, £5; O. £2	7	2	6
Destitute Children's Dinner Society—Maggie	0	3	0
George-yard Ragged School—Hackney, 5s.; (Excursion—L.L. 2s. 6d.; G.H. 5s.	0	12	6
Mr. Rabinowitz's Work—J.T.McF.	10	0	0
Home of Industry—O. £2; L.E.S. £2	4	0	0
Scripture Readers' Society, Ireland—A.H.H.	1	0	0
China Inland Mission—L.H. 2s. 6d.; Mrs. F. (Ayrshire), 10s.; Speranza, 10s.; C.J.H.B. £1; Knutsford, 10s.; V.W. £1 10s.; Senots, £1 10s.; H. 2s.	5	14	6
Indian Female Normal School—H.M.A.S.	1	1	0
Tower Hamlets Mission—D. McL.	2	0	0
Samaritan Free Hospital for Women and Children—D. McL.	1	0	0
Indigent Blind Visiting Society—D. McL.	1	0	0
Friendless & Fallen—Speranza	0	5	0
Sea Shell Mission—Anon., Box of Shells.
Msn. Deep Sea Fishermen—S.S.S.	2	0	0
Cow Cross Mission—Maggie	0	3	6
Battersea Tabernacle—D. McL.	1	0	0
London Assn. Moravian Mission—Knutsford	0	10	0
Home for Working Boys (Hon. T. H. W. Pelham)—D. McL.	2	0	0
Aged Pilgrims' Friend Society—D. McL.	1	0	0
Working-men's Mission, New-cut—D. McL.	2	0	0
Destn. E. London (Rev. W. E. Hurndall)—S.S.S.	2	0	0
Railway Mission—D. McL.	2	0	0
Widows of Men lost in "Breeze"—D. McL.	3	0	0
Christian Colportage Association—D. McL. £1; H.M.A.S. 10s.	1	10	0
Railway Benevolent Institute—D. McL.	1	0	0
Miss Daniell's Work, Aldershot—D. McL.	2	0	0
Self Help Emigration Society—D. McL.	1	0	0
London Missionary Society—H.M.A.S.	1	1	0
London City Mission—H.M.A.S.	1	1	0
Thames Church Mission—H.M.A.S.	1	1	0
South American Missionary Society—H.M.A.S.	1	1	0
Wesleyan Methodist Missionary Society—H.M.A.S.	1	1	0
Church Parochial Missionary Society—H.M.A.S.	1	1	0
Society for Propagation of Gospel in Foreign Parts—H.M.A.S.	1	1	0
Mission to Kabyles—V.W.	1	10	0
Mildmay Mission—A.E.H.	1	0	0
Rescue Work, Poplar (Mrs. Wilkes)—A.E.H.	1	0	0
	£161	18	3

[Advertisements.]

Mr. Fegan's Homes.—C.R.S. £2.

London Samaritan Society (Convalescent Homes at Sandgate and Bournemouth)—Miss B. 2s. 6d.; Mrs. B. 15s. 6d.; Rev. E. B. 4s. 6d.; The Misses H. 5s.

Hop-pickers' Mission, Alton, Hants (S. Chinn).—H.M. £5.

CASTLE YARD MISSION.

Established Eighty - Five Years.

President—Rev. Newman Hall, LL.B.

HELP URGENTLY SOLICITED towards Expenses of giving OVER 500 POOR CHILDREN a DAY IN THE COUNTRY, with GOOD DINNER AND TEA.

Friends now enjoying summer holidays,

PLEASE REMEMBER

these poor little ones pent up in the courts and alleys of Southwark.

Contributions will be very gratefully received and acknowledged by Messrs. Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.; Treasurer, Rev. Robert Tuck, B.A., 23, Thornford - road, Lewisham - park, S E.; Bankers, London & Westminster, St. James's-square, S.W., Account, "Castle-yard Mission."

HOLIDAY HOMES & COUNTRY COTTAGES

in connection with the

RAGGED SCHOOL UNION.

No less than 1,100 pale-faced ailing children from the London Ragged Schools and Missions enjoyed a whole fortnight in the country last year.

HELP is earnestly SOLICITED that this number may be extended this season.

Already the four Homes are full of children, and their comrades by the hundred are waiting to follow them.

13, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C. JOHN KIRK, Sec.

JUST PUBLISHED. Cloth, Gilt Edges, 3s.

RINALPHO'S DREAM

— A POEM —

In which the approaches of Anglican Ritualism from ROME to ENGLAND and the manner of their reception by this country are faithfully described.

By WILLIAM MARSHALL,

Author of "Dangers and Defences of English Protestantism."

John Kensit, Publisher, 18, Paternoster-row.

PLAIN QUESTIONS.

A SERIES OF POINTED APPEALS

IN THE VERY WORDS OF SCRIPTURE.

Neatly Printed in Chocolate Ink, on Tinted Paper.

SUITABLE FOR GENERAL DISTRIBUTION.

And also for Enclosing in Letters.

2s. 6d. per Thousand.

The Series comprises the following Questions.

1. "WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?"
2. "IS IT WELL WITH THEE?"
3. "WHAT SHALL I DO WITH JESUS?"
4. "HOW SHALL WE ESCAPE?"
5. "WHAT SHALL IT PROFIT?"
6. "WHY WILL YE DIE?"
7. "WHAT HAST THOU DONE?"
8. "WHEN WILT THOU RETURN?"
9. "DOST THOU BELIEVE?"
10. "WHEN WILL YE BE WISE?"
11. "HOW SHOULD WE LIVE?"
12. "WHAT IS YOUR LIFE?"
13. "IS IT NOTHING TO YOU?"
14. "WHERE ART THOU?
15. "WHITHER GOEST THOU?"
16. "WHAT SHALL WE DO?"

⁂ These "PLAIN QUESTIONS" will be found very suitable for GIVING AWAY AS TRACTS, or for ENCLOSING IN LETTERS. As nearly the whole of each Tract is in the EXACT WORDS OF SCRIPTURE, any of the Series can be circulated with great confidence by any who desire to spread the knowledge of the Gospel. Further—the price of the Tractates is so moderate that they are within the reach of almost all who are interested in Tract Distribution or House-to-House Visitation.

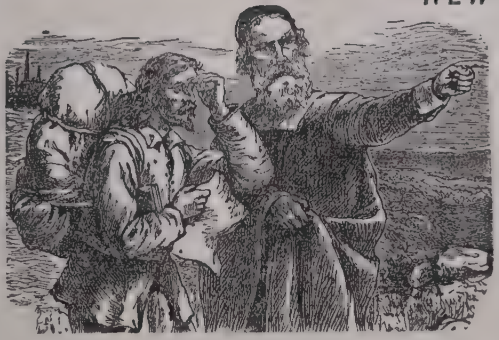
Assorted Packets of 150 Tracts, 6d.;
1,000 Tracts, either assorted or of any separate Number, 2s. 6d.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

"THE HERALD OF MERCY," published monthly at One Halfpenny. Specimen copy sent, post free, on application to the publishers, Messrs. Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.

BUNYAN'S PILGRIM'S PROGRESS.

NEW EDITION, ILLUSTRATED. 6D.



EVANGELIST POINTING THE WAY.

"By far the best of all the cheap editions of 'The Pilgrim's Progress' that we have seen is one issued this week by Messrs. Morgan & Scott. Care has been bestowed upon the revision, the text having been early editions; a point all the more worthy of grateful recognition when we see so many conscienceless reprints, abounding in old and new blunders, tumbled into the market. The type is new, leaded, and very readable; and the book, printed on superior paper, and adorned with upwards of a dozen original illustrations."
The Christian Leader.

☞ In ordering it is necessary to specify "MORGAN & SCOTT'S Edition."

MORGAN & SCOTT'S EDITION.

BUNYAN'S PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

New Edition, Illustrated.
Fancy Boards, Cloth Back, 1s.

"This CHEAP EDITION of A BOOK THAT WILL NEVER WEAR OUT will be heartily welcomed by the people generally."
Christian Commonwealth, Dec. 2, 1886.

MORGAN & SCOTT'S EDITION.

BUNYAN'S PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

New Edition, Illustrated.
In Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

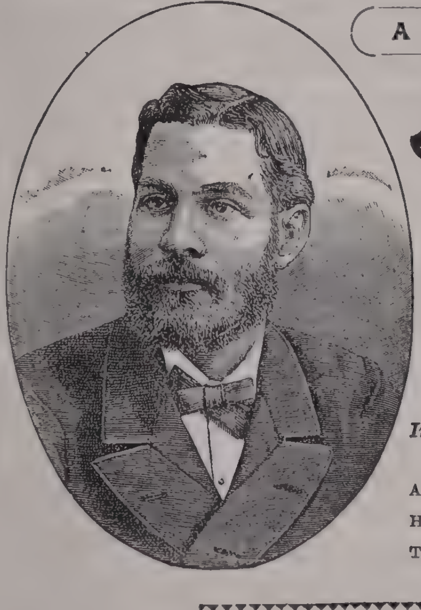
"This is by far the BEST of all the CHEAP EDITIONS."
Christian Leader, Dec. 23, 1886.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings. And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG MEN.



JAMES SCOTT:

A Labourer for God.

BY

REV. ANDREW A. BONAR, D.D.,

Author of
"Memoir of Rev. R. M. McCheyne,"
"A Commentary on Leviticus," &c., &c.

With PORTRAIT
AND
Two other ILLUSTRATIONS.

In Tinted Covers, 1/-; Cloth Limp, 1/6; Cloth Boards, 2/6.

CONTENTS.

A Century of Revival Work in Glasgow.
How a Special Instrument was Prepared.
The Labourer in the Midst of his Work.
The Work going on.
The Labourer called aside
The Labourer in the sunset of his short day.
Appendix.

"In 'James Scott, a Labourer for God,' Dr. A. Bonar finds a theme almost as congenial to his pen as Robert Murray McCheyne. Glasgow, the theatre of much evangelistic effort of the best kind, has known no more devoted or successful labourer among her lowliest than the subject of this memoir. A greater testimony to the worth of this ardent young spirit than Mr. Moody's friendship and commendation is the fact that no fewer than 30,000 people lined the streets on the day of his funeral, while the procession alone numbered 6,000. The memoir is in every way an inspiration to the love of man and the service of God."
Nonconformist and Independent, Feb. 3, 1887.

"From Messrs. Morgan & Scott we have a touching tribute to one who filled up a short life with bright and blessed service. The volume is entitled, 'James Scott, a Labourer for God,' and is from the loving pen of Dr. Andrew Bonar. Mr. Scott was converted through the instrumentality of a devoted 'elder,' Mr. John Muir, of Glasgow, who visited him as a 'seat-holder,' and unfolded to him the way of life. A rich encouragement this to the 'elders of the church' to use their office well! Who shall tell how many James Scotts are just ripe for such influence as theirs?"—British Messenger.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; Edinburgh and Glasgow: J. MENZIES & CO.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

GEORGE YARD RAGGED SCHOOLS, &c., Whitechapel, E.

GEORGE HOLLAND thankfully acknowledges receiving box of Clothing from M. A. R.; Clothing, Anonymous.

The Infant Day Nursery. Week-day, Sunday, and Evening Schools for Ragged Children. Band of Hope. Toy Classes. Children's Services. Classes and Meetings for Elder Girls and Young Women. Mutual Industrial Classes for Lads. Men's Bible Classes. Mothers' Meetings. Women's Bible Classes. Mission to Inebriate Women. Room to room visitation. Open-air Services. Temperance Meetings. Evangelistic Services. Men, Women, Children, Mothers and their Babes sent away for change of air, &c. And other Missionary agencies in operation.

Friends are invited to visit the Institution any day but Saturday.

Post-office Orders should be made payable at 66, High-street, Whitechapel, E. Letters and Parcels should be addressed to GEORGE HOLLAND, The Ragged Schools, George Yard, High-street, Whitechapel, London, E.

"DAY IN THE COUNTRY,"

George-yard Ragged Schools, &c.

Received with much thankfulness from "Ilkley," 5s.; J. E. H., £2 10s.; E. E., 2s. 6d.—GEORGE HOLLAND, George Yard Ragged Schools, High-street, Whitechapel, E.

THE BENEVOLENT OR STRANGERS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

Treasurer, Ald. Sir R. N. Fowler, Bart., M.P.
J. H. Anderson, Esq., Chairman.
Clarence Smith, Esq., J.P., Hon. Secretary.

For 101 years this Institution has visited and relieved the destitute sick, by an entirely unpaid agency, consisting of over 240 Christian men and women.

Funds are urgently needed.

The Committee will be thankful for the Society being remembered in the testamentary arrangements of the benevolent.—Office of the Society, 52, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

ANXIETY OF SOUL. — Any to whom the way of salvation is not clear, are invited to communicate, either personally or by letter, to W. S., care of Evangelistic Secretary, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

CONVALESCENT HOMES, at Bournemouth and Sandgate.—For particulars apply to Mr. JOHN JAMES JONES, Director of the London Samaritan Society, 98, High-street, Homerton, London, E.

DAY IN COUNTRY.—Voluntary Workers, Gee-street Mission, Goswell-road, solicit Funds to take poor Adults and Children to Epping Forest.—Donations thankfully received for HENRY RUDGLEY, Hon. Superintendent, second floor, 82, Wood-street, Cheapside; Treasurer, ROBERT BAXTER, Esq., 6, Victoria-street, Westminster. Bankers, Barclay Bevan.

ZENANA MEDICAL COLLEGE, 58, St. George's-road, S.W.—The Committee can give two partially free Scholarships to Ladies wishing to become Medical Missionaries. Board, residence, instruction included. Next term opens September 22.—Address the HON. SEC.

PERTH CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE. —The Annual Conference will (D.V.) be held in the City Hall, Perth, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, September 13, 14, and 15. Forenoon Meeting at 11. Afternoon 2, and Evening at 7 o'clock. Information regarding lodging, &c., will be furnished by Mr. CHRISTIE, Bookseller, St. John-street.

EVANGELICAL HOSPITAL for Spezia and District.—Funds are urgently needed for the foundation of above. The annual expenses will amount to about £400. Suitable premises have already been secured.—Donations will be thankfully received and acknowledged by Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT; or by the Director, Mr. A. A. COATES, of Grand Hotel Royal, Spezia, Italy.

NOON-DAY PRAYER-MEETING, Brighton, is held in the Assembly-room, ground-floor of the Y.M.C.A., 55, Old Steine.

EVANGELICAL MISSION TO ISRAEL, JERUSALEM.—We are very thankful to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN who have sent us help, and if those friends would favour us with their names and addresses we would send them our monthly journal, The Messiah's Witness, which gives a statement of the Lord's work in Jerusalem. Kindly send to Mr. R. Morgan, 138, Clifden-road, Clapton, E.—D. C. JOSEPH.

Educational.

HOME SCHOOL for Girls. Limited number of Boarders. Good education, based on Bible teaching, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness." Pupils prepared for the various Exams. Kindergarten for Juniors. Terms inclusive. Recommended by R. C. Morgan and parents of pupils.—Mrs. SILVESTER, Clarence House, Pellatt-grove, Wood Green.

SUPERIOR EDUCATION for young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. WATKINS, F.S.Sc., Dyreham College, North Finchley.—Pupils prepared for public examinations. Fees, including music, French, and drawing, 14 and 16 guineas per term, prepaid.

"I have the greatest pleasure in recommending Mrs. Watkins' School to parents seeking a good Christian home and a high-class education for their daughters. The School is situated in a fine healthy neighbourhood."—Josiah Spiers, Children's Special Service Mission.

HEALTH AND EDUCATION among the Surrey hills. Christian home-life with carefully superintended studies.—Misses SHRIMPTON & GERDS, Chertsey House, Redhill.

MR. E. J. KENNEDY, OF EXETER HALL, can highly recommend an educational Home for young Ladies, where only a few are received, and where the children have individual care and guidance, and all the comforts of a superior home, combined with excellent education. References to Judge Gates, Q.C., General Elder, and other parents of pupils.—D. C. L., Farley's Library, FitzJohn's Parade, Hampstead, N.W.

MORAVIAN LADIES' SCHOOL, St. Peter's, Bedford.—Accommodation for a limited number of Boarders and Day Pupils. Pupils prepared for Cambridge Local Examinations. For terms and all particulars, apply to

Miss SEIFFERTH, Principal.

BELLE VUE, AMBLESIDE.—Good School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. FLEMING. Healthy and beautiful situation; large rooms, garden, tennis. Careful Christian training, and thorough teaching. Cambridge Examinations. Resident foreign and English governesses. Masters. 50 to 60 guineas. Reduced terms for children under 12.

HIGH-CLASS CHRISTIAN SCHOOL for the Daughters of Gentlemen. — Miss PENN receives a limited number of pupils. Efficient resident governesses and visiting masters. Individual Christian influence. Home comforts. Large house and garden. Entire charge taken of pupils from abroad. Languages and music specialities. Young Ladies are also received to pursue certain studies only, or to take lessons in dressmaking, cooking, &c.

St. John's de Ocklynge, Eastbourne.

MODENA KINDERGARTEN TRAINING COLLEGE, Peckham Rye, London, S.E. Premium, forty guineas.—For particulars apply to the Principal, Miss E. M. LOTT.

BRIGHTON.—2, Sussex-square.— Miss GOULTY'S Educational Home for Young Ladies. Terms vary according to the individual requirements, and the accomplishments needed. The Rev. J. B. Figgis, of Brighton, is kindly willing to bear his testimony to the School. Pupils can prepare for the Cambridge Examinations.

WIESBADEN.—LADIES' SCHOOL.— Miss BEYERHAUS is now in England, and will escort pupils in September.

The Manor House, Oaken, near Wolverhampton.

SCHOOL FOR THE DAUGHTERS OF GENTLEMEN.

Prebendary A. writes:—I have great pleasure in bearing testimony to the Christian character and general qualifications of Principal. I make frequent visits to the school.

Mrs. C. H. (daughters were pupils):—Parents seeking thorough religious training for their daughters can, with every confidence, commit them to the care of Principal, with the assurance their highest welfare will be sought.

Rev. F. D., The Chaplaincy:—I have known Principal for many years, and can with implicit confidence introduce parents and guardians seeking for their daughters or wards highest educational advantages, based on practical Christianity.

C. B., Esq.:—I am much gratified with the progress made by my daughters. Thoroughness is a marked characteristic throughout all arrangements. The moral influence leaves nothing to be desired.

Rev. S. T., The Vicarage, desires to bear testimony to the worth of —— as an educational home. The excellence consists in the decidedly religious influence exercised, thoroughness of secular education, &c.

Dr. and Mrs. B—— feel they can but inadequately express their feelings of gratitude to —— for watchful, loving training of their niece. They will be gratified to be used as referees.

A Grateful Parent (as no formal testimonial) desires to bear testimony to the influence exerted over dear girls at the most important period of their life's history.—PRINCIPAL (120), care of Housekeeper, 13, Rose-street, Newgate-street, E.C.

ILFRACOMBE, 2, Oxford-park.— Home School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. RICHARD WARE. Careful Christian training and thorough teaching. Motherly care taken of delicate children. Good references.

MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE for Young Ladies, Larkbeare, Exeter, Devon.—Residents only received. Christian parents of high social position at home and abroad are referees. The buildings are considered the most complete of any private school in England.

EDUCATIONAL ESTABLISHMENT for Young Ladies at Bells Vue, Corseaux sur Vevey, Switzerland.—Mlle. ALIDA CHATELAIN, having lived in England for many years, and being conversant with all the requirements of English pupils, offers a comfortable home with thorough education.—For references and prospectus apply to Mrs. Cubitt, Earlham Lodge, Norwich, and to Mrs. Brinkley, 93, Sydney-place, Bath.

GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL, LEYTON.— Modern education with Christian training. Public examinations passed with success. Prize for singing. References: Rev. James Lunt, M.A., Rev. E. W. Bullinger, D.D.—Principal, Miss H. R. FORD.

SEASIDE EDUCATION.—An Officer can highly recommend a Christian Home School at Southsea for a few Girls of good position. Pupils have successfully passed R.A.M. and R.C.P. Examinations. Terms very moderate. Terms 40 guineas to fill a vacancy.—INSPECTOR-GENERAL GORDON, R.N., View Bank, Brechin, Forfarshire, N.B.

SELECT GIRLS' SCHOOL,

Cambridge House, 113, Green-lanes, London, N.

Christian training. Motherly care. Home comforts. Healthful situation. Preparation for Public Examinations, at which all the Pupils entered last Christmas passed. Reference to Rev. Gordon Calthrop, 3, Highbury-grange, N.; Doctor Pittock, Margate; and to other parents of present pupils.—Further particulars on application to the Principal,

Mrs. BRODIE.

PENSIONNAT EVANGELIQUE.— Wesleyan Young Ladies' College, Nimes, South of France.—Situated in one of the finest towns of the South of France. Has been in existence for more than forty years. Large premises; extensive garden. The climate of Nimes, remarkably dry and healthy, makes the residence in that city most profitable for delicate young ladies. Moderate terms. —Apply for prospectus and admission to Pastor O. PRUNIER, Principal and Chaplain, 1, rue de Sauve, Nimes, France. The next term will begin on October 1. Pastor PRUNIER has a vacancy for two young ladies in his own house, if parents prefer a family home to a residence in the school, terms being a matter of private arrangement.

HIGH-CLASS SCHOOL FOR LADIES, Duffield House, West Norwood. Mrs. E. A. ANDERSON, Principal. Christian parents desiring for their daughters a thorough and refined education, with decided religious influence, will find their requirements met in this establishment. Certificated governesses, resident, and eminent masters in daily attendance.

Miss ANDERSON receives a limited number of pupils at The Tower, Birchington-on-Sea, where delicate pupils can be transferred for three or four weeks, without interruption to study, the course of instruction being identified with the Parent School. — Prospectus, with terms and references, on application to Mrs. ANDERSON.

FRAULEIN EIBACH, Villa Schönblick, Wiesbaden, Germany, receives a limited number of pupils. Professors attend, and there is a resident French governess. Great advantages for languages, music, singing, and painting. References and prospectus on application.

EDUCATION.—High-class School for Young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. HALE, A.C.P., 1, Carlton-mansions, Clapham-rise, London, S.W.—Visiting masters, certificated governesses, and careful personal supervision with home comforts. Pupils prepared for any examination. Instruction made pleasant, and no overworking countenanced. French, German, Latin, drawing, class-singing, and drilling are included in the school fees, which are moderate. Highly recommended by parents of pupils, and Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. Prospectus and testimonials on application to Principal.

"Balham, May 29, 1880.

"I am very reluctant to recommend schools, because I am not always able to judge of the interior arrangements; but in this case I have the utmost pleasure in standing as reference. I can highly commend Mrs. Hale, and have the greatest confidence in her capacity, management, and character, having known her for several years."

C. H. SPURGEON.

DEVONSHIRE. — Ladies' School, Heyop House, Axminster.—Principals, the Misses REECE. Careful Christian training; thorough teaching. Home comforts. Pupils prepared for public exams. Governess-Pupil required on reciprocal terms. Another at small premium. The ensuing term commences September 14.

BRIGHTON.—High-class School for Girls. Healthy situation. Home comforts. Every educational advantage. Terms moderate. Good references to clergymen and parents of pupils.—The Misses NORTON, Farndon House, Stanford-road, Brighton.

LADIES' COLLEGE, Ashton-upon-Mersey, Cheshire.—Good Home School for Girls. Every attention paid to health and domestic comforts. Careful Christian training, with thorough teaching, but no over-work allowed. Great advantages for the study of music, painting, and languages. Eminent professors attend daily. Gymnasium. Good tennis and croquet lawns.

Principal, Miss BRADSHAW.

LADIES' COLLEGE, Goudhurst, Kent, near Tunbridge Wells.—A happy home and School for Girls, 420 feet above sea-level. College and Cambridge examinations. Terms, twenty-seven guineas per annum.—Miss R. KENDON, M.C.P., daughter of Rev. J. J. Kendon.

PRINCIPAL OF LADIES' COLLEGE requires Governess Student. Finishing lessons under Professors in English, music, French, German, and drawing. Preparation for exams. Premium 18 guineas. Home comforts. Light duties.—SCHOLASTIC, Pond's Stationery Depot, St. Peter's-road, Holloway, London, N.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL.

WELLINGTON, SHROPSHIRE.

Principal: DR. CRANAGE, M.A.

BETHANY HOUSE SCHOOL, Goudhurst, Kent, near Tunbridge Wells. — Principal, Rev. J. J. KENDON.—Careful religious training, combined with a thoroughly sound commercial education. In the last three years 150 of the pupils were passed in the public examinations at the College of Preceptors, and the Local Examination of the University of Cambridge. Terms, twenty-seven guineas per annum.

YOUR BOYS will have a happy Home and sound Education with Mr. and Mrs. DIXON, Middle-class School, Kingston-on-Thames. Christian influence; unlimited diet; beautiful neighbourhood. 20 to 25 guineas.

MORAVIAN BOYS' SCHOOL, Ockbrook, near Derby.—Pupils prepared for London Matriculation and other examinations. Ockbrook presents the advantages of central position, and beautiful rural neighbourhood.—For prospectus apply to Rev. J. M. MALLALIEU.

HIGHBURY HOUSE SCHOOL, St. Leonard's-on-Sea.—Boys prepared for commerce, public schools, or the universities. Upper, middle, and preparatory departments. Seven resident masters. The junior division taught by ladies. Delicate boys, requiring a mild climate, receive every kindness and constant care. The autumn term will commence on September 17.—For prospectus apply to Mrs. DUFF, the Lady Principal.

HARRINGAY SCHOOL, Green-lanes, N.—Sound Christian education, for professional or commercial pursuits. Careful supervision, plentiful dietary, healthy locality, easy of access. Terms moderate from entry. Principal, J. S. COOMBES.

MOUNT RADFORD SCHOOL, Exeter. —Boys are prepared for business or professional life. Many matriculate at the various universities. During the last twelve years pupils have obtained more than two hundred certificates (many passing in honours) in the Oxford, Cambridge, College of Preceptors', and London University Examinations. Special attention paid to juniors, who are taught by a lady. The Word of God is made the sole basis of a careful moral and spiritual training, and none but Christian teachers are employed. Cricket, athletics, &c.

Head Master, E. H. VINE, M.C.P.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The under-mentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED ON HIGH GROUND, WITH VIEWS OF THE SEA, on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and a first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this school that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS, together with the papers of Examinations passed and Honours gained, should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. THORN, Paddington, London.

CLIFTON, BRISTOL.—A few Resident Pupils desired. Locality celebrated for healthfulness and beauty. Instruction, training, companionship, personal, not delegated to others. Evangelical (Open Brethren).

Mr. HOWELL, Aberdeen-road.

NEW COLLEGE, Cliftonville, Margate.—Principal: Rev. G. H. JONES, F.A.S. High-class education, with individual attention. Prep. for exams., and commerce. Christian training. Splendid premises, loftily situated, close to sea. Moderate fees.

BRIGHTON.— EDUCATION.— Mr. ALFRED CLARK, B.A. (Lond.), receives about twenty Sons of Gentlemen, from seven to fourteen years of age. Terms from 45 guineas. Pupils are thoroughly grounded in English subjects, Latin, Greek, French, German, and mathematics, and have been successful at Cambridge Local and other Examinations. Personal care, Christian influence, and a healthy, happy home.—85, Buckingham-road, Brighton.—Referees: Rev. W. Poole Balfern, Brighton; Rev. F. Cruse, Christ Church Vicarage, Worthing; Rev. J. B. Figgis, Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, Harley House, Bow-road, London; Rev. W. Haslam, 66, Marina, St. Leonard's. Term commences on Friday, Sept. 9.

KELVEDON SCHOOL, Essex, is recommended to parents by the Hon. Captain MORETON, late of Mildmay. His letter and prospectus can be had of Mr. GEORGE FOSTER, Kelvedon, Essex.

BOARDING SCHOOL for Tradesmen's Sons, in a healthful country village. Prospectus and information can be obtained of JONADAB FINCH, Esq., 73, Cheapside, who has no interest in the school.

FRENCH, for Diplomacy, the India Civil Service, the Army, &c. — A London French Pasteur, who receives into his family two young Gentlemen desirous of acquiring conversational French, has a vacancy.

French Parsonage, Bayswater.

A LADY RESIDING in a healthy London suburb, and having an experienced daily governess (minister's daughter), would be willing to undertake the charge of a little Girl, aged 12, for a few months, to be educated with her own. Preparation for exams. if required. Every home comfort and motherly care.

D. E., Messrs. Fisher's, 50, Lombard-street, E.C.

KEMPLEY HOUSE, Bristol.—Mrs. PRESCOTT, Principal. — Prospectus sent. The education of Her Majesty the Queen was conducted on the principles of moral education; and Her Majesty has been pleased to accept a copy of Moral Education by Rev. P. Prescott, and Sir Henry Ponsonby has received the Queen's commands to thank him for the book.

YOUNG LADIES from Abroad will find a happy home in which to study English. Christian care. Pretty neighbourhood. 48 miles from London.

Rev. and Mrs. CHINN, Alton, Hants.

PARIS.—Madame DODIN recommande des Institutrices et des Gouvernantes françaises et étrangères. Des Pensionnats en France et a l'etranger.

Mme. DODIN, 51, Rue de Provence, Paris.

TUTORSHIP, OR SMALL CLASS.— Oxford Graduate (married), with some experience in tuition, seeks re-engagement as Tutor, or opening for small class. Home or Continent.

W., 3, Zingari-villas, West Norwood.

GOVERNESS WANTED, early in September. An earnest evangelical Christian (Church of England), refined gentlewoman, total abstainer, experienced, good disciplinarian, cheerful, healthy, and active, competent to teach a girl 11, and boy 10 years of age, thorough English, arithmetic, French, elementary Latin, good music, singing, drawing, needlework, and calisthenics.—Apply by letter, stating full particulars, qualifications, examinations passed, age, salary expected.—SURGEON, General Theobald's, Cliffansty House, Weston-super-Mare, Somersetshire.

RESIDENT GOVERNESS.—A young Lady, late Student of Queen's College, London, desires a re-engagement after the holidays. Acquirements, thorough English, music, drawing, painting, French, and the rudiments of Latin. Good testimonials.
A. B., Bockleton, Tweedy-road, Bromley, Kent.

GOVERNESS (23), certificated, desires re-engagement in small school or family. Good English, arithmetic, music, French, elementary Latin and drawing. Knowledge of Kindergarten. Children under 12. References.
M., 11, Frederick-place, Clifton, Bristol.

MISS MARSH recommends a young Nursery Governess, for four years a Sunday-school teacher. Principal referee, Mrs. Hutt, Wilton Rectory, Norfolk.

TRADESMAN'S DAUGHTER (well educated) requires situation as Junior Governess in school or family. English, French, music, drawing.—Miss K. PETERS, Dallington, Sussex.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Wanted.

SPHERE OF WORK desired by an ex-Clergyman of Baptist views. Married. Aged 38.
ALEPH, 301, Camberwell New-road, London.

A LADY IS ANXIOUS to find a good situation for a Coachman. Was five years with the late Sir R. Hamilton, Bart., K.C.B., as head coachman. Good horseman. Careful driver: would suit elderly people. Married. Total abstainer. Country preferred.—Mrs. PELLY, Avenue Villa, Grand Parade, Eastbourne.

GARDENER (Under), in or out of the house. Age 23. Christian and abstainer. Good character.
G. ALDRIDGE, Ridge, near Barnet, Herts.

BUTLER, where footman is kept, or single-handed. Age 30. Good character. Total abstainer.
J. W. TAYLOR, Templeton, Roehampton.

COACHMAN requires a situation. Married. Age 29. 4½ years' good character.
J. OSBORNE, Barvin's Park, Northaw, Potter's Bar.

AS THOROUGH INDOOR MAN-SERVANT. Understands all Butler's duties. Can attend on an invalid if required. Well recommended. Town or country.—D. TURNER, Wavington House, Woburn Sands, Beds.

WANTED FOR A CHRISTIAN young Man, 38 years of age, of good address, strong, active, and kind-hearted, a situation as Companion or Attendant upon an elderly invalid Gentleman, Church Verger, Messenger, or Scripture Reader in a country parish. Satisfactory clerical references. Small wages required.—A. B., St. Mary's Villa, Balkerne Hill, Colchester.

YOUNG MAN seeks situation in Christian family as Under Gardener, or could look after horse and carriage, and small garden. Would make himself generally useful.
H. BAILEY, Cedar Tree Villa, Bishopstoke.

A LADY WISHES to recommend a Boy of 14, for stables or garden. Has been in service for a year.
F. C., Mr. Hallett, Bladud Library, Bath.

A GENTLEMAN recommends a nice little Boy, 13 years old, life teetotaller, as indoor servant, under another.
Dunkeld Lodge, St. Albans.

AS MATRON in a Girls' home.—Wanted by a Christian woman (40), experienced in training children. Good needlewoman and cutter-out. Very good references.
Miss BOND, Vine Cottage, Brasted, Kent.

TWO LADIES, fond of, and used to young people, desire the care of Children's Home or Orphanage. Experienced in teaching. Good recommendations.
J. L., 58, Queen's-road, Peckham.

A CHRISTIAN LADY is desirous of a situation in Mission work, or as Housekeeper. Highly recommended. Salary not so much a consideration as a comfortable home.
S. S. H., 4, Montague-place, Milwall.

LADY HIGHLY RECOMMENDS a well-connected, accomplished, and thoroughly domesticated Doctor's Daughter as Lady-Housekeeper, Companion, or Amanuensis. Experienced Continental traveller. Unexceptionable references. Dissenter.
M., 336, Messrs. Deacon, Leadenhall-street.

WANTED, BY A LADY, some practical Training in Nursing in a Cottage or small Hospital. Owing to family ties she can only give three or four hours a day.
J. M. F., Home Lea, Bickley, Kent.

A LADY with considerable experience in housekeeping and work amongst the poor, wishes for a useful post, where she can combine the two.—E. B., 245, Stockport-road, Manchester.

A LADY DESIRES a re-engagement as Companion, or Companion-Housekeeper, to an elderly or invalid Lady. Thoroughly domesticated. Highest references.—M B. W., J. F. Jones Lloyd, Esq., 19, Victoria-street, Tenby, S. Wales.

HOUSEKEEPER, Companion to elderly Lady, or care of motherless children, by experienced Christian Lady. Thoroughly domesticated, and useful needlewoman. Cooking. Highly recommended. £20 to £25.—F. A., Hickox's Library, Finsbury-park, London, N.

YOUNG LADY is anxious to find an engagement as Companion. Willing to travel. Salary not so much an object as pleasant home.—A., Mr. Nicholls, Bookseller, Weston-street, Upper Norwood.

AS COMPANION, and to assist in Christian work, or few hours allowed for such. Fond of needlework. References given from last employers.
A., 56, Fentiman-road, Clapham-road, S.W.

MISSIONARY going to India under the C.M.S. in October, is anxious to procure a situation for his sister as Useful Companion to Lady. At liberty after middle of September.
CURATE, 23, Grange-road, Didsbury, Manchester.

A RESPECTABLE, middle-aged person wishes for an engagement as Companion or Housekeeper to one or two ladies. Good needlewoman. Good reference.
J. L., 11, Thomas-street, Blackhill, co. Durham.

CHRISTIAN PERSON seeks situation as Lady's Maid to elderly or delicate Christian Lady. Could assist housekeeping. Dressmaker; efficient needlewoman. Thoroughly experienced. Six years' excellent testimonials.—A. B. C., Mr. Walser, 36, Western-road, Hove, Brighton.

SUPERIOR LADY'S MAID.—A Lady wishes to recommend her English Maid as above, to one Lady. She is a Christian woman, aged 40, accustomed to travel.
Mrs. B. D., Melville, Ladybank, Fife.

AS ATTENDANT, or Useful Companion to elderly or delicate Christian Lady, by a person, age 40. Cheerful, obliging, well-educated, and musical.—MATRON, Alnwickhill Home, Liberton, Midlothian.

WANTED, IN A CHRISTIAN FAMILY, a situation as Sewing or Useful Maid to an elderly Lady. Good needlewoman, and knowledge of dressmaking. Three years' excellent character.—S. SIMPSON, Harrold, Beds.

A SUPERIOR CHRISTIAN NURSE desires situation (to children out of arms). Good needlewoman. Excellent references.
J. P., 36, Alexandra-road-hill, Southampton.

SERVANTS' AGENCY, Soho Bazaar. Unexceptionable references required. Testimonials of religious character fully appreciated. Male and female servants are in daily attendance from 11 to 2. On Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays the number is very large. Entrances: Soho-square, and 77, Oxford-street, London, W.

A LADY IS ANXIOUS to obtain a situation in a Christian family for a motherless Girl, nearly 16, as Under Nurse or General Servant.
W., 269, Camden-road, N.

LADY WANTS situation for a well-trained, respectable Girl, 16, as Under-Housemaid. Also for two respectable Girls of 14, who have not been out before, who need kind mistress to train them.
B., 11, Endsleigh-gardens, Euston-square, N.W.

WILL ANY CHRISTIAN Lady undertake, as a work for Christ, to receive a strong young rescued Girl as Housemaid or General Servant.—Miss A. K. HAMPER, 8, Grosvenor, Bath.

AS USEFUL MAID to elderly Lady, or any place of trust, with light duties. Good needlewoman. Christian, in fellowship with Open Brethren.
M. H., 162, Warwick-street, Pimlico, S.W.

EDWARD W. THOMAS is most anxious to obtain employment in London for a Man, who for conscience sake has given up the stage. Married, has three children.
200, Euston-road, N.W.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Vacant.

MANAGER OF CHEMICAL WORKS.—Wanted, an able and energetic Manager of Chemical Works. Christian, and abstainer from alcohol and tobacco. Liberal salary to a good man.—Address, stating age, practical experience, and references, CHEMICUS, care of Housekeeper, 13, Rose-street, Newgate-street, London, E.C.

CHURCH ARMY.—Evangelists wanted, working men and others, not afraid of hard work or personal sacrifice for Christ. Not necessarily good scholars.—Apply for particulars to
Rev. C., 130, Edgware-road, W.

MALE AND FEMALE EVANGELISTS wanted, not afraid of real hard work, and willing to make sacrifice for Christ. Send stamp for particulars to United Christian Mission, Goole, Yorks.

EXPERIENCED COACHMAN wanted, willing to make himself useful. Personal character indispensable. Wages £1 1s. and rooms.—Apply with full particulars, by letter, to C. C., care of Messrs. Bull, Victoria-terrace, Surbiton.

MAN AND WIFE.—Wanted, a steady, respectable Man as Under-Gardener and Cowman, and wife as thorough Laundress, for Staffordshire.
M. D., 5, Adelaide-terrace, Ilfracombe, N. Devon.

PARIS.—Wanted, a Gentlewoman, a consecrated Christian, not under 32 years of age, musical, and with a knowledge of French, to supervise gentleman's small household, and engage in Medical Mission work.—Dr. X., May's Advertising Offices, 159, Piccadilly, London.

HOUSEKEEPER (Working), with small means, wanted to assist a Widower (in general stores), no family.—G. C., 12, Great Harding-street, Gough-square, Fleet-street, E.C.

LADY wanted, to assist Daughter attend invalid mother. Must sleep in invalid's bedroom, be strong in lifting. Age over 35. Comfortable country home for a member of Church of England. Small salary. . . . .
G., 3, Messina-avenue, West Hampstead.

TWO GOOD LAUNDRY WOMEN wanted, in a Ladies' School early in September. Mother and daughter, or two sisters. Rooms, firing, gas, and £70 per annum.—Address by letter only,
A. B., Southdown, Wimbledon.

CAN ANY LADY recommend for Brighton an energetic, thoughtful Christian Girl, about 18, as Maid to young children out of arms. Must be an abstainer, and a good hand with her needle.—Mrs. D., care of Mr. Diprose, Cotswold Hills Health Resort, Stroud, Glos.

WANTED, IN CLERGYMAN'S FAMILY, a Mother's Help. Five children in nursery. Under-nurse kept. Must understand care of an infant, and be good children's dressmaker.
Mrs. SAVORY, Palgrave Rectory, Diss.

COOK.—Wanted, for Stoke-upon-Trent, a good Plain Cook who must well understand a dairy and baking. Assistance after two o'clock. Also HOUSE-PARLOURMAID, who must be a good waitress. For a gentleman's family.—Address letters, with full particulars, to Mrs. A., 5, Adelaide-terrace, Ilfracombe, N. Devon.

GOOD PLAIN COOK wanted, in family of two Ladies. Quiet, comfortable place.—Apply at once, giving reference for character, to Mrs. GORHAM, Ockbrook, near Derby.

GOOD PLAIN COOKS wanted (town and country), House-Parlourmaids, Nurses, good General Servants.—Miss MAULDEN'S (late missionary) Registry and Home, Church-street, Paddington-green. Please send stamped envelope for reply.

ASSISTANT NURSE wanted.—Required for 1st September, an Assistant Nurse. Good wages. Everything but uniform found. Apply to MATRON, Lock Hospital, Harrow-road, W.

HOUSE AND PARLOURMAID wanted, for a small and quiet family. Ten miles north of London. Wages £15.
Mrs. KNIGHT, The Grove, Enfield-highway, N.

NURSEMAID, about 16, thoroughly trustworthy, and able to sew well, for four young children. Also strong Girl as HOUSEMAID. State wages required.
Mrs. MAY, Vallance, Chadwell Heath, Essex.

HOUSEMAID wanted.—Must be thoroughly competent, and good needlewoman. German preferred.
Mrs. DRESSER, Farnborough, Kent.

UNDER-HOUSEMAID wanted in a large country house; a strong young woman, not under 18. Must have been out before. A very quiet household.—Miss ONSLOW, Alresford, Hants.

TWO SERVANTS WANTED by September 1, for small family; General Servant able to do good plain cooking, and Nurse Housemaid. Healthy and strong. Christians preferred.—Apply by letter, stating wages, to
Mrs. SCRIVEN, 13, Hammersmith-terrace, W.

USEFUL HELP or GENERAL SERVANT required, willing to attend invalid Lady. Two in family. Wages £12.
Mrs. O., 3, Queen Anne-villas, Lennard-road, Penge.

BRIGHT GIRL wanted, about 15, to train as General Servant; no fringe. A little washing. Some previous knowledge desired. Wages commencing £6.—BETA, 38, Kempshott-road, Streatham-common, London.

GOOD GENERAL SERVANT wanted, in family of three. Quiet, comfortable home.
77, Upper Court Hill-road, Lewisham.

CHILDREN'S MAID wanted, accustomed to boys preferred; youngest 8½ years. Must be thoroughly trustworthy, good needlewoman, with knowledge of dressmaking. Not under 24.
Mrs. HUTTON, 64, Russell-terrace, Leamington.

To Let, Apartments, &c.

PERCY'S HOTEL, LONDON.

40, Bedford-place, Bloomsbury-sq., W.C.

This First-class Private Hotel is highly recommended by the Bishop of Algoma; Rev. M. E. Thorold, M.A., Leicester; Dr. Georgens, Ouchy, Lausanne; J. Bevan and Mrs. Braithwaite, 312, Camden-road, and many others. Beds from 1s. 6d. Tea, 1s. 3d. Tariff on application.
Mrs. LLOYD HARRIS, Proprietor.

LONDON.—First-class Private Hotel, 20, Bedford-place, Russell-square, W.C.—Patronised and highly recommended by Bishop and Mrs. Newman, Leamington; the Rev. J. R. O. West, M.A., Manchester; Tudor Trevor, Esq., Leeds; George Ward, Esq., Manchester; Thomas B. Dale, Esq., J.P., Warwick; James Baly, Esq., and many other friends. Tariff on application.—GRACE PERCY, Proprietress, late Librarian to the Warwick Library, and Grand-daughter of the late Rev. J. W. Percy, Warwick.

W. TAVERNER, Temperance Hotel, 41 and 43, Judd-street, Euston-road, London, W.C. Five minutes from G.N., Mid., and N.W. Railways. Beds from 1s. 6d. Plain breakfast or tea, 1s. Tariff and testimonials on application. Patronised by ministers of all denominations.

LONDON.—Insull's Temperance Hotel, 20, 21, Burton-crescent, Tavistock-square, W.C.—Five minutes' walk or 1s. cab fare from Euston, St. Pancras, King's Cross Railways; easily reached from other stations. Patronised by readers of THE CHRISTIAN.

HUTCHINSON'S PRIVATE HOTEL, 24, Guildford-street, Russell-square, the most central position for all parts of London; and at 24, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C. Extensively patronised and strongly recommended. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Weekly boarders taken.

LONDON.-LAW'S BOARDING HOUSE, 15, Thavies-inn, Holborn-circus.—Quiet and homely. Centrally situated for business or pleasure. Five minutes' walk of St. Paul's Cathedral and General Post Office. Terms moderate.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—A limited number of Ministers and their wives, and other Christians, are received at a comfortable private residence.—For terms address,
H., Fern Lea, Pevensey-road.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA, 88, Warrior-square.—First-class Boarding Establishment. Unrivalled position. Fine sea views. Liberal table. Late dinner. Inclusive terms from 25s. Clerical and medical references. Good tennis courts.—Address PROPRIETRESS.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—Boarding Establishment, Meliora House, 20 and 21, Carisbrooke-road. Conducted by the Widow of the late Rev. F. WAGSTAFFE, and Mrs. LOCKE. Good table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Near sea, gardens, and rail.

INTEMPERANCE.—A private Home at the seaside for limited number of the upper and higher middle classes in a cheerful little spot where Dipsomania, Choralism, Nervous Debility, &c., has been long and successfully treated. Christian influence; home comforts and amusements; highest references.—MEDICUS, Messrs. Pascoe, 28, Stokes Croft, Bristol.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Clergyman's Widow, who has had great experience in nursing, would gladly receive two or three Ladies, invalid or otherwise, in her comfortable home. Terms from 25s. South aspect.
Mrs. H., Estens, Surrey-road South, Bournemouth.

ILFRACOMBE.—Foster's Boarding House. Close to sea. Home comforts. Highly recommended by Clergy and Ministers. Conducted on Christian and Temperance principles. Terms, 52s. 6d. per week. No extras.

ANNESLEY HOUSE,

Residence for Lady Students & Christian Workers,
186, EUSTON ROAD, N.W.
Managed by a Committee of Wesleyan Ladies, but unsectarian. Terms moderate.
Apply to the Lady Principal, Miss SHILLINGTON.

BRIGHTON.—Sussex House Boarding Establishment, pleasantly situated in the Old Steine, having a sea view, and the beautiful Steine Gardens in front. Near to Pavilion, Aquarium, and piers. Liberal table, with every home comfort.
Mr. & Mrs. BOX, 58, Old Steine.

ILFRACOMBE.—Furnished House, with sea view. Three sitting, six bed-rooms. Moderate terms.
Mrs. BRAUND, 8, Oxford-grove, Ilfracombe.

BUXTON, Derbyshire.—Alpine Boarding House, Hardwick-square, most pleasantly situated near baths and gardens, with every home comfort.—Proprietress, Miss PALMER.

MADEIRA.—A pleasant Home for visitors, summer or winter, at the house of a Missionary. Good table and attendance. Terms moderate.—D., 183, Rua dos Ferreiros, Madeira.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—Board and Residence in the house of a Christian Lady; or, if preferred, separate rooms without board. Permanency much desired. House prettily situated. Very near places of worship, and almost close to the sea. Kind and loving care would be given to an invalid.—Roselea, care of Miss Linney, Library, London-road, St. Leonard's-on-Sea.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Furnished Apartments. Central, sheltered position. South aspect. Near pier and gardens. Hot and cold water baths. Terms moderate.
Mrs. MOON, Ootacamund, St. Peter's-road.

MRS. PARSONS returns sincere thanks for all kindness from Christian friends, and begs to say she has removed to larger premises.—(Private) Convalescent Home, Shaftesbury House, Seaside-road, Eastbourne.

ROTHESAY, N.B.—House of Rest. A Health Resort and Hydropathic Establishment for Christians. Summer terms, board, lodging, and baths, from 30s. per week.—Send for prospectus to COLIN CAMPBELL, Argyle Lodge.

WORTHING HOME OF REST for Christians. Close to sea, with good garden. Every comfort. Services on the ground. Terms 25s. to 2 guineas.—LADY SUPERINTENDENT, Rutherford Lodge, Worthing.

INTEMPERANCE.—Private Home for six Ladies. Terms from 1½ to 3 guineas weekly. Highest professional references given, for which, with other particulars, apply to
Miss PUDNEY, Buxton House, Earls Colne, Essex.

SALTBURN-BY-SEA.—House of Rest for Christian Workers. Bracing air. Firm, broad beach. Upland and woodland scenery. Terms from 25s. to 30s.
F. J. HOLDERNESS, Station-square.

BEXHILL. — Christians needing rest and change have derived great benefit by a stay at the Home of Rest, Station-road. Sea bathing. Splendid landscape. Terms—board and lodgings from 12s. weekly.

BROADSTAIRS.—Seafield Boarding Establishment.—Best situation in town. Close to sea. Liberal table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Highly recommended by all who have visited. Special terms for permanent boarders.

BRIGHTON.—A few Boarders received in a Lady's private house, close to West Pier. Liberal table. Terms 1 to 2 guineas. References to clergymen and others.—13, Montpelier-road.

BOARD AND RESIDENCE, neighbourhood of Chislehurst.—A Lady wishes to receive one or two Lady Boarders; or unfurnished rooms if desired. Large private house, beautifully situated. Bath-room. Highest references.
A. B., Plant, Newsagent, Sidcup, Kent.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—A Solicitor's Daughter would gladly receive a Clergyman and his wife, or two or three Ladies to board. A permanency desired. Terms on application.
Miss B., 2, Monson-terrace.

SOUTHEND.—Minister's well-furnished House, four bed-rooms, three sitting-rooms, &c., five minutes from sea, three from rail, to be Let to small family for September. Two guineas per week. Servant if desired.
5, Carlton-terrace, Southend, Essex.

RIPON, YORKSHIRE.—In a large private house, connected with a high class school, standing in beautiful grounds, one or two Ladies can be received. To reside with the Principal; or can have private rooms.
F., care of Mr. Parker, Stationer, Ripon.

PRIVATE BOARDING HOUSE, conducted upon Christian principles. Refined and cheerful home. Late dinner. Terms reduced in September. References to clergymen and others. - PRINCIPAL, Creskeld, Nightingale-road, Southsea, Portsmouth.

REV. AND MRS. L. MONOD, Lyons (5, rue Sala), wish to receive one or two young Ladies, October to July. Board. residence, £12 monthly. Same bedroom, £10 each.

A BRIGHT CHRISTIAN HOME is offered by two Sisters to a Lady requiring such. References exchanged. Terms 35s. per week, inclusive.—Misses DALL, 39, St. Mary's-road, Leamington Spa.

DAVOS, SWITZERLAND. — The Parents of a young Gentleman who is ordered to winter at Davos, will be thankful to know of any cheerful Christian family with whom he could reside while there.—Address, stating terms, which must be moderate, to JOHN M. BRIGHT, Alvaston-park-hill, Forest-hill, S.E.

FARMHOUSE APARTMENTS wanted early in September. Near London preferred. Two bed-rooms and sitting-room, with attendance.—C., 101, Highbury-hill, London, N.

WANTED FOR TWO YOUNG LADIES, a healthy and comfortable Home for about twelve months with a Christian Lady who would carefully look after their training and education.—Particulars on application to H. E. C., care of Mr. Burn, Y.M.C.A., Aldersgate-street, London, E.C.

COMFORTABLE BOARD wanted, for two Ladies and one young Gentleman. Cheerful society. Evangelical ministry. Easy distance from the City, with good service of trains required. Also stamp for reply.—A. Z., Miss Goulton, Stationer, 16, Churchfield-road, Acton.

A CHRISTIAN HOME required for a little girl to be educated, &c. No school need reply. References given and required. Terms £20 per annum.
B., 45, Cambridge-road, Gunnersbury, W.

CHEAP LODGINGS in a comfortable Christian Home for Young Women in business, also Servants seeking employment. Terms 2s. 6d. weekly. — Mrs. GALLANT, 60, Augustus-street, Regent's-park, N.W.

A LADY WISHES to board her Nurse, who through age and infirmity requires kindness and attention, with a widow or married couple, without children. Kent or Sussex preferred. £1 per week would be paid. Satisfactory references required.—J., care of Abbotts', 5, Eastcheap, E.C.

Miscellaneous.

ANXIOUS INQUIRERS.—Numbers have received blessing through writing. All anxious ones are invited to write.—2 Cor. i. 3. 4.
EVANGELIST, Clapham, S.W.

ASTHMA.—Persons suffering from Asthma, Difficulty of Breathing, &c., are invited to try (free of charge) a remedy for affording immediate relief.—C., Mr. G. A. KEYWORTH, Hastings.

WHOLESALE PROVISION TRADE. A Christian Gentleman of experience and ability, with a first-class connection in a large city in West of England, is desirous of negotiating a Partnership with a Christian man of business having a capital of about £2,000. Fullest information given. —M., care of Housekeeper, 13, Rose-street, Newgate-street, London, E.C.

SEED AND FLORIST BUSINESS.— Advertiser wishes to purchase business as above. Or would enter into partnership with a man of sound Christian principles.
A., 21, Birkbeck-road, West Norwood, London.

PORTABLE HARMONIUMS, ORGANS, PIANOS, &c. Mr. Gawin Kirkham, Open Air Mission, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, writes:—"I can bear personal testimony to the excellence of your instruments, which I consider the best and cheapest, shall have much personal pleasure in being your referee. Our members speak highly of them." Lowest prices.
CHARLES L. YOUNG, 21, High-street, Kingsland.

NERVOUS, TEMPTED, and despairing ones are invited to communicate with G. R. G., Keston House, Lady Margaret-road, N.W. (2 Cor. i. 4). Spiritual sufferers only. Stamps for reply.

ELEGANT COUNTERPANE.— Turkey twill and white calico. Coloured illustration, model, and instructions nine stamps. Artistic, short window blinds. No washing. Model and instructions, eight stamps.
CLIFFORD, Newport, Mon.

UMBRELLAS RE-COVERED FROM
2s. EACH.

IF YOUR UMBRELLA WANTS RE-COVERING send it by Parcels Post (with Postal Order enclosed) to STRONG BROS., Umbrella Makers, Redhill, Surrey, who will re-cover it and return it as good as new by next post, carriage paid. Good strong twill, ladies', 2s., gents', 2s. 6d.; good alpaca, ladies', 3s., gents', 3s. 6d.; strong durable silk, ladies', 4s. 6d., gents', 5s. Patterns post free. Reference kindly permitted to the Rev. W. J. Fowell, Redhill.

BYWATER, TANQUERAY & CO., 79, Queen Victoria-street, London (late BYWATER, PERRY & CO.), are Agents for Residents abroad Missionaries, Chaplains, &c., in every part of the world. Goods and Outfits supplied at Wholesale prices. Shipping and passages arranged. Banking in all its branches. Full descriptive Catalogue post free. Specially appointed Agents to seven of the leading English and American Missionary Societies. 2,000 References.

COLONIES.—Openings for Pupils on good stock and grain farms, and larger estates in Canada, the United States, and Tasmania. Pamphlet free.—FORD, RATHBONE & CO., 21, Finsbury-pavement, London.

A MARVELLOUS TEA. — Our "Combination" Blend at 2s. per lb. is not only economical, but is peculiarly adapted to the London and Suburban water No householder should be without it. Our 1s. 8d. also strongly recommended. Teas suitable for Ireland at 1s. 6d., 1s. 8d., 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s. Any of above Teas can be had in 5-lb., 10-lb. tins, &c. (tins free), post or carriage paid anywhere in United Kingdom on receipt of cash. Agents wanted.—THE BELFAST ANGLO TEA COMPANY, 6, George-yard, Fenchurch-street, London.

TO LADIES WITH LIMITED MEANS. —The Advertiser's son, a tea planter, seeks well recommended Agents for the sale of his Teas. Liberal commission.
Colonel MORTON, 2, Priory-parade, Cheltenham.

IRON MISSION ROOMS, &c., erected on the most reasonable terms, by R. SAUNDERS, 127, Hungerford-road, London, N. Estimates and designs free. 25 years' practical experience. Also Churches and Schools, &c. Best workmanship.

TO GARDENERS with small capital. —Wanted, a Partner (Christian man) for extension of business, and to assist in Mission work. Permanency.—G. S., care of Mr. Wardle, Alma-road, Millfield, Peterboro'.

TO BOOKBUYERS and Librarians of Free Libraries.—The August Catalogue of New and Second-hand works, offered at prices greatly reduced, is now ready, and will be sent post free, upon application to W. H. SMITH & SON, Library Department, 186, Strand, London, W.C.

CLOVER HONEY, delivered in comb, 1s. lb.; jars 8d. Sold for Mission work. Orders earnestly solicited. Also for disposal, several exceedingly handsome Alderney Heifers and Cows.
SHIPLEY, Breachwood-green, Welwyn.

TWO SISTERS, in much distress because of Irish affairs, wish to sell two very old Violins, in exquisite tone (maker unknown), the property formerly of their father, a R.N. officer. The violins can be seen at Mercy House, 48, Grosvenor-road, S.W. Communications received by the Sister-in-charge at above address.

FLORIDA.—Mr. HUGH MACCALLUM, Solicitor, Winter-park, Florida, being on a visit to this country, will give reliable information regarding settlement and investment in Florida.
6, Thirlstane-road, Edinburgh, Scotland.

A GENTLEMAN would like to correspond with a Christian Friend going to New Zealand, with reference to his son (22 years of age) joining him in the voyage.
N. Z., Brookville, Seascale, Cumberland.

NEW SHIRTS
FOR OLD ONES.
Old Shirts Refitted with Irish Linen Fronts and Cuffs.
Good quality, 2/6 each. Specially fine Linen, 3/- each.
Shirts made to Pattern or Order

GEORGE O'BRIEN & CO.,
MANUFACTURERS, BELFAST.

NEAVE'S
FOR INFANTS,
INVALIDS,
GROWING CHILDREN,
AND THE AGED.
FOOD.

Publications.

17th Thousand. Price 1d.
THE NEAR RETURN OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST. By CHEYNE BRADY.
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO.

The Stirling Publications.

JESUS IS ALL. Twelve Booklets. 8 pp., printed on extra thick paper, with Coloured Borders. Extracted by permission from Mr. Spurgeon's Sermons. Packets 1 and 2, 6d. each.

CHRIST IS ALL. By the late Very Rev. Dean LAW, M.A. Twelve little books, 16 pages, specially revised by the Author. Tinted paper, 6d. per packet.

THE WAY HOME SERIES. By LADY HOPE. Six 16-page little Books. Packet of 12, assorted, 6d.

THE SEED BASKET. First Series, 4 pp.; second Series, 8 pp. Packets 1 and 2, 6d. each.

DRUMMOND'S TRACT DEPOT, Stirling;
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO.

NEW COPYRIGHT TREATISE.
BY A PRACTISING PHYSICIAN.
DYSPEPSIA:
WHY SUFFERED.

Also, reliable and fully detailed Dietary and Medicinal Treatment of Indigestion and associated disorders, affording an absolute remedy and cure. 64 pp. 8vo., 1s.; smaller size, 2d. post free from Publishers,
HAMILTON & CO., Oxford-street, Southampton.

Price One Penny, 1s. per dozen.

A GLANCE AT THE GREAT WORK.
An Incident of Messrs. Moody and Sankey's Meetings in London.
BY LADY HOPE.
Reprinted from THE CHRISTIAN.

MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

By Mrs. G. S. REANEY.

The Power of Silent Example.
BY MRS. G. S. REANEY.
Price 6d. per doz.; or 3s. 10½d. per 100, post free.

Home-Life Responsibilities.
Showing the influence one life has upon another for good or evil, in strengthening or weakening everywhere, but most of all in our home life.
BY MRS. G. S. REANEY.
Price 6d. per doz.; or 3s. 10½d. per 100, post free.

What Our Servants May Do.
Being instances of good that has been done by Christian Servants; and how homes have been blessed by their influence.
BY MRS. G. S. REANEY.
Price 6d. per doz.; or 3s. 10½d. per 100, post free.

Children's Parties.
A Few Friendly Words suitable for the Present Season.
BY MRS. G. S. REANEY.
Price 6d. per doz.; or 3s. 10½d. per 100, post free.

Evening Parties.
Being instances of Harm arising from the Practice of Wine-drinking at Parties.
BY MRS. G. S. REANEY.
Price 6d. per doz.; or 3s. 10½d. per 100, post free.

What We Gain and What We Lose.
Do we Gain or Lose Influence by the position we take in regard to the Total Abstinence Question?
BY MRS. G. S. REANEY.
Price 6d. per doz.; or 3s. 10½d. per 100, post free.

Deeds Weightier than Words.
Earnest Thoughts on the Temperance Question.
BY MRS. G. S. REANEY.
Price 6d. per doz.; or 3s. 10½d. per 100, post free.

Our Christian Mothers and Sisters.
Showing the effect of Home Influence.
BY MRS. G. S. REANEY.
Price 6d. per doz.; or 3s. 10½d. per 100, post free.

The Cruelties of Hospitality.
Plain Words to Christians.
BY MRS. G. S. REANEY.
Price 6d. per doz.; or 3s. 10½d. per 100, post free.

What Ties the Tongue.
Showing the Importance of Christian Total Abstinence.
BY MRS. G. S. REANEY.
Price 6d. per doz.; or 3s. 10½d. per 100, post free.

Facts Stronger than Theories.
A Series of Narratives showing what one glass often leads to.
BY MRS. G. S. REANEY.
Price 6d. per doz.; or 3s. 10½d. per 100, post free.

The Worth of Common Sense.
"Pity it is that Christian sympathy without Christian common sense often misleads, misguides, and hinders. How jealous should the servants of the Master be to follow to the fullest His example who went about 'doing good.'"—EXTRACT.
BY MRS. G. S. REANEY.
Price 6d. per doz.; or 3s. 10½d. per 100, post free.

OUR HOMES.
BY MRS. REANEY.
A Series of 12 Small Books on Christian Temperance described above.
Assorted Packet containing one of each sort, price 6d.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-bldgs.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Neatly printed as a small book for enclosing in Letters or giving away.

GRIPPING
AND SLIPPING:
SCENES IN THE LIFE OF A PRIVATE SOLDIER.
Reprinted from "The Christian."
Price 6d. per Doz.; 3s. 6d. per 100 (3s. 10½d. post free); 30s. per 1,000.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-bldgs.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Terms for Advertisements
IN
"The Christian"
(PREPAID)

Miscellaneous Advertisements in small type are charged at the following rates:—

Not exceeding 30 Words 3 0
" 39 " 3 9
" 48 " 4 6

And 9d. for every additional line of nine words or under, the address being in all cases charged for.

To prevent disappointment, it is necessary to say that in no case must Letters be addressed to a Post-office, unless permission be previously obtained at such Post-office.

The Publishers cannot undertake to receive and forward Replies to Advertisements.

☞ In order to secure insertion of Advertisements in the following number of THE CHRISTIAN, they should reach this office on or before Friday, and at the latest by Saturday Morning's first post.

DAILY LIGHT ON THE DAILY PATH.
IN THE VERY WORDS OF SCRIPTURE.
Two Volumes. Morning Hour, and Evening Hour. Sold separately or in sets.
"These are very precious little books, and few more suitable gifts could be found."
Christian.
Small Edition, each volume, cloth, 1s.; French morocco, gilt edges, 2s.
Large Type Edition, each volume, cloth extra, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.
Various Styles in calf, morocco, and German calf.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, 15, Paternoster-row.

DAINTREE & CO.,
DYERS,
LONDON.
The LARGEST WORKS IN LONDON for Dyeing and Cleaning in every Branch.
98, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.; 305, Southwark-park-road, S.E.; 44, Leicester-square, W.C.
Carts Collect and Deliver to all parts.—PRICE LISTS BY POST.

SACRED SONGS AND SOLOS.

COMPILED AND SUNG BY

IRA D. SANKEY.

Nos. 1 and 2 Combined, containing 441 Pieces.

MUSIC AND WORDS.

OLD NOTATION.

Large 8vo. Size $8\frac{3}{4}\times5\frac{5}{8}$.

1 F.	Tinted Covers ...	2	6
2 F.	Limp Cloth	3	6
3 F.	Cloth Boards	4	6
4 F.	Cloth Boards, gilt edges	5	0
5 F.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	8	6
6 F.	Morocco, flexible, kid-lined, gilt edges ...	12	6
7 F.	Seal yapped, kid-lined, silk sewn	21	0

This is the original Musical Edition, which has been so much used, both for singing and playing from.

OLD NOTATION: CHEAP EDITION.

Small 8vo. Size $7\frac{3}{4}\times4\frac{3}{4}$.

1 H.	Tinted Covers ...	1	6
2 H.	Limp Cloth	2	0
3 H.	Cloth Boards... ...	2	6
4 H.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	5	6
5 H.	Morocco, flexible, kid-lined, gilt edges ...	8	6

This "Small Octavo" Musical Edition is very convenient for singing from. It has the advantage of being both cheap and portable.

TONIC SOL-FA.

Large 8vo. Size $8\frac{5}{8}\times5\frac{5}{8}$.

1 G.	Tinted Covers ...	2	6
2 G.	Limp Cloth	3	6
3 G.	Cloth Boards	4	6
4 G.	Cloth Boards, gilt edges	5	0
5 G.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	8	6

This is the original Sol-fa Edition, which has been largely used both for singing and playing from.

TONIC SOL-FA: CHEAP EDITION.

Small 8vo. Size $7\frac{3}{8}\times4\frac{3}{4}$.

1 R.	Tinted Covers ...	1	6
2 R.	Limp Cloth	2	0
3 R.	Cloth Boards... ...	2	6

This small Sol-fa Edition has recently been issued, and will be found very convenient for singing from. It is portable and cheap.

LARGE QUARTO (Old Notation).

Size $11\times8\frac{1}{2}$. Thickness $1\frac{1}{2}$ inch.

Handsomely Bound in Cloth Extra, bevelled boards, gilt edges	16	6
Morocco, gilt edges... ...	30	0

This is a very handsome Edition. Both Words and Music are printed in large type, and all the pages have rules round them. The Volume is specially intended for use at the Organ, Harmonium, or Piano. Being attractively got up, this Edition forms a very acceptable present.

SMALL QUARTO (Old Notation).

A NEW AND CHEAP EDITION.

Size $9\frac{1}{2}\times7\frac{1}{2}$. Thickness $\frac{3}{4}$ inch.

Cloth Back, paper sides ...	5	0
Cloth Boards	6	0

This is a new and cheap Edition in QUARTO size. It is very convenient for playing from, and has been much approved.

SCHOOL EDITION. In Old Notation, or Tonic Sol-fa.

Size $6\times3\frac{7}{8}$.

Tinted Covers...	0	4
Printed Cloth	0	6
Cloth Limp	0	9
Cloth Boards	1	0

This Edition contains all the Words, also the Complete Air of each piece. It is specially adapted for use in Schools.

WORDS ONLY.

CHEAPEST EDITION (A).

Size $4\frac{3}{8}\times3\frac{1}{2}$.

1 A.	Sewed	0	1
1½A.	Paste-down Covers ...	0	1½
2 A.	Printed Cloth ...	0	2
3 A.	Cloth Boards	0	4

In this Edition the complete Book of 441 Hymns is to be had for ONE PENNY. The type, though small, is very clear and legible. In cases in which large quantities are required—as, for example, Sunday Schools or Missions—this is the most suitable Edition.

NONPAREIL EDITION (B).

Size $5\frac{3}{8}\times4\frac{1}{2}$.

1 B.	Tinted Covers ...	0	3
2 B.	Printed Cloth ...	0	4

The type in this Edition is a size larger than that in Edition A.; and consequently this book is in many instances preferred.

POCKET EDITION (C).

Size $4\frac{5}{8}\times3$.

1 C.	Limp Cloth	0	6
2 C.	Cloth Boards	1	0
3 C.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	2	6
4 C.	Morocco, flexible, kid-lined...	4	6

This Edition, as its name implies, is very handy and portable: it affords a clear type in a small-sized Book.

SMALL 8vo. EDITION (D).

Size $6\frac{5}{8}\times4$.

1 D.	Tinted Covers ...	1	0
2 D.	Cloth Limp	1	6
3 D.	Cloth Boards... ...	2	0
4 D.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	4	6

The Four Books above-named have rules round every page.

SPECIAL CHEAP EDITION (Reduced Size).

Size $5\frac{5}{8}\times3\frac{5}{8}$.

7 D.	Blocked Cloth ...	0	9

This Book is printed in the same Type as the four D. Editions mentioned above; but, being printed without rules to the pages, the book is of course of smaller size.

EXTRA LARGE TYPE (E).

Size $6\frac{5}{8}\times5$.

1 E.	Tinted Covers ...	1	6
2 E.	Limp Cloth	2	0
3 E.	Cloth Boards	2	6
4 E.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	5	0
5 E.	Morocco, flexible, kid-lined...	8	6

These five sorts have rules round every page.

SPECIAL CHEAP EDITION (Reduced Size).

Size $6\times4\frac{1}{2}$.

7 E.	Tinted Covers ...	1	0
8 E.	Blocked Cloth ...	1	6
9 E.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	4	6
10 E.	Morocco, flexible, kid-lined...	6	6

All these ten sorts are in good large print, and are very suitable for the aged and for any whose sight is not good.

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS.

And may be ordered of any Bookseller or Musicseller in the Kingdom.

SCRIPTURE TEXTS.

Published by MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings; and may be had of any Bookseller.

From the late AGNES ELIZABETH JONES, Lady Superintendent of Nurses at the Liverpool Workhouse.

"The Lady Superintendent of Nurses begs to acknowledge the receipt of the Parcels of Texts as ordered. She more and more feels their value. The patients lying in their beds can read the words—the print is so distinct.

"As she is going to undertake the charge of several hundred more patients, she wishes to give other Wards the advantage of these Texts on the wall."

In very large type, printed in blue ink, size 31 in. by 20 in., 70 different Texts, 3d. each.

Mounted on canvas, varnished, and with eyelet holes, 9d each.

Mounted on rollers and varnished, 1s. 6d. each.

LIST OF THE TEXTS.

1. "Choose you this day whom ye will serve."
2. "The wages of sin is death."
2.* "The gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord."
3. "Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out."
4. "Repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance."
5. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."
6. "In whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins."
7. "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."
8. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."
9. "The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon Him, to all that call upon Him in truth."
10. "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world."
11. "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."
12. "The Lord is good to all; and His tender mercies are over all His works."
13. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge; but fools despise wisdom and instruction."
14. "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered."
15. "When we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly."
16. "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus."
17. "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."
18. "Now in Christ Jesus ye, who sometime were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ."
19. "Seek ye the Lord while He may be found; call ye upon Him while He is near."
20. "Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the Just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God."
21. "Herein is love: not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins."
22. "God commendeth His love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."
23. "As by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so, by the obedience of One, shall many be made righteous."
24. "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing."
26. "The just shall live by faith."
31. "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God."
32. "The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin."
33. "Through this Man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins."
34. "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by Thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation."
35. "God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved."
36. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life."
37. "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."
38. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."
39. "God so loved the world, that He gave His only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."
40. "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by Me."
42. "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus."
43. "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."
44. "Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."
45. "Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not."
46. "He shall gather the lambs with His arm, and carry them in His bosom."
47. "Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well-pleasing unto the Lord."
48. "I love them that love Me, and those that seek Me early shall find Me."
51. "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth."
52. "Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for Him."
53. "Casting all your care upon Him; for He careth for you."
54. "The Eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms."
55. "He hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."
56. "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content."
57. "As thy days so shall thy strength be."
58. "In all their afflictions He was afflicted.
59. "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth."
60. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."
61. "Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God."
62. "He is despised and rejected of men; a Man of Sorrows, and acquainted with grief."
63. "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities."
64. "The chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed."
65. "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way."
66. "The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquities of us all."
67. "Look unto Me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth."
68. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters."
69. "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me, and drink."
70. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."
71. "It is the blood that maketh atonement for the soul."

The eight following are in Extra Large Type.

25. "Jesus only."
27. "Now."
28. "God is love."
29. "Behold, He cometh."
30. "Have faith in God."
41. "Prepare to meet thy God."
49. "Thou God seest me."
50. "Be ye kind one to another."

Nos. 45 to 51 inclusive are specially suited for Children.
Two Specimen Texts sent free for Six Stamps.

MANUFACTURERS to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN.

Wm. Polson's CORN FLOUR.

The Original and First Manufactured in Great Britain.

UNRIVALLED FOOD OF HEALTH, for Children and Invalids; THE BEST KNOWN MATERIAL for PUDDINGS, CUSTARDS, CAKES, BLANCMANGE, and a variety of delicious Preparations for the Table.

Every Packet is Warranted Pure, and its genuine qualities are certified by the highest medical authorities in the kingdom.

The Lancet affirms:—"It is preferable to most descriptions of Arrowroot, on account of its sweeter flavour." Dr. LANKESTER, Superintendent of Government Food Collection at Kensington, in a note to the Manufacturers said:—". . . I am so well satisfied with your Corn Flour that I have given directions for its use in my own family."

Wm. Polson & Co., Paisley and London.

INDIAN MUSLIN.

Pure Cream-coloured Muslin (25 inches wide). Washes well. Useful for

DRESSES,
CURTAINS,
BLINDS,
DRAPERIES,
SHADING, &c.

45 Yards for 6s. 6d. Free per post on receipt of Postal Order.

90 Yards for 12s. 6d. Free per post on receipt of Postal Order.

And in Colours. Much used for Decoration, Bazaars, Entertainments, &c. Beautiful Effects at a Small Cost. Novelties also in Useful and Fancy Fabrics for Dresses and Draperies.

Patterns and Prices Post Free.

JOHN KAY AND SONS, BURNLEY WOOD MILLS, BURNLEY.

BY SPECIAL ROYAL AND IMPERIAL WARRANT!

FASHIONABLE DRESS MATERIALS

For Ladies', Children's, and Gentlemen's Dress. Unsurpassed for Beauty, Novelty, and Sterling Value. The Immense Variety of Patterns comprise Specialities to suit all Classes, all Climates, all Fashions, and all Purses, from 10½d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.

PATTERNS FREE.

REGISTERED.

Egerton Burnett's Royal Serges

REGISTERED.

NEW PATTERNS FOR SUMMER, 1887.

Any Length of Material Sold.

Carriage Paid on Orders of £1 in value to any Railway Station in the United Kingdom.

Goods Packed for Exportation.

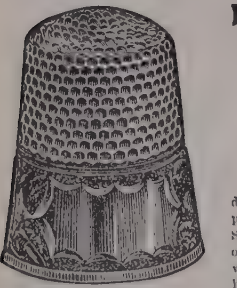
Address: EGERTON BURNETT, Serge Warehouse, WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.

CAUTION.—Egerton Burnett has no Agents. All orders are executed direct.

THE "DORCAS" THIMBLE.

(Horner's Patent.)

STERLING SILVER.



2s. 6d.

The Queen, May 8th, says:—"The 'Dorcas' Thimble is more durable than the generality of these indispensable work-table implements; it is made in three parts, the inner and the outer being Silver, and the intermediate Steel; forming a resisting power not obtained in silver only. What is more uncomfortable than sewing with a thimble that has seen service to such an extent that it has holes in its sides? With the 'Dorcas' Thimble this annoyance vanishes."

FROM ALL JEWELLERS.

If you cannot obtain it near you, send a wax impression of the open end of old Thimble to show the size, to

C. HORNER, Thimble Manufacturer, HALIFAX.

SODDY'S BAKING POWDER IS THE BEST

TO PROVE IT

A SAMPLE PACKET WITH NEW RECIPE FOR A CAKE WILL BE SENT GRATIS & POST FREE

BY B. SODDY, WALWORTH RD., LONDON

FOR PUDDINGS, BLANC-MANGE, CUSTARDS, CHILDREN'S AND INVALIDS' DIET, AND ALL THE USES OF ARROWROOT,

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR

HAS A WORLD-WIDE REPUTATION, AND IS DISTINGUISHED FOR UNIFORMLY SUPERIOR QUALITY.

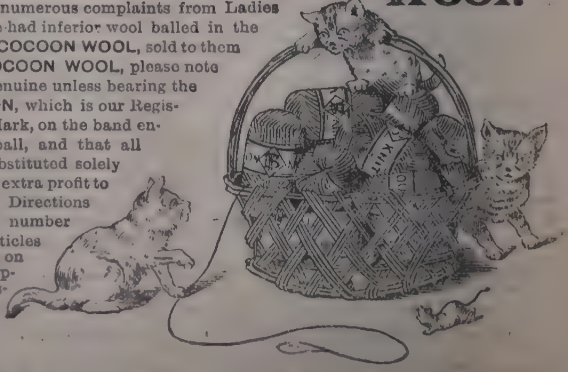
NOTE.—Purchasers should insist on being supplied with BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR.

Inferior kinds, asserting fictitious claims, are being offered.

"COCOON" Knitting Wool.

Having had numerous complaints from Ladies that they have had inferior wool balled in the same style as COCOON WOOL, sold to them as genuine COCOON WOOL, please note that none is genuine unless bearing the word COCOON, which is our Registered Trade Mark, on the band encircling the ball, and that all others are substituted solely for the sake of extra profit to the retailer. Directions for knitting a number of useful articles free of charge on receipt of stamped and addressed envelope, mentioning name of this paper.



WOOD & BURTT, Spinners, HOLMFIRTH.

The Christian:

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED "THE REVIVAL."

A Weekly Record of Christian Life, Christian Testimony, Christian Work and Missionary Enterprise.

No. 916.] LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS, E.C. FRIDAY, AUGUST 19, 1887. REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. AS A NEWSPAPER. [ONE PENNY. POST FREE, 1½d.

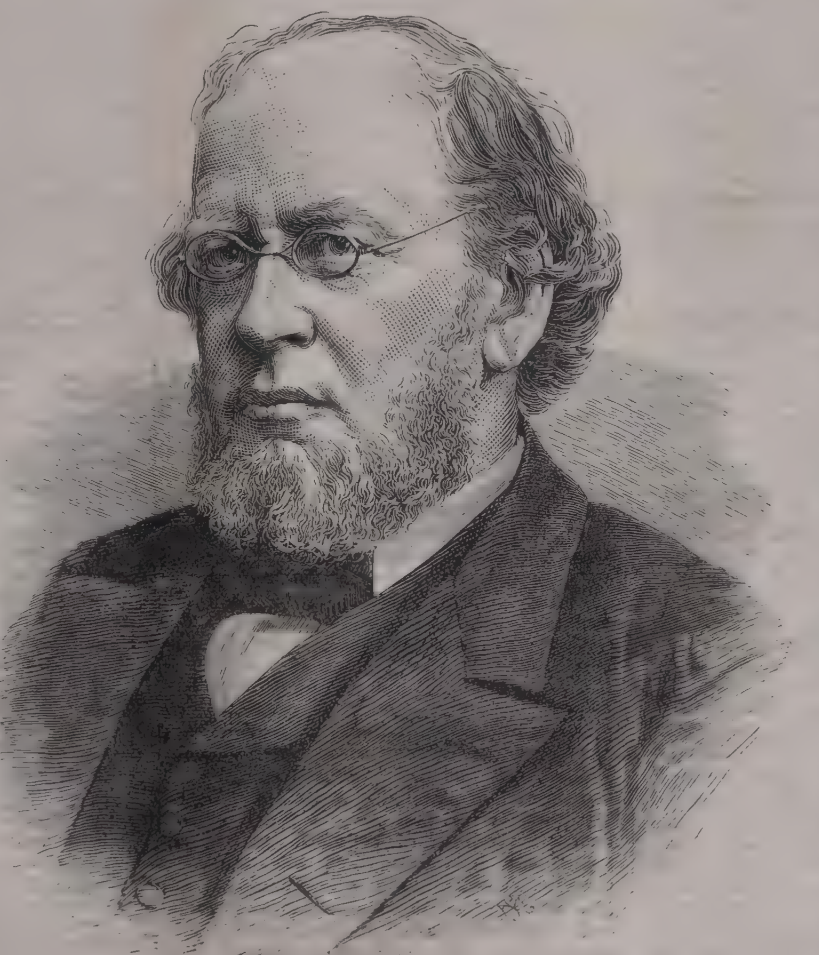
THE LATE

PROF. A. A. HODGE, D.D. LL.D.

"GOD must surely have had some wonderful work for him to do yonder, in cutting short the great work he was doing here." So said a life-long friend of Dr. ARCHIBALD ALEXANDER HODGE, in the bewilderment of sorrow on hearing of his unexpected death. It is a sentiment which has found an echo in many hearts. The Church of God on earth has been made distinctly poorer by the recent summons to this eminent servant of Christ to "come up higher." We could ill afford, it would seem, to spare him. But God reigns, and He doeth all things well. What we know not now, we shall know hereafter. The Christian heart is often called to exercise the faith that is willing to wait.

The younger Hodge held a place all his own in the esteem and affection of the Church. It has sometimes been found that a distinguished paternity is more of a burden than an advantage, in the race of life. But the subject of our sketch had an individuality that could not be dwarfed by comparison with even so great a father as Dr. Charles Hodge. In some departments, indeed, he did not so much as come into competition with him. Even had he lived as long, he would never, for instance, have become as voluminous an author; for he was constitutionally averse to "the drudgery of writing." The editorial tact and patience which carried The Princeton Review, "ball and chain," for fifty years, and made a success of it all the time, were quite beyond him. Nor would he ever have grown into the ecclesiastical statesman his father was; for the guidance of church polity and the settlement of cases did not lie much in his way.

On the other hand, he could travel where his father might admire but could not follow. The great qualities of the latter as a theological thinker were inherited at their best by his eldest born—his intuitive insight, his analytic power, his logical force, his comprehensiveness of vision with respect to the relations of truth, his absolute intellectual honesty. On the emotional side of his nature, too, when the upper crust was pierced, Dr. A. A. Hodge was even more tender and warmly devotional, if that were possible, than the saintly patriarch who by eight brief years preceded him to heaven. But there was in him, besides, an unmistakable dash of that indescribable something which we call genius; giving to his other faculties their peculiar range, and to his other qualities their quite peculiar charm; playing in eccentric humour, or flashing in occasional great thoughts; glowing in pathos or in scorn, or calmly beaming in the luminousness of some poetic fancy. Dr. Paxton, at his funeral, referred to this "transcendent something" in the younger Hodge, which those who really knew him—not the readers of his books, but his personal intimates, and his students—could not possibly fail to recognise.



(From Photograph by Mr. Anderson, New York. U.S.A.

Archibald Alexander Hodge was born in Princeton, New Jersey, in 1823. His father, Dr. Charles Hodge, had been associated, in the preceding year, with his revered former teacher, Dr. Archibald Alexander, as Professor of Oriental and Biblical Literature in Princeton Seminary, and after him he named his firstborn son. The boy's mother was Sarah Bache, the great granddaughter of Benjamin Franklin; a young lady of unusual beauty both of person and of character. He had the untold advantage, in early years, of nurture in a genuinely pious home. As is often in such circumstances the case, he never could recall the time when he first came under religious impressions, though he did not by his own act "join the Church" till 1842.

In his father's house he was brought into contact with some of the brightest intellects of the time. His own development is said to have been slow; yet he graduated in Arts in 1841, and showed such aptitude for mathematics and natural science that he remained for some time in the capacity of tutor by the side of the famous Professor Henry, of Princeton College. In 1843 he definitely entered on the study of theology in Princeton Seminary, from which he graduated in 1847.

To the joy of his father—whose influence did more than the world knows for the heathen abroad—"Archie" gave himself promptly and decisively to the foreign field. The Mission Board thankfully accepted him, and in the autumn he sailed with his young wife for India. They settled at Allahabad, where Hodge did valuable service, while permitted to remain. It was soon seen, however, that this could not be his life sphere. His own health suffered, and his wife's gave way so completely that there was no alternative but to bid farewell to India. They returned with their two children to America in 1850. Two effects of Hodge's stay in India, however, never left him. One was an intense admiration for British rule, which often showed itself in a half-earnest, half-jocular disparagement of the institutions of "the model Republic." The other was an abiding impression of the importance and hopefulness of the missionary cause, of which he could speak to his students not only with the authority of experience, but with the glow of an enthusiasm which had felt it a greater sacrifice to leave the mission field than to give up home to enter it.

Soon after his return, he received a call to a small-rural charge in Maryland, called Lower West Nottingham. There, on a salary of about £120, he settled quietly down to pastoral duty for nearly five years, till, in 1855, he was called to Fredericksburg, Virginia. It was here that his combined gifts as a theological teacher and an apt extemporaneous speaker, became known to himself and others; and, as Professor Patton in his admirable memorial discourse records, "from that time, and increasingly until his death, he was preeminently a preacher." Hodge hit on a plan, which ministers might often adopt with advantage, of systematic preaching; so that, by the time he was removed to his next charge, in Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania (1861), he and his Virginian flock had travelled together, in church and class, over the whole field of an exact, though popularised theology. His ministry was at the same time, in the highest and directest sense, a fruitful one—notably in Wilkesbarre, where the pastor's heart was gladdened by a marked revival of religion, during which "many were added to the Church of such as were being saved."

By this time he had budded into authorship. The "Outlines of Theology,"—since used as a text-book in so many Divinity halls—had especially attracted favourable attention. His reputation as an oral instructor had also spread; and, in 1864, he was unanimously elected to the Chair of Didactic Theology in Allegheny Seminary. Thus was definitely opened the influential professorial career which continued to grow in eminence and power till it was cut short, to speak after the manner of men, so prematurely in the autumn of last year.

Dr. Hodge remained at Allegheny for thirteen years, and many a student here caught the inspiration of his theological enthusiasm. He published at this time his monograph on the "Atonement," and his admirable "Exposition of the Confession of Faith," besides his suggestive "Questions in Theology." It is interesting also to notice that during nearly the whole of this period he was preacher as well as professor; first for a year, during a vacancy in a church in Pittsburg; and then, from 1866, as the regular pastor of the North Church, Allegheny, where men of mark in various walks of life gathered weekly to hear him. Whatever may be said of pluralities in general, those best qualified to judge declare that in this case, at least, the pulpit and the chair, so far from hindering, seemed only to inspire each other.

In 1877, what Hodge regarded as the crowning honour of his life, and what was certainly a high mark of his Church's confidence in him, was conferred, in the call which transferred him from Allegheny to be the associate and successor of Dr. Charles Hodge in the chair of Didactic and Polemic Theology in Princeton. The writer was present at his inauguration on November 8 of that year, and had the inestimable privilege of studying under both the Hodges during the one memorable session in which Providence was to permit their joint services to the Church. It was a thankful day for the father, to have associated with him such a son. It was a humble rather than a proud day for the son, to be called to succeed to such a father.

His opening address, directed to showing that dogmatic Christianity is the essential ground of practical theology, was a masterpiece of sound, compact theological reasoning, which itself proved him to be both qualified and disposed to perpetuate the best traditions of the Princeton School. It showed him thoroughly prepared to be a vitalising teacher of his students, and to fulfil the induction charge, to "give them theology, give them orthodoxy, give them exposition, proof, demonstration, give them learning, but to give it to them warm." The genuine personal diffidence with which the new Professor closed his address was all the more striking because of the firmness and force, as well as keen ability he had just displayed in handling principles and enunciating truth.

Ere many weeks had passed, the Junior Professor of Theology had a firm hold on both the affection and the admiration of his students; and though none could ever dislodge "the Old Doctor" from their hearts, it is much to say that, ere that one year of colleagueship had run its course, the son was enshrined along with him there. They were alike, and yet different. Alike in their strength of conviction; alike in their loyalty to the Word of God; alike in the vitality of thinking, which made them the reverse of shallow enunciators of well-worn formulas; alike in the sobriety of thinking, which was careful to hold the speculative faculty controlled by reason, and to rein the imagination in by common sense, they had each, at the same time, his own way of viewing truth, and his own method of presenting it. By the time the writer knew them—father and son—the younger Hodge was beyond question the more impressive teacher of the two; but comparison at that stage would have been palpably unfair to the beloved veteran, the Nestor of Princeton, and of the Church. None rejoiced more than he in his colleague's acceptability, and in the pledge which that opening session gave of continued prosperity of the best kind for the Institution he had served and loved so long and well.

The eight years of Dr. A. A. Hodge's Princeton professoriate—his last eight years of life—were years of ripened power and ever-widening usefulness. "Men far and near," says his eminent colleague, Professor Patton, "corresponded with him and sought his counsel. He had the confidence of the Church as few men had. The North loved him; the South honoured him. In Canada, in Great Britain, and over the wide missionary area, his judgments on theological matters were deferred to and quoted with respect. If a theological question was under debate, a few lines from his pen in a religious paper went the rounds of the Press. Dr. Hodge was in the zenith of his power when he died."

Enough has been said to indicate that his published writings are no adequate representation of the varied gifts of their author, or of the influence wielded through his personality. Several of his books will live. The "Outlines of Theology" will be used long and widely as a class-book; for it will be difficult to find a work of the same size where so much theology is so clearly presented, or at once so briefly and so interestingly discussed. Some of the many notable contributions of his pen to encyclopædias and theological reviews are of permanent value. But Hodge was greater than any of his writings, and none could come into close contact with him without becoming conscious of a latency of power in him from which yet higher results might safely be anticipated. The great work he did was the work he accomplished in human intellects and hearts, and is to this hour accomplishing through these in every part of his own great country and every quarter of the world.

It was in the class-room that he shone, or in a company small enough and congenial enough for him to "commit himself unto them." His extraordinary analytic acumen, wedded as it was to a singular faculty for apt illustration; his contagious earnestness, with its other side of playful humour and quaint hyperbole; his burning sympathy with all that is good, and burning indignation at everything false or mean; his personal modesty, amounting even to shyness, with its counterpart of fearless and candid courage in defence of the truth—qualities like these made him a model Professor and an invaluable friend. To those who knew him, his personal character gave added force to all his utterances; and those who knew him best could best appreciate the utter candour of his spirit and the utter generosity of his heart.

Professor Warfield, the distinguished alumnus of Princeton, who has since been appointed Dr. Hodge's successor in the Princeton chair, has well said:—

> Nothing can give the faintest conception of the beauty of his Christian character, or of the astounding greatness of his ordinary conversation. His intimate acquaintances feel that a great light has gone out from their lives in his departure. No one can enter in where he entered into our hearts, and no one can rule as he ruled by our firesides, and at our tables. But unless you have lived under the same roof with him, I should despair of conveying to you any adequate idea of what he was.

Hodge's life, like his theology, centred in Christ. With all his pleasantry in private—exuberant enough sometimes—his deep personal piety was never brought into question. His prayers at the family altar, and indeed everywhere, were the outpouring of a profoundly religious spirit; full of an adoration without awe, and of a confidence without unseemly familiarity, and suffused with the glow of a love that embraced together God and the world for which Christ died.

As a speaker Dr. Hodge had few adventitious charms. His presence was not imposing; his face in repose looked almost sombre; his voice was lacking both in tone and compass, and he had none of the orator's arts. Yet his audience was always interested, and oftentimes enthralled. One of his latest achievements, which gave promise of great future service in a similar line, was the delivery in Philadelphia of twelve lectures on the most abstract theological subjects to a miscellaneous audience of ladies and gentlemen, which remained crowded to the end. These lectures attracted much attention in the daily Press, and will be issued soon as a volume of "popularised theology."

His unique power as a preacher was very happily described by Professor Patton in his memorial discourse. Of one of his typical sermons, he there says:—

> It was a union of theology, philosophy, Christian experience, knowledge of human nature, quaint humour, elaborate description a metaphor; dropped as a diamond unobserved might fall out of a casket; facile utterance, a disdain of elocution, few gestures, the face lighted up, the eye opened wide as though the speaker saw a vision of glory, the voice trembling when the Saviour's name is mentioned, the sensitive frame responding to the pressure of emotion, and emotion finding vent at last in involuntary tears.

This is no fancy sketch. It was fully realised in a sermon preached by Dr. Hodge in a Glasgow pulpit, in June 1884, during his visit to the Presbyterian Council in Belfast. None who were present on the occasion will readily forget it. The theme was, "My Father's house of many mansions," and in its treatment the theology of the intellect was permeated with the chastened tenderness of deep and catching Christian emotion; so that, while the hearer's mind was enlarged with wonderful thoughts of heaven, his heart was yet more touched, and not a few of the listeners were seen to join their tears with the preacher's, who never in a church were seen to weep before.

The variety of heaven was one of Dr. Hodge's favourite topics; and he has now gone to the place—a bright and influential place it will be—which Christ has prepared for him. One Sabbath last autumn he was discoursing with even more than usual fervour, in Princeton College Chapel; he caught a chill, and before the week was over, on November 12, he had gone to be for ever with the Lord. "We shall not meet here any more," were his last words in his closing lecture in Philadelphia, "let us pledge one another to reassemble in heaven. We part as pilgrims part upon the road. Let us take our way heavenward; for, if we do, we shall soon, some of us very soon, be at home with the Lord."

REV. D. SHEARER, of Perth, W. Australia, would feel very thankful to some friend of tract distribution for a parcel of well-selected tracts for distribution in W. Australia. Circumstances have arisen which enable him to enter upon this work on a larger scale, and the need is great.

MISSIONARY MEETINGS.—Miss F. Boyd, of the China Inland Mission, writes to us, urging that more time should be given on Sabbath days to the holding of missionary meetings. She says: "Many of our most loyal helpers by prayer, gift, and service, are those whose work only leaves them Sunday as a free day to attend such meetings. We would be so glad if ministers and others would take this matter up, so that all over the country time be given on Sunday for foreign missionary meetings. I have lately attended some interesting open-air gatherings for this purpose in Scotland and the north of England."

THE ROOT OF RITUALISM.

I OBSERVE you have closed your columns to the discussion of the question of baptismal regeneration, as taught in the Church of England Service in connection with that ordinance. Not in the Church of England alone is an uncertain sound uttered; if you will turn to the Shorter Catechism in use in all the Presbyterian churches throughout the world, you will see that the answer to the question, "What is baptism?" unmistakably teaches the same unscriptural doctrine, which one would suppose was once and for ever negatived by the words of the Apostle John, speaking by the Holy Ghost, "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God" (John i. 13).

But I would now ask permission for a few words upon the manner of observance of another ordinance of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, whereby, more than by any other means, Popery is being rapidly spread in this country. Even evangelical people in the Church of England, in their somewhat unreasoning admiration for their ritual and liturgy, seem unaware of the subtle dangers which underlie their method of commemorating our Lord's death.

I speak not at length upon what is called "early celebration" of the ordinance, which is creeping into so many evangelical congregations, frequently accompanied by fasting beforehand; whereas we know that our Saviour instituted the rite immediately after the evening meal. But in the face of the whole teaching of the Epistle to the Hebrews, and especially of the statement in Heb. vii. 24, "He, because He abideth for ever, hath a priesthood that doth not pass to another", (margin), how can Gospel-enlightened men and women countenance the practice of receiving the bread and wine from a man separated from them by an altar rail, robed in the white garment of a sacrificing priest; whilst they assume the attitude of kneeling, totally unsanctioned by Holy Scripture, leading up so readily to adoration of the real presence (materially) of Christ in the bread and in the wine. Moreover, in this manner of observance there is a marked denial of the "communion" of the body and blood of our Lord. Let me illustrate this by an incident which occurred only last year:—A friend of mine was one of a small company kneeling at the rails to receive the bread and wine from the officiating clergyman; and, when he had drunk of the cup, my friend (accustomed to the observance of the Supper after another sort) was passing the cup almost unconsciously to the worshipper next to him: the clergyman of course prevented this act of "communion," took the cup and passed it on; thus isolating, as is always done in the Church of England service, each worshipper from all the rest. The bread and the cup must pass through priestly hands. Why do our good friends, the evangelical clergy, suffer themselves to be called "priests," or lend the sanction of their weighty examples to practices which are according to the precepts of men, and (may I add) so dishonouring to the sole, the exclusive, the all-sufficient priesthood of our ascended Lord?

This object lesson in the Church of England observance of the Lord's Supper has been received into the minds of hundreds of thousands, and is bearing bitter fruit in the lives of tens of thousands of those learners in the England of to-day. Of what avail to tell them in sermons that all believers are (in a sense) "priests unto God," when the communion of saints is denied, and a separate order of priests is week by week displayed before their eyes? And, it is to be feared, there steals upon the mind of the man most averse to priestly pretensions, and grows upon him in the habitual exercise of priest-like functions, a consciousness that he is something different from his people, that he possesses a power which they do not share, and that he can communicate or withhold blessing in connection with the sacraments of the Church: in short, that a spirit is engendered utterly at variance with the thought of the minister being "servant of all"; quite alien to the spirit of Him "who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

I write in no spirit of controversy; but, when one hears lamentation, even from one's Church of England friends, about the spread of ritualism and the encroachments of Rome, is it not time to go to the root of the matter and see whence the evil springs?

M. J.

LONDON'S VICE TRAFFIC.

A PAMPHLET strongly setting forth the condition of things in some of our West-end thoroughfares at night, has been written by Mr. Henry Varley. We understand he has taken steps to distribute copies among members of Parliament, and also in the districts referred to. The following is Mr. Varley's practical suggestion for coping with the evil:—

"What is needed is that Sir Charles Warren should for a season be armed with absolute and despotic power, and, without the slightest favour to titled and other profligates, quietly send out carefully selected detectives two and two. These should be supplemented by special constables ready to act as witnesses if necessary. These detectives should be instructed to 'run in' 'the gentlemen' (?) and the women guilty of solicitation. There are any number of these "human dogs" to be caught red-handed in the act. The first night's work would land in the station-house from twelve to twenty men, and amongst them some well-known names. Let them have the benefit of examination before Sir Charles Warren himself, and let the daily Press properly report the cases, and publish the names of the debauchees. Three days of this work, and the neighbourhood would be cleared of thousands of these human dogs which infest the streets. They would run like whipped hounds from the scene of their nightly debauch. There is nothing these prowling night fiends dread so much as publicity. A month's honest and effectual working would break up this hell upon earth."

A WARNING.—Young men in the provinces who may be meditating replies to advertisements offering situations in London, should read a little sketch in the August issue of The Association News (186, Aldersgate-street, E.C.), headed "Cash Security Required."

SCANDALOUS. — The "Ruby" match-boxes of Messrs. Bryant & May cost the company 2½d. per 144 boxes. The women who make them have to find paste, hemp, and firing for drying purposes. They can gain, if skilful, ¾d. per hour, or less than 10d. for twelve hours' work. If they work eight hours per diem, and take a holiday on Sundays, they would realise the handsome salary of 3s. per week. The company pays its shareholders above 20 per cent. dividend. This seems to me hardly a fair division between those who toil and those who do not.—Truth.

HOP PICKERS. — Many thousands of the poorest from our towns and cities flock into Kent for work in the hop gardens during September; and a few earnest hearts seek to embrace this opportunity of reaching them with the Gospel and leading them to Christ. Our headquarters are at Goudhurst, and our day work and camp visits within walking distance of this centre. Our open-air services are held in the neighbouring villages from three to seven miles distant. The past two years we were able to open another centre at Yalding, and place two or three missionaries there, to work on similar lines to those at headquarters. Parcels of clothing, or tracts, should be sent, carriage prepaid, to Rev. J. J. Kendon, Marden, South-Eastern Railway. J. BURNHAM.

Blenheim Villa, Brentford, Middlesex.

ELIJAH THE PROPHET.—14.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Leicester.

NABOTH'S VINEYARD.

1 Kings xxi.

In a room of the palace, Ahab, King of Israel, lies upon his couch, his face towards the wall, refusing to eat. What has taken place? Has disaster befallen the royal arms? Have the priests of Baal been again massacred? Is his royal consort dead? No, the soldiers are still flushed with their recent victories over Syria. The worship of Baal has quite recovered the terrible disaster of Carmel; Jezebel, resolute, crafty, cruel, and beautiful, is now standing by his side, anxiously seeking the cause of this sadness, which was, perhaps, assumed to engage her sympathy, and to secure, through her means, ends which he dared not compass for himself.

The story is soon told. Jezreel was the Windsor of Israel; and there stood the favourite residence of the royal house. On a certain occasion, whilst Ahab was engaged there in superintending his large and beautiful pleasure-grounds, his eye lighted on a neighbouring vineyard, belonging to Naboth, the Jezreelite, which promised to be so valuable an addition to his property that he resolved to procure it at all hazards. He therefore sent for Naboth, and offered, either a better vineyard in exchange, or the worth of it in money. To his surprise and indignation, Naboth refused both. And Naboth said to Ahab, "The Lord forbid it me, that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee."

At first sight this refusal seems churlish and uncourteous. But a little consideration will justify the refusal of Naboth, and aggravate the subsequent guilt of the royal pair. By the law of Moses, Canaan was considered as being, in a peculiar sense, God's land. The Israelites were his tenants; and one of the conditions of their tenure was, that they should not alienate that which fell to their lot, except in cases of extreme necessity; and then only till the year of Jubilee. The transfer was always coupled with the condition that the land might be redeemed at any moment, before that time, by the payment of a stipulated price. If these two conditions had remained in force, Naboth would have felt less compunction at this temporary alienation of his paternal inheritance; but both had probably fallen into disuse, and he anticipated that if it once passed out of his hands, his patrimony would become merged in the royal demesne, never to be disintegrated. Taking his stand then on religious grounds, he might well say: "The Lord forbid it me." His refusal was in part, therefore, a religious act.

But there was, without doubt, something further. In his mention of "the inheritance of his fathers," we have the suggestion of another, and most natural reason, for his reluctance. Beneath those vines and trees his fathers had for generations sat. There he had spent the sunny years of childhood. Many a holy memory was associated with that spot; and he felt that all the juice ever pressed from all the vineyards in the neighbourhood, would never compensate him for the wrench from those clustered memories.

Naboth's refusal made Ahab leap into his chariot and drive back to Samaria, and, like a spoilt child, turn his face to the wall in a pet, "heavy and displeased." At the close of the previous chapter we learn that he was heavy and displeased with God; now he is agitated by the same strong passions towards man. In a few more days the horrid deed of murder was perpetrated, which, at one stroke, removed Naboth, his sons, and his heirs, and left the unclaimed property to fall naturally into the royal hands. There are many lessons here, which would claim our notice, if we were dealing with the whole story; but we must pass them by, to bend our attention exclusively on the part played by Elijah amid these terrible transactions.

I. Called back to service.—How many years had elapsed since last the word of the Lord had come to Elijah, we do not know. Perhaps five or six. All this while he must have waited wistfully for the well-known accents of that voice, longing to hear it once again; and, as the weary days, passing slowly by, prolonged his deferred hope into deep and yet deeper regret, he must have been driven to continued soul-questionings and searchings of heart; to bitter repentance for the past, and to renewed consecration for whatever service might be imposed upon him. Using a phrase employed of another, as remarkable for physical force as Elijah was for spiritual, we may say, "the hair of his head began to grow again."

It may be that these words will be read by some, once prominent in the Christian service, who have been lately cast aside. They have been removed from the sphere they once filled. They have found audiences slip away from them, and opportunities close up. They have seen younger men step in to fill the ranks from which they have fallen. This may be attributable to the sovereignty of the Great Master, who has a perfect right to do as He will with his own, and who takes up one and lays down another. But before we lay this flattering unction to our souls, we should inquire whether the reason may not lie within our own breasts; in some inconsistency or sin, which needs confession and forgiveness at the hands of our faithful and merciful High Priest, before ever again the word of the Lord can come to us.

It is also quite possible that we are left unused for our own deeper teaching in the ways of God. Hours, and even years, of silence are full of golden opportunities for the servants of God. In such cases our conscience does not condemn us or accost us with any sufficient reason arising from ourselves. Our simple duty, then, is to keep clean, and filled, and ready; standing on the shelf, meet for the Master's use; sure that we serve if we only stand and wait; and knowing that He will accept, and reward, the willinghood for the deed. "Nevertheless thou didst well, in that it was in thine heart."

II. Not disobedient.—Once before, when entrusted with a Divine commission, he had arisen to flee for his life. But there was no vacillation, no cowardice now. His old heroic faith had revived in him again. His spirit had regained its wonted posture in the presence of Jehovah. His nature had returned to its equipoise in the will of God. He arose, and went down to the vineyard of Naboth, and entered it, and strode through its glades, or waited at the gate, to find the royal criminal. It was nothing to him that there rode behind Ahab's chariot two ruthless captains, Jehu and Bidkar (2 Kings ix. 25). He did not for a moment consider that the woman, who had threatened his life before, might now take it, maddened as she was with the draught of human blood, of which she had been drinking so deeply. All fear was but as the cobweb swinging across the garden pathway, and swept before the child rushing resolutely forward. Who does not rejoice that Elijah had such an opportunity of wiping out the dark stain of disgrace, which attached to him from the moment when he had forsaken, so faithlessly, the post of duty? His time of waiting had not been lost on him!

III. Acting as an incarnate conscience.—Naboth was out of the way; and Ahab may have solaced himself, as weak people do still, with the idea that he was not his murderer. How could he be? He had been perfectly quiescent. He had simply put his face to the wall and done nothing. He did remember that Jezebel had asked him for his royal seal, to give validity to some letters which she had written in his name; but, then, how was he to know what she had written? Of course if she had given instructions for Naboth's death it was a great pity, but it could not now be helped! and he might as well take possession of the inheritance! With such palliatives he succeeded in stilling the fragment of conscience which alone survived in his heart. And it was then that he was startled by a voice which he had not heard for years, saying, "Thus saith the Lord, Hast thou killed, and also taken possession?" He killed! No, it was Jezebel that had killed. Ah, it was in vain to shift the responsibility thus. Hast thou killed? The prophet, guided by the Spirit of God, put the burden on the right shoulders.

Often a man, who dares not do a disgraceful act himself, calls a subordinate to his side, and says:—"Such a thing needs doing; I wish you would see to it. Use any of my appliances you will; only don't trouble me further about it—and of course you had better not do anything wrong." In God's sight that man is held responsible for whatever evil is done by his tool in the execution of his commission. The blame is laid on the shoulders of the principal, and it will be more tolerable for the subordinate than for him in the day of judgment.

Further than that, but on the line of the same principle, if an employer of labour, by paying an inadequate and unjust wage, tempts his employés to supplement their scanty pittance by dishonest or unholy methods, he is held responsible, in the sight of Heaven, for the evil which he might have prevented, if he had not been wilfully and criminally indifferent.

It is sometimes the duty of a servant of God fearlessly to rebuke sinners who think their high position a licence to evil-doing, and a screen from rebuke. And let all such remember that acts of high-handed sin often seem at first to prosper. Naboth meekly dies; the earth sucks in his blood; the vineyard passes into the oppressor's hands; but there is One who sees and will most certainly avenge the cause of his servants. "Surely I have seen yesterday the blood of Naboth, and the blood of his sons, saith the Lord; and I will requite thee in this plat" (2 Kings ix. 26). That vengeance may tarry; for the mills of God grind slowly. But it will come, as certainly as God is God. And in the meanwhile, in Naboth's vineyard stands Elijah the prophet; and in the criminal's heart stands conscience, with its scourge of small cords, weighted with jagged metal. This lesson is enforced again and again by our great dramatist, who teaches men who will not read their Bibles that sin does not pay in the end; that, however successful it may seem at first, in the end it has to reckon with an Elijah as conscience, and he always finds out the culprit; and with God as an avenger, and He never misses His mark.

IV. Hated for the truth's sake.—"And Ahab said to Elijah, Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?" Though the king knew it not, Elijah was his best friend, Jezebel his direst foe. But sin distorts everything. It is like the grey dawn which so obscures the most familiar objects that men mistake friends for foes, and foes for friends; as in the old story, the frenzied king of Wales slew the faithful hound that had saved his child from death. Many a time have men repeated the mistake of the disciples, who mistook Jesus for an evil spirit, and cried out for fear.

When Christian friends remonstrate with evildoers, and rebuke their sins, and warn them of their doom, they are scouted, hated, and denounced as enemies. The Bible is detested because it so clearly exposes sin and its consequences. God Himself is viewed with dislike. It cannot be otherwise. The Egyptians hated the blessed pillar of cloud. The Philistines sent away the ark of the covenant. Wounds shrink from salt. The broken bone dreads the gentle touch of the physician. The thief hates the detective's lantern.

Let us not be surprised if we are hated. Let us even be thankful when men detest us; not for ourselves, but for the truths we speak. Let us rejoice and be exceeding glad. When bad men think thus of us, it is an indication that our influence is at the very antipodes to the bent and tenor of their lives. "What evil thing have I done," said a philosopher, "to make all these bad men speak well of me?" "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you, falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward is heaven, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you."

Oh, do not turn from the surgeon's knife; or the lighthouse gleam; or the red warning light; or the deep baying of the hound; as if these were your foes. It is you that are wrong, not they. "Turn ye, turn ye, for why will ye die?"

V. A true prophet.—Each of the woes which Elijah foretold came true. Ahab postponed their fulfilment, by a partial repentance, for some three years; but, at the end of that time, he want back to his evil ways, and every item was literally fulfilled. He was wounded by a chance arrow at Ramoth-gilead, "and the blood ran out of the wound into the midst of the chariot;" and as they washed his chariot in the fountain of Samaria, the dogs licked his blood. Twenty years after, when Jehu sent out to see, there was nothing of Jezebel left for burial; only her skull and feet and palms escaped the voracious dogs as she lay exposed on that very spot. The corpse of Joram, their son, was cast forth unburied on that same plot, at the command of Jehu, who never forgot those memorable words. And there, in after days, the armies of Israel were put again and again to the rout, saturating the soil with richer fluid than ever flowed from the crushed grapes of the vines. God is true not only to his promises but to his threats.

Every word spoken by Elijah was literally fulfilled. Jehovah put his own seal upon his servant's words. The passing years amply vindicated him. And as we close this tragic episode in his career, we rejoice to learn that he was re-instated in the favour of God; and stamped again with the Divine imprimatur of trustworthiness and truth.

UPPER TOOTING.—For the past five weeks the Gospel has been preached in a tent here by undergraduates from Cambridge, and others. Christians have been revived, and sinners saved.

THE TILLAGE OF THE POOR.

Great was my indignation when I once heard a public speaker claiming for the Government the right to acquire the neglected land of the country, and use it for the public good. "Here is a blow at the very roots of justice," said I, "and a most unprincipled fellow he must be who advocates it." But, a little while afterwards, one of my friends informed me that some two or three farms on a neighbouring estate were likely to be left untilled. Not able to find tenants, their owner had tried to farm them himself—sowing down, and grazing a good part of the ground to escape the expense of tillage. Unable to continue such a system, he had determined to leave the land to its natural condition.

Poor man, one felt pity for him; a thorough gentleman I believe him to have been; but I very soon felt that one's pity must not exhaust itself upon him, for I found that men representing twelve families, who had laboured on the farms, had been suddenly thrown out of employment.

Ah, few besides himself know the full meaning of the words when some master tells the labouring man that there is nothing for him to do. It is with a slow step and a heavy heart that he turns his face homewards to tell the sad tidings to the patient partner of his many sorrows. Kindly words and a pleasant manner have the baker and the grocer (the butcher is not known so well) when shillings and pence go down on the counter in return for the goods the cottager asks. But no wonder that the shopkeeper's face grows grave, and his manner becomes somewhat cool when he finds himself paid with promises rather than with hard cash. All honour to village shopkeepers generally! There may be exceptions to the rule, but, as a rule, they are a kindly class of people; I have known some of them trust a family for ten or twenty pounds, when there has been but little expectation of ever getting the money.

But turning back to those labourers mentioned, What were those twelve poor men to do? No work for them meant no money for them, yet many would be wanting money from them—money for rent, for fire, for food, to say nothing about clothing, shoes, and the like. Unable to emigrate, forbidden to beg, unwilling, and determined not to steal, they must have found themselves in a hard case, indeed, and a hard task the parson of that place must have had, if he ever endeavoured to persuade them that the land that had fed them was lying idle according to the will of God. We hear much and rightly enough about the sacredness of private property; but, taking the mind of God, as this is revealed in his Word, we cannot believe that He has intended private property to be held in such a way as to inflict cruel wrong upon the commonwealth generally. Is it not written, "Much increase is in the tillage of the poor," and I am persuaded that the frown of God lies heavy on our land, because the tillage of the poor is so largely rejected from it.

Having mentioned the allotment system in my other short paper, I may say that I know we are constantly told the poor do not care to have allotments. But whence has the idea arisen? I went through some allotment ground the other day to learn from the labourers who were working upon it that they had to give nearly four pounds an acre for it: other land in that parish, I believe, was letting for less than thirty shillings. Then, again, in many places, the regulations are so vexatious that a spirited labourer would almost starve before acknowledging himself subject to the petty tyranny of the "would-be" philanthropist.

Some reader may possibly say that I would have people pander to the lawless spirit of the age. I heard a lady, a few nights since, most eloquently declaiming against "lawlessness." On the table at which we were sitting were beef, ham, and chicken, with sweets, fruits, and other "nick-nacks" that well-nigh covered the snow-white cloth; and the thought afterwards occurred to me, as I remembered "The Sermon on the Mount," that with that well-spread table before us, and so many of the suffering poor around us, the Lord might see lawlessness in quarters where we little wished or expected it. One night, I believe at the same table, our conversation turned on "The Higher Christian Life," which, as far as some seemed to understand it, was a life of perfect peace. Oh, that the Church of Christ, both as a whole, and in each individual member, would cease from dwelling so much on these fond fancies, and cultivate practical Christianity. The highest Christian life, I imagine, is the life that is most like what Christ's life was; and is it not written of Him, that "Though He was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor?" Yes, nor did He spend the most of his days in the passive contemplation of comforting spiritual truths. He went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil.

As some candid friend may possibly have a word to say as to my questions about those twelve labourers, on the supposed thriftlessness of the poor, I will speak on another occasion of the labourer's opportunities for laying up money against a rainy day.

John Ed. Linnell.

Pavenham Vicarage, Bedford.

◆

BRIGHTON Y.M.C.A.

The re-opening of Steine House, on August 3, after thorough renovation, and, to a great extent, reconstruction, in consequence of the extensive fire, will be welcome intelligence to many of our readers. The most valuable improvement is the enlargement of the reading and assembly-rooms. The former, which is now on the first floor, is a spacious beautiful room, opening on to a large verandah overlooking the Steine, Aquarium, and sea; the latter is on the ground floor, and is capable of seating three hundred persons. This will prove a most valuable centre for much Christian work in the way of meetings during the week, and above all for the large and deeply interesting conversational Bible-class which meets on the Sunday afternoon, and has for so many years been largely blessed to many a soul.

It is to be hoped that the partial disorganisation of the work of the Association during the re-building may now speedily be recovered, and that young men will recognise the advantage of joining the Association, where every possible provision is made for wholesome social comfort and recreation.

SHOP SLAVERY AT THE SEASIDE.—Mr. Walter Besant's movement for the amelioration of the lot of working women will perform a useful function if it only brings to the light of day such facts as the following: During the week beginning the 19th of July the girls of from fifteen to eighteen years of age employed at a great toy and drapery "bazaar" at a well-known seaside resort worked for 89 hours, less 4 hours for meals; net total, 85 hours per week. These excessive hours are said to be regularly worked by girls under eighteen years of age in many seaside shops and bazaars during the summer months. It is scarcely surprising to learn that many of these girls are so exhausted at the week-end that they are obliged to remain in bed all Sunday, and have little or no pleasure in their lives.—Pall Mall Gazette.

LETTERS FROM NORTHFIELD.—I.

CROSSING THE ATLANTIC.

Leaving Liverpool, July 12, in the Cunard steamer Aurania we reached Sandy Hook on Sunday night, 20th, a somewhat slow passage for this vessel, having been delayed twelve or fifteen hours by fog. There was nothing more than a ripple on the ocean all the way.

The Arizona (Guion Line) left Queenstown two hours ahead of us; but, taking a more northerly and shorter course, and probably having no occasion to slacken speed, she landed her passengers early on Sunday, whereas we landed on Monday morning. This, however, was to me and others no disadvantage. It is more than a pity that the Mail service should require vessels to start on Saturday afternoon, making Sunday a busy day at Queenstown and on the Quay at New York.

During the voyage two deaths occurred; one was that of a child of a steerage passenger, who was buried at night; the other that of a Presbyterian minister, whose remains were brought on to America. The Nashfield American thus speaks of him:—

> Rev. Dr. William Eldred Ward, who died on board the steamer Aurania, received in Cumberland University the foundation of that practical and scholarly education which was afterward so powerfully and successfully utilised in educating the thousands entrusted to his charge. He graduated with high honours, and shortly afterward he entered the ministry of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. In the year 1865, when the South was just recovering from the first shock of the terrible struggle which for four years had demoralised its population, crippled its schools and colleges and impoverished its people, Dr. Ward conceived the idea of establishing a private seminary for young ladies which would prove an honour to the community and a self-sustaining institution. For twenty-two years he laboured incessantly in the fulfilment of his promise, and the success which crowned his efforts is fully demonstrated, not only in the magnificent school buildings that he has left, but also in the after life of the many who graduated under his supervision. "Ward's School" is to-day a household word throughout the South—especially in the Lone Star State.

Safety is the first object of the Cunard Company, and nothing could exceed the care and circumspection of Captain Haines and his officers. I would advise inexperienced travellers, however, not to take return tickets, as the fares are cheaper from the American than from the English side. The provisioning of the ship must on this occasion, one would think, have been done by a very second-rate contractor. I should not like to repeat the uncomplimentary remarks that were made about it. The White Star Line is said to be more attentive to the comfort of its passengers; and the German Lloyd steamers to be more agreeably purveyed.

Our second Sunday was a very pleasant one to many of us. In the morning the prayers and Scripture lessons were read by two of the passengers, the captain being detained on the bridge by the fog. £16 odd was collected after the service for Orphanages at Liverpool and New York. In the afternoon some hymns were sung in the saloon; among the singers were Mr. Dodge, of New York; Mr. Herbert Francis, who accompanies me; Miss Miller (daughter of the late Mr. Andrew Miller, well-known in London as a successful merchant and no less successful evangelist); Miss Middlemist, a London Post-office official; and Mr. Pells, son of the late minister of Soho Chapel, and who is going to take charge of the New York branch of the business of Messrs. Crossley & Co., of Halifax. We then went and had some hymns with the steerage passengers, and as they enjoyed them, we asked if they would like a meeting in the evening from seven to eight. Many hands raised expressed their willingness, and with the permission of the captain we returned at the appointed time.

After singing several hymns, some chosen by themselves, I asked a man who had come to the front if he knew anyone who would open with prayer, or if he would. He readily responded, and all our hearts were touched by his fervent and appropriate supplications. Then Mr. Francis and Mr. Andrus (an American missionary, returning from Eastern Turkey) spoke briefly and well, after which two young men—one a steerage, the other a saloon passenger (a young lawyer, whose father has, I believe, been Mayor of Hastings several times)—volunteered to give their testimony. They were remarkably good. The former is a born preacher. I expect to hear again of Joshua Stansfield. He took up the words "plenteous grace" from the hymn we had just been singing, and standing with his face toward those immediately before him, and the saloon passengers who were standing three deep at the rail of the upper deck, he gave a telling address, as Scriptural in matter, as earnest and unself-conscious in manner, and as compact in form, as I have heard from minister, evangelist, or street-preacher, for many a long day. He afterwards told me that he was going as a preacher (local or otherwise) among the Episcopal Methodists at Detroit. He had been a working man; then took a small business. Some new Resolution had prevented his being accepted by the Methodist body in Yorkshire, but being commended to America, he had sold his share of the business, and was on his way. He told them he feared the knowledge he had been able to acquire was not sufficient; but they replied, if he could preach the Gospel and visit the people, that was what they wanted. I thought how superior a zealous Christian, endowed with those two qualifications, would be, to many more pretentious men, not half so well read either in the Bible or the human heart.

We spent in our meeting two hours instead of one, and at the close I told the people I should be glad to hear from any of them, and they would find my address on the hymn-sheet. This led to many more asking for it than our hymn-sheets could supply, and gave the opportunity of distributing a quantity of little books or tracts containing it. I expect to hear from many of those people, some in prosperity, some in want and sorrow.

The only sombre feature of our evening was the regret expressed by some of the wives and mothers that we had not begun before; their men had had nothing to do, and it would have been so good to have had such meetings every day. I think, however, that we followed the cloud, and entered the door when it was opened to us.

The way in which we were joined by some whom we had not thought of as being Christians interested us much; and the expressions of thanks from several touched us greatly. A gentleman going to the Bahamas said he had feared he should pass a very dull and unprofitable day, but it had been quite otherwise. The tallest man in the ship meeting us next morning before landing, offered his hand and thanked us warmly. With those "Good-byes" and "God bless yous" in our hearts we left the vessel full of thanks and praise.

I have given these details to induce and encourage others who travel by land, or who go down to the sea in ships, to pray and watch or opportunities and opened doors.

R. C. Morgan.

MR. MOODY'S CONVOCATION.

The Convention began on the evening of August 2, in the midst of a heavy thunderstorm. That was unpleasant for the moment, but it cooled the atmosphere, and gave promise of less torrid heat in the succeeding days. In his opening prayer Mr. Moody turned the circumstance to account: "As the wind and storm sweep over the earth, so may thy blessing sweep over us." The first address was by Rev. W. W. Clark, of New York, an able expositor of Scripture, and a favourite on the Northfield platform. He spoke on "Christian Assurance," showing by text, parable, and illustration that the Christian may know of a truth that he has eternal life. The application was: If we know that we are saved, let us go out and work for the salvation of others.

Testimonies followed from a number of friends present as to the blessedness they had experienced in life and work from this confident assurance. Mr. Moody, in his own energetic and epigrammatic way, described those who ought not to have assurance—the unconverted professor, the cowardly non-confessor, and the slothful disciple. His specific for the cultivation of assurance was, being busy about the Master's work and dwelling little on self.

At the first morning assembly, on August 3, an address on "Faith" as the first element of the Christian life was given by Prof. Green, Princeton; and Mr. R. C. Morgan discoursed on "Men of one Idea," as illustrated by the life of Nehemiah.

The attendance of visitors gave promise of a large assemblage during the Convention. A movement, broached by Mr. Moody last year, for the erection of a spacious hotel at Northfield to fitly accommodate the growing numbers of visitors, is gaining strength, and seems likely to become accomplished fact, as the evangelist's projects generally do. A few years will, in all likelihood, see Northfield one of the most attractive and best patronised of New England summer resorts.

"A HOME FROM HOME."

An attempt has been made by Mr. George W. Fowler in Liverpool to provide for young men employed in houses of business in that city a residence which will offer the advantages of a Christian home, instead of those of an ordinary lodging-house. Having taken a house, and furnished it in a superior style, he calls it in memory of his late father, the "John Fowler House." It will be placed under the care of a lady matron, and will be conducted on Christian principles, strictly unsectarian.

Besides bedrooms and dining-rooms, it will contain a large sitting-room, with a piano, and a bathroom. The ages of admission will be from fourteen to twenty-five; and the terms for board and lodging will be suited to limited incomes. Particulars may be learned on application, either at the "John Fowler House," 66, Mount Pleasant, Liverpool, or to the Y.M.C.A. of that city.

THE BETTING MANIA.—In our southern colonies this iron-hearted monster has seized upon the very vitals of the people, and is sapping at the roots of their national honour. High and low, rich and poor, it is as a disease in the community, and attacks men of every mien; in the senate, in the court-house, upon 'Change, in the social circle, right down to the meanest loafer who can scrape a sixpence together. Children are not exempt from the taint. It is a sad fact that upon the evening after the Melbourne Cup is run, there are always two or three suicides to be counted among the countless atrocities which rise in judgment against the abominable institution. Melbourne on "Cup Day" is like a "city of the dead," for it is practically deserted; whilst at Flemington the racecourse is covered with a surging, grabbling, heated, excited, furious, desperate multitude, whose very lives, to judge by appearances, must hang upon the issue. What countless tales of misery are told, the outcome of the blasting, withering result of the day's adventure.—Wm. Mark Noble.

August 19, 1887.

The Christian.

CONTENTS.

The Late Prof. A. A. Hodge, D.D. LL.D. 1
The Root of Ritualism 3
London's Vice Traffic 3
Elijah the Prophet—14 4
The Tillage of the Poor 5
Letters from Northfield—1 6
"A Home from Home" 6
Upper Burmah and Opium 9
Sanctification and Hope 9
For the Young—
Lessons from Flowers 10
Converted Priests 10
A Conference at Broadlands 11
Music—The Sympathy of Jesus 11
Open-Air Meetings in Ireland 11
Notes and Comments 12
Indefinite Preaching 14
Letters to the Editor—
Qualifications of a Mission Preacher 15
"Nothing to do" 15
A Working Men's Association 15
Poetry—Master and Servant 18

FOR USE AT OPEN-AIR SERVICES.

☛ Specimen Copies of all the Sorts will be sent post free on application to the Publishers.

Hymn Sheets from "Songs & Solos."

Eight different sorts, each four pages, price 1s. 6d. per 100; or may also be had in 2-page Leaflets, sixteen different sorts, 9d. per 100.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

3 "Bless me, even me also, O my Father." (Gen. xxvii. 38.)

TUNE—SONGS AND SOLOS, No. 56. [P.M.

LORD, I hear of showers of blessing,
Thou art scattering full and free,
Showers the thirsty land refreshing;
Let some droppings fall on me—Even me!

2 Pass me not, O gracious Father!
Sinful though my heart may be;
Thou might'st leave me, but the rather
Let Thy mercy fall on me—Even me!

First Series.

No. 1.

I am so glad
Shall we gather?
Oh, bliss of the purified
Just as I am
When He cometh
Have you on the Lord believed?
Safe in the arms of Jesus
There are angels hovering round
Guide me, O Thou great Jehovah
Free from the law
I hear the Saviour say

No. 2.

Stand up, stand up for Jesus
Come, every soul,
The great Physician
Pass me not
Rejoice and be glad
Down life's dark vale
Almost persuaded
I heard the voice of Jesus
Let us gather up the sunbeams

Second Series.

No. 3.

What means this eager?
There's a land that is fairer than day
Rock of Ages
One more day's work for Jesus
Sweet hour of prayer
I love to tell the story
Whosoever heareth!
I am coming to the cross
To-day the Saviour calls

No. 4.

O Christ, what burdens
Go bury thy sorrow
I've found a joy in sorrow
Lead me to the Rock
God loved the world
Go work in my vineyard
Brightly beams our Father's mercy
I know not the hour
Standing by a purpose true

Third Series.

No. 5.

In some way or other
Come to the Saviour
Only an Armour-bearer
There were ninety and nine
Who, who are these?
Nothing but leaves
Tell me the old, old story
Oh, think of the home over there
Jesus, lover of my soul

No. 6.

Ring the bells of heaven
Oh to be over yonder!
There is life for a look
Rescue the perishing
Ho, my comrades, see the signal
Nothing either great or small
Come home, come home
Work, for the night is coming
Jesus the water of life has given
There is a fountain filled with blood

Fourth Series.

No. 7.

Sowing the seed
I have entered the valley
Knocking! knocking!
Jesus loves me
No condemnation!
My God, I have found
There is a gate that stands ajar
All people that on earth
Yet there is room!
I hear Thy welcome voice

No. 8.

Hark the voice of Jesus crying
I left it all with Jesus
Lord, I hear of showers of blessing
There's a beautiful land
Give me the wings of Faith
A long time I wandered
Through the valley of the shadow
O happy day
I waited for the Lord my God

Fifth Series.

No. 9.

The God of Abraham praise
Joy bells
Jesus, keep me near the cross
How sweet the name
One there is above all others
Beneath the cross of Jesus
Look and live
Take the name of Jesus
With harps and with viols
Not all the blood of beasts

No. 10.

Mourner, wheresoe'r thou art
Light in the darkness
I will sing you a song
What a Friend we have
Salvation, oh, the joyful sound!
I gave My life for thee
We're marching to Canaan
Come, ye sinners
Depth of mercy
Yield not to temptation

Sixth Series.

No. 11.

There's a cry from Macedonia
One offer of salvation
Come, Thou Fount
I have a Saviour, He's pleading
We shall meet beyond the river
Arise, my soul, arise
'Tis the promise of God
Alas! and did my Saviour
All hail the power

No. 12.

I love to think of the heavenly land
Lo! He comes
There is a land of pure delight
There is a land, a sunny land
Precious promise God hath given
My faith looks up to Thee
Oh for a thousand tongues!
Oh, come to the Saviour!
Saviour, like a Shepherd
Go thou in life's fair morning
All the way my Saviour leads me

Seventh Series.

No. 13.

Will you meet me at the fountain?
The mistakes of my life
I lay my sins on Jesus
In the Rifted Rock
Amazing grace! how sweet
I have heard of a Saviour's love
Oh, turn ye! oh, turn ye!
Come, sing the gospel's joyful sound
I bring my sins to Thee
Time is earnest

No. 14.

Come, ye that love the Lord
I stood outside the gate
I've found the pearl
We shall sleep, but not for ever
'Tis a goodly pleasant land
On what foundation do you build?
To the work! to the work!
Simply trusting
Jesus shall reign where'er the sun

Eighth Series.

No. 15.

When my final farewell
Hasten, sinner, to be wise
Only Jesus feels and knows
Oh, the clanging bells of time!
Art thou weary?
They dreamt not of danger
Look away to Jesus
My hope is built

No. 16.

Shall we meet beyond the river?
When peace, like a river
By-and-by we shall know Jesus
Repeat the story o'er and o'er
Thou, whose almighty word
I am now a child of God
Thou didst leave Thy throne
Oh, my Saviour, hear me!

The "SERIES" denote the Contents of the 4-page Sheets. The NUMBERS indicate the Contents of the 2-page Leaflets.

Hymns for Special Services.

Four Pages Demy 8vo., 1s. 6d. per 100.

FOUR DIFFERENT SERIES.

In ordering it is necessary to state which Series is required.

Second Series.

Thou, whose almighty word
Hark! the voice of love
There is a better world
Oh, turn ye! oh, turn ye
Now is th' accepted time
We're travelling home
Sinners, turn
Saviour of sinners
Oh, have you not heard?
Jesus Christ is passing by
Lord, I hear of showers of blessing
Spirit of the living God
Day of judgment
Love divine! all love excelling
The pearly gates are open
Of thy love some gracious token

Fourth Series.

Lord, I hear of showers of blessing
There is a Fountain filled with blood
Jesus Christ is passing by
Heal us, Immanuel
There is life for a look
Jesus! the name I love
Rock of Ages, cleft for me
Just as I am
In evil long I took delight
Come, let us join
Come, Thou Fount of every blessing
I once was a stranger
I heard the voice of Jesus
Safe in the arms of Jesus
O happy day that fixed my choice
My God, I am Thine

Hymns for Special and Out-door Services.

ELEVEN different Series of SHEET HYMNS, each Series printed on two pages, clear type. 6d. per 100, or 5s. per 1000.

In ordering, it is necessary to state which Series is required.

First Series.

Come, ye sinners
Just as I am
My heart is fixed
I'm glad I ever
There is a happy land.
Come, thou Fount

Fifth Series.

There is life for a look
There is a better world
Whither, pilgrims, are you going
Oh for a thousand tongues
I'm a pilgrim
Shall we ever?

Ninth Series.

Behold, behold the Lamb!
Depth of mercy
As the serpent raised
All ye that pass by Welcome news
Shall we meet?
Come to the ark.

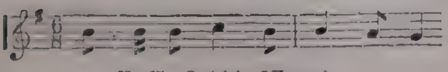
Tenth Series.

Spirit of the living God
Sinners, turn
Terrible thought
Hasten, O sinner
To our Redeemer's glorious
Just as thou art
Plunged in a gulf
There is a Name.

HYMN SHEETS from "SONGS AND SOLOS."

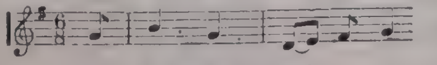
EIGHT different sorts, two pages. 9d. per 100.

The first line of the Music (air) is printed at the head of each Hymn in this Series.



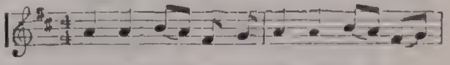
No. 17. (Containing 8 Hymns.)

Where is my wandering boy to-night?
To the work! to the work!
Low in the grave He lay
'Twill not be long—our journey here
Simply trusting every day
"Nearer the cross!" my heart can say
Down in the valley with my Saviour
Have you any room for Jesus?



No. 20. (Containing 9 Hymns.)

Come, ye that love the Lord
Long in darkness we have waited
Have you been to Jesus?
Be glad in the Lord, and rejoice!
Oh, hear my cry, be gracious now to me
Look, ye saints, the sight is glorious
Why do you wait, dear brother?
Fierce and wild the storm is raging
Saviour, like a Shepherd lead us



No. 21. (Containing 9 Hymns.)

We are out on the ocean sailing
There is life for a look at the Crucified One
Why perish with cold and with hunger?
Behold Me standing at the door
All hail the power of Jesus' name!
Only waiting till the shadows
Come, ye disconsolate! where'er ye languish.
A ruler once came to Jesus by night
I think when I read that sweet story of old

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Works by Rev. J. CULROSS, D.D., M.A.

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED.

A Sketch of the CHARACTER, WRITINGS, THEOLOGY, and INFLUENCE of the BELOVED DISCIPLE.

THIRD EDITION.

With Chromo-Lithographic Views of the Isle of Patmos and the Sea of Galilee.

Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 3s. 6d.

"Another acceptable volume, by an author whose spiritual attainments, as well as mental powers, are fitting qualifications for an appreciative review of John's character and life. "JOHN WHOM JESUS LOVED," by his latest biographer, will furnish a rich spiritual treat to all lovers of their Lord, in every section of His Church. To young men budding for the ministry, this monograph of John should become a classic volume."—Christian Age.

"BEHOLD, I STAND AT THE DOOR AND KNOCK."

CHRIST'S MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH AT LAODICEA.

With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece.

Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.; Cheap Edition, Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.

"This very handsome volume on a subject of perpetual importance will no doubt be welcomed, especially by those who are acquainted with Dr. Culross's other excellent works. Dr. Culross has here pre-eminently exhibited his usual excellencies as a religious writer. Clear in style, and eloquent in argument, striking in illustration, never wordy or tedious, never flat or cold, but always exhibiting great Christian affection, with an obvious sense of the fidelity his subject so solemnly demands. We are sure this work will be useful wherever it is read; and we hope it will have a very wide circulation."

Baptist Messenger.

"THY FIRST LOVE."

CHRIST'S MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH AT EPHESUS.

With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

"We have read this book with avidity and delight. There clings to it a heavenly aroma, a grateful savour of Jesus which bespeaks intimate communion with Himself. This even more than the masterly method in which the writer manipulates his theme, and the felicitous diction he employs, constitutes the charm of the book. The many delighted readers of his kindred treatise on the Laodicean Epistle, will need no stimulus to procure the book. The Church of God is laid under increased obligation to the pious Author for this substantial contribution to sacred literature, containing as it does so much seasonable truth."

Sunday-School World.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

THE "D. L. MOODY" LIBRARY.

CONTAINING TEN OF MR. MOODY'S MOST POPULAR WORKS WELL-BOUND UP IN FIVE VOLUMES, IN A NICELY-MADE BOX SIMILAR TO THE "ANNA SHIPTON" LIBRARY.

Contents.

1. Sovereign Grace. The Way to God.
2. Power from On High. To the Work.
3. Bible Characters. Prevailing Prayer.
4. Addresses. Faithful Saying.
5. The Old Gospel. Heaven.

10/6 NETT.

"Fresh, direct, pictorial, and powerful."—General Baptist Magazine.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Fry's Cocoa

·Pure·

·Concentrated·

·Cocoa·

33 PRIZE MEDALS

awarded to the Firm

FRY'S
PURE
COCOA

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR A SAMPLE & TESTIMONIALS

J. S. FRY & SONS, BRISTOL, LONDON, and SYDNEY, N.S.W.,

Makers to the Queen and Prince of Wales.

CONSUMPTION CURABLE!

"MR. G. T. CONGREVE on CONSUMPTION

AND ITS SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT.

Showing that direful disease to be curable in all its stages; with observations on

ASTHMA, CHRONIC BRONCHITIS, etc."

SIXPENCE (Post Free), or Large Edition (cloth), 1s. 3d., from the Author, Coombe Lodge, Peckham, S.E., and Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.

The Twenty-first Series of Weekly Cases is now publishing, from May to August.

NOTICE TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN," WHO MAY BE PERSONALLY OR RELATIVELY INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED in this journal BEFORE, EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

LETTER from REV. E. V. STEPHENS, BIBLE CHRISTIAN MINISTER.

Writing me from Holmesdale Road, Sevenoaks, Feb. 8, 1887, on behalf of a poor man needing medicine at reduced charge, Mr. Stephens says:—"The medicine I had from you strengthened my chest so that I can now preach and sing with great ease."

It was two years ago that Mr. Stephens first wrote me from Liskeard in Cornwall. He had had a Cough for four months; the expectoration had become purulent; profuse perspirations followed—appetite also failed. The doctors pronounced the disease to be Chronic Bronchitis.

Mr. S. commenced with my medicine at once as directed; and took an alkaline tonic, as he suffered also from nervous exhaustion and stomach derangement. Letters very soon reported an improvement, and correspondence continued until writing me in the July following. He says:—"I am happy to tell you that I am free from chest disease."

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

FIVE GOLD MEDALS AWARDED.

Goddard's Plate Powder

NON-MERCURIAL.

FOR NEARLY HALF A CENTURY this Powder has sustained an unrivalled reputation throughout the United Kingdom and Colonies as the Best and Safest Article for Cleaning Silver and Electro Plate. Sold in Boxes 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Chemists, Ironmongers, &c.

THE GOSPEL MALE CHORUS BOOK.

A Volume of New Part-Songs, Choruses and Anthems. Arranged expressly for Male Voices. Edited and Composed by James McGranahan.

In either Old Notation or Tonic Sol-Fa.

Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth limp, 2s.; Cloth bds., 2s. 6d.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

THE GOSPEL MALE CHORUS BOOK.

ADDITIONAL PIECES.

Edited by James McGranahan.

In either Old Notation or Tonic Sol-Fa.

Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth boards, 2s.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

"OUT OF EGYPT."

A Series of Discourses and Bible Readings on the Exodus of Israel, and its Spiritual Lessons. By Dr. G. F. Pentecost. Tinted covers, 2s.; Cloth, 2s. 6d.; Cloth boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"A capital book, full of both mental and moral force, and all aglow with evangelical sentiment."

Primitive Methodist.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

UPPER BURMAH AND OPIUM.

By Rev. GOODEVE MABBS.

A few days ago, in Parliament, ryce asked Sir John Gorst about the sale of opium and spirits in the newly-annexed province of Upper Burmah. In substance Sir John replied that, under the regulations of March 19, 1886, licences for the sale of these deleterious articles were issued subject to the condition that they should not be sold to the Burmese. He said that the suspension of such licences would stimulate the importation of opium, the manufacture of spirits, and the sale of both; but the Secretary of State would advise that stringent precautions should be taken to prevent the issue of licences and the sale of these drugs, where the population is purely Burmese.

On several accounts Sir John Gorst's reply is remarkable. Tacitly it admits that both opium and spirits are injurious to the Burmese, as well it may. In your issue of February 3 last I quoted an official statement on the subject, made by the Chief Commissioner, of what was then British Burmah, but is now known as Lower Burmah, in which he sums up the official evidence before him in a black catalogue of evils. The report of the Committee on East India Finance, in 1871, also furnished some sad and graphic details: "Prior to the introduction of British rule into Aracan, the punishment for using opium was death. The people were hard-working, sober, and simple-minded. Unfortunately, one of the earliest measures of our administration was the introduction of the Abkari rules of the Bengal Board of Revenue. The Assistant-Commissioner, Mr. Hind, who had passed the greater part of his long life amongst the people of Aracan, described the progress of demoralisation. He saw a fine, healthy generation of strong men succeeded by a rising generation of haggard opium smokers and eaters, who indulged to such an extent that their mental and physical powers were alike wasted. Then followed a fearful increase in gambling and dacoity. Indeed, so disastrous were the results of our opium policy in Upper Burmah that the Government of India were at last obliged to take means largely to restrict the consumption of opium.

But if the smoking of opium produces "demoralisation, misery, and ruin" among the Burmese, as Commissioner Aitcheson declares that it does, why not also among their Chinese neighbours, many of whom also reside in Burmah, or resort to it for the purposes of trade? Is it because we do not look to them for "the development of the land revenue" that we are criminally indifferent to their welfare? Or, is it because our opium trade is so profitable that we are unwilling to surrender it? The Chinese declare that the regular use of the drug in their country produces effects similar to those ascribed to it in Burmah, and they object to it on these very grounds. In 1839 they forcibly resisted its introduction, even at the risk of war, and defeat did not induce them to legalise the trade. Indeed, this was not brought about by us until 1860, after our third victorious campaign.

But were it admitted that only the Burmese are likely to be injured by opium, what could be more futile or more disingenuous than to issue licences for the sale of opium and spirits in Upper Burmah on the condition that these articles should not be sold to the Burmese? Allowing for human nature, is there any probability that such a condition would really be observed? And if the people of Burmah are more susceptible than others to the seductions of opium, as the limitation would imply, must not that fact increase the improbability? This must be so well understood by our Indian officials that the condition referred to seems to have been formulated chiefly to throw dust into the eyes of the British public.

But the Secretary of State believes that to suspend the issue of licences would be to stimulate the importation of opium. How can this be? As the monopolists in British India we can withhold the drug if we please; and as the rulers of Burmah we can exclude the importation. But from the province of Assam on the one hand, which, for the sake of revenue, we have allowed to be debauched, opium doubtless in any case will be more or less smuggled in. On the other hand, from the Western provinces of China, where during the last twenty years opium has been cultivated in increasing quantities to satisfy the craving which our selfish and wicked policy has done the utmost to promote, the less potent and the cheaper drug is doubtless making its way into Burmah. Can we keep it out, or shall we lessen the evil of its introduction by licensing shops to sell our own stronger opium as well? But then we shall share in the profits, even if we ruin our customers; and we call ourselves a Christian nation!

Hitherto it has been our policy for the most part to protect our Indian subjects from the disastrous effects of opium, while we promote its sale among the Chinese. In Lower Burmah we took a different course until the people rose up against it with a great and bitter cry. Now, whilst hypocritically pretending that we wish to protect the Burmese from the evil, we profess ourselves powerless to prevent it, because the curse that we have so long imposed upon China, and which in a less degree we have permitted in Assam, has come home to roost in our possessions in Upper Burmah! Is it not time for Great Britain totally to change her opium policy and to make an end of the trade once for all?

◆

SANCTIFICATION AND HOPE.

BIBLE-READING BY REV. HUBERT BROOKE, READ AT KESWICK CONVENTION.

Taking 1 Pet. iii. 15: "Sanctify in your hearts Christ as Lord, and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear" (R.V.), he said:—

There are three things suggested by this passage. First, sanctification as here implied; second, the hope of the believer; third, the reason of the hope to questioners. A time may be near us all when the hosts of infidelity will come upon us like a flood, or when we shall be met in our home surroundings with persecution. But let us not shrink from it, or seek by devices or subterfuges to escape giving our testimony, but sanctify the Lord in our hearts; and thus we shall make fresh discoveries of grace, and thank God for the danger that brought us nearer Him.

It seems quite out of place to tell men they are to sanctify the Lord, but its meaning is to separate, to devote to one end and aim. It is to separate Christ from all other lords, and to yield Him the position of Lord and Master and King. You are to do to the Lord Jesus Christ what Israel did to David (2 Sam. v. 3); they anointed him King. Was that his first anointing? No. Twenty years before the Lord had done this, but the people did not admit his claims; they withheld the absolute authority of autocratic power which was his by right, but now at last they make Him king, definitely, once for all.

What was the experience of the Israelites should be that of every saved soul. Of the increase of his government there is no end. Enemies must be subdued north, south, east, and west, till from Dan to Beersheba all is brought into settled peace and perfect control. And this aspect is perfectly true for the believer, who, having made Him King once for all, is then only in the right condition to recognise his authority over will, home, pleasures, joys, all. If his claims are thus recognised, one part after another of your being will be brought under his dominion, and thus in your little round of life there will come a foretaste of the glory that is yet to be. Of the increase of his government there shall be no end.

Such is the theory of sanctification in its double aspect, but the theory is a poor thing alone; a cold doctrine; clear, perhaps, to the eye but, when translated into a matter of experience, when it is enthroned in the heart, and holds undivided rule there, a blessed thing indeed! What, then, is the "hope" here mentioned? Assuredly the second coming of Christ, when these bodies shall be changed and glorified; and, if such be the future of these bodies of ours, let them now be treated and used as becomes the glorious future to which they are called.

Our third clause urges us to be ready with the reason of this hope. It is a fact that Christ dwells in the believer's body now (Col. i. 27; Rom. viii. 11), and, if God raised Christ with a glorified body, He will likewise so raise ours, and death shall have no more dominion over us. Are you able to give a reason of your hope? Have you grasped this result of the Divine indwelling? It is possible to be a spiritual pauper for lack of the inheritance which is yours. Hence Paul's indignant questions beginning in several parts of his Epistles, "Know ye not?" If Christ be not sanctified in your hearts, your reason will fail you when inquiry comes, and your power will be gone.

There are three deductions as to the truth of sanctification:—(1) The principle on which this Divine indwelling takes place and is sustained. (2) The prejudices with which this truth is met by objectors. (3) The perversions of those who are led into it and are sometimes led astray.

As to the first, as ye have received Christ Jesus, so walk in Him, and as there are three great factors concerned in our reception of Christ, viz., the Word, the Spirit, and faith (Gal. v. 26), so these three are connected with the indwelling of Christ in the believer (Eph. iii. 17). Let, then, this question come home to each one of us: Does my sanctification rest on this threefold basis?

To those who oppose this blessed truth it is sufficient to say that the underlying principle of sanctification as of justification is: there must be working in, before working out. There must be faith first, then fighting. Life and health first, then growth. But saddest of all is the perversion of this truth by those who once enjoyed it. It is important to remember that a gift can neither be given nor received gradually, but its benefits can be gradually enjoyed. Some have said, "I am now absolutely without sin." Of such we can only say, "If we say that we have no sin we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." Beware of claiming more than God's Word warrants, and honour its restrictions as well as its promises. The man who can say he is sinless, is condemned by God's Word as making Him a liar. Our text shows that the heart can be yielded to Christ's dominion, but this presence of Christ in the heart does not mean that the believer is sinless. It does mean that sin shall not have dominion over us.

Like old Zachariah, we can rejoice that, being delivered out of the hands of our enemies, we can serve Him without fear. Every believer is invited, commanded, and enabled to sanctify Christ as Lord in his heart, and it is a shame to us if we do not do it. Jesus will bear all the burdens of, and deliver out of all temptation, the believer who absolutely trusts Him. That you may know the mighty power of the Word, pray over it, compare spiritual things with spiritual, search, dig deep into it, build high into it, obey it, delight in it, meditate on it day and night. It is the only unfailing guide, the only ever-watchful guardian, which shall be with thee when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down and when thou risest up; the only companion which never wearies and never fails.

BENEFIT SOCIETIES FOR SERVANTS.—In answer to our recent query we have received the addresses of several societies established for the benefit of domestic and other servants. Several friends draw attention to the sick club in connection with the Y.W.C. Association, 316, Regent-street, W. Among the other institutions named are, the General Domestic Servants' Benevolent Institution, 32, Sackville-street, Piccadilly, W.; Church of England Temperance Women's Benefit Society, 112, Palace-chambers, Westminster, S.W.; Daughters of Temperance Sick and Burial Society, 138, Bedford-street, Lower Moss-lane, Hulme, Manchester; Family Temperance Benefit Society, Kensington Hall, Balm-street, Kensington, Liverpool.

For the Young.

LESSNOS FROM FLOWERS.

I think that flowers are very important things, not only for beauty, but for teaching. In support of this I will remind you that of Solomon, the wisest man of his time, the first thing said in his praise was that he spoke of trees, from "the cedar that is in Lebanon," beautiful to look at, majestic in size, "to the hyssop on the wall," a little weed, which was used in the Passover sprinkling. And by way of contrast to this commendation of a wise man, one of our greatest poets, wishing to condemn a man for his stupidity, said of him—

A primrose by the river's brim—
A yellow primrose was to him,
And it was nothing more.

I think he meant to say that if we have the sense to listen, a flower has a good deal to say to us.

Will some of you spell the word "flower"? You see, it has six letters, the first of them being F. Let us see if Faith is taught by flowers.

Mr. Smithies, who used to conduct The British Workman paper, was a very kind-hearted man. Many years ago he went to visit the Lancashire people when they were starving. At this time they had no work, because no cotton came into the country for a long time, so they had nothing to weave in the factories. In one house he found two old people sitting in a room where there were no tables, no chairs; in fact the poor man had sold nearly everything he had, except a very nice flowering plant in a pot in the window. Mr. Smithies said, "Well, you can get one or two shillings for that." The old man replied, very firmly, "We cannot sell that." "Why not?" "Because that flower, by growing so nicely in our miserable room, and by being so bright when everything else was dull, has preached to us all the time, 'Trust in God.' We said, it seems as though God meant it to keep up our faith. We cannot now sell that which has been our helper in our trouble."

The next letter, L, cannot be made to stand for a better word than Love. How plants love the light, and how they grow out towards it. Not many yards from my house is a small window which is beautiful from the street all the year round with flowers, but if you look at these plants from the room inside, the flower stand is dull and ugly enough. The flowers love the light, and we, the passers-by, have the pleasure of looking at the bright blossoms, because they grow towards the light.

You know how a climbing plant will cling to its support, how it seems to love it and depend on it, and follow the course of the stick, or string. Think of the French bean, or the more beautiful canary creeper, and you will see how a plant may be made to creep almost anywhere. And that is the reason, my boy, why your father is very careful who is your friend; because if you are intimate with a bad young man, or a silly young woman, you will be drawn by your friendship into their ways. You do not know how dull, how very sad, or how very full of pain those poor people in London may be, who will get your flowers. I know how much they are valued in a hospital, which is generally a bright and cheerful place. But how much more precious must they be in dirty homes, in narrow back streets, in courts and alleys, where the sun shines seldom, if at all. And your bunches may go to cheer the hearts of some lonely ones.

And now to a fresh letter in the word flower—the letter O. Order and Obedience both begin with the same letter. If I had to show you how the creation obeys the command of God, I should ask you to find all the plants you could get—the green scum from a pond, sea-weeds, ferns, mosses, and flowering plants—and I would try to make you understand how they all stand in their classes, how some of them have more parts than others, and how all of them can be sorted out, classified, and arranged in their orders. There are said to be about eighty thousand different kinds. But remember this; seeds from one of these would not raise another plant; each plant has its own seed. You may see on a piece of paper three or four kinds of fine dust—it appears like dust—but one dust will grow up into ferns, another into puff-balls, and so on; but the puff-ball dust never makes ferns, nor the fern seeds (or spores) ever come to be puff-balls. So that the growth of plants is always orderly; and when the seeds of good corn and of weeds are mixed up at the time of sowing, the corn sprouts up from the corn seeds and the weeds spring up from the weed seeds.

There was a very dirty cottage, indeed, in Long Row, Avonbury, and the dust and cobwebs in the window left little room for the light to come in. Mrs. Smith, who visited some of the poor people about there, thought she would try the effect of a plant, so she took a nice geranium just coming into bloom down to Tom Tinker's wife. The poor woman had few things given to her, so she took care of this plant, giving it some of the tea left in the potnight and morning; then she cleaned the windows to let the plant have some light; then she took away the cobwebs, but so much light came in, and the plant looked so bright, that they could see how dirty and untidy the room was; and then they made the room neater, and whitewashed the walls, all because the plant, by its beauty, had taught them to love order.

Flowers teach us to work. The word work is suggested by the fourth letter, W. Silently the buttercup makes honey (not butter) in her cup; if she did not it would be useless for the busy bee to improve the shining hour. And all flowers, all plants, whether they have flowers to make honey or not, are industrious workers. Where would you get your coal if plants had not grown up, fallen, and become matted together in the great marshes in the ages long ago? How could your house be built without the planks and beams which grow in great dark forests of pine?

The largest trees in the world are those which grow on the mountains on the other side of America. Some are much higher than the highest point of St. Paul's Cathedral, and one is so large at the bottom that an archway has been cut in the stem large enough for a horse and cart to be driven through; yet the seed is very small indeed. What work, what patient toiling there must have been in the growing seed, in the tiny plant, and in the tree, for it to become so great. Try to think how small the result must be each day in such an enormous tree; and when you think how small your efforts are to do right, and to follow Christ, remember the great tree, and hope, and pray that your little efforts are recognised and encouraged by your Father in heaven.

We will now try to see whether the letter E shows that flowers teach us Earnestness. If there is a comfortable, well-to-do-looking plant, it is the sungreen—a great cushion of thick juicy leaves in circular nests, and sometimes a large strong stem with blossoms rising out of the middle. And all this healthy growth, this solid vegetation has sprung from what? Rich, moist earth? No, the dry surface of a tile on a house-top. The plant was meant to grow, so it set about in earnest, found food and moisture in a wonderful way, and that is how to make the very best out of small means.

It reminds me of a young German, who came to Bristol about sixty years ago. As soon as he had found a small quiet home for himself, he at once gave all the money he could possibly spare towards supporting a cottage for a few orphans. It was wonderful where the money came from, and it is still more wonderful how the thousands of pounds are sent every year to keep the two thousand orphans who are now under the care of George Müller. The two cases are much alike; we see the plant on the dry stone, we think of rich earth as being needed for the roots to pick up their nourishment. We forget the sun which gives the true light to the sungreen. So men are apt to forget that the prosperity of the Müller orphan houses is dependent on the power of the Highest, who makes men give their money. No, not their money, his money lent to them, to support these poor little children.

The last letter in our word is R. It will best represent Righteousness, or leaving out the middle, Rightness. A man who used to examine horses for me employed this word right, when he wanted to give a very good report, either of the horse's body or character. Any anxious question about the sight, or the wind, or the temper, or the near hind leg, was answered by "He's right, sir." He did not say "all right," or "quite right," simply "right." It was this horsey man's certificate of merit. And this word "right" will include most of the others which we have been thinking about. Faith in Christ, love to God, obedience to parents, orderliness, industry, heartiness in work, all will appear in the child or the man who is "right" with God.

God has made man in "his own image"—the most perfect body, mind, and soul—but sin has come in and spoilt the beauty of all; the man is no longer "right," he is crushed, or bruised, or in some way disfigured. What is to be done? Christ comes and offers to give his "rightness" to us, to set us right again. How happy are those of you who, while quite young, have given your hearts to Christ, and have asked Him for his rightness.—Sunday-school Chronicle.

SEASIDE SERVICES FOR CHILDREN.

August:—Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Scarborough and Filey; Mr. Hutchinson, Bridlington; Mr. Dennes, Whitby; Mr. Spiers, Redcar; Mr. J. H. Greene, Saltburn; Mr. Haley, Whitley, Newcastle-on-Tyne; Captain Chapman, Cromer; Mr. Chaplin, Felixstowe; Messrs. C. H. and E. Collier, Herne Bay; Mr. Seagrove, Broadstairs; Messrs. Carrot and E. Hughes, Deal; Mr. E. Jaquet, Walmer; Mr. Trickett, Eastbourne; Mr. Figgis, Brighton; Mr. Pitts, St. Leonards; Mr. Barnard, Littlehampton; Messrs. Gibbert Hughes and Howard Staines, Worthing; Mr. Hall, Southsea; Mr. Salisbury, Bournemouth; Rev. A. Storrs, Sandown; Mr. Pericles Green, Weymouth; Mr. Symonds, Swanage; Mr. Huckett, Dawlish and Teignmouth; Mr. Harris, Weston-super-Mare; Mr. Moore, Ilfracombe; Mr. Bellingham, Llandudno, Colwyn Bay, Llanfairfechan, &c.; Mr. Greening, Tenby; Messrs. Kirlew, and Shaw, Lytham, St. Ann's, Blackpool, &c.; Hon. W. G. Scott, Elie (Fife); Rev. W. J. Hindley, Margate.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sunday, August 21, Matt. xv. 1—14; Monday, August 22, Matt. xv. 15—28; Tuesday, August 23, Matt. xv. 29—39; Wednesday, August 24, Matt. xvi. 1—12; Thursday, August 25, Matt. xvi. 13—28; Friday, August 26, Matt. xvii. 1—13; Saturday, August 27, Matt. xvii. 14—27.

CONVERTED PRIESTS.

In Le Signal, M. Reveillaud writes on behalf of those Roman Catholic priests who are leaving Popery. No better symptom of the great movement which is to deliver France from the fatal yoke of Popery, can probably be found than this desertion from the ranks of the clergy. In spite of menaces and anathemas, in spite of the opposition of family, and of public opinion; at the risk of abandoning friends, of being treated as Pariahs, without position and perhaps without bread, many of these men are obeying the voice of conscience.

As their church excommunicates them, it is to the Protestant Church they turn. Should we not then receive them, extending to them a helping hand? With the Jesuit education, which falsifies the conscience and corrupts the heart, can we wonder if some are false and unscrupulous? But this is supposing the worst; thank God, in most cases these liberated captives seek to bring true liberty to others. The revelations made by these ex-priests of the secret desires of many of their colleagues to come out too, should lead us to offer help and sympathy to them. It is for us to seek to fulfil the Lord's promise to such as forsake all, that they "shall receive a hundredfold more now in this time."

COPENHAGEN.—We make more progress in our work than ever before, and now hold from thirty to forty meetings in the open air every week. We have also well-attended meetings in the Bethesda three evenings weekly. The Salvation Army is doing good work, and, although I cannot agree with them in all things, I am glad that these good earnest Christian people have come to preach the Gospel here, as we want as many workers as possible to stir up this pleasure-seeking population of Copenhagen. W. Wright.

Letters to the Editor.

QUALIFICATIONS OF A MISSION PREACHER.

SIR,—Having been for some months entirely devoted to mission work, I wish to chronicle certain impressions which I have received in the course of it as to the needed qualifications for such ministry, which may possibly be of use to others. I would lay stress on the following points :—

(1) The mission preacher must appreciate the work of the regular pastor. In the past the unjust depreciation of pastoral work has in part been the cause of the unjust depreciation of evangelistic agency. Alas! for evangelists who talk as if a darkness that might be felt enveloped congregations until they come to disperse it. God blesses justice in Christian work and the proper valuation of the labour of all his servants. The true evangelist will often realise: "Other men have laboured, and I am entering into their labours."

(2) If the mission preacher is wise, he will not lay too much stress on visible results. But why should we not copy the angels, and rejoice at once over sinners as actually converted to God? Simply because we have not angelic insight. We can only know men by their fruits, and must wait before we confidently pronounce on them until those fruits have time to show themselves. The bane of evangelistic labour has often been its premature boastfulness of results which have not seldom been tabulated and set forth in print with much blowing of trumpets. And this insatiable demand for the visible may easily lead to improper ways of attempting to secure it—namely, the putting of pressure on persons, leading them to say more than their genuine convictions would warrant.

I believe fully in the "inquiry-room" and the supplementing of public discourse by private teaching; but it is an awful thing to approach closely a human soul, and he who treads its avenues ought to put his shoes from off his feet and walk with a God-inspired wariness, knowing that he may easily do harm as well as good. To heal men's moral hurts slightly; to tell them that they are converted before God's Spirit does, is to help them to a formal profession, and the Church to members unworthy of the name. Nor can I advocate the instant opening of the Church's doors to those who think they are converted through the mission. "Let these also first be proved." Let the pastor have some interviews with them. Let there be time for the chaff (if any) to blow away. Premature church membership must be a great evil; for those who are members of the church, not of Christ, regard themselves as standard gold, "hall marked," as it were, by pastor and deacon.

(3) The mission preacher must trust more to God's truth than to man's anecdotes. Not thus have the greatest spiritual victories been won. I have been struck, in reading that admirable and helpful book by Rev. Owen Jones, entitled "Some of the Great Preachers of Wales" (a book truly for all ministers), with the fact that the discourses of these men which God so richly blessed were properly sermons, for they have in them an unmistakable theological backbone. The "address" of which I complain is a kind of invertebrate sermon—the place of the theological backbone being supplied by a loosely-jointed series of anecdotes. Certainly for such congregations as we have in ordinary missions the "sermon," as containing more of real teaching, is better than the "address." The possibilities of the "sermon" are very great. It may be brightened by a judicious use of anecdotes, and popularised by apt illustrations, without losing its distinctive character.

(4) The mission preacher must beware of merely denouncing sin in general. He must analyse sin into sins. The common sins of life, not those of ancient Babylon; the commonplace sins of life, not simply those which are the rarer and more tragical exhibitions of iniquity, should have such a place in his preaching that the average offender shall see himself guilty.

(5) The mission preacher must frequently insist on the great retributive laws, and the anger of God against sin. In his brief ministry he must beware of giving the impression that while there is much for the obedient to hope for, there is nothing for the disobedient to dread, in the life to come. No futurist fancies, no teleological speculations should hinder him declaring that for the unforgiven the great retributive laws overleap the bounds of time, and follow the wilful sinner into the "ages of ages." These austere truths must be uttered not austerely, but with the inflexible resolution of the man who sides with the justice of God while he sighs over the sin that makes the exercise of that justice inevitable. It is so much easier for us to preach the more genial verities, that preachers need carefully to watch themselves lest the tragical side of truth should be almost insensibly suppressed by them. It would be a wholesome exercise not only for evangelists, but for pastors generally, to go through a list of a year's sermons, and to find out what proportion of them contained any reference to punishment beyond the present world.

(6) I think the mission preacher should speak to Christians as well as to the unconverted. I have found a short exposition of Scripture given to the former during the "reading" to be useful. I am sure that in our special services we should largely aim at the elevation of the spiritual life of the Church. One of the reasons why God cannot give some churches many converts is that they are not ready for them, and would not know what to do with them.

(7) Most important is it that the mission preacher should approach and continue his work in the spirit of earnest prayer for the souls of men. Professor Finney has recorded that if ever that spirit declined in him for a single day, to the same extent his work declined. Definite prayer for each mission seems, from my experience, to be the Divine order. Successful prayer for one mission is not enough to secure the blessing for the next. New triumphs demand new entreaties.

(8) Above all, the mission preacher must be filled with the Spirit. His brief ministry especially needs that the Spirit of God should work in him mightily, and so should work through him mightily. All the ill-self in him—the vain, proud, obstructive self—must come to the vanishing-point, that so from that point the Spirit of God may advance upon him with a large baptism of gifts and graces. Truly, whether we are evangelists or pastors, we shall find that the death of self is the life of the sermon. I would merely add to this that hitherto I have found the work of conducting special services amongst Congregational churches a matter of real delight both from the sympathy of the pastors, the kindness of the members, and from the fact that not a few persons have professed to receive spiritual benefit—how many I can only leave for the Great Day to declare.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

Birmingham. J. F. T. HALLOWES.

A WORKING MEN'S ASSOCIATION.

SIR,—The extract you give in a recent issue of THE CHRISTIAN, from your Boston namesake, in reference to infidel literature, must have been read with painful interest by all your readers. The description is very true as regards our English workshops, and, though the Christian Evidence Society does good service, no adequate force seems to be brought to bear against the tide of unbelief and infidelity.

With the personal influence of openly professed opponents of Christianity in the workshop, the attractions of the public-house, the opportunities of desecrating the Sabbath made so alluring by Sunday excursions, is it a matter for surprise that so many take the downward course, especially as so many of our places of worship are practically closed against the "working man," or, at least, his presence is not encouraged?

Some direct effort ought to be made to reach our working classes, and I think this can best be done, if not only be done, by working men. In my experience of workshops and factories I have noticed that among those employed there is frequently a small sprinkling of really converted men; but with so many against them they are either silenced by timidity or overborne by the weight of opposition. The forces against them are united in opposition; but they are separated, and, like the Israelites in the time of Nehemiah, need the sounding of the trumpet to call them together. Why should we not have our Christian Association for Working Men, somewhat after the manner of the Y.M.C.A., to bring together Christian working men for mutual help, and so form an aggressive body against the evils of the day?

I have felt this matter laid upon me for some months past, and now bring it forward in the hope that others may be stirred up to see the necessity for something being done.—I am, &c.,

JOHN J. BENNY.

65, Evershot-road, Crouch-hill, N.

"NOTHING TO DO."

SIR,—THE CHRISTIAN is welcomed every market night (Saturday) in the country farmhouse of which I am mistress, but though I have taken the paper through a newsagent for many years I have never ventured to address you before. I am led to do so now by the interesting contribution under the above heading, in your issue of August 5, by Rev. J. E. Linnell. He says rightly that our country parishes are becoming depopulated, the land impoverished, our best villagers driven away into other lands, or compelled to crowd into already over-crowded towns, &c., and goes on to say, "I will not now attempt to show whose the fault may be, or where it may be found, if it should lie in circumstances rather than in persons."

But the tone of his paper does to my mind cast a reflection upon the farmers, when he speaks of their being "charged with refusing work to the hurt of themselves and their farms, and labourers are told that they now reap the fruit of what they sowed, when, yielding to the advice of professional agitators, they claimed higher wages a few years ago." I cannot understand farmers who would act in such a foolish and vindictive way as that; self-interest, if no higher motive, would teach them better. The times are exceptionally hard, and farmers cannot afford to keep the hoe going in the summer months so as to help the poor to face the winter now as they used to. It is not, I am sure, from any resentful remembrance of undue pressure in the days we saw some fifteen or sixteen years ago, but just because their capital has dwindled away, and present prices are so low that the cost of production must be made as low as possible. It is over-production and foreign competition we farmers have to cope with now.

I know we are all too ready to study self, and think our rights are greater than our neighbours'. Still I must call Mr. Linnell's attention to the fact that the poor are not the only sufferers from the depressed times. How many farmers there are with hair whitened before its time, and hope and health gone, with "nothing to do"? I may speak, for I have been associated with farming all my life—with working farmers I mean, not gentlemen farmers—and we have tried to help the labourers always; having men now working for us whose fathers worked for our fathers. But we are brought so near to other lands now by means of telegraph and steam, with perfect machinery abroad to help, and perfect appliances for transit; besides which, foreign consigners are favoured by our railway companies to the prejudice of the home-producers.

Then there is our climate. That is in higher hands than ours, but it is certain that the foreigner can grow better quality than we can, and undersell us on our own soil. I cannot wish food dearer while there are so many poor in the land, but I should be thankful if the conditions of English farming were such that we could meet our expenses, and give employment to a happy and contented set of labourers.

Our men have no hesitation in saying "their soul is their own," and it is perfectly right they should speak out if they have a grievance. They are a valuable class of men, and I regret to see or know of them being out of work; it means mischief to themselves, and to others.

Mr. Linnell's closing paragraph touches the root of the difficulty—selfishness, and a lack of conscience toward God all round. If present trials lead us as a people to be more frugal, and, above all, more God honouring, we may take Psalm ciii. as our song yet, and thank Him for adversity. I enclose my address, but prefer signing myself,

Yours faithfully, PETERBOROUGH.

SINS OF OMISSION.—James says that "to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." The sin, here defined, is one of omission. The opportunity of doing good is present and seen, but the good is not done. The obligation to do good is disregarded, and this is sin. A fearful amount of sin in this form is committed by men.—Independent.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Church Missionary Society have accepted Miss Emma Goldie for work in China at her own charges.

A special mission will be held at Hardsfield on October 15 to 25, the missioner being Rev. G. Howell.

In a paper read at the annual meeting of the Bangor Diocesan Conference, Rev. R. W. Griffith, rector of Llandegal, said that the Church was for the people—not the people for the Church.

Rev. F. E. Wigram, honorary secretary of the Church Missionary Society, who has been on a visiting tour of some of the Society's stations, is expected to reach England about the first week in September.

Rev. R. P. Ashe is on his way back to Africa. Rev. James Johnson, of Lagos, has taken leave of the Church Missionary Society committee on his return to West Africa. Mr. Johnson has spoken freely of the spiritual benefits received by him from this visit.

The Beckett Home for Waifs and Strays, at Meanwood, towards which £1200 was contributed by Miss Beckett, of Gainsborough, was opened on Tuesday, last week, by the Bishop of Ripon. The Home will accommodate thirty girls.

The next presentation to the living of Chilcompton was recently submitted for sale at Tokenhouse Yard, but no offer was made for it, though it was described as a very desirable investment. The present incumbent is seventy-eight years of age.

The Daily Chronicle notes that several Church livings in different dioceses, recently offered for sale, have not only not been sold, but have not elicited a solitary bid.

There are said to be 700 men ordained every year in the Anglican Church. The number of vacancies which occur every year, together with the number of new livings, is about 550, so there are about 150 ordained every year for whom there are no churches.

On a recent Sunday Mr. Henry Varley preached with much acceptance in the pulpit of Rev. Dr. Bennet's church in Chelsea. If some of the more courageous clergymen of the Church of England would imitate Dr. Bennet's example, and invite Nonconformist ministers or laymen to preach for them, the wall of partition between the State Church and other denominations would soon fall down.

A writer in The Nonconformist, describing a visit to All Saints' Church, Margaret-street, on Monday week, when "the occasion was the burial service of the late Mother Superior of All Saints' Sisterhood," says:—"What with the posing of the clergy, the genuflections, bowings, and prostrations of the majority of the congregation, the coup d'œil made it difficult for an outsider to realise that this was a ceremonial in a Protestant church."

Letters dated March 14, from Mr. Mackay, in Uganda, state that a great fire has destroyed King Mwanga's house, and the Arabs had persuaded him to give orders that all his young men were to read the Koran: both of these circumstances causing some alarm among the Christian converts. One Christian had been arrested, and, it was believed, put to death. Emin Pasha has sent to Mr. Mackay two tusks of ivory, value £55, as a contribution to the Church Missionary Society, in acknowledgment of Mr. Mackay's services in his behalf.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. John Morgan, of Whitefield Tabernacle, Leonard-street, City-road, has returned from his annual evangelistic tour in Devonshire, having visited Exmouth, Totnes, Ashburton, Chudleigh, and Weston. The meetings held were generally well attended, and many testified to great good received.

SALVATION ARMY.

"Captain" Roberts, of Swansea, has been sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment for an alleged obstruction.

The Army have recently commenced work in Amsterdam. There are already over one hundred "soldiers" there.

A column and a half of last week's War Cry is devoted to the reporting of cases of faith healing in connection with meetings by Major Pearson.

A correspondent of The War Cry says that Liverpool is steeped in vice, and there are to be seen sights hardly equalled in Marylebone or Seven Dials for depths of misery, squalor, filth, and wretchedness.

While travelling on a road on the side of a mountain in Switzerland, the Maréchale sustained a serious accident, through a large piece of stone falling from the mountain above on to her arm, and bruising it seriously.

PRESBYTERIAN.

The fourth meeting of the General Presbyterian Council falls to be held in London next year, between June 26 and July 6.

At the last meeting of the London Presbytery it was reported that the Foreign Mission fund is the only scheme which does not show a decrease.

The amount received to the present time on account of the Free Church of Scotland Sustentation Fund is £1000 less than last year. There is a growing feeling that there is a lack of energy in the management.

The London Presbytery have arranged to receive the Independent congregation at Hackney, ministered to by the late Dr. M'Auslane, into the fellowship of the church on September 28.

Two young men were recently dismissed from a hotel at Gairloch, N.B., for refusing to drive out pleasure parties on the Lord's Day. This was made the occasion of a large and representative meeting in the Free Church, to protest against Sabbath desecration in the hotels in the summer season.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

F. L. de Carteret, of Jersey, is engaged in evangelistic work during the summer months, and has conducted various services with acceptance.

Thomas Little, of Manchester, late teacher at Rawdon, goes out to Friends' Mission, Brumana, Syria, where his services are needed, and will be heartily welcomed.

George Wilkie, late head master of Rawdon School, is likely to settle in Kent for teaching and evangelistic work, under the auspices of the Home Mission Committee.

A series of tent meetings has just been concluded at Gloucester, including street-preaching, Bible-readings, and children's meetings; forty-six gatherings in all were held satisfactorily.

Josiah Dillon has reached Manchioneal, Jamaica, and finds the work progressing there. Meetings for worship, Sunday-school and temperance work are all well sustained. Drink ravages the island, and the English show a terrible example. The Friends are starting a day-school.

BAPTIST.

The seventh anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. H. W. Taylor at St. Albans has been signalised by the addition to the church of forty members.

Broadmead Chapel, Bristol, was reopened, after alterations, on Sunday week, when Mr. J. Manton Smith preached morning, afternoon, and evening.

The pastor of Queen's-street Chapel, Erith, has taken much interest in the fruit-pickers in Kent; short services, with bright singing, have been conducted in the vicinity of the huts.

At George-street Chapel, Plymouth, on Thursday week, farewell was said to two members of the church, Rev. J. Percy Bruce and A. G. Shorrock, who are shortly proceeding to China as missionaries.

The annual meetings of the Christian Association (Campbellites), occupying two days, were held at the West London Tabernacle, Notting-hill, last week, under the presidency of Dr. W. T. Moore. The secretary reported an increase in the membership of the churches affiliated with the Association, in London, Liverpool, Birkenhead, Chester, Saltney, Southport, Southampton, Cheltenham, and Guernsey. It was announced that 304 had been admitted by baptism.

METHODIST.

Rev. J. Champness has now over forty Joyful News evangelists.

It is said that twenty years ago there were only sixteen Wesleyan chapels in London, while to day there are ninety.

Mr. R. McLean, evangelist, is conducting a successful mission at the Methodist Free Church, Cross Stampford-street, Leeds.

Rev. John Bond has a list of one hundred local Wesleyan preachers ready to take work within forty miles of the Bank of England.

Special services have been conducted in connection with the United Methodist Free Church, at West Vale, by Miss Cook, of Halifax.

Rev. W. T. Davidson will deliver the Fernley Lecture next year. The subject will have reference to the place of "Conscience" in the spiritual life.

A Vigilance band of young men in connection with the New Connexion Church at Oldham, are holding open-air services for the people in the streets.

A new lecture and reading-room at the Wesleyan Church, St. John's-square, Clerkenwell, was opened last Sunday, when Rev. Thomas Champness preached on the occasion.

Rev. Dr. Pope, who, since he retired from the theological professorship at Didsbury Wesleyan College, has gradually become weaker, is lying seriously ill at his residence, near Manchester.

A united camp-meeting was held in the Cattle Market by the congregations of the Primitive Methodist Leeds First Circuit, on Sunday week, when it was estimated that two thousand persons were present.

At the Wesleyan Conference it was decided that memorials be signed by the President and Secretary, and forwarded to the Prime Minister, Secretary for India, and Secretary for the Colonies, praying for the abolition of the State regulation of vice in India, and other Crown colonies and dependencies.

In a few weeks, says The Methodist Recorder, the London Wesleyan Mission will have actually commenced work in the West-end of London, and no doubt its beginnings will be watched with keen interest. But the other centres, already so successful, must not be forgotten.

Writing to The Methodist Recorder, a correspondent, who has full knowledge of the country, says that no young missionary fresh from England should be sent to any station in West Africa, except in company with a minister of some experience of the climate, and of the kind and quantity of work that may be safely attempted by new arrivals.

The Southern Cross, of Melbourne, says the Tongan Government seem to have sadly failed in the execution of their most generous promises made to Sir Charles Mitchell, of toleration and forbearance. Thirty Wesleyan churches were re-opened after H.M S. Diamond left; but a law subsequently passed had the effect of closing half that number.

The Bible-class which meets in the Old Market-street Wesleyan Chapel, Bristol, on Sunday afternoons, has a history such as is identified with few organisations of the kind. It was started seven years ago by Mr. C. R. Parsons, the well-known author of "The Man with the White Hat." The class, which is for men, was commenced with thirty-three members, but the number now stands at six hundred. Mr. Parsons is enthusiastic in the work, and stirs the zeal and energy of those who become associated with him.

"FALLEN ON SLEEP."

Rev. George Austin, for forty-one years Primitive Methodist minister in various circuits.—Rev. A. B. Taylor, for thirty-eight years the esteemed pastor of the Baptist Chapel, Rochdale-road, Manchester. – Mrs. Thomas, wife of a former missionary of the Baptist British and Irish Home Mission.—Mr. Wm. Downs, one of the best friends of the Baptist Church, Ayr.—Mr. J. W. Newby, senior deacon of the Congregational Church, Sheen Vale, Mortlake.—Mrs. Edward Ingle, an invaluable worker in connection with the Baptist Church at Willingham.—Rev. F. Abel, C.M S. native pastor at Fyzabad, Oudh; he was connected with the Society for over fifty years.—Mr. Robert Arkley, of Duminald Castle, near Montrose, N.B., a staunch Free Churchman.—Rev. S. W. Reid (Free Church minister), of Helensburgh.—M. A. Alford (née Coates), an earnest worker among the needy poor at Stonehouse, Gloucester.—Rev. R. J. W. Wright, for thirty years vicar of Selston.—Mr. James Palmer, a Baptist local preacher, of Saltash.—Mrs. Wray, wife of Rev. W. Wray, Primitive Methodist minister, of Forest Hill.—Mr. W. Crook, an active member of the Baptist Chapel at Pole-street, Preston.—Mrs. Baldey, wife of Rev. Frederick Baldey, of Southsea.—Mrs. M. Edwards, of the Calvinistic Methodist Church at Brecon.—Rev. J. Bowen Jones, of Bargold, Wales.—Rev. Robert Cooke, a prominent minister of the Wesleyan body, at the age of 75 years.—Rev. W. Harley, Wesleyan Minister, Hornsey.

CONTINENTAL & FOREIGN NOTES.

GENEVA.—At the Federal shooting match held at Geneva, occasion was taken by the different religious societies to sell and gratuitously distribute Bibles, portions, tracts, &c. A large pavilion was erected for this purpose, ornamented by scrolls, on which were passages of Scripture, banners, &c. When the feverish excitement, the smoke and noise are over, it is hoped the still voice of peace may speak to many hearts.—Journal Réligieux.

MADAGASCAR.—The revision of the Malagasy Bible, which has been in hand, with some interruptions, for over thirteen years, has now been completed. On May 2 the usual prayer-meeting held by the missionaries at Antananarivo on the first Monday in the month, was made a special occasion of thanksgiving to God for the successful completion of the undertaking. Queen Ranavalona sent the Prime Minister to the service with a message of congratulation and thanks to the revisers and the Bible Society for the great gift of the Revised Bible to the Malagasy. Nearly half a million copies of the old version have been circulated among the people.

THE VICE OF GAMBLING, says The Indian Witness, is increasingly prevalent among all classes of Europeans and Eurasians in India. Young men in commercial establishments and government offices are being demoralised and ruined by scores. I know of professing Christians who have become ensnared and sadly corrupted by dabbling in race lotteries. I fear that our ministers know very little of what is going on under their very noses. If they do know, they appear to be remarkably careful not to let the fact be known. Light should be thrown on this whole business by those who are able to do so, and whose duty it is to grapple with immorality of every kind.

JEWS AND CHRISTIANITY.—In a series of articles on "Contemporary Religious History," The Journal Réligieux gives a very interesting account of Rabbi Scheinmann, of Poland, now in banishment in Siberia, who has been led to see that Jesus is the Messiah. He accidentally met with some of Mr. Rabinowitz's writings and Professor Delitsch's account of the Jewish movement in Bessarabia. About thirty Jews gather in his house, whom he teaches. One Rabbi amongst them was prepared to confess Christ in the little community last Whitsuntide. M. Scheinmann says the Jews in Siberia are much more ready to believe than those in Russia, because the former have no Rabbis to stifle the germs of thought.

A REMARKABLE CIRCULAR.—We read in The Temoignage that M. Catacano, the Inspector of Schools in Italy, has issued to the teachers a circular with which he says:—"You will have to develop and strengthen in the soul of the children, faith in God, the supreme and infinitely merciful Being. You will prove to the child by your own life, that man's object and aim is to become like God. Thus only may the solution of many educational and social problems be found out. A system of education which excludes religion cannot be perfect. Without doubt children should be taught the love of country; but it is still more noble to instil into their minds love to the God of mercy, and charity towards all men; this is the source of all virtues. I invite you, with a view to this end, to make your children read the Gospels."

MR. SPURGEON.—At the Metropolitan Tabernacle, last Sunday morning, Mr. C. H. Spurgeon announced that he had so far recovered from his recent attack of illness as to feel justified in hoping to be able to attend for some time to come to the usual ministrations connected with his church without being temporarily laid aside.

THEATRICAL MISSION. — Mrs. Courthorpe Todd writes from Macready House, Covent Garden:—The dormitories in Macready House are closed (although one floor is entirely furnished) until the whole of the purchase money for the building has been obtained. £2300 has been received, and we are waiting for friends to contribute the rest of the sum required, £2200.

Notes on Daily Readings.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 21.—CANTICLES IV.

The first six verses of this chapter may be thus summarised. "The king in a lyric song of five stanzas commends the beauty of the bride by images taken from various scenes and objects in different parts of his kingdom (1—5). The bride briefly answers (6)."—S.C.

6.—Until the day break, and the shadows flee away.—She "shuns the loving words of praise, and requests that she may be permitted to betake herself to the lonely places planted with myrrh and frankincense. 'Mountain of myrrh' and 'hill of frankincense' are appropriate names for places of devout meditation where one holds fellowship with God."—Delitzsch.

7.—Thou art all fair, my love; there is no spot in Thee.—There seems to be a distinct allusion to this verse in Eph. v. 27, "Not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish," and as this is evidently the final state of the Church in glory (see the Greek for "a glorious Church") when "presented to Himself," it suggests that this scene (7—15) refers to the Lord's second coming (see Rev. xix. 7) when "the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready."

8.—Come with me from Lebanon, my spouse.—"The order and collocation of words in the Hebrew is grand and significant, 'With me from Lebanon, O bride, with me from Lebanon shalt thou come, shalt look around (or wander forth) from the height of Amana,'" &c.—S.C. (which adds that the context favours the translation in brackets, "wander forth," which is that of the LXX., the Syriac, and Kimchi). The snowy heights of Lebanon are typical of heaven, and amongst them, in all probability, lay the scene of our Lord's transfiguration, earnest of his coming kingdom.

16.—Awake, O north wind; and come, thou south...Let my beloved come into his garden, and eat his pleasant fruits.—May not this refer to a well-recognised scene connected with the Lord's coming, his awarding his saints their meed of blame or praise (north or south wind) as He reviews their works, those "fruits of righteousness, which are through Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God" (Phil. i. 11); see also 1 Cor. iv. 5.

MONDAY, AUGUST 22.—CANTICLES V.

1.—I am come into my garden, &c.—This first verse properly belongs to the last chapter, and is the close of the scene which may fitly be called the coming of the King. "The Song of Solomon here attains its highest elevation, and its former half is fitly closed."—S.C. Comp. Rev. xix. 9.

2.—I sleep, but my heart waketh.—The commencement of the second half of the Canticles, or (viewing it as composed of six Acts) of the Fourth Act. This Act or Idyl goes on to vi. 3. Hengstenburg calls the first three Acts the history of the union, and the last three of the reunion. If the first part ends with the coming of the King and the marriage supper of the Lamb, the second part goes back to the commencement of a Christian's sad experience of personal declension, or, as it is in Rev. ii. 4, "Thou hast left thy first love."

It is the voice of my beloved that knocketh.—As Christ is the first to seek the soul, and bring it unto union with Himself, so is He the first to seek reunion, where want of watchfulness has induced a temporary alienation of heart. See Rev. iii. 20, which distinctly points to this verse in giving Christ's remedy for Laodicean lukewarmness.

3.—I have put off my coat; how shall I put it on?—This refusal to readmit the Bridegroom proceeds from a lazy slothful condition of soul, unwilling "to do the first works," and so the Bridegroom withdraws Himself.

7.—The watchmen that went about the city.—The soul that is earnestly seeking renewed communion when Christ finds little sympathy from the mere ecclesiastical watchman.

10.—My beloved is white and ruddy.—The word for white means "dazzling white" (Gesenius) (see Mark ix. 3). The word for "ruddy" means "red"; it is used (Isa. lxiii. 2) of a garment sprinkled with blood. The words are suggestive of the beginning of a well-known hymn—

Jesus, thy blood and righteousness.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 23.—CANTICLES VI.

1.—That we may seek Him with thee.—The seeking soul may, whilst seeking reunion with Him, tell out his praises to others, who may thus be drawn to seek Him for their own salvation.

3.—I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine.—"Repeated from chap. ii. 16, with a significant inversion. In that day of early love her first boast was her possession of Him, "My Beloved is mine; now she begins by confessing that she is his (comp. vii. 10). Thus invoked, He at once appears and addresses her."—S.C.

8.—There are threescore queens, &c.—"An allusion to what may have been historical fact when the song was written."—S.C. In its application to the "greater than Solomon" we must beware of a fanciful interpretation which would here distinguish between the Bride as a choice selection from amongst the saved, and the queens and concubines as the rest of the saved. These latter may, in figurative language, correspond to the "ninety and nine" of the parable; but if Eph. v. 25—32 and other like passages are to be believed, the Bride comprehends all the saved of this and past dispensations up to the coming of Christ at all events.

9.—She is the only one of her mother.—"Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all" (Gal. iv. 26). The queens and the concubines...praised her.—See Eph. iii. 10, which points to the heavenly intelligences being meant by "the queens" and not souls on earth.

10.—Fair as the moon, clear as the sun.—"In these idyls the Lord looks on the saint as altogether lovely. And so in his eyes is the believer. A sinner in himself, he has by faith taken on him the beauty of Christ. He is 'in Him.' He has 'the righteousness of God' upon him. He is 'accepted in the beloved.'"—J. G. Bellett.

13.—The company of two armies.—"In thus translating the Hebrew word 'Mahanaim' A.V. follows the Ancient Versions, LXX., Vulg., and Rabbinical commentators."—S.C. And so preserves the spiritual meaning which accords with Rom. vii. 14—25 and Gal. v. 17.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 24.—CANTICLES VII.

The first nine verses contain the Bridegroom's praises of the Bride, and the tenth her renewed acknowledgment of her being his possession, a truth which has its new Testament expression in 1 Cor. vi. 19, 20. "Ye are not your own, for ye were bought with a price" (R.V.).

10.—I am my beloved's, and his desire is toward me.—"The life that I live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me" (Gal. ii. 20). "This verse is often interpreted as though Paul were expressing his devotedness to his Master. But this is not so. This robs the verse of its exquisite glory. He is rather speaking of the joy of his soul in the knowledge of what a devoted and glorious Lover he had."—J. C. Bellett.

12.—Let us see if the vine flourish.—The spiritual meaning seems to be that the Bride, who at a former stage of her spiritual experience was not only incompetent to be the keeper of others' vineyards, but had not even kept her own, now that her communion with her beloved is restored, proposes, with Him "working with her," to visit the vineyards, "to see if the vine flourish." Comp. Phil. iv. 17: "I seek fruit that may abound to your account," also, Rom. i. 13: "That I might have some fruit among you also."

THURSDAY, AUGUST 25.—CANTICLES VIII.

The first four verses form the conclusion of Act or Idyl v. which began at vi. 10. They express a longing for such personal communion with Christ, as was granted to the Old Testament church during his stay upon earth. Sprung from the same mystical mother (Rom. ix. 5), He presented Himself in flesh and blood, and valued even the kiss which testified to a sinner's gratitude (Luke vii. 45).

2.—Who would instruct me.—Better as in marg. (R.V.) "that thou mightest instruct me." So Delitzsch, who quotes Jerome, Luther, and the Jewish Targum as taking it so. The paraphrase of the latter is interesting, "I would conduct thee, O King Messiah, and bring thee into the house of my sanctuary, and Thou wouldest teach me." Luke x. 39 is an instance of literal fulfilment, and all discipleship is fulfilment in spirit.

5.—Who is this that cometh up from the wilderness.—The commencement of the sixth or last Idyl. The last closed with the Bride a disciple at the feet of Jesus. Here we have the result of his teaching. See Eph. iv. 21, &c. I raised thee up under the apple tree.—Referring to ii. 3 as a picture of the soul's first coming to Christ. This was the time of regeneration.

6.—Love is strong as death; jealousy is cruel as the grave.—"The energy of love is compared to the energy of death and hades; for love scorns both, outlasts both, triumphs over both" (Rom. viii. 38).—Delitzsch.

8.—We have a little sister.—"All are not alike in the liberty of the dispensation. Such draw out the sympathy of the saint established in the grace of God."—J. G. Bellett.

14.—Make haste my beloved.—"Even so, come, Lord Jesus" (Rev. xvii. 20).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 26.—ISAIAH I.

1.—Isaiah, the son of Amoz.—His name, "the Salvation of the Lord," anticipates the chief subject of his prophecy. "There are two Jewish traditions respecting him—one that his father Amoz was brother of King Amaziah; the other that he himself died a martyr's death, being sawn asunder by order of Manasseh. Neither of them is improbable, and the second found acceptance with several early Christian writers."—Kay.

2.—Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth.—"The message of the prophet begins with an echo to the sublime appeal in the Song of Moses, the parting voice of the Law, "Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak, and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth' (Deut. xxxii. 1). Moses predicts the perverseness and rebellion of Israel. Isaiah, the foremost of the prophets, opens his message by proclaiming that the warning given 700 years before by Moses is now fulfilled. The same witnesses summoned before to give solemnity to the warning must now attest its fulfilment.—Birks.

16.—Wash you, make you clean.—No ceremonial washing, such as those "diverse washings" which almost characterised the law (Heb. ix. 10), is here meant, but that washing in "the fountain opened for sin and for uncleanness," of which these were but types; in other words, faith in the coming propitiation could, and could alone, make scarlet sins white as snow.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 27.—ISAIAH II.

The last chapter closed with a Zion "redeemed" (27), and "the destruction of the transgressors and of the sinners" by fire. This chapter goes on to Millennial days, and describes a restored and exalted Jerusalem, a centre of blessing to the whole earth.

3.—We will walk in his paths.—"This return of God's favour to Zion after long desolation will be life from the dead to the nations of the earth."—Birks.

4.—They shall beat their swords into ploughshares.—See the exact opposite of this foretold by Joel iii. 10, but he refers to events before the coming of Christ, while Isaiah here contemplates those which follow, as the closing words of the verse show, "Neither shall they learn war any more."

12.—For the day of the Lord shall be upon.—"More exactly, 'For the Lord hath a day.' He has it in reserve; ready to be brought out, when the time of forbearance is over."—S.C.

16.—Upon all pleasant pictures.—"It seems to include all beautiful works of art, viewed in connection with ships, as being the imports of a luxurious commerce."—Birks.

19.—They shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth.—This is referred to in Rev. vi. 15, which seems in consequence to point to the same great day of the Lord.

MASTER AND SERVANT.

O Saviour, Thou as man did'st tread
  Among the ways of men;
And, Lord of all, in serving all
  Did'st help thy brethren then;
And shall thy servant, called by Thee,
Ashamed of serving others be?

The thorns of life thy feet have torn,
  And sharp words pierced thy heart;
Yet from the hard world's cruel sneer
  Thou did'st not shrink apart;
And shall thy servant fear the thorn,
Or shrink from that which Thou hast borne?

With toil oft weary, Thou did'st know
  Of loneliness the pain;
Yet from thy Father Thou did'st win
  New strength to toil again;
And shall thy servant's courage fail
When in thy might he must prevail?

Prostrate, alone, the bitter cup
  Thou drankest tremblingly;
Thine eyes, while anguish wrung thy soul,
  Looked on eternity;
And shall thy servant's hand put by
The cup thy hand did glorify?

O Saviour, Thou did'st bow thy head,
  As man to die—alone,
And through the darkness of the grave
  The way to life hast won;
Then shall thy servant dread the night,
With Thee to welcome him in light?

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Killultagh, Ireland.—A four weeks' mission in a tent has been held at this place, conducted by Messrs. Thompson and Boyle, of the Irish Evangelisation Society. Considering the thin population of the district the meetings were well attended, and no doubt many received lasting blessing.

Marlborough.—At the suggestion of Miss Daniell, the "Soldiers' Friend," the Y.M.C.A. has for some time entertained the various brigades of artillery passing through this town. On their arrival the men are invited to a free tea, after which there is a bright Gospel service. The kindly attention and Christian sympathy thus displayed are greatly appreciated by the men. Other Y.M.C. Associations in the provinces might follow this good example.

An interesting and enthusiastic meeting, the first of its kind, was held in the Victoria Wesleyan Chapel, Manchester, on August 3. The occasion was the gathering together of a number of the "Joyful News" evangelists, headed by Rev. Thomas Champness. Mr. Champness gave a brief account of the history of the movement. He had been cordially supported by Mr. Barlow, of Bolton, as well as by a number of other good men who believed in the usefulness of lay agency. He related the successful work his men had been enabled to do in Camden-street Chapel, London, and their labours in what he called "No Man's Land," which was a tract of country in Worcestershire. It was on his heart to send two men to Africa, which was a land dear to him, because in it was laid some honoured dust which he could not forget. Two of his men were ready to embark for Africa, and already he had received considerable sums towards the cost of their maintenance in that distant place. Nine or ten of the evangelists spoke during the course of the proceedings; they gave accounts of their conversion, call to the work, and the results which they had been permitted to see.

THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.—Mr. R. C. Denew, one of the workers at the Polytechnic, has just gone out to South America as a self-supporting missionary. He was moved to decide upon the Argentine Republic by hearing that multitudes of the people were discovering the hollowness of the Romish religion, and that many were eager to listen to the Gospel. A number of his Polytechnic fellow-workers were at the railway station to bid him good-bye and God-speed, on the day of his departure. We are sure many of our readers will join in prayer for a blessing on his labours.

Notices.

Rev. John M. Pamment, late pastor at Portland, Oregon, has returned to England. He may be addressed, care of Mr. Gawin Kirkham, Open-air Mission, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, London, W.C.

Communications Received with Thanks.—C.M. J.J.S. F.A.R. T.C. W.W. S.J.C.E. W.A.R. J.T.D. J.T. F.B. G.T.G. A.S. A.B. J.G.R. J.P.H. W.D. J.E.L. E.G. F.B.M. G.G. E.B.V. A.J.W. C.R.P. S.B. H.J.B. J.W. F.D. P.J.W. M.T. W.D. J.C.W. W.H.R. R.D.F. W.A. W.C.J. M.H. F.G. C.W. J.J.M. R.S. E.L.H. J.M.P. A.C. T.R.H. A.L.W. J.S.K. G.P. C.K. A.B. W.J.P. A.W.B. A.C. H.V. J.V.S. J.D. J.T.M. W.G. G.L. C.A.S. J.G.H. P.J.D. S.M. J.B. R.C. E.M.T. J.G. W.H. H.G. W.J.G. G.B. J.G. W.C.B. C.W.B. W.F. H.V. A.N. E.C. P.M.R. W.H.S. M.G. F.J.F.

Applicants for Tracts.—Thomas Glover, Grange House, Eastbourne; Miss J. Savage, 30, Waterloo-road, Runcorn, Cheshire; A. Smith, 31, Calderon-road, Leytonstone; J. Preston, 4, Back Browning-street, Stafford; R. D. Browne, 108, Mildmay-road, London, N.; A. Kilby, 3, Burdett-road, E.; F. H. Curtis, 24, Barden-road, Tonbridge, Kent; F. Tappolet, 18, Culford-road, De Beauvoir Town, London; E. Hannant, London House, Harrow; C. Brabazon, 12, Bridge-street, Birkenhead, Cheshire, J. B. Gillespie, 67, Seagate, Dundee; Edwin M. Potter, 6, Suffolk-road, St. Ann's-road, Stamford Hill, N.; H. Readings, 210, Finnis-street, Bethnal-green, E.; A. Hine, Fairview Cottage, Chipping Campden, Gloucestershire; W. Sherwood, 85, Donnington-gardens, Reading, Berks.

[As it is found that infidels and others send tracts to the persons whose names are inserted here, it is most important that all books and papers received should be carefully read before being given away.]

Forthcoming Meetings.

The Evangelisation Society will send evangelists to any part of England, Scotland, and Wales on due notice. Hon. Sec., 21, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.

The Irish Evangelisation Society will send evangelists to any part of Ireland on due notice. Apply to Mr. J. Barton, Hon. Sec., Dundalk, Ireland.

The Church Army will send evangelists (working-men) to any clergyman on due notice, for short or long missions. Hon. Sec., 128 and 130, Edgware-road, W.

The Metropolitan Tabernacle Evangelists' Association will send lay preachers and evangelists to any chapel or hall of any evangelical denomination in London. Hon. Sec., 121, Camberwell New-road, S.E.

Y.M.C.A., New Metal Exchange, Whittington-avenue, E.C.—Gospel services at Bermondsey, Sundays, 7 p.m., and Thursdays, 8 p.m. Mission work at Whitechapel, Limehouse, Bermondsey, Canning Town, &c.

Conference Hall and Y.M.C.A., Stratford, E.—Sunday, August 21, 3 p.m., praise, prayer, and testimony; 7 p.m., General Anderson. Missionary Prayer-meeting, Mon., 8.30 p.m. Tract Society, Wed., 8.30 p.m.

Conference Hall, Mildmay-park, N.—Sundays in August 3.30 and 7, Mr. Ned Wright.

Coming Conferences.—Y.M.C.A. Dundee, September 6—9. Perth, September 13—15. Wakefield, September 20—22. Salisbury, September 27—30. Leamington, October 18—20.

Edinburgh Castle, Limehouse, E.—Sunday, Aug 21, 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., Mr. H. Grattan Guinness; 3 p.m., Rev. Henry Bright.

Strangers' Rest, 163, St. George's-street, Ratcliff-highway, E.—Monthly workers' meeting, Friday, September 2; tea at 6, meeting at 7. Address by Mr. Henry Varley: "The Irrationality of Unbelief." A party of ladies leaving for China will be present.

Carlisle Holiness Convention, September 5, 6, and 7.—Particulars of Mr. C. I. Clapperton, 10, Murrell-hill, Carlisle.

Great Assembly Hall, Mile-end-road, E.—Sunday, August 21, 11 a.m., 6 30 p.m., and week nights at 8, Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

Texas has rejected Prohibition by a majority of 50,000. The large towns are responsible for the defeat.

The late Rev. G. M. Murphy's work at the Lambeth Baths will be carried on as formerly during the next winter season.

The World's W.C.T.U. have issued a call to a World's Temperance Week of Prayer, for the overthrow of the drink curse and the opium trade, November 7 to 13.

It is said that Reading is one of the best temperance towns in the country. At a temperance fête recently held there, there was a procession of Band of Hope children over a mile long.

Some employers in Germany, noting the evil effect which brandy drinking has upon their workmen, have tried the experiment of supplying coffee gratuitously with a most satisfactory result.

Mr. R. T. Booth is now in England, and purposes, after a few weeks' rest, to advocate Gospel temperance in this country during the next few months. It is his present intention to leave early in December for New South Wales, which is to be his future home.

On Saturday week at the Assembly Rooms, Mile End-road, London, "Bright-eyes" gave an address on temperance. She expressed surprise, not to say disgust, that women were frequently to be seen in the public-houses of England or under the influence of drink, and stated her sorrow at hearing that drunkenness was increasing amongst the women of this country.

Subscriptions Received by Messrs. Morgan & Scott to Monday, August 15, 1887.

 We would respectfully urge all our friends, when remitting to us, to make Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders payable to Morgan & Scott, and to cross them "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss of same.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders, not by stamps.

	£	s.	d.
Day in the Country—Freemason, £5; L.E.C. 10s.; Miss G. 10s.; W.H.S. £1; M.A.L. £1; M.H 5s.; F.H.T. 10s.; J.M. 1s.; J S.M. £1; A.Z. 10s.; Miss K. £1; G.C.B. £5; J.M. 5s.; G.J. 7s.; Miriam, £2; K.M. 5s.; J.R. and L.T. 2s.; H.H.S. £1; A Thank-offering, 10s.; E.W.C. 10s.; M.A.F. 4s.; Sandside, £1; C.S.H. 5s.; R.L.S. 5s.; R.M. £5; Mr. D. 10s.; E.S.T. £1; Friends, 5s.; E.J.M. 2s. 6d.; A Friend, £1; E.S.W. £1 1s.; H.M.K. 1s. 6d.; Per W.W. £1; Croydon, 10s.; T.T.B. 10s.; G.N. 5s.; T.S.P. £1 1s.; M.A.M. 5s.; Ryde, £1; G.S. 10s.; J.B. 20s.	38	0	0
Gospel Tent Mission (Mr. Wooldridge)—Lady C.T.	0	4	0
Mr. A. G. Brown's Work—A.T.O. 10s.; R. £3; (Orphan's) R. £2	5	10	0
Miss Sharman's Orphans' Homes—A.T.O. 10s.; A.P.F. £1	1	10	0
Bridge of Hope, Ratcliff—M.R.	0	5	0
Children's Dinners (Rev. Porter)—G.F.	0	12	4
Mr. Fegan's Homes—H.H.S. £1; C.C. £1	2	0	0
Miss de Broen's Work, Paris—H.H.S.	1	0	0
St. Giles' Christian Mission—Miss G. 10s.; L.P. 7s. 6d.; Thine Own, 5s.; C.C. £1	2	2	6
Miss Whately's Mission, Cairo—V.W.	1	0	0
McAll Mission—V.W. £1; C.C. £1	2	0	0
Midnight Meeting Movement—W.H.R.	1	1	0
Dr. Barnardo's Homes—W.P. £1; "Sunbeam," 7s.; J.C.B.M. 5s.; L.P. 7s. 6d.; M. 10s.; Dick, £50; G.S. 5s.; (Emigration) C.H. £100	152	14	6
George-yard Ragged School—L.S. 7s. 6d.; (Excursion)—A.Z. 10s.	0	17	6
Open-air Mission—W.H.R.	1	1	0
Miss Leigh's Work, Paris—H.H.S. £1; C.C. £1	2	0	0
E. L. Training Institute (Rev. H. G. Guinness)—H.H.S. £1; V. £2 10s.	3	10	0
China Inland Mission—S.S. £2; V.W. £1; In Memoriam, 18s. 6d.; M. 10s.; K.E.B. 5s.	4	13	6
Msn. Deep Sea Fishermen—S.S. £2; L.P. 7s. 6d.; K.E.B. 5s.	2	12	6
Bible and Colportage Society, Ireland—S.S.	1	0	0
Mr. Faithfull's Work (Seamen's Rest)—M.A.McC.	0	10	0
Thames Church Mission—L.P. 7s. 6d.; R.H. £3	3	7	6
Church of England Zenana Mission—L.P.	0	7	6
London City Mission—L.P. 7s. 6d.; R. £5	5	7	6
Deacon Abraham—A.F.W.P.	0	10	0
Suppression of Opium Traffic with China—L.P. 7s. 6d.; (Travelling Agent) C.F.B. £1; T.N.J. £1	2	7	6
Rev. J. Wilkinson's Work among Jews—R.	1	10	0
London Hospital—R.	5	0	0
Miss Weston's Work—V.	2	10	0
Signor Variner's Work in Sicily—A.F.W.P.	0	5	0
Home for Aged Blind Christian Women—R.L.S.	0	5	0
Defence of Spanish Woman—A Friend	0	5	0
Evangelistic Mission—W.H.R.	1	1	0
Society for Suppression of Vice—W.H.R.	1	1	0
National Refuges—W.H.R.	1	1	0
Special Religious Services in Theatres—W.H.R.	1	1	0
Friendless & Fallen—W.H.R. £1 1s.; W.J.H. 2s.	1	3	0
Evangelisation Society—W.H.R.	1	1	0
Famine in Central Turkey—Thine Own, £1; E.R.T. 4s.; T.N.J. 10s.; G.N. 5s.	1	19	0
Mrs. Fisher's Work (Holiday Fund)—Thine Own	0	10	0
Bird's Nest Mission, Dublin—Thine Own	0	5	0
Indigent Blind Visiting Society—Thankoffering	1	0	0
Aged Pilgrims' Friend Society—C.G.	1	0	0
Tumkur Orphanage—F.A.V.	1	0	0
Mrs. Meredith's Msn. (Children Fund)—E.S.W.	2	2	0
Mildmay Mission—R.	3	0	0
Mildmay Mission (Bethnal Green Hospital)—R.	2	0	0
Mildmay Mission to Jews—R.	3	10	0
Bristol Orphan Houses—C.L.M.T.	1	0	0
Church Missionary Society—R.A.C.	0	3	0
Miss Robinson's Work, Portsmouth—C.C. £2; (Alexandra) C.C. £2	4	0	0
Anglo-Indian Evangelisation Society—C.C.	1	0	0
Scripture Readers' Society, Ireland—C.C.	1	0	0
Dublin City Mission—C.C.	1	0	0
Tower Hamlets Msn—C.C. £1; (Rescue Work) £1	2	0	0
Marylebone Medical Mission—C.C.	1	0	0
Working Men's Lord's Day Rest Association—C.C.	1	0	0
Sunday Rest Association—C.C.	1	0	0
Children's Home (Dr. Stephenson)—C.C. £2; E.F.H. 7s. 6d.	2	7	6
Children's Week by the Sea (Mr. Allen)—T.N.J.	0	10	0
Home of Industry—Ryde	5	0	0
Ch. of Eng. Zenana Missionary Soc.—E.F.H.	0	8	6
	£290	1	10

[Advertisements.]

Mrs. Parsons' Home, Walthamstow—S.S.G. 5s.

St. Giles's Christian Mission—J.A.G. 10s.; M.W. 10s.; E.H. £2.; A Thankoffering, £1.

CASTLE YARD MISSION.

Established Eighty-Five Years.

President—Rev. Newman Hall, LL B.

HELP URGENTLY REQUIRED

Towards general expenses of carrying on an invaluable and much needed Christian Work among the very poorest Children of Southwark.

You are most earnestly asked to help support this time-honoured and useful Mission.

Contributions will be very gratefully received and acknowledged by Messrs. Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.; Treasurer, Rev. Robert Tuck, B.A., 23, Thornford-road, Lewisham-park, S E.; Bankers, London & Westminster, St. James's-square, S.W., Account, "Castle-yard Mission."

Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

The Gospel in Leviticus.

TYPES AND FORESHADOWINGS OF THE GREAT REDEMPTION.

By JAMES FLEMING, D.D.

"The book contains much profitable reading for the matured Christian; whilst it is calculated to excite amongst all classes of Christians a deeper interest in the typology of the Old Testament."
Church of England Sunday School Magazine.

SPECIAL CHEAP EDITION,
Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth, 1s. 6d.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

ORATIONS BY JOHN B. GOUGH.

BEST EDITION.

Large Crown 8vo. 160 closely printed pages. Consisting of Eleven different Orations delivered in London and the Provinces on the occasion of his last visit to this country. With Portrait. Handsomely bound in Cloth Extra, 2s. 6d.

SPECIAL CHEAP EDITION.

Unabridged.

With Portrait. Crown 8vo., Tinted Covers, 1s.
Neatly bound in Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.

"To those who have not had the good fortune to hear Mr. Gough, these printed Orations will convey some idea of the wonderful dramatic force and eloquence which held audiences of many thousands spellbound."—Good Templar.

"They deal with the subject of Temperance in its varied aspects, and bring many startling facts and illustrations to add weight to the statements concerning the terrible dangers of moderate drinking."
Woman's Work.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF J. B. GOUGH.

BEST EDITION.

Large Crown 8vo. 227 closely printed pages. With Portrait, and three full-page Illustrations. Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d.

SPECIAL CHEAP EDITION.

Unabridged.

With Portrait. In Tinted covers, 1s.
Neatly done up in Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.

"It is the record of a life as strange and eventful as it is impressive and instructive. A more perfect knowledge of such a life cannot fail to strengthen the faith of some and to inspire the zeal of others. The book, apart from its value as a beacon to warn and a light to guide, is studded with passages of beauty—word-pictures, which are not easily forgotten."
Temperance Record.

"It is the most touching, thrilling narrative we ever read. Talk of the sensational in tales, novels, and romances—none of them is so stirring, or is filled with incidents of such extraordinary interest, as this life story."—Bolton Guardian.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

B. C. Garratt's List of Publications.

5th Thousand, 32pp. Demy 8vo., post free, One Penny.
"THE MISSING LINK to SUCCESSFUL CHRISTIAN EFFORT."

20th Thousand, 16pp. Demy 8vo., post free, One Penny.
"BODY, SOUL and SPIRIT, or the HUMAN TRINITY in UNITY."

10th Thousand, 16pp Demy 8vo., post free, One Penny.
"TOIL and REST."

15th Thousand, 16pp. Demy 8vo., post free, One Penny.
"THE MYSTERY of LIFE."

60th Thousand, 48pp. Cr. 16mo., post free, One Penny.
"A TEN MINUTES' CONVERSATION ON HEALTH."

10th Thousand, 32pp. Cr. 16mo., post free, One Penny.
"HARMFUL or HARMLESS."

15th Thousand, 40pp. Cr. 16mo., post free, One Penny.
"SELF-RELIANCE."

One copy of each of the above post free, 6d.

London: B. C. GARRATT, 16, Finsbury-square, E.C.

Second Edition. 208pp. Demy 8vo. Cloth cut flush, 1s.
Cloth limp, 1s. 6d. Cloth boards gilt, 2s. 6d.

"MAN PHYSICALLY, MENTALLY, and SPIRITUALLY CONSIDERED."

By B. COPSON GARRATT,

Comprising the above and other essays on important subjects.

London: B. C. GARRATT, 16, Finsbury-square, E.C.

Price One Penny, 1s. per dozen.

A GLANCE AT THE GREAT WORK.

By LADY HOPE.

Reprinted from The Christian.

An Incident of Messrs. Moody and Sankey's Meetings in London.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

SCRIPTURAL PROOFS

that God offers us in our Lord Jesus Christ perfect deliverance from all sin, inward as well as outward, if we will but receive Him and believe on His name for all that God has made Him to be to us. (John i. 12; 1 Cor. i. 30.)

BY

J. P. WILSON.

"Holiness by faith in Jesus,
Not by effort of thine own,
Sin's dominion crushed and broken
By the power of grace alone.
God's own holiness within thee,
His own beauty on thy brow;
This shall be thy pilgrim brightness,
This thy blessed portion now."
Miss Havergal.

LONDON:
S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO., 9, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.
1887.

The above is the title-page of a book of 408 pages, price in cloth two shillings, consisting of the contents of three little books, "First Sheets of Scriptural Proofs," "Further Sheets of Scriptural Proofs," and "Third Series of Scriptural Proofs," hitherto sent out separately, and only to applicants by letter for them, now put together for general publication. The object of the book is simply to direct attention to what God says in his Word on the extent of deliverance from sin given us in our Lord Jesus Christ. Many letters have been received from readers of the separate parts, showing that this object has been attained in their case. The following are extracts from a few of them:—

"Reading your books has driven me more to the precious truth; and our loving Father has opened more light to me—more than ever I expected to get. Praise his dear name!"

"I have read it carefully, and can find nothing of man in it, but all in it to be the revealed power of God. I have received great encouragement and strength from the reading of it."

"Thank you so much for your little book. It has helped me to realise more fully 'the glorious gospel of Christ.'"

"I have read the 'Proofs,' and they have opened my eyes greatly to what may be obtained by faith and prayer."

"I have read several parts of it many times over. It seems to me just the kind of book to put a solid scriptural foundation under the faith of those who are conscious of a real and godly change of heart, and of an eager desire to be wholly the Lord's."

"I rejoice greatly in it. It is well calculated to stimulate an earnest desire in the hearts of the Lord's dear people to search the Scriptures more diligently and prayerfully, like the Bereans, 'daily whether these things were so.'"

'I have read your little book, lent me by a friend, and I do desire heartily to thank my God that it was put into my hands.

"Though for years I have known my Saviour's love, and experienced the incoming of the Holy Ghost in power in my soul, yet since reading 'Scriptural Proofs' I have had a fresh revelation of what Jesus is to me in his capacity of Saviour; and I have been able to grasp Him in a fuller and more comprehensive faith as my deliverer from indwelling sin; and that on the truth of the living God as shown so clearly in your little book.

"My heart goes with every line of it. I do trust and believe it will be blessed wherever it is read: there is so little of man in it, and so much of God."

GEORGE YARD RAGGED SCHOOLS, &c., Whitechapel, E.

GEORGE HOLLAND sincerely thanks A. O. B. for Clothing. Received safely from M. A. R.

The Infant Day Nursery. Free Ragged Day Schools. Sunday and Week Evening Schools. Children's Services. Band of Hope. Classes for Rough Boys. Classes and Meetings for Elder Girls and Young Women. Mutual Industrial Classes for Lads. Bible Classes for Men. Mothers' Meetings. Bible Classes for Women. Mission to Inebriate Women. Temperance-Meetings. Evangelistic Services. Room to room visitation. And other Missionary agencies in operation.

Friends are invited to visit the Institution any day but Saturday.

Post-office Orders should be made payable at 66, High-street, Whitechapel, E. Letters and Parcels should be addressed to GEORGE HOLLAND, The Ragged Schools, George Yard, High-street, Whitechapel, London, E.

"DAY IN THE COUNTRY,"

George-yard Ragged Schools, &c.

Received with much thankfulness from A. D. P., 5s.; E. S., 5s. (in memoriam); W. P. and K. P., 10s.; G. F. P., 2s. 6d.; Bath, 10s.; M. F. H., 20s.; Malvern, 10s.—GEORGE HOLLAND, George Yard Ragged Schools, High-street, Whitechapel, E.

THE BENEVOLENT OR STRANGERS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

Treasurer, Ald. Sir R. N. Fowler, Bart., M.P.
J. H. Anderson, Esq., Chairman.
Clarence Smith, Esq., J.P., Hon. Secretary.

For 101 years this Institution has visited and relieved the destitute sick, by an entirely unpaid agency, consisting of over 240 Christian men and women.

Funds are urgently needed.

The Committee will be thankful for the Society being remembered in the testamentary arrangements of the benevolent.—Office of the Society, 52, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

ANXIETY OF SOUL. — Any to whom the way of salvation is not clear, are invited to communicate, either personally or by letter, to W. S., care of Evangelistic Secretary, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

CONVALESCENT HOMES, at Bournemouth and Sandgate.—For particulars apply to Mr. JOHN JAMES JONES, Director of the London Samaritan Society, 98, High-street, Homerton, London, E.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF CLOTHING for distribution among the poorer patients and their families are earnestly solicited by the Committee of the Ladies' Samaritan Society, National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, Queen-square, Bloomsbury.—Parcels should be addressed to Miss S. WHITMORE, Clerk to the Ladies' Committee, at the Hospital. Donations in money will also be thankfully received.

EVANGELICAL HOSPITAL for Spezia and District.—Funds are urgently needed for the foundation of above. The annual expenses will amount to about £400. Suitable premises have already been secured.—Donations will be thankfully received and acknowledged by Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT; or by the Director, Mr. A. A. COATES, of Grand Hotel Royal, Spezia, Italy.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY INSTITUTE,

Clapham-road, S.W.

President, The Bishop of Winchester.

Mrs. MEREDITH cordially invites Sisters going to Foreign Missions to come here for three days of Prayer and Conference, September 15, 16, 17, that they may receive power to publish the Gospel of Christ among heathen and Mahomedan Women. Prayer each day at intervals from 10 to 6 o'clock.

Ladies can live in the Institute for 5s. a day. Early application is requisite.

HOME FOR BLIND CHILDREN, College-avenue, Hackney, E.—The present house having become too small, it is proposed to purchase a Freehold, which will be placed in the hands of Trustees. Contributions will be gratefully received by Miss S. RYE, or Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT.

THE LONDON SAMARITAN SOCIETY for Convalescent Homes at Sandgate and Bournemouth. Mrs. D., £1; Rev. G. W., Clothing; E. C. 15s.; Miss H., 5s.

RESCUE WORK IN POPLAR.— Funds are very much needed for this work in the East End of London, for which Mrs. WILKES most earnestly asks aid. Clothing of any kind, new or old, will be thankfully acknowledged. A situation wanted for a woman, in the country. She is anxious to redeem her lost character. Any information will be given about the work.

Manor Cottage, Kerbey-street, Poplar, E.

THE "JOHN FOWLER HOUSE,"

A Home from Home for Young Men,
66, Mount Pleasant, Liverpool.

This house has been specially furnished and prepared as a Home for Youths and Young Men occupying situations in Liverpool, but whose homes are at a distance from the city.

It is intended that the "John Fowler House" shall be a "Home from Home" for Young Men, and that it shall be governed on Christian principles, strictly unsectarian, and that the arrangements and management shall be carried out to that end.

The building contains a large sitting-room, with Piano, Dining-room, Bath-room, &c. The Bed-rooms have been furnished throughout with new and specially designed furniture.

The terms for Board, Residence, &c., will be so arranged as to meet the special requirements of young men with limited means.

Young men desirous of securing accommodation or further information on the subject, should apply either at the Home, 66, Mount Pleasant, or at the Y.M.C.A. Admission will be limited to youths and young men from 14 to 21 years of age.

66, Mount Pleasant, Liverpool, July 27, 1887.

BIBLE AND COLPORTAGE SOCIETY OF IRELAND.

An undenominational Society, with Agents in all parts of Ireland. Carefully selected and trained Colporteurs are spreading the knowledge of Jesus by the living voice and the printed page. They have access to the people everywhere, and are not interfered with in their work. A contribution of £40 will secure a Colporteur for a year in any part of Ireland. Several additional Colporteurs have been recently appointed. Funds greatly needed.—Rev. H. M. WILLIAMSON, Belfast, and Rev. JOHN ELLIOTT, Armagh, Secretaries, by whom contributions will be gratefully received; or they may be paid at the Office of this Paper.

DAY IN COUNTRY.—Voluntary Workers, Gee-street Mission, Goswell-road, solicit Funds to take poor Adults and Children to Epping Forest.—Donations thankfully received for HENRY RUDGLEY, Hon. Superintendent, second floor, 82, Wood-street, Cheapside; Treasurer, ROBERT BAXTER, Esq., 6, Victoria-street, Westminster. Bankers, Barclay Bevan.

MRS. BOTTING'S HOME for the reception of young Children, taken at any age. Maintained, clothed, educated, and trained for service. Funds greatly needed.

23, Ridley-road, Dalston, London, E.

MISS FAITHFULL, The Institute, 136, Regent-street, gratefully acknowledges: Mrs. Barclay, £3; Clothing from Miss Davies, Miss Smith. Invitations from Miss Bricknell, Miss Green. Answers to urgent appeal necessitous Gentlewomen.

VISITORS TO THE SEASIDE and country for increase of health and strength, are earnestly requested to remember the inmates of the Cripples' Home, 17A, Marylebone-road, London, N.W., and to send a donation, however small, to help to maintain their Seaside Home at Bognor, to give the change of air so needful for these afflicted and weak ones.—Cheques and P.O.O. payable to

E. EMES, Secretary.

HOME HOSPITAL, 9 and 32, Lupus-street, St. George's-square, S.W., for Ladies and Children (medical, surgical, and confinement cases). Private wards. Ladies taken as dispensing and midwifery students. The Trustees ask help for free bed.—Address LADY SUPERINTENDENT.

ONE HUNDRED POUNDS most urgently needed to complete payment for enlargement of Wesleyan Chapel and Schools. Friends on the spot few. The only Protestant place of worship in the village. Roman Catholic chapel and schools near. Contributions, great or small, gratefully acknowledged by Rev. S. WILKES, Whaley Bridge, Stockport.

PERTH CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE. —The Annual Conference will (D.V.) be held in the City Hall, Perth, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, September 13, 14, and 15. Forenoon Meeting at 11. Afternoon 2, and Evening at 7 o'clock. Information regarding lodging, &c., will be furnished by Mr. CHRISTIE, Bookseller, St. John-street.

NOON-DAY PRAYER-MEETING, Brighton, is held in the Assembly-room, ground-floor of the Y.M.C.A., 55, Old Steine.

Educational.

HOME SCHOOL for Girls. Limited number of Boarders. Good education, based on Bible teaching, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness." Pupils prepared for the various Exams. Kindergarten for Juniors. Terms inclusive. Recommended by R. C. Morgan and parents of pupils.—Mrs. SILVESTER, Clarence House, Pellatt-grove, Wood Green.

SUPERIOR EDUCATION for young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. WATKINS, F.S.Sc., Dyreham College, North Finchley.—Pupils prepared for public examinations. Fees, including music, French, and drawing, 14 and 16 guineas per term, prepaid.

"I have the greatest pleasure in recommending Mrs. Watkins' School to parents seeking a good Christian home and a high-class education for their daughters. The School is situated in a fine healthy neighbourhood."—Josiah Spiers, Children's Special Service Mission.

MR. E. J. KENNEDY, OF EXETER HALL, can highly recommend an educational Home for young Ladies, where only a few are received, and where the children have individual care and guidance, and all the comforts of a superior home, combined with excellent education. References to Judge Gates, Q.C., General Elder, and other parents of pupils.—D. C. L., Farley's Library, FitzJohn's Parade, Hampstead, N.W.

MORAVIAN LADIES' SCHOOL, St. Peter's, Bedford.—Accommodation for a limited number of Boarders and Day Pupils. Pupils prepared for Cambridge Local Examinations. For terms and all particulars, apply to

Miss SEIFFERTH, Principal.

BELLE VUE, AMBLESIDE.—Good School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. FLEMING. Healthy and beautiful situation; large rooms, garden, tennis. Careful Christian training, and thorough teaching. Cambridge Examinations. Resident foreign and English governesses. Masters. 50 to 60 guineas. Reduced terms for children under 12.

HIGH-CLASS CHRISTIAN SCHOOL for the Daughters of Gentlemen. — Miss PENN receives a limited number of pupils. Efficient resident governesses and visiting masters. Individual Christian influence. Home comforts. Large house and garden. Entire charge taken of pupils from abroad. Languages and music specialities. Young Ladies are also received to pursue certain studies only, or to take lessons in dressmaking, cooking, &c.

St. John's de Ocklynge, Eastbourne.

SCHOOL FOR THE DAUGHTERS OF GENTLEMEN.

Prebendary A. writes:—I have great pleasure in bearing testimony to the Christian character and general qualifications of Principal. I make frequent visits to the school.

Mrs. C. H. (daughters were pupils):—Parents seeking thorough religious training for their daughters can, with every confidence, commit them to the care of Principal, with the assurance their highest welfare will be sought.

Rev. F. D., The Chaplaincy:—I have known Principal for many years, and can with implicit confidence introduce parents and guardians seeking for their daughters or wards highest educational advantages, based on practical Christianity.

C. B., Esq.:—I am much gratified with the progress made by my daughters. Thoroughness is a marked characteristic throughout all arrangements. The moral influence leaves nothing to be desired.

Rev. S. T., The Vicarage, desires to bear testimony to the worth of —— as an educational home. The excellence consists in the decidedly religious influence exercised, thoroughness of secular education, &c.

Dr. and Mrs. B—— feel they can but inadequately express their feelings of gratitude to —— for watchful, loving training of their niece. They will be gratified to be used as referees.

A Grateful Parent (as no formal testimonial) desires to bear testimony to the influence exerted over dear girls at the most important period of their life's history.—PRINCIPAL (120), care of Housekeeper, 13, Rose-street, Newgate-street, E.C.

ILFRACOMBE, 2, Oxford-park.— Home School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. RICHARD WARE. Careful Christian training and thorough teaching. Motherly care taken of delicate children. Good references.

WIESBADEN.—LADIES' SCHOOL.— Miss BEYERHAUS is now in England, and will escort pupils in September.

The Manor House, Oaken, near Wolverhampton.

MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE for Young Ladies, Larkbeare, Exeter, Devon.—Residents only received. Christian parents of high social position at home and abroad are referees. The buildings are considered the most complete of any private school in England.

MODENA KINDERGARTEN TRAINING COLLEGE, Peckham Rye, London, S.E. Premium, forty guineas.—For particulars apply to the Principal, Miss E. M. LOTT.

NONCONFORMIST LADIES' SCHOOL.

MACAULAY HOUSE, CAMBRIDGE.

Every educational advantage, with careful Christian training, and a refined, happy home.

Inclusive fees, 30 to 40 guineas per annum.

Reference kindly permitted to:—

R. J. Moffat, Esq., F.R.G.S., Cambridge.
Rev. T. Graham Tarn, Cambridge.
Rev. E. Henderson, Victoria-road, Clapham, S.W.
Rev. J. Rolfe Fisher, Burdett-road Congregational Church, E.
Rev. Dr. MacEwan, Trinity Presbyterian Church, Clapham, S.W.
Rev. C. A. Davis, King's-road Chapel, Reading.
Rev. W. Williams, Upton Chapel, Lambeth, S.W.

For prospectus, address PRINCIPAL.

EDUCATIONAL ESTABLISHMENT for Young Ladies at Belle Vue, Corseaux sur VEVEY, SWITZERLAND. — Mlle. ALIDA CHATELAIN, having lived in England for many years, and being conversant with all the requirements of English pupils, offers a comfortable home with thorough education.—For references and prospectus apply to Mrs. Cubitt, Earlham Lodge, Norwich, and to Mrs. Brinkley, 93, Sydney-place, Bath.

GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL, LEYTON.— Modern education with Christian training. Public examinations passed with success. Prize for singing. References: Rev. James Lunt, M.A., Rev. E. W. Bullinger, D.D.—Principal, Miss H. R. FORD.

SEASIDE EDUCATION.—An Officer can highly recommend a Christian Home School at Southsea for a few Girls of good position. Pupils have successfully passed R.A.M. and R.C.P. Examinations. Terms very moderate. Terms 40 guineas to fill a vacancy.—INSPECTOR-GENERAL GORDON, R.N., View Bank, Brechin, Forfarshire, N.B.

SELECT GIRLS' SCHOOL,

Cambridge House, 113, Green-lanes, London, N.

Christian training. Motherly care. Home comforts Healthful situation. Preparation for Public Examinations, at which all the Pupils entered last Christmas passed. Reference to Rev. Gordon Calthrop, 3, Highbury-grange, N.; Doctor Pittock, Margate; and to other parents of present pupils.—Further particulars on application to the Principal,

Mrs. BRODIE.

BRIGHTON.—High-class School for Girls. Healthy situation. Home comforts. Every educational advantage. Terms moderate. Good references to clergymen and parents of pupils.—The Misses NORTON, Farndon House, Stanford-road, Brighton.

PENSIONNAT EVANGELIQUE.— Wesleyan Young Ladies' College, Nimes, South of France.—Situated in one of the finest towns of the South of France. Has been in existence for more than forty years. Large premises; extensive garden. The climate of Nimes, remarkably dry and healthy, makes the residence in that city most profitable for delicate young ladies. Moderate terms. —Apply for prospectus and admission to Pastor O. PRUNIER, Principal and Chaplain, 1, rue de Sauve, Nimes, France. The next term will begin on October 1. Pastor PRUNIER has a vacancy for two young ladies in his own house, if parents prefer a family home to a residence in the school, terms being a matter of private arrangement.

HIGH-CLASS SCHOOL FOR LADIES, Duffield House, West Norwood. Mrs. E. A. ANDERSON, Principal. Christian parents desiring for their daughters a thorough and refined education, with decided religious influence, will find their requirements met in this establishment. Certificated governesses, resident, and eminent masters in daily attendance.

Miss ANDERSON receives a limited number of pupils at The Tower, Birchington-on-Sea, where delicate pupils can be transferred for three or four weeks, without interruption to study, the course of instruction being identified with the Parent School. — Prospectus, with terms and references, on application to Mrs. ANDERSON.

FRAULEIN EIBACH, Villa Schön-blick, Wiesbaden, Germany, receives a limited number of pupils. Professors attend, and there is a resident French governess. Great advantages for languages, music, singing, and painting. References and prospectus on application.

EDUCATION.—High-class School for Young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. HALE, A.C.P., 1, Carlton-mansions, Clapham-rise, London, S.W.—Visiting masters, certificated governesses, and careful personal supervision with home comforts. Pupils prepared for any examination. Instruction made pleasant, and no overworking countenanced. French, German, Latin, drawing, class-singing, and drilling are included in the school fees, which are moderate. Highly recommended by parents of pupils, and Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. Prospectus and testimonials on application to Principal.

"Balham, May 29, 1880.

"I am very reluctant to recommend schools, because I am not always able to judge of the interior arrangements; but in this case I have the utmost pleasure in standing as reference. I can highly commend Mrs. Hale, and have the greatest confidence in her capacity, management, and character, having known her for several years."

C. H. SPURGEON.

SALCOMBE COLLEGE, Loughton, Essex.—Principal, Mrs. VIVIAN, assisted by certificated English and Foreign governesses and professors. College detached, situated on a hill. Two acres of recreation grounds, lawn tennis, and croquet. Close to Epping Forest, and 12 miles from London. Pupils prepared for university and other examinations. Excellent class-rooms, and well-furnished sitting-rooms. Terms moderate, and inclusive. References, Revs. J. Angus, D.D., W. Durban, B.A., J. A. Spurgeon; also W. Keeping, M.A., F.G.S., W. Olney, F. A. Owgan, M.D., J. Passmore, Esqs. Prospectus, with view of College, and addresses of referees, on application. No governess-pupils received.

LOWESTOFT. — CLAREMONT HOUSE.—The Misses BIGNOLD receive a limited number of gentlemen's daughters as Resident Pupils. Careful Christian training, with thorough education and home comforts. References kindly permitted to the Bishop of Exeter; the Rev. J. B. Pelham, Norwich; J. C. Worthington, Esq., Lowestoft; E. Courthorpe Todd, Esq., Macready House, Covent-garden; and other friends and parents of pupils.

LADIES' COLLEGE, Goudhurst, Kent, near Tunbridge Wells.—A happy home and School for Girls, 420 feet above sea-level. College and Cambridge examinations. Terms, twenty-seven guineas per annum.—Miss R. KENDON, M.C.P., daughter of Rev. J. J. Kendon.

VEVEY, SWITZERLAND.—A few vacancies in an old-established, superior Ladies' Boarding School. Principal in London till 1st September.—Address by letter, Miss BABINGTON PEILE, 8, Ormiston-road, Uxbridge-road, W.

SUPERIOR PRIVATE SCHOOL (Girls'). Home life. Resident governess. Masters attend. Good bracing air, high ground. Small number only received. References to parents.—Misses MAW, Lime Bank, Upper Oldfield-park, Bath.

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, Warminster, Wilts.—Healthy neighbourhood, house detached, tennis lawn, &c. Masters from Clifton, Bath, Salisbury. The usual Public exams. Resident French governess. A few vacancies.—For prospectus, &c., address the Misses CRUSE, Cambridge House.

SUPERIOR EDUCATIONAL advan-tages for young Ladies, combined with Christian training and home comforts. Little boys also received, with entirely separate supervision. House beautifully situated in its own grounds. Lovely scenery. Health resort for delicate children. Inclusive terms, 15 to 21 guineas per annum.

PRINCIPAL, Broomfield Villa, Henfield, Sussex.

EASTBOURNE. — Ladies' College (for the daughters of Gentlemen). Established 1871. A few Boarders received. The College is examined by the University of Cambridge. Referees, Rev. W. Bathurst, vicar of Holy Trinity Church, parents of pupils and others.—For prospectus, &c., apply to the PRINCIPALS, the Misses Deacon, Grassington-road, Eastbourne.

PETERSFIELD, HAMPSHIRE. — Ladies' School. Principal, Miss HENSON. Good education on Christian principles, combined with domestic comforts. Pupils prepared for College Preceptors' exams. Terms very moderate. Ensuing term commences September 14.

A LADY WOULD LIKE to receive two little Girls, over ten years of age, to be educated with her own children. Excellent governess. Piano and violin lessons from a good master. Healthy country home.
The Heath, Wribbenhall, Bewdley.

PUPIL-TEACHER required, Ladies' School. Good education, English, French, music, for 16 guineas per annum. Duties light. Christian training. Preparation for College Preceptors' exams. Healthy situation.
Miss HENSON, Petersfield, Hants.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL.
WELLINGTON, SHROPSHIRE.
Principal: DR. CRANAGE, M.A.

BETHANY HOUSE SCHOOL, Goudhurst, Kent, near Tunbridge Wells.—Principal, Rev. J. J. KENDON.—Careful religious training, combined with a thoroughly sound commercial education. In the last three years 150 of the pupils were passed in the public examinations at the College of Preceptors, and the Local Examination of the University of Cambridge. Terms, twenty-seven guineas per annum.

YOUR BOYS will have a happy Home and sound Education with Mr. and Mrs. DIXON, Middle-class School, Kingston-on-Thames. Christian influence; unlimited diet; beautiful neighbourhood. 20 to 25 guineas.

MORAVIAN BOYS' SCHOOL, Ockbrook, near Derby.—Pupils prepared for London Matriculation and other examinations. Ockbrook presents the advantages of central position, and beautiful rural neighbourhood.—For prospectus apply to Rev. J. M. MALLALIEU.

HIGHBURY HOUSE SCHOOL, St. Leonard's-on-Sea.—Boys prepared for commerce, public schools, or the universities. Upper, middle, and preparatory departments. Seven resident masters. The junior division taught by ladies. Delicate boys, requiring a mild climate, receive every kindness and constant care. The autumn term will commence on September 17.—For prospectus apply to Mrs. DUFF, the Lady Principal.

HARRINGAY SCHOOL, Green-lanes, N.—Sound Christian education, for professional or commercial pursuits. Careful supervision, plentiful dietary, healthy locality, easy of access. Terms moderate from entry. Principal, J. S. COOMBES.

MOUNT RADFORD SCHOOL, Exeter. —Boys are prepared for business or professional life. Many matriculate at the various universities. During the last twelve years pupils have obtained more than two hundred certificates (many passing in honours) in the Oxford, Cambridge, College of Preceptors', and London University Examinations. Special attention paid to juniors, who are taught by a lady. The Word of God is made the sole basis of a careful moral and spiritual training, and none but Christian teachers are employed. Cricket, athletics, &c.
Head Master, E. H. VINE, M.C.P.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The under-mentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED ON HIGH GROUND, WITH VIEWS OF THE SEA, on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and a first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this school that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS, together with the papers of Examinations passed and Honours gained, should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. THORN, Paddington, London.

CLIFTON, BRISTOL.—A few Resi-dent Pupils desired. Locality celebrated for healthfulness and beauty. Instruction, training, companionship, personal, not delegated to others. Evangelical (Open Brethren).
Mr. HOWELL, Aberdeen-road.

NEW COLLEGE, Cliftonville, Mar-gate.—Principal: Rev. G. H. JONES, F.A.S. High-class education, with individual attention. Prep. for exams., and commerce. Christian training. Splendid premises, loftily situated, close to sea. Moderate fees.

BRIGHTON.— EDUCATION.— Mr. ALFRED CLARK, B.A. (Lond.), receives about twenty Sons of Gentlemen, from seven to fourteen years of age. Terms from 45 guineas. Pupils are thoroughly grounded in English subjects. Latin, Greek, French, German, and mathematics, and have been successful at Cambridge Local and other Examinations. Personal care, Christian influence, and a healthy, happy home.—85, Buckingham-[illegible] Brighton.—Referees: Rev. W. Poole Balfern, [illegible] Christ Church Vicarage, [illegible] B. Figgis, Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, Harley House, Bow-road, London; Rev. W. Haslam, 66, Marina, St. Leonard's. Term commences on Friday, Sept. 9.

The COLLEGE, HERNE BAY.
Established 1866. A Christian home and a good School. Remarkable health. Notable success in public exams. Reasonable and strictly inclusive fees. Inquiry and inspection invited.—Prospectus, views, references from J. B. TURNER, Principal.

HURSTPIERPOINT (near Brighton), Sussex Preparatory School. Home comforts. Christian training. Visiting masters. Special attention [illegible] backward boys. Preparation for public [illegible] Pupils passed with distinction. Twenty [illegible] children received.
LADY PRINCIPAL, Hamilton Lodge.

HOME AND EDUCATION for the Sons of Gentlemen under twelve years of age, 74, Broadhurst-gardens, South Hampstead. Principals, the Misses DOUGLAS MCMILLAN, assisted by three certificated lady teachers. Pupils prepared for the public schools. The children of Anglo-Indians received for education and entire management during absence of parents. Referees: The Venerable Archdeacon Philpot, Surbiton; the Recorder of London; and James Ewen Mathieson, Esq., Mildmay.

CHIPPENHAM. — An excellent School for Boys. Healthy and beautiful country. First-class gymnasium. Tennis ground. A bathing place near. Greatest attention paid to character and Bible teaching. Terms very moderate.
H. B. BARDWELL, Orwell House.

EDUCATION IN HIGHGATE.—The Rev. G. D. BARTLET, M.A., receives ten Pupils (from 10 years) to board and educate for Commercial or Professional life, or for Public Schools. Individual attention, thorough grounding, careful Christian training, with the comforts of a superior home, are afforded. Fees from 60 guineas per term. Highgate is strongly recommended by the medical profession.

LITTLE BOYS, Brighton.—Inker-man House, Lansdowne-road. The Misses ASHBY prepare young gentlemen for senior schools. The pupils are governed by kindness, and cheerfulness is encouraged. Careful instruction. Constant supervision. Home comforts. The situation is very healthy, near the sea.

TWO PUPILS can be received on very moderate terms in a high-class School, to study with pupils preparing for Senior Cambridge examinations. Careful training.
Y., Royal Library, Malvern.

EXCHANGE.—Required, two little Girls (under 10) to educate with resident governess, in exchange for two Boys 12, 13. Comfortable Christian home. Healthy neighbourhood.—MATER, Temple Guiting Vicarage, Winchcombe, Cheltenham.

KEMPLEY HOUSE, Bristol.—Mrs. PRESCOTT, Principal. — Prospectus sent. The education of Her Majesty the Queen was conducted on the principles of moral education; and Her Majesty has been pleased to accept a copy of Moral Education by Rev. P. Prescott, and Sir Henry Ponsonby has received the Queen's commands to thank him for the book.

JUNIOR MASTERSHIP or Tutor-ship required by Christian young Man holding London University Matriculation (first division) certificate. Total abstainer, non-smoker. Excellent reference as to ability.
G. W. E., 7, Henrietta-street, Bath.

A CHRISTIAN GOVERNESS wanted for four children. Ages six to thirteen. Experienced teacher, and good musician.—Mrs. STRANGMAN, Shanagarry, Middleton, Co. Cork, Ireland.

WANTED IN SEPTEMBER, an experienced Resident Governess, for girl aged 12½, and boy 11 years. Must be a true Christian, an efficient teacher, firm, kind, and cheerful. Will be required to instruct in thorough English, French, music, Latin, drawing, arithmetic, calisthenics, and needlework. References required from minister and present situation, also photograph, particulars of experience, age, and salary required. (Wesleyan preferred, not Church of England, or Plymouth Brethren).—Apply to Mrs. RENNIE, Hurworth, near Darlington.

RESIDENT GOVERNESS.—A young Lady, late Student of Queen's College, London, desires a re-engagement after the holidays. Acquirements, thorough English, music, drawing, painting, French, and the rudiments of Latin. Good testimonials.
A. B., Bockleton, Tweedy-road, Bromley, Kent.

GOVERNESS. — A young Lady desires a re-engagement in Ladies' School or private family. Trained teacher. Acquirements, English, French, music, drawing. Highest references.
M. D., 5, Kenilworth-villas, Hastings.

AS GOVERNESS.—A Lady recom-mends a young Lady (23) to children under 14. Certificated for English, French, drawing, College of Preceptors. Pianoforte, music, Trinity College 1st class honours. Evangelical Church. Highest references. Country preferred.—ALEX., Anglesea Villa, Marine Parade, Clacton-on-Sea.

MORNING GOVERNESS (Certifi-cated Senior Cambridge, desires re-engagement. English, French, German, singing, drawing (full South Kensington certificate), water-colour painting, good music (pupil of Lindsay Sloper).
K., 31, Loraine-road, Holloway, N.

GERMAN LADY, 37, desires resi-dent engagement as Governess or Companion. Thorough English and French, Spanish, music, elementary Latin and drawing. Best testimonials and references. State salary.—FRAULEIN, Horswell House, Kingsbridge, Devonshire.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Wanted.

SECRETARIAL APPOINTMENT wanted. — The Secretary of the Bournemouth Young Men's Christian Association will be open for a re-engagement, either public or private, in September.—SECRETARY, Cairns Memorial House, Bournemouth.

AS CLERK, CASHIER, &c.—Age 24. Two years' experience as above, and six years as junior warehouseman. Highest references, and testimonials. Moderate salary.
LEXICON, Box 3589, Sells, 167, Fleet street, E.C.

EVANGELIST, Bible-reader, or other Christian work. Appointment desired by Son of a Medical Man. Age 23. Unsectarian. Good references.
W. G. B., care of Mrs. Crouch, Nutfield, Surrey.

SITUATION WANTED, where honesty, sobriety, and perseverance will be appreciated. Painter and decorator. Well up in all kinds of repairs. Six years last situation.
LEGRYS, 43, Mount Pleasant-road, Stroud-green, N.

A CHRISTIAN YOUNG MAN, of consumptive tendencies, seeks some light employment in Bournemouth, Ventnor, or Torquay, for the winter months. Good business training as Draper. Salary not so much an object as comfortable home. First class references. Would be glad to help in Christian work.—E. WHITE, Lydd, Kent.

GARDENER.—A Lady wishes to hear of thoroughly comfortable situation for a young Gardener, of high respectability and qualifications. Church of England, abstainer, and non-smoker.—Mrs. HODGKIN, Reigate.

A CHRISTIAN WORKER (life ab-stainer) earnestly seeks some useful occupation. 17 years with late employer (deceased). Settlement desired, rather than much pecuniarily. Highest references. — B., 8, Alexandra-grove, Plymouth-grove, Manchester.

AS COWMAN and General Manager; wife to have charge of dairy and poultry. Respectable, married people, about 30. Can be well recommended from present situation; also recommended by Mr. Wood, Potter's Bar. Leaving because farm is let.
W. T., Hook Farm, Potter's Bar, N.

MRS. JOSEPHINE BUTLER wishes to find some Christian work, especially of a Rescue kind, for Rebecca Jarrett, who is now resting with her. Rebecca is not strong for much travelling or movement. God has blessed her labours since her release from prison, and she loves the lost.—The Close, Winchester.

A CLERGYMAN strongly recom-mends a Lady as Parish Helper and Organist, or Companion, or Matron; also, a Governess for children under twelve, and a Nursery Governess.
VICAR, Terrington, Lynn.

YOUNG LADY seeks situation in Jeweller's business; 18 months' experience. Good references. Member of Christian church. Open to an engagement end of September.—Miss DOWLING, 1, Elwyn-villa, Holdenhurst-road, Bournemouth.

VICAR'S DAUGHTER requires position at once as Companion to Lady or motherless girls. Has had exceptional advantages in music and singing. Would give lessons in both accomplishments. Is agreeable, good-tempered, ladylike, very musical. No objection to travel. Excellent references and testimonials. Salary from £25. Comfortable home desired.
ZETA, 2, Union-terrace, Notting-hill, W.

A LADY (35) of great experience, thoroughly domesticated, desires re-engagement as Housekeeper, Companion, or any position of trust. Highest references. Churchwoman. Salary £25.
BETA, 26, Cambridge-street, Hyde-park, W.

AS COMPANION and Attendant upon an invalid or elderly gentleman. Engagement wanted by a Christian Man of good birth and education. Good reader and amanuensis. Excellent references.—DELTA, Mr. Bastin's Pure Literature Depot, All Saints'-road, Westbourne-park, W.

A CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER (26), active, experienced, economical, musical, seeks re-engagement Lady Housekeeper, or any position usefulness. Comfortable home more desired than high salary. References given.
Z., 37, Camberwell-road, London.

A GENTLEWOMAN desires an en-gagement as Companion or Housekeeper in a small family. Salary no object.—Miss FIRTH, care of Mrs. Spence, 10, Nixon-street, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

A LADY, who has had much ex-perience in travelling, both in the East and on the Continent, is desirous of meeting a young Lady wanting a Chaperone. Speaks several languages.
A. B., Broomfield Villa, Henfield, Sussex.

A LADY SEEKS a situation as Companion to an elderly or invalid Lady or Gentleman. Is a good reader and amanuensis. Salary not such an object as a Christian home.—Miss M. M. A., 103, Victoria-road, Tranmere-park, Cheshire.

A CHRISTIAN LADY is desirous of a situation in Mission work, or as Housekeeper. Highly recommended. Salary not so much a consideration as a comfortable home.
S. S. H., 4, Montague-place, Milwall.

A YOUNG LADY (24), daughter of officer in the army, desires engagement as Companion or Governess to children under 12. Four years' reference.—E. S. M., 15, Beacon-street, Low Fell, Gateshead-on-Tyne.

CHRISTIAN PERSON seeks situa-tion as Lady's Maid to elderly or delicate Christian Lady. Could assist housekeeping. Thoroughly experienced. Dressmaker; efficient needlewoman. Six years' excellent testimonials.—A. B. C., Mr. Walser, 36, Western-road, Hove, Brighton.

AN EXPERIENCED CHRISTIAN Worker, seeking rest of voice, will be glad to take charge of a house, or fill any place of trust for few weeks. Good accountant and correspondent.
F. M., 9, Manor-road, Brockley.

WILL ANY CHRISTIAN Lady or Housekeeper receive a young Girl (14), slightly lame, to train as Servant. Willing and teachable. Not been out before. Full particulars upon application.—Miss THORNE, Westwood, Beulah-hill, Upper Norwood, S.E.

A CHRISTIAN WIDOW LADY, middle-aged, with one little girl, who has worked with Mrs. Josephine Butler in rescue and preventive work, desires a situation in any institution over working girls, orphans, or others. Has had large workhouse experience. Excellent recommendations, Canon and Mrs. Butler's included. Is willing to go to Australia.
Mrs. S., Albert Cottage, High Cliff, Winchester.

SITUATION wanted, to wait on elderly Lady. Respectable person, age 48. 24 years' character. Comfortable home required, rather than high wages.
A. M., 89, Elswick-road, Lewisham, S.E.

WANTED BY A CHRISTIAN PERSON with one child, any place of trust. Can do housework, plain cooking. Small salary. Good reference from S. A., Training Home.—A. B., Mr. Parish, 1, Clapton-pavement, Clapton, E.

A LADY SEEKS a situation as Housemaid in a small, quiet family for a steady, Christian Girl, of 20, in or near London.
MARY HARGRAVE, 35, St. Leonard's-street, Pimlico.

AS SINGLE-HANDED Housemaid, or useful Maid. Age 29. Christian and abstainer. Would appreciate living in a Christian family, in or near London.
M. W., 16, Sixth-avenue, Queen's-park, N.W.

AS UNDER-HOUSEMAID, or single-handed in a small family. Age 18. Good character.
VICK, Bancroft, Hitchin, Herts.

WANTED, BY A YOUNG LADY, a situation as superior Mother's Help, or useful Companion. Salary £20. Musical. Good references.—S. M. H., The Poplars, Norman's-place, Altrincham.

A LADY RECOMMENDS a young person as useful Maid. Thoroughly trustworthy, obliging. Good manners and appearance. A most useful assistant to an invalid.
E. B., 2, Leigh-villas, Southend, Essex.

A LADY RECOMMENDS, as Under Laundry Maid, or single-handed in a small family, a young Woman of 19. Tall, and understands her work well.—Miss ONSLOW, Alresford, Hants.

A GOOD PLAIN COOK, where other servants are kept. Middle-aged.
R. A., 47, Elswick-road, Lewisham, S.E.

A LADY WISHES to recommend a strong, healthy, willing Girl as a Servant in the country. Wages not so much an object as careful training, and watchful supervision.
Miss J., 3, Durham-place, Kensington, W.

USEFUL MAID.—Age 32. Excel-lent needlewoman. Abstainer's family, about 20 miles from London, preferred.
M. R., 9, Westbury-road, Paddington.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Vacant.

MANAGER OF CHEMICAL WORKS. —Wanted, an able and energetic Manager of Chemical Works. Christian, and abstainer from alcohol and tobacco. Liberal salary to a good man. —Address, stating age, practical experience, and references, CHEMICUS, care of Housekeeper, 13, Rose-street, Newgate-street, London, E.C.

CHURCH ARMY. — Evangelists wanted, working men and others, not afraid of hard work or personal sacrifice for Christ. Not necessarily good scholars.—Apply for particulars to
Rev. C., 130, Edgware-road, W.

WANTED, FOR HOUSE in the country, a single Man for general work. Must understand gardening, be able to take care of horse and carriage, and milk two or three cows well. Abstainer preferred. Comfortable home.
RODGERS, Queniborough, Leicester.

CHRISTIAN YOUNG LADY wanted, good singer, and able to play harmonium, to help in evangelistic Mission work.—Reference, &c., care of J. Smith, Lime Tree-place, Stowmarket.

HOSPITAL - TRAINED NURSES wanted, for District work. Also a Surgical, Medical, and Monthly Private Nurse for Burton-on-Trent Nursing Institution.—LADY SUPERINTENDENT, 41, Duke-street, Burton-on-Trent.

NURSE WANTED, for the Maryle-bone Home for Incurable Women of rather a superior class. Must be a Christian, and have had experience in nursing. Not under 30.
Mrs. UNDERWOOD, 23, Dorset-square, London.

A YOUNG LADY (Christian) wanted, as Nursery Governess to four Children under 10. Music, French, and needlework. One who can play the harmonium preferred.
Mrs. HAIG, Birchington Bay, Kent.

NO SALARY.—Can anyone recom-mend a useful Companion. Truly converted, and a worker. Thoroughly ladylike. Church of England. Good reader and amanuensis. Strong health. Age 26. Home comforts offered.
Miss H. NISBET, 10, Victoria-square, Clifton.

COMPANIONABLE, domesticated, godly person wanted, to assist mistress, and be generally useful. Must be good needlewoman. Abstainer. State religious views, age, salary, references, capabilities.—Mrs. SPEAR, East Hall, Wennington, Rainham, Essex.

GOOD PLAIN COOKS wanted (town and country), House-Parlourmaids, Nurses, good General Servants.—Miss MAULDEN'S (late missionary) Registry and Home, Church street, Paddington-green. Please send stamped envelope for reply.

A THOROUGHLY RESPECTABLE, trustworthy person wanted, in September (not under 35), as Cook in a small Convalescent Home.—LADY SUPERINTENDENT, Convalescent Home, Clevedon.

COOK-HOUSEKEEPER wanted, in quiet family. Must be an abstainer, write good hand, keep accounts, and have personal character for competence, integrity, and activity. Under forty.—Mrs. H., Undercroft, Reigate.

GOOD PLAIN COOK wanted, or General who can cook well, and HOUSE-PARLOURMAID for private family. Must be strong, and have excellent characters. Good wages.
Mrs. G., 3, Lansdowne-place, Brighton.

CAN ANY LADY thoroughly recommend good Plain Cook, trustworthy, help in housework. £16 to £18. All found except beer. Abstainer preferred.
Mrs. E. D., 30, Pevensey-road, St. Leonards.

HOUSE - PARLOURMAID wanted, good waitress. Also GENERAL, to cook well. Neat, respectable. Early risers. Age 25. Wages £16. Small family. Dissenters; abstainers.—Mrs. WOODROFFE, Charnwood, New Malden, Surrey.

AN EARNEST CHRISTIAN Gentlewoman, to teach and have the charge of four children (eldest 11½). Church of England. Very good music, singing, French, needlework. Country home. Every particular in letter, otherwise not answered.
WIDOW, Anderson's Library, Dumfries.

WANTED, IN SEPTEMBER, an experienced, cheerful Nurse, over 26, to go with a Lady to South America. Willing to make herself useful in any way. Youngest child 11 months. Must be a good sailor. Abstainer preferred. Highest references required.
H. M. A., 55, Lee-park, Blackheath.

THOROUGHLY TRUSTWORTHY and experienced Nurse wanted, for baby four months old. Age not under 27. Good needlewoman.
Mrs. A., Athol Lodge, Venner-road, Sydenham, S.E.

WILL ANY LADY recommend a superior, thoroughly reliable young person, as Nurse to two children, 3 and 6. Competent needlewoman. Abstainer. Healthy. Officer's family.—Mrs. F. CROSBIE, 53, Forsyth-street, Greenock, N.B.

TWO SERVANTS WANTED by September 1, for small family; General Servant able to do good plain cooking, and Nurse Housemaid. Healthy and strong. Christians preferred.—Apply by letter, stating wages, to
Mrs. SCRIVEN, 13, Hammersmith-terrace, W.

SUPERIOR GENERAL SERVANT wanted, in small family. No children. Help given. Slight knowledge of cooking required. Good wages. Call after 2.—Mrs. LANE, 45, Fordwych-road, West Hampstead, N.W.

WILL ANY LADY recommend a respectable Girl, age 16 or 17, as General Servant in a small family. One not having been out before not objected to.—Mrs. A. LONGLEY, The Villas, Aylesbury, Bucks.

A TRUSTWORTHY, willing person as General Servant, wanted in September, in a small family. No children. Good character required. Boy kept.—Send full particulars to Mrs. ALLEN, Fernbank, Ware, Herts.

To Let, Apartments, &c.

PERCY'S HOTEL, LONDON.

40, Bedford-place, Bloomsbury-sq., W.C.

This First-class Private Hotel is highly recommended by the Bishop of Algoma; Rev. M. E. Thorold, M.A., Leicester; Dr. Georgens, Ouchy, Lausanne; J. Bevan and Mrs. Braithwaite, 312, Camden-road, and many others. Beds from 1s. 6d. Tea, 1s. 3d. Tariff on application.
Mrs. LLOYD HARRIS, Proprietor.

LONDON.

WEST CENTRAL HOTEL.

(First-class Temperance), 97, 99, 101, 103, Southampton-row, Russell-square.—Highly commended by Sir William Fox, K.C.M.G.; Rev. Charles Williams; Rev. John Cairns, D.D.; Rev. A. B. Grosart, D.D.; Rev. H. S. Paterson, M.D.; Rev. Forbes E. Winslow, M.A.; T. W. Russell, Esq., M.P.; Dr. Norman Kerr; Frederick Sherlock, Esq.; Dr. Ziemann; Miss Haslam, C.E.T.S.; Mrs. Lucas Shadwell, &c., &c. Plain Breakfast or Tea 1s. 3d. Beds, 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. Printed Tariff on application to FREDERIC SMITH, Proprietor.

LONDON. — First-class Private Hotel, 20, Bedford-place, Russell-square, W.C.—Patronised and highly recommended by Bishop and Mrs. Newman, Leamington; the Rev. J. B. O. West, M.A., Manchester; Tudor Trevor, Esq., Leeds; George Ward, Esq., Manchester; Thomas B. Dale, Esq., J.P., Warwick; James Baly, Esq., and many other friends. Tariff on application.—GRACE PERCY, Proprietress, late Librarian to the Warwick Library, and Grand-daughter of the late Rev. J. W. Percy, Warwick.

W. TAVERNER, Temperance Hotel, 42 and 43, Judd-street, Euston-road, London, W.C. Five minutes from G.N., Mid., and N.W. Railways. Beds from 1s. 6d. Plain breakfast or tea, 1s. Tariff and testimonials on application. Patronised by ministers of all denominations.

LONDON. — 97, EUSTON - ROAD (opposite G.N. and Midland Railways).—Furnished Parlour-floor. Bed-rooms nightly or weekly. Sitting-room and Board as required, in a Christian family. Terms moderate.

LONDON. — Insull's Temperance Hotel, 20, 21, Burton-crescent, Tavistock-square, W.C.—Five minutes' walk or 1s. cab fare from Euston, St. Pancras, King's Cross Railways; easily reached from other stations. Patronised by readers of THE CHRISTIAN.

LONDON.-LAW'S BOARDING HOUSE, 15, Thavies-inn, Holborn-circus.—Quiet and homely. Centrally situated for business or pleasure. Five minutes' walk of St. Paul's Cathedral and General Post Office. Terms moderate.

ST. LEONARD'S - ON - SEA. — A limited number of Ministers and their wives, and other Christians, are received at a comfortable private residence.—For terms address,
H., Fern Lea, Pevensey-road.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA, 88, Warrior-square.—First-class Boarding Establishment. Unrivalled position. Fine sea views. Liberal table. Late dinner. Inclusive terms from 25s. Clerical and medical references. Good tennis courts.—Address PROPRIETRESS.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—Boarding Establishment, Meliora House, 20 and 21, Carisbrooke-road. Conducted by the Widow of the late Rev. F. WAGSTAFFE, and Mrs. LOCKE. Good table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Near sea, gardens, and rail.

INTEMPERANCE.—A private Home at the seaside for limited number of the upper and higher middle classes in a cheerful little spot where Dipsomania, Choralism, Nervous Debility, &c., has been long and successfully treated. Christian influence; home comforts and amusements; highest references.—MEDICUS, Messrs. Pascoe, 28, Stokes Croft, Bristol.

BOURNEMOUTH. — Clergyman's Widow, who has had great experience in nursing, would gladly receive two or three Ladies, invalid or otherwise, in her comfortable home. Terms from 25s. South aspect.
Mrs. H., Estens, Surrey-road South, Bournemouth.

ILFRACOMBE.—Foster's Boarding House. Close to sea. Home comforts. Highly recommended by Clergy and Ministers. Conducted on Christian and Temperance principles. Terms, 52s. 6d. per week. No extras.

BRIGHTON.—Sussex House Boarding Establishment, pleasantly situated in the Old Steine, having a sea view, and the beautiful Steine Gardens in front. Near to Pavilion, Aquarium, and piers. Liberal table, with every home comfort.
Mr. & Mrs. BOX, 58, Old Steine.

MRS. PARSONS returns sincere thanks for all kindness from Christian friends, and begs to say she has removed to larger premises.—(Private) Convalescent Home, Shaftesbury House, Seaside-road, Eastbourne.

ROTHESAY, N.B.—House of Rest. A Health Resort and Hydropathic Establishment for Christians. Summer terms, board, lodging, and baths, from 30s. per week.—Send for prospectus to COLIN CAMPBELL, Argyle Lodge.

WORTHING HOME OF REST for Christians. Close to sea, with good garden. Every comfort. Services on the ground. Terms 25s. to 2 guineas.—LADY SUPERINTENDENT, Rutherford Lodge, Worthing.

INTEMPERANCE.—Private Home for six Ladies. Terms from 1½ to 3 guineas weekly. Highest professional references given, for which, with other particulars, apply to
Miss PUDNEY, Buxton House, Earls Colne, Essex.

BEXHILL. — Christians needing rest and change have derived great benefit by a stay at the Home of Rest, Station-road. Sea bathing. Splendid landscape. Terms—board and lodgings from 12s. weekly.

BROADSTAIRS.—Seafield Boarding Establishment.—Best situation in town. Close to sea. Liberal table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Highly recommended by all who have visited. Special terms for permanent boarders

BALHAM, near Wandsworth Common.—Furnished Apartments to Let, in quiet family, to Gentleman engaged in business. Bath-room, hot and cold water. Use of piano.
44, Sarsfeld-road, Balham.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Large and airy suites of Apartments. Close to principal churches, and near pier and gardens. Hot and cold baths. Terms moderate.—Mrs. MOON, St. Peter's-road.

BOURNEMOUTH, East Cliff.—Well furnished Apartments, most bracing position, seven minutes from cliff and sea. Highly recommended for good cooking and every home comfort. Charges strictly moderate.
Mrs. CLARKE, Borrowdale, York-road.

BOURNEMOUTH. — First - class Boarding house. Beautifully situated; close to and facing the sea; every room commanding charming sea-views. Good table. Terms moderate.
Ben Wyvis, West Cliff.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Superior high-class Apartments. Healthy situation. South aspect. Close to pines, sea, and town. Bed and sitting room from 25s. Good attendance.—Linden House, St. John's Wood-road, Bournemouth.

DORKING.—Furnished Bed-room, with occasional use of sitting-room, with or without attendance. Suitable for a Christian of small means. Central, and quiet.
Mrs. R., 1, Western-place, Rose's-gardens.

A LADY RECOMMENDS a pleasant sea-side lodging, a few miles from Falmouth.—Mrs. THOMAS PETERS, Portscatho Grampound, Cornwall.

NEAR TORQUAY.—Quiet, comfortable Lodgings in a pretty village. Air salubrious. Suitable for an invalid. Highly recommended. Terms moderate.
Mrs. WATSON, Fern Bank, King's Kerswell.

FOLKESTONE.—Board and Residence during the summer holidays, on moderate terms. Special arrangements made for families. Good ground for cricket and lawn tennis.
PRINCIPAL, Grove House School.

HAMPSTEAD HEATH.—Board, &c. —Vacancy in a small, quiet household. Good bedroom. Open front and rear. Near to churches, station, and omnibus. References exchanged.—ZETA, Kay's, Newsagent, Gayton-road, Hampstead, N.W.

ILFRACOMBE. — A part or the whole of pretty, furnished, semi-detached Villa to Let, for a longer or shorter time, with or without attendance. Terms moderate.
Ashwell Lodge, Brookdale-avenue.

COUNTRY HOME for Christian Gentleman, engaged during the day in the City; or a young invalid needing change, with home comforts. Highest references.
D., Milton-road, Harpenden, St. Albans.

HOLIDAY HOME for Christian Workers and Governesses. Delightfully situated near parks and esplanade. Piano. Terms moderate. —X. Y. Z., Mr. H. Johns, 8, Upper Prospect-place, Southampton.

FURNISHED HOUSE to Let, for one or two months. Two sitting-rooms, four bedrooms, kitchen, &c. Bracing air. Thirty-four acres land. Large kitchen and flower gardens. Pony chaise, cow, poultry, &c. Amusements for children.—J. RENDLE, Chaselands, Enfield, N.

TO LET, FURNISHED, Bed-room and Sitting-room, in private family, with or without board. Use of piano and bath. Pleasantly situated. Five minutes' walk from Crouch End Station, N.—L. A., care of Messrs. Castle & Lamb, 133, Salisbury-square, E.C.

BOARD AND RESIDENCE in a comfortable, quiet Home in the country. Rooms may be had for a few days only, or permanently.—The Misses PATTISON, Islington Villa, Wem, Salop.

A COMFORTABLE HOME can be had, with attendance, in quiet cottage near Epping Forest, suitable for an invalid Lady, or one retiring from business.
6, Cambridge-place, Paddington, W.

COMFORTABLE CHRISTIAN HOME, at a superior farm residence, for Lady or Gentleman, in healthy neighbourhood in North Hants. Bath-room, phaeton, shooting, fishing.
M. G., 20, Trafalgar-road, Old Kent-road, London.

COMFORTABLE CHRISTIAN HOME offered in Scotch Presbyterian family to two little Girls, ages from four to twelve. Country house within ten miles of Glasgow. Bracing atmosphere. References exchanged.—J. W., care of William Mair, Christian Leader Office, Glasgow.

A CHRISTIAN HOME is offered two or three little Girls, in a healthy neighbourhood. Orphans or delicate children would receive a mother's care, with educational advantages.
Westlands, Harpenden, Herts.

ADVERTISER would be glad to communicate with Lady wishing for comfortable Home, on moderate terms. Assistance acceptable, not of importance.
SCHOLASTIC, Review Office, Upper Norwood, S.E.

A LADY, OR TWO SISTERS, may find happy Christian Home with Lady and Gentleman, residing alone in pleasant villa in the attractive Western suburb of Ealing. Christian workers preferred. Terms moderate.—LEAH, Williams' Library, Hereford-road, Bayswater, London.

CHRISTIAN WIDOW, having a nice house and garden in very healthy locality, offers a comfortable Home for one or two children, or a lady. Qualified German governess could attend to their education. Every home comfort, and motherly care.—E. S., Ferndale Villa, Maygrove-road, Brondesbury, N.W.

TWO LADIES, residing in a beautiful seaside town, desire a Lady Boarder, invalid or otherwise, who would find a happy Christian home. Terms from two to three guineas a week, according to arrangement.
YORKSHIRE, 38, Maldon-road, Watford, Herts.

VACANCY for a Lady Boarder in a quiet family where two others are received. Terms moderate. References exchanged. — Miss M. BOROUGH, 1, Fountain-villas, Matlock Bath, Derbyshire.

HOME WANTED for young Lady, in a family, where they are engaged in Christian work. Dissenters. Suburb of London.—A. B., 7, Cambrian-terrace, Friar-street, Lynn, Norfolk.

UNFURNISHED ROOMS.—Wanted at Michaelmas, by two Ladies, in a Christian household, two sitting-rooms, three bed-rooms, kitchen. Neighbourhood, North London, Highbury preferred.—B. E., 31, Victoria-road, Stroud-green, N.

A LADY WISHES to meet with a Christian Lady to share her home. Healthy neighbourhood, where she could find plenty of parish work if so inclined. References exchanged.—A. B., Mrs. Wood, 138, Chesterton-road, North Kensington, W.

ROOMS, clean, quiet, inexpensive, wanted by Christian young Man, engaged during day. Does not object sharing with another Christian, or boarding with family. All particulars,
P., 11, High-street, Chagford, Devon.

REQUIRED, by a Lady, a comfortable Home in a family residing in or near Upper Norwood or London. Terms 25s. a week. Good references given and required.—R. S., care of Mr. Fricker, 84, Westow-hill, Upper Norwood.

A MECHANIC, who has four children and delicate wife, wishes a Christian friend would recommend comfortable, inexpensive Home for change of air.
HODGSON, 61, Thornbury-road, Clapham-park.

Miscellaneous.

ANXIOUS INQUIRERS.—Numbers have received blessing through writing. All anxious ones are invited to write.—2 Cor. i. 3, 4.
EVANGELIST, Clapham, S.W.

ASTHMA.—Persons suffering from Asthma, Difficulty of Breathing, &c., are invited to try (free of charge) a remedy for affording immediate relief.—C., Mr. G. A. KEYWORTH, Hastings.

PORTABLE HARMONIUMS, ORGANS, PIANOS, &c. Mr. Gawin Kirkham, Open Air Mission, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, writes:—"I can bear personal testimony to the excellence of your instruments, which I consider the best and cheapest, shall have much personal pleasure in being your referee. Our members speak highly of them." Lowest prices.
CHARLES L. YOUNG, 21, High-street, Kingsland.

NERVOUS, TEMPTED, and despairing ones are invited to communicate with G. R. G., Keston House, Lady Margaret-road, N.W. (2 Cor. i. 4). Spiritual sufferers only. Stamps for reply.

ELEGANT COUNTERPANE.—Turkey twill and white calico. Coloured illustration, model, and instructions nine stamps. Artistic, short window blinds. No washing. Model and instructions, eight stamps.
CLIFFORD, Newport, Mon.

UMBRELLAS RE-COVERED FROM
2s. EACH.

IF YOUR UMBRELLA WANTS RE-COVERING send it by Parcels Post (with Postal Order enclosed) to STRONG BROS., Umbrella Makers, Redhill, Surrey, who will re-cover it and return it as good as new by next post, carriage paid. Good strong twill, ladies', 2s., gents', 2s. 6d.; good alpaca, ladies', 3s., gents', 3s. 6d.; strong durable silk, ladies', 4s. 6d., gents', 5s. Patterns post free. Reference kindly permitted to the Rev. W. J. Fowell, Redhill.

BYWATER, TANQUERAY & CO., 79, Queen Victoria-street, London (late BYWATER, PERRY & CO.), are Agents for Residents abroad Missionaries, Chaplains, &c., in every part of the world. Goods and Outfits supplied at Wholesale prices. Shipping and passages arranged. Banking in all its branches. Full descriptive Catalogue post free. Specially appointed Agents to seven of the leading English and American Missionary Societies. 2,000 References.

COLONIES.—Openings for Pupils on good stock and grain farms, and larger estates in Canada, the United States, and Tasmania. Pamphlet free.—FORD, RATHBONE & CO., 21, Finsbury-pavement, London.

A MARVELLOUS TEA. — Our "Combination" Blend at 2s. per lb. is not only economical, but is peculiarly adapted to the London and Suburban water. No householder should be without it. Our 1s. 8d. also strongly recommended. Teas suitable for Ireland at 1s. 6d., 1s. 8d., 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s. Any of above Teas can be had in 5-lb., 10-lb. tins, &c. (tins free), post or carriage paid anywhere in United Kingdom on receipt of cash. Agents wanted.—THE BELFAST ANGLO TEA COMPANY, 6, George-yard, Fenchurch-street, London.

TO LADIES WITH LIMITED MEANS. —The Advertiser's son, a tea planter, seeks well recommended Agents for the sale of his Teas. Liberal commission.
Colonel MORTON, 2, Priory-parade, Cheltenham.

IRON MISSION ROOMS, &c., erected on the most reasonable terms, by R. SAUNDERS, 127, Hungerford-road, London, N. Estimates and designs free. 25 years' practical experience. Also Churches and Schools, &c. Best workmanship.

FLORIDA.—Mr. HUGH MACCALLUM, Solicitor, Winter-park, Florida, being on a visit to this country, will give reliable information regarding settlement and investment in Florida.
6, Thirlstane-road, Edinburgh, Scotland.

WILL THE LADY from Southsea who asked in a former issue of THE CHRISTIAN for Postage Stamps for charitable work, write to Mrs. G. GILES, The Maples, Bonchurch, and give her address.

LADIES INTERESTED IN FANCY WORK, especially those wishing to make money thereby, should send for Dorinda's book, "Needlework for Ladies, for Pleasure and Profit." New Edition, 194 pages, price 1s. 6d., post free. Contains an enormous amount of information, ample instructions for every variety of work, innumerable recipes and directions, novel ideas, and practical suggestions.—Ringrose, Malvern Link.

A GOOD OPENING wanted, in the country, or suburbs, for the business of a Grocer, Provision Merchant, or General Stores, where there is scope for evangelistic work by a Christian family of considerable experience. Anyone knowing of such an opening will greatly oblige by writing to J. T., 94, Frederick-street, Caledonian-road, London, N.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL.

WRITE FOR PAMPHLET, 43, SNOW HILL, E.C.

NEAVE'S

FOR INFANTS,
INVALIDS,
GROWING CHILDREN,
AND THE AGED.

FOOD.

PARTNERSHIP wanted, by a Christian (elder of Presbyterian Church). Wholesale Drapery. Capital required, from £600 to £1,000. A splendid opening for a Christian to manage books and finance, or above trade or travel.—No. 21, E. Waterhouse, Accountant, Whitefriargate, Hull.

A GENTLEMAN would like to correspond with a Christian Friend going to New Zealand, with reference to his son (22 years of age) joining him in the voyage.
N. Z., Brookville, Seascale, Cumberland.

O'BRIEN'S IRISH SHIRTS

UNSURPASSED FOR VALUE.

Their "SPECIAL," 39s. per half dozen, Carriage Paid. A Sample Shirt, 6s. 9d.
Sizes 14 in. to 16½ in. neck. Shirts made to order.

GEORGE O'BRIEN & CO.,
MANUFACTURERS, BELFAST.

BOOKSELLING AND STATIONERY. Business in chief thoroughfare of good market town, Devonshire. Failing health the only reason for giving up. £400 to £500 required.
T. M. P., 6, Mount Pleasant, Newton Abbot.

Birth.

INGRAM.—On June 6, at the Mission Station, Banza Manteka, Congo Free State, the wife of C. E. INGRAM, of a son.

OUR HOMES.

BY MRS. REANEY.

A Series of 12 Small Books on Christian Temperance described above.

Assorted Packet containing one of each sort, price 6d.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-bldgs.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Terms for Advertisements
IN
"The Christian"
(PREPAID)

Miscellaneous Advertisements in small type are charged at the following rates:—

	s.	d.
Not exceeding 30 Words	3	0
" 39 "	3	9
" 48 "	4	6

And 9d. for every additional line of nine words or under, the address being in all cases charged for.

To prevent disappointment, it is necessary to say that in no case must Letters be addressed to a Post-office, unless permission be previously obtained at such Post-office.

The Publishers cannot undertake to receive and forward Replies to Advertisements.

Publications.

17th Thousand. Price 1d.
THE NEAR RETURN OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST. By CHEYNE BRADY.
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & Co.

MRS. GRIMKE'S TEXT CARDS.—To be had from Mrs. GRIMKÈ, Prestwich, Manchester, who likes orders sent to her direct, or from E. KAUFMANN, 129, Cheapside; or booksellers.

The Stirling Publications.

JESUS IS ALL. Twelve Booklets. 8 pp., printed on extra thick paper, with Coloured Borders. Extracted by permission from Mr. Spurgeon's Sermons. Packets 1 and 2, 6d. each.

CHRIST IS ALL. By the late Very Rev. Dean LAW, M.A. Twelve little books, 16 pages, specially revised by the Author. Tinted paper, 6d. per packet.

THE WAY HOME SERIES. By LADY HOPE. Six 16-page little Books. Packet of 12, assorted, 6d.

THE SEED BASKET. First Series, 4 pp.; second Series, 8 pp. Packets 1 and 2, 6d. each.

DRUMMOND'S TRACT DEPOT, Stirling;
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & Co.

NEW COPYRIGHT TREATISE.
BY A PRACTISING PHYSICIAN.

DYSPEPSIA:
WHY SUFFERED.

Also, reliable and fully detailed Dietary and Medicinal Treatment of Indigestion and associated disorders, affording an absolute remedy and cure.

64 pp. 8vo., 1s.; smaller size, 2d. post free from Publishers,
HAMILTON & CO., Oxford-street, Southampton.

Neatly printed as a small book for enclosing in Letters or giving away.

GRIPPING AND SLIPPING:
SCENES IN THE LIFE OF A PRIVATE SOLDIER.

Reprinted from "The Christian."

Price 6d. per Doz.; 3s. 6d. per 100 (3s. 10½d. post free); 30s. per 1,000.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-bldgs.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE CONFESSIONAL.
A Personal Narrative.

By ELIZA RICHARDSON,
Author of "PERSONAL EXPERIENCE OF ROMAN CATHOLICISM," "THE VEIL LIFTED," &c.

Neatly printed in Red and Black. Suitable for enclosing in the ordinary square envelope, 1s. per dozen, or 7s. per hundred, post free.

"It was a dark page in my experience, when first I knelt at the feet of a mortal to confess what should have been poured into the ear of God alone. I cannot dwell upon this; but a brief time before it would have for ever put to rest my longings after Romanism. Though I believe my confessor was, on the whole, as guarded as his manner was kind, at some things I was strangely startled, utterly confounded."—Extract.

MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

DAILY LIGHT ON THE DAILY PATH.
IN THE VERY WORDS OF SCRIPTURE.

Two Volumes. Morning Hour, and Evening Hour. Sold separately or in sets.

"These are very precious little books, and few more suitable gifts could be found."
Christian.

Small Edition, each volume, cloth, 1s.; French morocco, gilt edges, 2s.
Large Type Edition, each volume, cloth extra, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.
Various Styles in calf, morocco, and German calf.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, 15, Paternoster-row.

DAINTREE & CO., DYERS, LONDON.

The LARGEST WORKS IN LONDON for Dyeing and Cleaning in every Branch.
98, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.; 365, Southwark-park-road, S.E.; 44, Leicester-square, W.C.

Carts Collect and Deliver to all parts.—PRICE LISTS BY POST.

A "CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE" for 3s. 6d.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE
TO THE OLD & NEW TESTAMENTS.

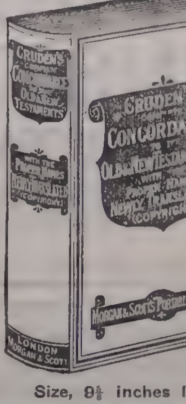
This Edition is COMPLETE and UNABRIDGED.
It has all the Words and References that were given in earlier and far more expensive Editions.
It contains 757 pages.
2,270 closely-printed columns, and about
250,000 references, with the Proper Names newly Translated by a competent Scholar. (This portion of the work is strictly COPYRIGHT, and can only appear in MORGAN & SCOTT'S EDITIONS.)

PORTABLE 3/6 EDITION.

"'CRUDEN'S COMPLETE CONCORDANCE' in a well-bound and conveniently-sized volume issued at 3s. 6d., seems one of the marvels of modern book production. Messrs. Morgan & Scott's portable edition is of this class. There has been copious controversy on the merits and demerits of Cruden's great work; but we prefer to believe in Lowndes's opinion that 'Cruden's Concordance should be in every library.' It is uncommonly complete, the definitions of leading words remarkably accurate, and the references exceedingly correct."—Publishers' Circular, March 15, 1887.

"The best cheap edition of 'CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE' that we have seen is the one published by Morgan & Scott—a portable edition, clearly printed on good paper and well bound, unabridged, and with the proper names newly translated, all for 3s. 6d. Even the poorest Christian may now have a Concordance to help him in studying the Word of God with profit."—Christian Leader, March 17, 1887.

Mr. C. H. SPURGEON writes:—"Your Concordance at 3s. 6d. must be a great boon to ministers. We could very well dispense with a Concordance to the Apocrypha. As in all other respects it is an unabridged Cruden, I am greatly rejoiced to see it produced for so small a sum. May you sell tens of thousands!"



CRUDEN'S COMPLETE CONCORDANCE TO THE OLD & NEW TESTAMENTS
WITH THE PROPER NAMES NEWLY TRANSLATED (COPYRIGHT)
CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE TO THE OLD & NEW TESTAMENTS WITH PROPER NAMES NEWLY TRANSLATED (COPYRIGHT)
MORGAN & SCOTT'S PORTABLE EDITION
LONDON MORGAN & SCOTT

Size, 9⅝ inches long,
7⅝ inches wide,
and 1¼ inches thick.

OTHER EDITIONS OF "CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE."

Cruden's Concordance
TO THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.
Popular 5/- Edition.

With the Proper Names Newly Translated.
Printed on Thicker Paper:
Strongly Bound in Cloth, 757 Pages.

"Every Christian home ought to have a copy. . . . It is beautifully got up, carefully edited, and all has been done to make the work as useful as possible."—Oldham Chronicle.

Cruden's Concordance
TO THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.
Presentation 7/6 Edition.

Handsomely Bound in Cloth Boards.

"This is a noble book, large size, consisting of 757 pages. . . . It contains a carefully revised and much extended list of the Scripture Proper Names, with their meaning in the original languages. This is a most important feature of the work, and renders it so much the more valuable to the Biblical Student, as well as the Sunday-school Teacher and Scripture Reader."—Gospel Magazine.

Cruden's Concordance
TO THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.
Illustrated 10/6 Edition.

Beautifully Bound in Cloth, Gilt Edges, containing Twelve exquisite Steel-Plate Engravings, and Six beautiful Coloured Maps.

The Rev. J. L. PORTER, D.D., Professor of Biblical Criticism, speaking of the Steel-Plate Engravings, says:—"I have examined with care the views for Biblical illustration. . . . The Engravings are very beautiful. In clearness, accuracy, and general effect they surpass, I think, any I have seen.—J. L. PORTER."

Cruden's Concordance
TO THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.
Library 10/6 Edition.

Half Bound in Leather.

"Not the humblest Christian—able to read his Bible, and desirous as he should be of knowing its wondrous teaching—should be without a good Concordance; much less those who aim at imparting Scriptural instruction to others."
Footsteps of Truth.

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Cloth Boards, 7s. 6d.; Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 9s. 6d.; Morocco, 17s. 6d.

Songs and Solos and Christian Choir
BOUND TOGETHER IN ONE VOLUME.

Containing 520 Pieces—WORDS and MUSIC.

SIZE, 9½ inches by 7¼ inches. THICKNESS, 1¼ inches.

Good-sized Type, suitable for use at the Instrument.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Songs and Solos and Christian Choir.
WORDS ONLY.

Cloth Limp 0 6
Cloth Boards 0 9

Songs and Solos and Christian Choir.
WORDS ONLY.

LARGE PRINT. Cloth Limp .. 2 6
Cloth Bds., gilt edges 3 0

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

THE CHRISTIAN CHOIR.
An Attractive Quarto Volume of Music and Words.

By IRA D. SANKEY and JAMES McGRANAHAN.

May be had either in OLD NOTATION or in TONIC SOL-FA.

"It is as fine a collection of Sacred Airs as can anywhere be found. All the Hymns and the Tunes are beautiful, impressive, gracious; and the rendering of them, and the hearing them sung in private or public alike, have led many to change their whole course of life."—Oldham Chronicle.

"Of this Sacred Song Book it is scarcely needful for us to say a word. Thousands have listened and thousands have sung them, and will retain their good impressions when all the mists have rolled away."—Baptist Messenger.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

BONUS YEAR, 1887.

FUNDS, £4,280,000.
CLAIMS PAID, £6,800,000.
Profits Declared, £4,300,000.

NATIONAL
FOUNDED 1835. PROVIDENT
INSTITUTION
FOR MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE.

NEXT DIVISION OF PROFITS—NOV. 20, 1887,
In which all insuring previously will participate.

ARTHUR SMITHER,
48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C. Actuary and Secretary.

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITIES!!

JUDSON'S GOLD PAINT
JUDSON'S DYES
JUDSON'S MARKING-INK

JUDSON'S FILTERS

TO MOTHERS!

WOODWARD'S
GRIPE WATER, OR INFANTS' PRESERVATIVE.

For all Disorders of Infants and Children, especially difficult TEETHING.

From Dr. GORDON STABLES, M.D., R.N.—"I have lifted up my warning voice against the drugging of children. 'Woodward's Gripe Water' is the only Safe Medicine for Infants. It contains NO OPIUM, and is recommended by the Profession."

From Rev. W. WALKER JUBB, Independent Minister.—"It has been given to all my children. Its general beneficial results upon their health and vigour have convinced me that it is unequalled. Its administration to the youngest child is perfectly safe."

Bottles 1s. 1½d., from all Chemists and Stores.

LONDON DEPOT: Messrs. SANGER, 489, Oxford Street, W.

BEETHAM'S
Glycerine & Cucumber.

Is invaluable during the Summer months for PRESERVING THE COMPLEXION from the effects of the HOT SUN, WINDS, HARD WATER, etc.

It keeps the Skin cool and refreshed in the hottest weather, and entirely removes all Sunburn, Redness, Irritation, Tan, &c., and renders the Skin SOFT, SMOOTH, and WHITE.

No lady who values her complexion should ever be without it, as it is INVALUABLE at all seasons for keeping THE SKIN SOFT AND HEALTHY.

All irritation from the bites or stings of insects is also allayed by its use.

Bottles, 1s., 1s. 9d., and 2s. 6d., of all Chemists; free for 3d. extra by the Sole Makers— M. BEETHAM & SON, Chemists, Cheltenham.

GOLD MEDALS—Edinburgh and Liverpool, 1886.
TWO GOLD MEDALS—"The Healtheries," 1884.

Thomas Bradford
AND COMPANY,
LAUNDRY MACHINISTS AND ENGINEERS,

140, 141, 142 & 143,
High Holborn, LONDON;
Crescent Iron Works,
SALFORD;
Bold Street, LIVERPOOL;
and Victoria Avenue,
MANCHESTER.

— ESTIMATES FURNISHED —
For the Complete Equipment of Hand-power or Steam-power Laundries suitable for Private Families, Schools, Colleges, and Public Institutions.

NEW CATALOGUE,
Containing over 300 illustrations of Laundry, Dairy, and Household Machinery and Appliances
FREE BY POST.

REDUCED PRICE SUMMER SALE
OF
EXCELLENT KNITTING AND FANCY WOOLS
At most exceptional prices during the month of August ONLY.
NEW CATALOGUE PRICE LIST NOW READY, FREE BY POST.
ALSO
"NOVELTIES" in NEEDLEWORK.

Perforated Felt and Plush Needlework,

In all the newest introductions, tracings, styles, and shapes, in many novel and useful articles; also one of the most extraordinary Stocks kept by any London House of

EXCELLENT REAL SCOTCH KNITTING AND FANCY WOOLS.

FULL WEIGHT in every shade, size, kind, or colour, during the month of August will be sold at reduced prices.

WAKEFORD BROS.,
Artistic Needlework, Wool, Knitting Yarn, and Fancy Emporium,
104 & 106, KING'S ROAD, SLOANE SQUARE, LONDON.

FOR CAKES
FOR BREAD
BORWICK'S
5 GOLD MEDALS
BAKING POWDER
FOR PASTRY FOR PUDDINGS

Tinted Covers, ONE SHILLING; Cloth Boards, EIGHTEENPENCE.

SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS
NOT SINLESS PERFECTION.

By Rev. CHARLES GRAHAM,
Author of "Christ our Light," "The Highway of Holiness," etc., etc.

COMMENDATORY NOTICES.

"We are glad to see that Mr. Graham does not come forward as an advocate of what is called 'sinless perfection'; and his arguments in favour of striving towards the attainment of a higher life than any of us live are sound and Scriptural."
The Rock.

"His treatment is simple and Scriptural, and not the least satisfactory point in his argument is his refutation of the idea of 'sinless perfection' from the writings of that very apostle who is supposed by some people to teach it."—The Baptist.

"The book is full of the marrow of the Gospel, and will do anyone good who reads it."
Irish Baptist Magazine.

"Mr. Graham clearly teaches the truth of complete and certain victory, always within the reach of all believers. He teaches also how this victory is to be sustained day by day, and how also it may be lost. Our readers will do well, with open Bible to read this little eighteenpenny book."—Penuel.

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

The Christian:

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED "THE REVIVAL."

A Weekly Record of Christian Life, Christian Testimony, Christian Work and Missionary Enterprise.

No. 917.] LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS, E.C. FRIDAY, AUGUST 26, 1887. REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. AS A NEWSPAPER. [ONE PENNY. POST FREE, 1½d.

THE LATE

REV. JOHN KER, D.D.

(From Photograph by Mr. John Fergus, Largs.)

THE subject of this sketch was one of the most remarkable of men. During his too short public career he had few peers as a preacher or platform speaker, and those who knew him best believed that he would have excelled in any vocation to which he might have devoted his rare and varied powers.

Not only as a minister, but also—and, perhaps, even more—as a man, will Dr. Ker occupy a peculiar place in the memory of his friends. For all who came into personal relationship with him owned the strange fascination of his wondrous personality. There was an influence about him which acted like a charm; there was a power in his commonest conversation which cast a spell over all who heard him, and he will long be remembered as one of the holiest, noblest, most unselfish, most Christlike of men.

JOHN KER was born, in 1819, in Peeblesshire, at a farm in the beautiful vale of the Tweed; and the first few years of his life were passed in that classic region. When he was scarcely removed from childhood his parents settled in Edinburgh, where his school-days were spent. From the earliest formation of any purpose he had resolved to be a minister of the Gospel. His parents confirmed and blessed the choice, and their desire for him was that he might be thoroughly educated for his chosen work. He was sent to the High School of Edinburgh, and there he laid the basis of that exact and varied scholarship which in after years he carried forward in so many directions. It is remembered that he had very early formed the habit, upon which he acted to the end, of narrating to those about him the substance of what had been occupying his attention, as the sure means of fixing it in his memory; the manner in which he did this gave sure promise of the power that was developed so largely in the speaker and preacher of subsequent years. When he was sixteen years of age he entered the University of Edinburgh. His friend, Principal Cairns, remarks of him thus:—

> He listened to the first course of Sir William Hamilton in 1836, and rose to the highest place in that gifted class, leaving all behind in speculative subtlety, as well as in the brilliancy and original colouring of his essays.

He entered the Divinity Hall of the United Secession Church in 1838, and there, as at the University, his exceptionally rare powers were noted alike by the professors and his fellow-students. The winter of 1842 3 he spent in Germany at the University of Hallè, where he was specially interested in "the learned and pious Dr. Tholuck"; he supplemented his studies in Germany by a walking tour as far as Vienna and Milan before he returned to Scotland.

After some hesitation between Canada and Scotland as the sphere of his future work, he "took license as a preacher" in connection with the United Secession Church, and was settled as a minister at Alnwick, in Northumberland, in 1845, when he was twenty-six years of age. The state of his congregation was such as to call for special courage and devotion. He spoke of it a few years later as "ground that when I first saw the field, seemed bare and barren, which gave me then fainting of heart and discouragement." But his courage rose in the face of difficulty. His presence was soon felt to be a new power, and the influence of his preaching reached far beyond his own congregation, which revived and grew.

In addition to the need for evangelistic work in Alnwick itself, his attention was attracted to a number of villages within a radius of 6 or 8 miles, the inhabitants of which were really without the public means of grace. To meet that clamant need he organised a band of evangelists — young men of his own congregation — inspired them with his own zeal, and sent them forth, two and two, to visit and to preach. He himself preached three times almost every Sabbath—twice in his own pulpit, and the third time in one of the outlying villages.

His work as a whole in Alnwick (and it extended to about six years) was a splendid endeavour to reduce to actual fact the great ideal he had set before him, of what a Christian evangelist and minister ought to be. It was crowned with great success among his people and in the neighbourhood, and gave him valuable experience, furnishing him still better for more extended work in the coming years. In 1851 a change of sphere was successfully pressed upon him by the Sydney-place United Presbyterian congregation in Glasgow, with which he remained connected until his death in 1886.

Of Dr. Ker's labours in Glasgow a volume might be written, and the half not be told. The fullest catalogue of them would fail to give any adequate idea of the marvellous energy with which he threw himself into the manifold labours that claim the attention of a zealous minister and a patriotic citizen. The popularity and acceptability of the young minister—he was only thirty-two—at once rose to full flood. Hundreds upon hundreds applied for admission to membership in his congregation, until the large church was crowded. And beyond his own congregation, in the city and in all parts of the country, his services were craved, and all too willingly granted. He seemed to feel that he had been "sent to preach," and in fulfilling his great behest he must have felt the joy of the strong man who runs a race.

But while preaching was his delight and joy, he was no less enthusiastic in pastoral work. He was original and ingenious in the methods he took to extend his personal influence to every class in the congregation; one might almost say to every member in it. In the enkindling and directing of congregational activity he was inventive and sagacious, as he was also wise and practical, and he led on the congregation in the Gospel enterprise, carrying the knowledge of Jesus where it did not exist.

Dr. Ker did not limit himself to what might have been called the engrossing work of a large city congregation. As a Presbyter in a large denomination, and as a citizen in a great city, he was ever ready—too ready. Two and even three addresses at as many meetings on the same evening, public work for three, four, or even five evenings in the week, were not "unknown quantities" to him in these years.

But it was not possible that labours of such volume and momentum could be indefinitely continued, and early in 1858 his strength failed him. He was compelled to pause in the middle of a public address, and it was too surely discovered that his health was utterly broken, and his power for active labour absolutely gone. For a long time his weakness was extreme. For months together he would not have one conscious moment free from severe pain. He had to wander, as we have heard him phrase it, "under the death-shade." But the weary pilgrim held on, desiring to live, and breathing many a time the prayer, "O spare me that I may recover strength before I go hence and be no more." He moved about from place to place in our own and in other lands, and learned by a strange experience that it was "good for a man both to hope and quietly to wait for the salvation of the Lord."

After a time, strength, though at best in limited measure, came slowly back, and was often again weakened. Power for public work returned, but fitfully and unreliably; and was often withdrawn, or rather, expended by its exercise. For his pleasure in preaching always impelled him to do so up to, and often beyond, his power; then came again the necessity for rest, and the constrained silence.

During all these years—twenty-eight of them!—of weakness and suffering, it could be seen how the grace of Jesus Christ was sufficient for him. It was exemplified in endurance, patience, hope, purpose. He appreciated the delights of friendship, and was continually acquiring new friends, while he never lost an old one. He was a welcome guest in many a home, and was especially the children's friend. He was a great conversationalist, and his wit and humour were of the brightest sparkle. He retained his intellectual grasp upon all subjects of thought, and his capacious memory lost none of its gathered stores. He watched the movements in the ecclesiastical, political, and literary fields with intense interest. His culture was advanced, his knowledge widened, his wisdom increased, his penetration sharpened, his comprehension enlarged. He became in every way a greater and a grander man.

His chosen life purpose and plan were indeed broken, and his work of necessity was intermittent and fragmentary, but he was by no means an idle man. He loved work and, as he could, he filled his hours with it. He wrote innumerable letters to a large and ever-widening circle of friends. In 1868, he published a volume of sermons, known now as the "First Series," which continues to advance into new editions, and which the best intelligence of the churches will not willingly let die.

But all through the years, as his strength permitted, he persevered in preaching, as that work in which he had supreme delight.

Some years he was able to preach with considerable frequency—at first chiefly in his own pulpit, and latterly in smaller churches, which gave him less strain and wear. In successive winters he took charge of the preaching stations at Rome, Pau, San Remo, and Nice. As he grew and ripened with the years, his preaching became more tender and beautiful; his sermons had a breadth and strength, a richness and completeness about them, which nothing but an experience such as his could have given.

He was possessed of all the elements which are requisite for a great preacher. His voice was singularly sweet and expressive; though not of large volume, it was remarkably penetrating, and able, without apparent effort on his part, to fill the largest hall. His style was simple and natural, flexible and flowing, transparent and brilliant. Such was his power of clear statement, such his wealth and variety of illustration, that he never failed to make his subject interesting to all, and to carry his audience with him to the very end. He had pondered much upon all the greatest subjects of human thought—upon God, the soul, life, eternity. He had devoutly pressed his meditations to the utmost edge of the known and knowable, and gazed earnestly into the infinite mysteries—"the azure, deep even to darkness"—into which our faith glances off; and what was insoluble he held firmly in abeyance (a favourite phrase of his), until such a time as all shall be made manifest by the Great Enlightener, when He appears. It may be noticed that he rarely, if ever, introduced matters of distracting speculation into his preaching; but it could be inferred that he had an immense reserve of thought upon them all, as he the more simply and earnestly preached Jesus, who "casts his illumination upon our future destiny, as well as upon our present duty."

In 1876 he was elected by the Synod of the United Presbyterian Church, with affecting and enthusiastic unanimity, to the chair of Practical Training in its Divinity Hall, a chair which had been created very much because Dr. Ker was there to fill it. He did not consider that the state of his health was such as to warrant his acceptance of this professorship, but he frankly offered to do what he could, and with few interruptions he performed the duties of the chair during his remaining years. These became to him the great, and toward its close, almost the exclusive work of his life; that he might perform them perfectly he spared no amount of thought and labour. Genius has been defined as the "capacity for taking pains," and at no period of his life was the word, in the light of this definition, so applicable to him. He prepared lectures upon such subjects as would instruct and inspire the students, and into these lectures he put the results of immense research, and long and patient thought. In addition to these lectures, he conducted conversations in his class upon the different points of the pastoral work; he gave opportunity for personal conversation with the students upon any points of difficulty that might be pressing upon them; he showed himself friendly to each and all. His great aim was to teach the students how all their past studies should now converge upon, and be utilised by them in the great work of their life, and in making the office of the minister a living power in the midst of every Church. As might have been predicated, his influence upon the students was very great, and many of them, now scattered in this and other lands, will to their latest day be encouraged and strengthened in their labours, as they call to remembrance his words of wise counsel, and think of him, "the man greatly beloved," and of his life, which was so manifestly filled with the Spirit of Jesus.

To the end, he had increasing delight and pleasure in reading and studying the Bible: trying how by divisions and illustrations, he could the better understand it himself, and how it might be made more perfectly understood, and more earnestly valued by others. It was a pleasure, never to be forgotten by those who enjoyed it, to sit with him in his home, and hear him go over his note-books, which were filled with divisions of texts, outlines of sermons, comments upon Scripture incidents, remarks upon Psalms in endless variety. If opportunity had been extended to him, these would all have grown into fitness for the pulpit. If he had been spared, they would have been given to his students for their help and guidance.

But in the midst of all this preparation for further usefulness, with so many purposes for the good of others in his heart, with such high resolves to labour on while it was day, the night suddenly fell; the silver cord was loosed, and the golden bowl was broken. He passed peacefully into the silent land early in the morning of October 4, 1886.

Since Dr. Ker's death an admirable work of his, entitled "The Psalms in History and Biography," has been published. This work was in the press and ready for publication when he was called away. It had received the finishing touches from his own hand, and has a special interest from the fact that it was the last effort of his mind. A second series of "Sermons" has also been published. A third volume has been given to the public, entitled "Scottish Nationality, and other Papers," in which his fervour of thought and classic purity of diction are well illustrated. Whether as author, preacher, or professor, his name and memory will be a sacred possession in many a household for many a year.

◆

BELIEF AND FAITH.

By A. S. C. AMOS.

EVERYONE who has had any experience of personal dealing with anxious souls knows how often, in answer to the question, "Are you a believer?" the reply is, "Yes, I have been a believer all my life. My mother trained me to believe all about Christ. I do believe I am a sinner; that Christ died for all sinners, and that He died for me; but yet I couldn't conscientiously and honestly say, I am saved." And all who have heard this reply know how difficult it is to find a satisfactory answer to it. Of course the staple argument is, "You believe in a historical Christ, you don't believe in a present Saviour; all your belief centres in a dead Christ, you have no firm belief in the risen Christ: yours is a merely intellectual belief, it is not a belief of the heart."

But how often does this utterly fail to carry the slightest conviction! To any thoughtful mind, the Christian's answer means nothing. The retort is simply, "I do believe all that you say I don't. I am perfectly convinced that Christ is still present to save, otherwise I wouldn't now be seeking salvation. I as firmly believe that Christ rose as that He died, for my authority is the same for both; and as for the heart, I as heartily assent to the truth of an atoning sacrifice by Christ for my sin as I assent to the fact that I exist; and yet I am not saved. You say that is faith, and that whoever has faith is saved; but with me this is not true; I am still an unsaved soul."

Now, the Christian worker is often baffled at this point. He knows that these are not the cavillings of an indifferent worldling, but the true experience, the bitter experience, of an anxious, inquiring soul, and he is at a loss to know what next to say. This embarrassment arises from the fact that so many really zealous Christian workers do not clearly distinguish in their own minds between faith and belief, and consequently are unable when they meet this difficulty to make it clear to those really yearning for that saving faith which they are perfectly aware means more than their so-called intellectual belief.

Now, faith is in its very nature belief, but belief may have little connection with faith. Faith invariably looks to the future, while belief has altogether to do with the past, for it is all the outcome of past experience. No doubt belief may go into the future, but, immediately it does so, it is no longer simple belief, it has become faith. If I say I have faith in a man, I mean, I believe all I have heard about his honesty, &c., in the past, and would have no hesitation in trusting him in the future; that is, I would risk a good deal with him, having perfect confidence that he will not betray me. Or, again, if I had a sum of money to invest and wished to know how I might advantageously invest it, a friend who knew this might say to me, "A certain railway company is paying a very high dividend just now, is worked on the very best principles of economy and management, is thoroughly solvent, and is in every way a perfectly reliable security for your investment." Now, all this might be true, or it might not, but my future action would depend upon whether or not I considered it true. If I did, then I would be said to believe my friend's report, but here my belief would entirely rest on my past experience of knowing what was told me. Suppose, however, that I went further and determined to invest my money in that company's shares, what would that mean? Just simply this: I am going to do more than believe my friend's report; I am going to entrust that company with my money, and expect it to give me a good yearly return. That is, I will have full faith in the company, that while I so trust it, it will not deceive me, it will not betray my confidence, it will keep my money safe. Mark, how "will" occurs in each of my expectations.

Thus faith rests upon belief. It has its roots in the past, but itself is entirely taken up with the future. It is here that we see how "faith" and "trust" are synonymous—words which are so puzzling and so unintelligible to an inquirer. Mere belief will never save a soul—"the devils believe and tremble." But when the anxious one says: "I not only believe all I have heard about Jesus in the past, but my belief will now become faith for the future, and I will entrust all to Him in undoubting expectation that He will be faithful to his promises in all time coming, and save my soul in fulfilment of these promises"—at that moment belief develops into faith, or faith springs out of belief, the new life dawns, and the soul is saved.

When such is the case it would be incomparably better if, instead of provokingly ignoring the anxious one's difficulty, and disturbing him by distinguishing between intellectual and heart belief—a distinction about which he knows nothing—we just commence at the point where he is and lead him up from his historical belief to future trust and faith. By doing so we should show that we can sympathise with him in his difficulty, and that just because we sympathise, we are prepared to show him a way out of it. Assuring him that while we are asking him to trust for the future, that very trust or faith rests upon the past, or rather, springs out of the past (for, of course, it really rests, and must always rest on the personal Christ), we can encourage him to proceed out of what belief he has into the higher belief or faith which he has not, just as one proceeds out of one's belief in a friend's honesty to a full and undoubting trust of him for the future. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

HACKNEY-ROAD MISSION.—The eighteenth report of this Mission states that the meetings held in the mission-hall and in the open air have been largely attended, and have been a source of blessing to many. The Sunday-school and Band of Hope are progressing steadily. Not only has the Gospel been preached to the poor through this agency, but last winter, as in previous years, their bodily wants were alleviated, and many were thus enabled to tide over the long and trying season. The address of Mr. John Girling, the pastor, is 47, Mildmay-road, N.

MR. MULLER'S ORPHAN HOUSES.

THERE can be no better illustration of the rest, and peace, and fruit of the life of faith, than that supplied in the records sent out year by year by this aged and greatly honoured servant of God. The report before us is the forty-eighth, and who can estimate their value as, passing from hand to hand and into many lands, they have inculcated a spirit of trust in the promises of our heavenly Father, and of consecration to his service?

The objects of Mr. Müller's institutions are five in number, and a few words may be devoted to each. The first is to assist day schools, Sunday-schools, and adult schools, in which instruction is given on Christian principles. Thus we find that there are thirty-eight day schools and twenty-nine Sunday-schools entirely supported by the funds of the Scriptural Knowledge Institution, and that in these schools there are 5664 pupils. The teaching has been greatly blessed. There have been instances in which fifty and sixty children were converted in one school in twelve months, and Mr. Müller states that whilst travelling on missionary journeys in thirty-eight different countries, he has over and over again met persons who were converted in those schools.

The circulation of the Holy Scriptures is the next object, and the report states: "Our particular aim in circulating the Holy Scriptures is to seek out the very poorest of the poor, through visits from house to house, in order to find out the need of the Holy Scriptures, and to supply persons either entirely gratis or on the payment of a small amount." In this way through the medium of this institution 219,263 Bibles, over a million Testaments, upwards of twenty thousand copies of the Psalms, and more than two hundred thousand other small portions of the Holy Scriptures have been circulated.

The aiding of missionary effort comes next. For some years after his conversion Mr. Müller earnestly desired himself to go as a missionary to heathen lands. As the door was shut to him, he then determined to help on missionary operations to the utmost of his power, and has been enabled to aid the work in various parts of the world by contributions amounting altogether to the magnificent sum of £214,649. During the last year one hundred and thirty-eight labourers in Word and doctrine were thus assisted at a cost of over £6000. Very interesting reports from missionaries in China, India, Spain, and other countries are appended, and show how valuable is this help to many a simple labourer in God's great harvest-field.

The circulation of tracts and such publications as may be calculated, with the blessing of God, to benefit both believers and unbelievers comes next in order. To show the extent to which this portion of the work has reached, it will be enough to say that eighty-eight millions and a half of such publications have been sent all over the world, while thousands of Christian men and women have helped in this service.

The orphan work, though last, is by no means least. Of it, however, it would be almost a work of supererogation to say much. The history of the Orphanages on Ashley Down is known the whole world over. To board, clothe, and Scripturally educate destitute orphan children is the object sought in these Homes. "I aimed," says Mr. Müller, "from the beginning at the salvation of the children, and far beyond what I at first expected to accomplish the Lord has been pleased to give me." Last year there were 2067 orphans in the Homes, and of about two hundred who, having completed their training, went forth into the world, seventy-six were believers, while, Mr. Müller adds, "God has given us the joy of seeing thousands of them brought to believe in Him."

Of the many pages in this deeply-interesting report, which show how this wonderful work is sustained from day to day by believers in all parts of the world, we have no space to speak. Refreshing, indeed, is such a record. The report may be obtained from Messrs. Nisbet & Co., Berners-street, London, W. (6d.) Mr. Müller's own address is The New Orphan House, No. 3, Ashley Down, Bristol.

ELIJAH THE PROPHET.—15.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Leicester.

THE OLD COURAGE AGAIN.

2 Kings I.

In order to understand the striking episode before us, we must think ourselves out of this dispensation, the main characteristic of which is gentle mercy; and we must imagine ourselves back in the age that ended at Calvary. It is very important to have a right understanding of our times. We must not judge the past ages by our own high standards of forgiveness and love, learnt in the life and death of Jesus Christ, the last and supreme revelation of God. And we must not import into our own age methods of thought and action which were once permissible and necessary, because cognate to the spirit of their times.

This lesson was once impressively taught by our Lord to his disciples. Fresh from the Transfiguration, He was on his way to the cross. For some reason He did not take the usual route along the eastern bank of the Jordan, but chose the directer course through Samaria. Travelling thus, they had probably reached the spot, of which we are soon to speak, which was once scorched and blackened by the cinders of Ahaziah's troops. Below them, in the ravine of the hills, lay a village, to which they sent a deputation, asking for entertainment in the night which was darkening over them. But religious bigotry triumphed over natural feeling, and the request was absolutely refused. Oh, if they had known that He was about to purchase the redemption of a world; and to institute a religion, in which there should be neither Samaritan or Jew, but one great brotherhood in Himself; they would surely have bade him welcome, and have pressed Him with hospitality, even though the mighty transaction was to take place within the limits of their hated rival, Jerusalem! "And when his disciples James and John saw this, they said, Lord, wilt not Thou that we command fire to come down from heaven and consume them, even as Elias did? But He turned and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of." It was as if He had said, "Remember that in Me you have passed into a new epoch; the affairs of the kingdom of heaven will be managed on altogether different lines from those with which you are familiar. I shall not destroy the law and the prophets, but I am introducing a code which shall fulfil them after a new and diviner fashion. The new régime of mercy is already begun."

Let us clearly define to ourselves the difference in the dispensations. This is after the Spirit of the Son, dwelling in the bosom of the Father; that was after the spirit of the servant, clad in ardent zeal for the glory of God. This glows with the lambent fire of the Holy Ghost; that with the devouring fire of destruction. The keynote of this is salvation; of that, vindication. The Old Testament brims with striking teaching of the holiness and righteousness of God. God, our Father, was as merciful and longsuffering then as now, and there were given many sweet glimpses of his loving heart, which became more numerous as the ages brought nigh the incarnation of the love of God. But men cannot take in too many thoughts at once. Line must be on line, precept on precept. And so each preliminary age had some one special truth to teach; and that truth was accentuated, and brought into prominence by special proofs and episodes. The age of the Mosaic Law, which shed its empire over the times of Elijah, was pre-eminently the era in which those awful and splendid attributes of the Divine character—God's holiness, justice, righteousness, and severity against sin—stood out in massive prominence, as some of us, from the ancient capital of Switzerland, have seen the long line of Bernese Alps, rising above the plain in distant and majestic splendour; cold in the grey dawn; or flushed with the light of morn and eve. It was only when those lessons had been completely learnt, that mankind was able to appreciate the love of God which is in Jesus Christ our Lord.

Critics, who insensibly have caught their conceptions of infinite love from the Gospels which they affect to despise, find fault with the Old Testament because of its austere tones and its severe enactments; they point out many things inconsistent with the gentler spirit of our times. There is nothing surprising here! It could not have been otherwise, in a gradual unfolding of the nature and character of God. The holy men who lived in those days, had never heard the gentle voice of the Son of Man speaking the Sermon on the Mount. They had, however, very definite conceptions of the righteousness and holiness of God, and his swift indignation on sin. This inspired many of the Psalms in the hymnal of the Old Testament saints. This stimulated them to do deeds from which our gentler nature shrinks. But for this, Levi had never slain his brethren, or Joshua the Canaanites; Samuel had never hewed Agag in pieces before the Lord, and Elijah had never presumed to slay the priests of Baal, or call down fire from heaven to destroy the captains and their men.

And, as we read these deeds, we may well sink into quiet self-questioning. We need not fall into the extreme of Cromwell and his soldiers, and introduce the speech or acts of those bygone days into our dealings with the enemies of truth and God. But we do well to ask whether, granting that we forego the outward manifestation, there is the same hatred of sin, the same zeal for the glory of God, the same inveterate enthusiasm for righteousness, as there was in those days of force and decision and unswerving righteousness.

These considerations will help us to understand the narrative that awaits us, and will relieve the character of Elijah from the charge of vindictiveness and passion; so that we can consider, without compunction, the rising up again in his breast of something of his old undaunted courage and heroic bearing.

The story is as follows:—Ahaziah, the son of Ahab, had succeeded to his father's throne and his father's sins. He shrank in cowardly fear from the hardihood of the camp, and the dangers of the field; leaving Moab to rebel, without attempting its re-subjugation; and leading a self-indulgent life in his palace. But the shafts of death can find us equally in apparent security, as amid threatening dangers. He was leaning on the balustrade that fenced the flat roof of the palace, when suddenly it gave way, and he overbalanced himself, and was flung to the ground. Many are the balustrades, on which we lean in hours of peril, which fail us to our hurt! When the first panic was over, the king was seized with intense longings to know how his illness would turn; and, in a strange freak, he sent messengers to one of the ancient shrines of Canaan, dedicated to Baalzebub, the god of flies, the patron saint of medicine, who had some affinity with the Baal of his parents. This was a deliberate rejection of Jehovah; a daring choice of those ways which had brought the wrath of God on his father's house. It could not pass unnoticed, and Elijah was sent to meet his messengers, as they were speeding across the plain of Esdraelon, with the announcement of certain death:—"Thus saith Jehovah, Thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die."

The servants did not know the stranger. They may have been imported Tyrians, who had never mingled in the life of the nation, and who, therefore, were ignorant of the mighty prophet of God. Years also had probably elapsed since his last public appearance. However, they were so impressed by that commanding figure and authoritative tone, and so awed by that terrible reply that they determined to return at once to the king. They found him lying on the divan, the raised platform, covered with cushions, to which he had been carried from the scene of his accident. And they told him the reason of their speedy return. Ahaziah must have guessed who he was that had dared to cross their path, and send him such a message. But, to make assurance surer, he asked them to describe the mysterious stranger. They replied that he was a man of hair." Long and heavy tresses of unshorn hair hung heavily down upon his shoulders; his beard covered his breast, and mingled with the unwrought skins that formed his only dress. It was enough; the king recognised him at once, and said, "It is Elijah, the Tishbite."

Two emotions now filled his heart. He wanted, in exasperation, to get Elijah in his power, to vent on him his wrath; and he, perhaps, cherished a secret hope that the lips which had announced his death might be induced to revoke it. He therefore resolved to capture him, and for that purpose sent a captain and a troop of fifty soldiers; and when they were struck down in death, another captain and his band. These men exceeded their duty; instead of simply acting as the tools and instruments of the royal will, they spoke with an unwarrantable insolence. "Thou man of God, the king hath said, Come down." Either they did not hold him to be a prophet, or they gloried in putting the power of their master above that of Jehovah. In any case, the insult was less against Elijah than Elijah's God.

There was no personal vindictiveness in the terrible reply of the old prophet. I do not suppose for a moment he considered the indignity done to himself. I believe he was filled with consuming zeal for the glory of God, which had been trodden so rudely under foot, and which he must vindicate in the eyes of Israel. "If I be a man of God let fire come down from heaven and consume thee and thy fifty." And in a moment the fire leaped from its scabbard, and laid the impious blasphemers low. That there was no malice in Elijah is clear from his willingness to go with the third captain, who spoke with reverence and humility. "And the angel of the Lord said, Go down with him; be not afraid of him. And Elijah went down with him unto the king."

(1) What a thought is suggested here of the meekness and gentleness of Christ. How wonderful it is to think that He who, by a single word, could have brought fire from heaven to destroy the bands that came to take Him in Gethsemane, left that word unspoken. He threw them on the ground for a moment, to show them how absolutely they were in his power; but He forebore to hurt one hair of their heads. It was a marvellous spectacle, which the legions of harnessed angels, who in mid air waited for a word to bring them to his rescue, must have beheld with speechless amazement. The explanation is of course found in the fact that He was under the compulsion of a higher law, the law of his Father's will; the law of self-sacrificing love; the law of a covenant sealed before the foundation of the world.

The only fire He sought was the fire of the Holy Ghost. "I came to cast fire upon the earth; and what will I; would that it were already kindled." He strove not to avenge Himself, or vindicate the majesty of his nature. "He endured the contradiction of sinners against Himself." "He was led as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth." "When He was reviled, He reviled not again; when He suffered, He threatened not; but committed Himself to Him that judgeth righteously." Oh, matchless meekness! Oh, wondrous self-control! Oh, glorious example of the spirit of his own teaching! May grace be given to each of us, his unworthy followers, to walk in his steps, and to emulate his spirit; not calling for the fire of vengeance, but seeking the salvation of those who would do us hurt; dealing out not the fire of heaven, but those coals of fire, heaped on the head of our adversaries, which shall melt them into sweetness, and gentleness, and love.

(2) There is also suggested here the impossibility of God ever condoning defiant and blasphemous sin. We have fallen on soft and degenerate days when, under false notions of charity and liberality, men are paring down their conceptions of the evil of sin, and of the holy wrath of God, which is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men.

It is quite true that God yearns over men with unutterable pleading tenderness. "He is not willing that any should perish, but that all dying sparrow in the recesses of the deepest woods over whose last agonies the Almighty does not bend with sympathetic interest, and alleviating tenderness, so there is not one waif of humanity excluded from the warm zone of his infinite compassionateness and tender pity. In every outbreak of human sin; in the lot of every lost man or woman; over every street fight; at every public-house doorstep; amid the blasphemous orgies of every den of impurity and shame, that love lingers, full of tears, and longings, and entreaties. "God so loved the world."

And yet, side by side with this love to the sinner, there is God's hatred to his sin. This longsuffering lasts only so long as there is a possible hope of the transgressor turning from his evil ways. "If he turn not, He will whet his sword." The wrath of God against sinful men, who have definitely elected their sin, slumbereth only; it is not dead. It broods over them, held back by his desire to give every one the chance of salvation. They may be thankful therefore, that their lot has fallen in this parenthesis of mercy. But "because sentence against their evil work is not executed speedily, therefore their hearts are fully set in them to do evil." Yet the time of forbearance will end at last, as the waiting did in the days of Noah. Then fire will fall, of which the material flame that fell on these insolent soldiers, is a slight and imperfect symbol. And it shall be discovered how bitter a thing it is to encounter the wrath of the Lamb, "when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

We need more proclamation of this side of the Gospel. There is an alarming lack amongst us of the sense of sin. Our vast populations are indifferent to the message of mercy, because they have not been aroused with the message of the holy wrath of God against sin. We need again that one should come, in the power of Elijah, to do the work of John the Baptist, and to prepare men by the throes of conviction for the gentle ministry of Jesus Christ. The crying need of our times is for a deeper conviction of sin. And if this shall be ever brought about, it must be by the religious teachers being led to study the law as well as the Gospel, and to realise for themselves, as they can only do through the teaching of the Holy Spirit, the exceeding sinfulness of sin. Then when Elijah's fire of conviction has smitten human confidences low in the dust, there will be room for an Elisha to bind up broken hearts with the message of mercy.

(3) We are also assured of Elijah's full restoration to the exercise of a glorious faith. In a former time the message of Jezebel was enough to make him flee. But in this case he stood his ground, though an armed band came to capture him. It was as if he were able to repeat the familiar words without exaggeration: "Though an host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear; though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident." And when he was bidden to go down with the third captain to the king, he did not hesitate, though it was to go through the streets of the crowded capital, and into the very palace of his foes. We are reminded of the entrance of Luther into Worms; and of the remonstrance of Ambrose to the mightiest emperor of his time. Do you ask the secret, and why he was able to stand so calmly beside the couch of the dying monarch, delivering his message, and retiring unharmed? Ah, the answer is not far to seek. He was again dwelling in the secret of the Most High, and standing in the presence of Jehovah. His faith was in lively and victorious exercise. He was able to gird himself with the panoply of God's mail, invulnerable to the darts of men and devils. And thus might he have spoken with himself, as he passed through the threatening perils of that crisis: "By Thee have I run through a troop, and by my God have I leaped over a wall. As for God, his way is perfect. He is a buckler to all those that trust in Him."

Is it not beautiful to behold this glorious outburst of the faith of Cherith, Zarephath, and Carmel? The old man, nearing his reward, was as vigorous in this as in his first challenge to Ahab. His spiritual eye was not dimmed, nor his force of character abated. He bore fruit in old age, like one of God's evergreens, which are full of sap. Glory be to Him who restores the soul of his faltering saints, and brings them up from the grave, and sets them again as stars in his right hand, and deigns to use them once more in his glorious service!

◆

BIBLE STUDY.

GOD'S THOUGHTS.

(1) Unlike and beyond man's.—"My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts" (Isa. lv. 8, 9). "Able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think" (Eph. iii. 20).

(2) Very deep.—"O Lord, how great are thy works! and thy thoughts are very deep" (Ps. xcii. 5). "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out" (Rom. xi. 33).

(3) To us-ward.—"Many, O Lord my God, are...thy thoughts which are to us-ward" (Ps. xl. 5). "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father" (James i. 17). "I am poor and needy; yet the Lord thinketh upon me" (Ps. xl. 17).

(4) Of peace.—"I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the Lord, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected end" (Jer. xxix. 11). "Peace, peace to him that is far off, and to him that is near, saith the Lord; and I will heal him" (Isa. lvii. 19).

(5) Precious.—"How precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the sum of them! If I should count them, they are more in number than the sand; when I awake, I am still with Thee" (Ps. cxxxix. 17, 18). "Exceeding great and precious promises" (2 Pet. i. 4).

(6) For ever.—"The counsel of the Lord standeth for ever, the thoughts of his heart to all generations" (Ps. xxxiii. 11). "Can a woman forget her sucking child?...Yea, they may forget, yet will not I forget thee. Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before Me" (Is. xlix. 15, 16).

His thoughts manward find expression—

(1) In Christ.—"In the beginning was the Word" (John i. 1). "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father" (John xiv. 9). "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself" (2 Cor. v. 19). "In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through Him" (1 John iv. 9).

(2) In the Scriptures.—"All Scripture is given by inspiration of God" (2 Tim. iii. 16). "The prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost" (2 Pet. i. 21). "Search the Scriptures...they are they which testify of Me" (John v. 39). "He read Esaias the prophet...Philip began at the same Scripture, and preached unto him Jesus" (Acts viii. 28, 35).

(3) In nature.—"Unto Thee, O God, do we give thanks; for that thy name is near, thy wondrous works declare" (Ps. lxxv. 1). "His tender mercies are over all his works. All thy works shall praise Thee, O Lord; and thy saints shall bless Thee" (Ps. cxlv. 9, 10). "The fowls of the air...your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?" (Matt. vi. 25—34).

(4) In his servants.—"Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God" (2 Cor. v. 20). "Ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart" (2 Cor. iii. 3).

Janet Clark.

REFRESHING AFTER RAIN.

All day the heavy clouds have hung
Above the landscape parched and dry,
The swallows sweep along the ground,
As if they fear an angry sky.

A vivid flash—a thunder peal—
Sharp twittering in every nest—
And then, with sudden rushing rain,
The long expectant earth is blessed.

From every dry and drooping leaf
The heavy dust is washed away;
The rose exhales a sweeter scent,
And purer blooms the lily-spray.

'Twas worth, indeed, the gloomy clouds,
For now the sun shines forth again,
And thankfully we breath anew
The cool refreshing after rain.

The sultry hours are in the past,
And fainting ones look bright again:
Ah! many sufferers could tell
What peaceful times oft follow pain.

Fear not because the cloud is nigh,
A hidden blessing may be there,
Trust God; He knows, and will not give
A burden that you cannot bear.

The cloud, the grief, are sent by One
(Remember, if the doubt should rise)
Who knows thy frame and all thy needs,
Thy Father, tender and all-wise.

Alice M. Stevens.

18, Ashby-road, Canonbury, N.

◆

RAGGED SCHOOL UNION.

People often complain of societies that they are too many, and of reports that they are too "dry." After perusing the new report of the Ragged School Union, we feel sure they will own that this agency could not be dispensed with: for, as the eucalyptus and the sun-flower aid in neutralising the miasma of the natural marsh, so does this blessed agency act in the moral atmosphere of this huge city.

The late Lord Shaftesbury was intensely fond of this Union, and never wearied in attending its meetings, both at head-quarters and wherever a Ragged School was planted. No doubt it owes some of its popularity and usefulness to his persistent advocacy; but to its late secretary, Joseph Gent, it owes a great deal, and its present secretary, John Kirk, is not a whit behind his predecessor in entire devotion to the interests of the ragged children of London.

The report before us gives interesting details of the manifold branches included in the society's operations. There are about 200 schools in the Union, attended on Sunday by 48,074 children, taught by 3884 voluntary and 182 paid teachers. 163 schools have Gospel services and ragged churches, with an average attendance of 28,697. Then there are Bible-classes, Christian bands, prayer-meetings, open-air services, and mothers' meetings among the religious agencies. The educational work includes day and night-schools, industrial classes, school exhibitions, cookery classes, &c.; while the philanthropic embraces bands of hope, penny banks, libraries, soup-kitchens, children's dinners, shoe clubs, burial clubs, barrow clubs, &c. The amount spent on this good work was £6209, of which a good account is given in these pages. Those who want a bird's-eye view of the bright side of "Ragged London" should send 6d. for this report, which is prettily illustrated, to the office of the Union, 13, Exeter Hall, Strand, London, W.C.

"BEHOLD, HE PRAYETH," were the words which announced to the world that Saul of Tarsus had become a believer in Christ. "Behold, he does not pray," are words which may be used in our times to announce the falling away of many a sceptic from faith in the Redeemer.—Independent.

A NEW LIFE OF LUTHER.*

WE gladly welcome anything that may remind our generation of the most apostolic of men since apostolic times. Luther was indeed an apostolic man, if the title denotes not only love for Christ and appreciation of the central points of his teaching, but also deep sincerity of character and self-denying zeal. Yet Luther's life is so full of interest, that for this very reason it must be difficult to describe. It is hard to make a selection of facts and sayings when so few can be omitted without loss. But whether it is from the nature of the subject, or whether it is from careful study, these volumes seem to be written in the right perspective. The important events of Luther's life stand out before us. There is no danger, after reading Dr. Bayne's work, of mistaking the less for the greater facts.

No one, for instance, would be likely to pass over the importance, almost the supreme importance, of the day when, still under the influence of his friend's sudden death while hunting, and of the lightning flash near Stotternheim (reminding us of the still greater "fusile Apostle"), he decided to leave all the worldly distinctions that even then lay in front of him, and to beg admittance at an Augustinian convent. Much less will one overlook those greater moments, though they are not confined within so brief a space of time, when he realised his exceeding sinfulness, and found out the inefficacy of human righteousness, even though it were assisted by Divine grace; when he was convinced by Staupitz that his efforts were useless, and he fell back on the Bible itself, to learn from it that righteousness is given by God, and that "the just shall live by faith." It was then that he found the secret of all true life. It was then that he became able to speak by experience about justification.

"I want to know," he says, a year or two later, to one placed under his care (for he became a convent vicar, or superintendent of convents), "I want to know what your soul is about; and whether, discarding its own righteousness, it is learning to breathe spiritual life, and to trust in the righteousness of Christ. For in this age of ours, presumption is a burning temptation with many, and chiefly with those who strain all their energies to be righteous and good. Not knowing the righteousness of God, which in Christ is freely and in richest bounty given to us, they seek to work themselves up to such a pitch of goodness that they may have confidence to stand erect and unabashed before the face of God in the adornment of their own virtues, their own merits. Salvation by such a method is impossible. In this error you were once involved. So was I. But now I fight against it—only I have not yet put it down.

"Therefore, my sweet brother, learn Christ, and Him crucified. Learn to sing aloud to Him; and to Him, despairing of yourself, to say, 'Thou, Lord Jesus, art my righteousness; I also am thy sin. Thou didst assume mine, and didst give thine to me; Thou didst assume what Thou wast not, and didst give me what I was not."

It was this experience too that many years afterwards gave him such clear insight to reject the proposed reconciliation with Rome, when the Romish theologians agreed to accept his doctrine of justification by faith, if only they might say, "by faith that worketh by love."

We cannot resist quoting from another letter written when he was still convent vicar:—"The Cross of Christ has been sent out, in multitudinous fragments, to all the world, and to each man comes his portion always. Thou, therefore, throw it not away, but rather receive it as a thrice sacred relic, not into a gold or silver casket, but into a golden heart, a heart imbued with gentle charity. 'For if the wood of the cross was consecrated by the touch of the flesh and blood of Christ, in such manner that its fragments are held in the highest honour, how much more do the injuries, persecutions, passions, and hatreds of men, just or unjust, become the most sacred relics when, not by the touch of his body, but embraced in the charity of his most bitterly wounded heart and Divinely efficient will, they are kissed, blessed, and consecrated, so that cursing becomes blessing, injustice equity, suffering glory, and pain gladness."

Many people hardly realise how long a time passed after Luther's acceptance of Christ before he came forward as a Reformer. His spiritual crisis "had occurred, and in essentials had ended" before 1509, but all went quietly enough till 1517. Then, indeed, came the nailing of the Theses to the door of Wittemberg Church, which were simple statements on the Spirituality of repentance, against making a gain of godliness, and blame of Church and Pope; but "the pen that he used was so long that its extremity reached even to Rome, wounded the ears of a lion that was couched there, and shook the triple crown on the Pope's head."

From this time till 1525 comprises practically the remainder of Luther's life. All is stir, all excitement. Now he is disputing against Eck at Leipzic. Now burning the Pope's Bull. Now appearing single-handed at Worms before the Emperor and the Diet. Now carried off by his friends to be "among the birds" on the Wartburg (where, again like Paul, his enforced rest and isolation lead to fresh thoughts and deeper teachings). Now translating the New Testament, and ever and always writing to friends and acquaintances and stirring them up in the good cause, and solving difficulties they have referred to him. And now again taking the more difficult position of trying to hinder his followers from excesses, and of choosing the side of order against anarchy in the Peasants' War.

It is wonderful what events are crowded into those seven or eight years. They gone, he has less external activity, but he never ceases work. He has become almost a second Pope, and, as Dr. Bayne loves to point out, enjoyed his position by better right than the Bishop of Rome.

If our readers do not know much of Luther's life, we can only advise them to be in ignorance no longer. Apart from his work, Luther himself is a fascinating character. Christianity to him meant brightness and joy. He practised what he told his child's tutor:—"'A sorrowful spirit dries the bones,' and is everywhere condemned and proscribed by the Spirit that is Divine. Joy is the duty of youth, and sadness is to be rooted out of the heart. The first thing, therefore, to be done by one vexed by despondency is to lay it absolutely down that sadness is of the devil, and that God is a God of solace and joyfulness—a God, as Christ said, not of the dead, but of the living. What, indeed, is life but joyfulness in the Lord?" Ask his method, and he answers:—"Out with the secret: I have no power at all except what Christ gives me. If He leaves me, I tremble at a shaken leaf; if He holds me up, I am conscious only that the praise is his." Or again, "Be thou, silent and unworking, a Sabbath in which Christ may do wonderful things."

Our readers will wish to know our opinion, not so much of Luther, who is beyond praise, but of how Dr. Bayne has fulfilled his task. Certainly he has done it well. His style, indeed, is not altogether to our liking. It is too self-conscious. But it is vivid, and very popular. It would have been a strange anomaly for anyone to rise from the perusal of much of Luther's writing, and give out his impressions in stiff classical English. Dr. Bayne also falls once into the serious mistake of suggesting that the difficult verses Matt. xvi. 18, 19 are an interpolation, although there is not a shadow of external evidence for omitting them.

Members of the Established Church will probably smile when they read his assumption that one fact demolishes Lord Selborne's argument of the existence of a National Church before the Reformation. Others, besides, will complain that he has said too little about Luther's translation of the Bible, and has omitted all reference to many of his theological views, e.g., those on the Canon. But these are comparatively small points. Luther himself stands out clearly before us. As we read Dr. Bayne's work, we learn to know Luther more and to love him better. We can only hope that a cheap edition will ere long be published.

◆

AFRICAN MISSIONS.

REV. T. L. JOHNSON, who is well known in this country as the organiser of the African Mission for sending coloured men to Africa, was present at the Aldersgate Noon Prayer-meeting on Tuesday last week. He briefly and simply recounted how as a slave Jesus found him; how after awhile he conceived the idea of going to his brethren in Africa; and how, after labouring some time in the Cameroon country, he was led into the work to which now his life is devoted—that of kindling in the hearts of coloured people in America a missionary interest in the African races who are yet without a knowledge of the Saviour.

Mr. Johnson said numbers of coloured men in America are willing and ready to go to Africa, waiting only the means; and referred to Dr. Scholes and Mr. Ricketts, already in the field. For these, and also for the success of the work, fervent prayer was made. Mr. Johnson sailed on Saturday last for America, where he purposes labouring in this cause among his coloured brethren. His address will be, Box 478, Post-office, Chicago, Ill.

PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—The Society which undertakes this noble work has issued a bulky report. In the opening pages we learn how much of the recently beneficent legislation and the more humane treatment of dumb animals is due to its efforts. Much has been done by the publication of special periodicals, and by encouraging young people to write essays on the subject, to raise the tone of feeling and conduct with respect to the dumb creation. A less satisfactory, though not less necessary, portion of the Society's work consists in the prosecution of those who offend against the law by cruelty to animals. More than four thousand convictions were obtained last year. Mr. John Colam, 105, Jermyn-street, St. James's, S.W., is the secretary.

DUBLIN UNITED SERVICES.—The annual convention held in the Irish metropolis is perhaps the most widely known of the various spiritual agencies organised by this committee. There are, however, many others not less important. The first is the daily noon prayer-meeting held in the Christian Union Buildings, and this, with the Sunday afternoon Gospel service, uniting ministers and laymen of all denominations. A free breakfast, given to between 500 and 700 of the poorest of the city every Sunday morning, is also an institution of great value. There are besides children's services, mother's prayer-meetings, and other similar means of reaching and securing the interest of the people. Last year an effort was made to reach the sailors of the port by means of social and evangelistic meetings, the attendance at which was very encouraging. The office is at Christian Union Buildings, Lower Abbey-street, Dublin, and Mr. Robert Cotter is the secretary.

KINGSTON, JAMAICA, Y.M.C.A.—This Association is doing a good work, and evidence of the spirit with which it is animated is afforded by the way it has conducted the branch of the White Cross Army, formed some time since by Mr. S. J. Capper. Mr. Cunha, one of its foremost members, and also an effective worker in the Purity movement, is now in this country, and hopes to interest many in the work of the Association. This is invaluable in a country where there is but little voluntary effort, but unfortunately it does not meet with such general and sympathetic support as do similar associations in England and America. There is still a large balance remaining on account of the building, and the interest on this somewhat cripples the efforts of the Association. Any sympathy and contributions given to Mr. Cunha for the furtherance of this work, will be a cause of great encouragement to those who are banded together in carrying it on in the face of difficulties not known here. Mr. Cunha's address is 25, Lime-street, London, E.C., care of Messrs. Park, McFadyen & Co.

---

* MARTIN LUTHER: HIS LIFE AND WORK. By PETER BAYNE, LL.D. 2 vols. 24s. Cassell & Co.

The Christian.

August 26, 1887.

CONTENTS.

The Late Rev. John Ker, D.D. 1
Belief and Faith 3
Mr. Muller's Orphan Houses 3
Elijah the Prophet—15 4
Bible Study 5
Poetry—Refreshing after Rain .. 5
Ragged School Union 5
A New Life of Luther 6
African Missions 6
"Run, Indian, Run!" 9
Continental and Foreign Notes .. 9
Mr. Moody's Convocation 10
Pioneering in South Africa......11
Camp Meetings at Pontypool 11
Miss Macpherson's Good-bye 11
Notes and Comments 12
Letters to the Editor :—
Missionaries and Licensed Vice.14
Judicial Oaths 14
Missions in India.............14
The Root of Ritualism 15
Evangelistic Notes 15
Among the Churches 16
Notes on Daily Readings 17

The Bible Remembrancer.

A very compact Bible Handbook, intended to assist the memory, and to provide in the most ready manner for referring to any Biblical incident or event. TENTH THOUSAND.

With Full Details of the Scripture Numeration—as three, seven, twelve, and so on; an Alphabetical Index to the Psalms, by which any Psalm can be traced in a moment; a Key to the various Promises of Scripture (347 in number); a List of the Names and Titles of Christ; and a large number of important and valuable Tables and Lists. With Twelve beautiful Coloured Maps.

Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Edition—Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s.

"A more helpful book for Sabbath-school teachers and others we can scarcely think of.—Presbyterian.

"This is really a remarkable instance of multum in parvo, and the matter will be very useful to the Bible student. The small coloured Scripture maps are admirable, and so is the general arrangement of the little book."—Church Sunday School Magazine.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

The Bible Interpreter.

A Condensed Bible Dictionary. By the Author of "The Bible Remembrancer." Containing explanations of more than Eighteen Hundred Scripture Words and Subjects. With Twelve Full-page Illustrations and numerous smaller Engravings.

Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.
Presentation Edition—Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s.

FOURTH THOUSAND.

"A Bible Dictionary of terse and pointed character, and has a valuable Appendix of special interest to Sunday-school teachers."—Christian Chronicle.

"A compact and handy manual of reference which will be found useful by all students of the Bible. The pages are interspersed with numerous engravings illustrating the text, as well as views of places famous in Bible History."—Literary World.

"This is a useful little dictionary of Biblical terms for those who cannot afford any of the large Bible encyclopædias. Small though it is, it contains explanations of over one thousand eight hundred Scripture words and subjects."—The Rock.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

CHRISTIAN WOMEN AND THEIR WORK.

FIDELIA FISKE.

Records of a Consecrated Life.

Edited by REV. W. GUEST. With Engraved Portrait.

Presentation Edition—Large Type, Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.; with Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

Special Cheap Edition—Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"This is a biography of no commonplace character. Miss Fiske was a descendant of godly ancestors, and her life is a record of self-sacrifice and usefulness such as is rarely met with. Both in America and in connection with the mission in Persia her labours were abundantly blessed. The story of her life ought to be widely circulated."—Methodist Recorder.

"A book after our own heart, a veritable history of a consecrated life. Here is truth stranger and more thrilling than fiction, the incidents of a missionary career which are to the glory of God and of his truth. . . . Buy it and read it, pray over it and imitate it, is our advice to all, and especially to our sisters in the Lord, who will do well to be followers of her in her faith and patience, her consecration, and self-sacrificing love."
Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, in The Sword and Trowel.

DOROTHEA TRÜDEL;

or, The Prayer of Faith.

With Life-like Portrait.

Presentation Edition—Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

Special Cheap Edition—Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"Dorothea Trüdel appears to have been a simple-minded woman, of remarkable devotedness and faith. She became deeply penetrated with the striking passage of St. James, 'The prayer of faith shall save the sick.' Led by circumstances to minister to the afflicted, she carried into practical action the settled conviction of her heart, and in 'hundreds' of cases soul and body were alike healed without other visible means."—The Record.

PUNROOTY;

or, The Gospel Winning its Way among the Women of India.

By CLARA M. S. LOWE. Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"A most interesting account of Miss Reade's mission work in India, showing what God can do by means of a really devoted woman. These are the sort of books which Christians should read and circulate as 'light reading.' They are far more instructive and interesting too than the religious fiction, which is far too popular."—Christian Progress.

"We have been charmed by this book. We could not lay it aside till we had read it through. Exciting as a novel, it stimulates a reader's faith, prayer, consecration, and love of souls."—Star in the East.

MARY LYON.

Recollections of a Noble Woman.

By FIDELIA FISKE. With Engraved Portrait.

Presentation Edition—Out of Print.

Special Cheap Edition—Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"The work is full of quiet power, rich spiritual experience, and practical guidance."—Oldham Chronicle.

"The volume will be prized by all who can appreciate devotedness to Christ; and we trust that it will lead some to employ to better account than in days bygone the talents entrusted to them by their Divine Master."—Weekly Review.

"This is a biography worthy to be written, and a book well written. Miss Lyon was a saintly woman, whom God called to the work of teaching, and whose instructions were eminently useful to her pupils. Ladies engaged in tuition, mothers of girls, and girls themselves, will do well to read this life of Mary Lyon."—Wesleyan Advocate.

TELL JESUS.

Recollections of Emily Gosse.

By ANNA SHIPTON,

Author of "Waiting Hours," "Sure Mercies of David," &c., &c.

Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.; with Gilt Edges, 2s.

Special Cheap Edition—Tinted Covers, 6d.

"Calculated to produce a certain impression upon the hearts of true Christians that will be greatly beneficial to them throughout the whole of their future course. We sincerely commend the author, whether in poetry or prose, both for her composition and her theme."—The Sword and Trowel.

"A life spent in loving, intimate, and uninterrupted communion with a personal Lord."—Christian Times.

FAITHFUL RECORDS.

Visits to the Sick and Suffering.

By E. GILPIN. Illustrated.

Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

A Volume of Narratives specially adapted for perusal in the Sick-room.

"A series of very earnestly-written tracts; containing narratives on vital subjects, printed in good bold type. . . . Cannot fail of being useful."
Wesleyan Times.

"Founded on facts, and given with great simplicity and power."—The Freeman.

These "Records" may also be had as a series of Twelve Tracts, in a Packet, price One Shilling.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

CASTLE YARD MISSION.

Established Eighty - Five Years.

President—Rev. NEWMAN HALL, LL.B.

HELP URGENTLY REQUIRED

Towards general expenses of carrying on an invaluable and much needed Christian Work among the very poorest Children of Southwark.

You are most earnestly asked to help support this time-honoured and useful Mission.

Contributions will be very gratefully received and acknowledged by Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.; Treasurer, Rev. ROBERT TUCK, B.A., 23, Thornford-road, Lewisham-park, S.E.; Bankers, LONDON & WESTMINSTER, St. James's-square, S.W., Account, "Castle-yard Mission."

CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY.

The 115th ANNUAL REPORT of this Society has just been issued, a copy of which may be had from the SECRETARY by anyone interested in the work.

Help is greatly needed to carry on the good work here done. Address

MR. JAMES ATKINSON,
28, Enfield-road, Kingsland, N.

ISSUE at PAR of £362,326 MORTGAGE DEBENTURES for seven or ten years, at 5 per cent.

THE CAPITOL FREEHOLD LAND AND INVESTMENT COMPANY (Limited).

Trustees for Debenture Holders.
The Right Hon. the EARL of ABERDEEN.
Sir WM. M'ARTHUR, K.C.M.G. | Q. HOGG, Esq.
Chairman—The Most Hon. the MARQUIS of TWEEDDALE.

This Company is now prepared to receive applications for the balance for its Mortgage Debentures, for seven or ten years, at 5 per cent. interest.

These Debentures can only be issued at the rate of 4s. per acre upon land actually conveyed, and are secured upon all the freehold lands and other properties of the Company, which are vested in the trustees for the debenture holders.

Forms of application and all information can be obtained at the Company's Office, No. 139, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

By order, HENRY BOWMAN, Secretary.

"THE HERALD OF MERCY," published monthly at One Halfpenny. Specimen copy sent, post free, on application to the publishers, Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.

The issue of the Revised Version of the Bible, whilst it has shed much new light on the Holy Scriptures, has, perhaps, intensified the affection felt for the beautiful and familiar rendering given in the text of the AUTHORISED VERSION. With a view of providing all students of the Word, and especially the Young, with a copy of the Scriptures embellished with authentic Illustrations. Messrs. CASSELL & COMPANY have arranged to publish a NEW ISSUE, in Monthly Parts, price 6d., of

THE CROWN BIBLE, with Twenty full-page TINTED PLATES after GUSTAVE DORÉ, and nearly

1,000 ILLUSTRATIONS

of Real Objects, specially executed for this Edition from Original Photographs and other authentic sources, including Monuments, Coins, Medals, Seals, &c. Part 1 ready August 25, 1887. (To be completed in 20 Parts.)

 With Part 1 will be issued, free of charge, a Family Register handsomely produced in gold, on superfine paper.

"This is one of the handsomest editions, and—considering the number and quality of its illustrations and its excellent paper and print—probably the cheapest edition of the Scriptures yet produced. It comprises nearly a thousand pictures, which have been designed for the occasion and interwoven with the text, which possess the great merit of being confined to real objects, which illustrate in the strictest sense, by representing from authentic pictures, antiquities, and other objects, the places and things referred to."—Daily News.

CASSELL & COMPANY, Limited, Ludgate-hill, London: and all Booksellers.

CHRIST LIFTED UP.

By REV. ROBERT GILCHRIST.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.
SUPERIOR EDITION—Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"Old-fashioned divinity presented in an attractive form. May its readers be many."—Sword and Trowel.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS.

By JOHN BUNYAN.

With Thirteen Original Illustrations, specially drawn for this work.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 6d.; Fancy Boards, Cloth Back, 1s.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness. No home need now be without this wonderful work."
Oldham Chronicle.

SUPERIOR EDITION—Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

CONSUMPTION CURABLE!

"MR. G. T. CONGREVE on CONSUMPTION

AND ITS SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT.

Showing that direful disease to be curable in all its stages; with observations on

ASTHMA, CHRONIC BRONCHITIS, ETC."

SIXPENCE (Post Free), or Large Edition (cloth), 1s. 3d., from the Author, Coombe Lodge, Peckham, S.E., and Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.

The Twenty-second Series of Weekly Cases is now publishing, from August to October.

NOTICE TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN," WHO MAY BE PERSONALLY OR RELATIVELY

INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED in this journal BEFORE, EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

PHTHISIS
Mrs. M. HART, PLYMOUTH.

This patient, residing at BELLEVUE-FARM, HIGHERHOOE, PLYMOUTH, first wrote me about her case nearly three years ago. She had then severe Cough, decidedly purulent expectoration, exhausting night sweats, rapid loss of flesh and strength.

The patient took my medicine regularly for nine months; afterwards only on and off, which somewhat retarded the cure. After nine letters of advice (the last dated April, 1885), I heard that she was nearly well.

I have recently had a letter from her, dated June 9, 1887, in which she asks me if it is not time now to publish her case.

"Mine was a very bad case (she writes). The Plymouth physician gave me up, and said I was fast going to the grave, and told my husband there was not the least hope. My own doctor said there were holes (cavities) in the lungs. But through God's great mercy, your treatment has been the means of restoring me. I can now take long walks and attend to all my domestic duties. Many think mine a wonderful case."

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

THE EMPRESS PEN
REGISTERED
No. 0
JOHN HEATH

John Heath's PENS

GOLDEN COATED
3/6 per Gross.

Or 6d. Boxes. All Stationers. Sample Box (24 kinds) 7 stamps. BIRMINGHAM.

ADDRESSES BY D. L. MOODY.

Delivered in Great Britain in 1874-75.

Tinted Covers, 1s. Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.
Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

ONE HUNDRED AND TENTH THOUSAND.

"Manly, clear, and pointed, they strike home to the heart."—Primitive Methodist.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

FULL ASSURANCE OF FAITH.

BY D. L. MOODY.

Tinted Covers, 2d. Cloth, 6d.

"A good many of God's dear people have not assurance; but it is the privilege of every child of God to have beyond doubt a knowledge of his own salvation. No man is fit for God's service who is filled with doubts. If a man is not sure of his own salvation, how can he help anyone else into the Kingdom of God?—Extract.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.

Tinted Covers, 1s. Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d. Cloth Boards, 2s.

PASTOR BLUMHARDT

AND HIS WORK.

A descriptive account of the remarkable work of FAITH HEALING carried on first at Möttlingen and subsequently at Bad Boll. By Rev. W. GUEST. With Introduction by Rev. C. H. BLUMHARDT. With Portrait.

"I have come to think of Boll, since visiting it, as in many ways one of the most interesting places in Europe—interesting not only for its natural loveliness, its past history, its warm fellowships, and cherished memories, but for its noble testimony to Christian faith, and for the problems in the deepest things of Life and Truth which it leaves for after years to solve; and certainly no holiday could be better spent than with the little Colony of God's people, who are always to be found gathered round the old Pastor, whose life-work all these years has been this beautiful and mysterious ministry of Prayer.

"The good Pastor himself, alas! since these words were first transcribed from my note-book, has been taken to his rest. He was a remarkable man, and leaves a work behind him too remarkable to cease. And though the visitor now will miss the characteristic figure, he will find there the same spirit and faith."

HENRY DRUMMOND,
(Author of "Natural Law in the Spiritual World.")

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

FRY'S
PURE
COCOA

Fry's Cocoa

·Pure·
·Concentrated·
·Cocoa·

33 PRIZE MEDALS
awarded to the Firm

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR A SAMPLE & TESTIMONIALS

J. S. FRY & SONS, BRISTOL, LONDON, and SYDNEY, N.S.W.,

For the Young.

"RUN, INDIAN, RUN!"

BY REV. EDWARD A. RAND.

Big John, Little John, and Uncle John—those three are in my story. Big John was Little John's father, a stout brawny Indian. They all lived at the north, on the edge of the wild Canada woods. Oh, how far-reaching and hushed, so still save as some solitary bird cries overhead, and the wind, with its soft, unseen fingers, touches those harps with which the pines are hung, and then fills all the air with a sea-like murmur! In the Indian settlement, on the margin of the great forest, it was noisy enough There were about fifteen families in this cluster of homes overlooking the rapid little river that made an animated pattering with its feet or crystal down in the ravine all day.

Did I say that three were in my story? There was a fourth one, "Father Robert," as they call the Protestant missionary, Rev. Robert Rantoon. Everybody liked him—a brave, faithful, generous servant of the Lord Jesus. Big John had a piece of news to tell one day as he came down the little river of crystal in his canoe of birch-bark. "Father Robert is coming to-morrow!" he shouted, as he reached the settlement.

"Good, good!" grunted several Indians, while Little John clapped his hands to think of the picture-book and picture-paper that Father Robert was likely to bring him. He sat thinking awhile, and then said to Big John and Uncle John, who were squatting before a crackling, red camp-fire, at which was stewing a kettle of deer-soup—

"Oh, look here!" They accordingly looked.

"Couldn't we make a house for Father Robert?" said Little John. "He can have it for his own, and he will like that." "Yes, yes!" said both the Indians.

A house! A house that was to be raised, covered, finished, and furnished in twenty-four hours! What a feat in house-building! Besides, there were the materials to be brought together. However, there was no cellar to be dug, and this was so much gain.

"Get your hatchet!" cried Big John to his boy. "Uncle John, get yours!"

Off they went into the depths of the silent, shadowy woods, and cut half a dozen straight poles about twelve feet long. Then they stood before several birch-trees, and eyed them sharply, but shook their heads at each, and turned away.

"Hullo!" shouted Uncle John, picking out another candidate for inspection. "This will do." "Yes, this will do," said Big John.

They now made incisions in the bark, so that it would come off in nice large pieces. As it was the month of July, when the bark peels readily, they made quick work with this tree. Then they visited other tall, stout trunks, and made them take off their coats speedily.

"There, that will do," said Uncle John.

They now had timber for the house-frame, also boards and clapboards for the walls, shingles for the roof, laths and plaster, or, in other words, poles and birch-bark. With the poles they made a framework like a cone, securely lashing together the pole-tops. Strips of birch-back were sewed together, and then laid over the cone-like frame, and the house for Father Robert was completed! There was a hole left in one side, and that would serve as a "door." When a fire was needed inside, the smoke would escape at the top, where the poles were tied together: and wasn't that good as a "chimney"? Little John gathered a soft, fragrant heap of hemlock-tips: and wasn't that a "bed"? One's lap would serve for a "table," and the tent had as many "chairs" as there were chances to squat down on the thick green turf. In Indian-land, living is very cheap.

Father Robert was much pleased to see this piece of "real estate," and said he would use it at once; and, though he was in a great hurry to preach to some neighbours fifty miles away, he would certainly stop long enough to give one sermon before his own door. As the birch tent was prefaced by a very pretty plot of green grass, where the Indians could sit in sermon-time, Father Robert called it his "church," and a very grand roof did the arching forest boughs give it.

"I am rich," he said. "I have a church, and a parsonage next to it. To pay for your kindness, you shall have a service and sermon."

When he reached his sermon, he said:—"I want to preach about temptation. I wish to make three points. Each one of you get three little sticks, and it will help you to remember. My first 'stick,' or point, is, Indians are good at running." This "stick'' pleased his auditors very much.

"My next 'stick' is that it is always best to run from temptation; and my third 'stick' is that Indians should therefore run from temptation."

A universal smile and grunt of satisfaction greeted this statement, and all felt that Father Robert was a better preacher than ever. He now talked at length upon his subject, urging his hearers, whenever moved to do wrong, to get away from temptation as fast as possible. "Are you ever inclined to take anything that belongs to another? Stop looking at it. Don't stay with it. Run, Indian, run! Are you tempted to drink fire-water?"

Here several countenances lighted up as if a little of the article would be acceptable just then. Little John looked at his uncle, and gave a sigh, for he knew that Uncle John took a very positive fancy to the dreadful whisky-bottle.

"Say, are you tempted? Don't look at the bottle. Don't stay near it. Run from it, Indian, run!" shouted Father Robert, his fine deep voice ringing through the forest depths. Would they run, though? We shall see.

Father Robert expected to be back on the afternoon of the fourth day, and that very day Little John had a temptation. He chanced to be near the missionary's tent, and, moved by a curiosity which even boys with a pale face know something about, put his eye down to a rent in the wall of birch-bark. Near the door—a piece of white cloth dropped over the hole in the side made the door—Little John saw a silver dollar!

There it was, shining very bright in a beam of sunshine admitted at one side of the cloth door. It had been dropped by the missionary—they do not have money that they can afford to drop—and Little John asked himself if the missionary would ever miss it if he—he—took it. How many things that dollar would buy! He was moving his head a little to get a better view of the dollar, when he seemed to hear a voice: "Stop looking at it."

Little John turned away. "Don't stay with it!"

Little John took two paces off from the tent. "Run, Indian, run!"

Away went Little John as fast as he could gallop—anywhere—just to get out of the way of temptation! He was running hard, his head down, when suddenly he collided with an object rather soft and big, but firm. He looked up, and found he had run into somebody who was saying, "Ugh! Ugh!" It was Uncle John.

"Look out, there! Why, I should think you were running away from one of Father Robert's temptations!"

Then he fastened his sharp black eyes on Little John.

"Now, you were, Little John, were you not?" Little John nodded assent.

"Oh, oh!" groaned Uncle John. What was the matter? Had his nephew bumped him too hard? Not that, not that.

"Oh, oh!" continued Uncle John. "I ought to run! I'm tempted!" Then he shouted, with fierce energy, "And I will run, too! Come, boy, help your uncle! Run!"

"Where, where?" "I am tempted to go after fire-water; but let's run for the river!"

Away they went, leaving behind them the whisky in a neighbour's tent, and soon were drinking of the pure river water.

When Father Robert arrived at his camp, Uncle John told him about his temptation; and then the missionary told him to run to one other place of safety, even God. Uncle John fled there quickly.

This is a story about redskins; but won't it do also for folks that have a white skin?—Sunday-school Times.

SEASIDE SERVICES FOR CHILDREN.

August:—Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Scarborough and Filey; Mr. Hutchinson, Bridlington; Mr. Dennes, Whitby; Mr. Spiers, Redcar; Mr. J. H. Greene, Saltburn; Captain Chapman, Cromer; Mr. Chaplin, Felixstowe; Messrs. C. H. and E. Collier, Herne Bay; Mr. Seagrove, Broadstairs; Mr. Livesey Carrot, Deal; Mr. E. Jaquet, Walmer; Mr. Trickett, Eastbourne; Mr. Pitts, St. Leonards; Messrs. Gibbard Hughes and Howard Staines, Worthing; Mr. Hall, Southsea; Mr. Geo. Banaster, Bournemouth; Rev. A. Storrs, Sandown; Mr. Pericles Green, Weymouth; Mr. Symonds, Swanage; Mr. Harris, Weston-super-Mare; Mr. Moore, Ilfracombe; Mr. Bellingham, Llandudno, Colwyn Bay, Llanfairfechan, &c.; Mr. Greening, Tenby; Hon. W. G. Scott, Elie (Fife); Rev. W. Talbot Hindley, Margate; Mr. H. B. Claxton, Penzance.

Paignton.—Rev. T. Cameron Wilson, Vicar of Christ Church, and Mr. J. Crofton Rainey are having most encouraging meetings on the Sands. Many visitors have come forward and expressed their pleasure and interest.

CONTINENTAL & FOREIGN NOTES.

SOUTHERN RUSSIA.—The remarkable spread of Protestantism in Southern Russia is causing grave consternation among the authorities there, and probably attempts will be made to put it down by violent means. The police are instructed to keep strict watch over all that transpires, and to leave no new method untried to prevent the spread of the Gospel, and to keep the people in ignorance of its truths.

ROMISH AND PROTESTANT MISSIONS.—The Roman Catholic Church has a missionary society called, "The Propagation of Faith." In 1885 this Society received seven millions of francs, while the principal Protestant societies received and spenty thirty-seven millions of francs! The tree is known by its fruits, and yet the Roman Catholics do not hesitate to say that Protestants cannot prove their faith by their "works."—Le Témoin de la Vérité.

THE DAY OF REST.—The shop assistants at Marseilles have formed themselves into a league for closing their shops on Sunday, and they have persuaded the wholesale houses to do the same. At Bâle, too, a committee for the observance of the Day of Rest has been formed, and a circular has been issued to the tradesmen of the town, praying them to close their shops and offices on the Lord's Day. The circular cites the example of England and the United States of America, where commerce is suspended for once day in seven.—Le Témoin de la Vérité.

NORWAY.—A correspondent writes:—I have just returned from a visit to Norway, and have met a large number of Christians there. You are probably aware that the brethren who have separated from the Established Church have not that measure of religious liberty which we enjoy, and are still subjected to a considerable amount of persecution on the part of the "priest." It was my pleasure to be associated with two brethren in Moss, for a day or two last month, who had spent three or four days on bread and water in the town prison, nearly opposite the priest's house, for baptizing seceders from the church without his permission, which they conscientiously refuse to do. There is a very earnest and vigorous work in that little town, and the hall was crowded on the evening that I gave an address. The Christians in Norway desire an interest in the prayers of your readers.

JEWISH CHRISTIANS IN RUSSIA.—The Echo of Berlin publishes an interesting summary account, by Professor F. Delitzsch, of the remarkable movement amongst the Jewish population of Southern Russia, under the leadership of Mr. Rabinowitz. In Kischeneff no fewer than fifty thousand Jews, it is stated, have become Christians. No pressure has been exerted on the part of the Russian authorities, and the new converts have not joined the Russian Orthodox Church. They have constituted themselves into a Judæo-Christian community, and call their places of worship by the old familiar name of synagogue. The Russian Ministry of Worship has conceded State acknowledgment to these new and flourishing Christian congregations, so that they are freed from all interference on the side either of the Russian ecclesiastical or the Jewish authorities, and are left at complete liberty to develop their own organisation and doctrine.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sunday, August 28, Matt. xviii. 1—14; Monday, August 29, Matt. xviii. 15—22; Tuesday, August 30, Matt. xviii. 23—35; Wednesday, August 31, Matt. xix. 13—30; Thursday, September 1, Matt. xx. 1—16; Friday, September 2, Matt. xx. 17—34; Saturday, September 3, Matt. xxi. 1—16.

MR. MOODY'S CONVOCATION.

THE third day of the Conference saw an increased and deeply interested company, to whom, at the morning session, Rev. W. W. CLARK delivered a vigorous talk on the harmony of the four Gospels. He examined in detail the well-known distinctive characteristics of each record, and showed conclusively that their separate, and, in some small particulars, divergent narratives, constitute a much stronger body of evidence than could have been furnished by one. As to the development in the Gospels, as they are arranged in the New Testament, he pointed out that Matthew announces Jesus risen; Mark, that He is risen and ascended; Luke goes further and adds the promise of the Holy Spirit; while John is beyond them all in declaring Christ's promise to come again. Dr. Clark added a few remarks on the inscription on the Cross, which is used by infidels to prove the Scriptures uninspired, because of the differences in the quotation of this inscription in the different Gospels. He showed by arrangement of the renderings of the title that they were all one. In closing he said:—"From this study we may learn that the Bible not only contains the Word, but is the Word, and that Divine truth is conveyed, not only through the letter, but in the letter. These letters are four beautiful pictures, four records, but there is only one person described." The address was illustrated by blackboard diagrams, and the platform was crowded at the end of the meeting with those who wished to copy them in brief form.

At the same meeting Rev. E. P. HAMMOND related several incidents in illustration of the passage, "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." He described the conversion of an infidel, as the indirect result of a disturbance in front of one of Mr. Moody's meetings, and told one or two other similar anecdotes; but his most impressive story, says The Springfield Union, was that of a Catholic's conversion to Christianity, published in the tract, "The Story of a Bible."

The event of the evening was an address by Mr. FRANCIS MURPHY. We quote from the Union report:—

The announcement that Francis Murphy would speak on "temperance" filled Stone Hall to overflowing. No words can describe his spirited manner, animated gestures, and, above all, the tenderly pathetic voice, which brought the tears to many eyes, as he told the story of his life. One half the time the audience were convulsed with laughter; the other half they were weeping almost as freely. He introduced his subject by saying he believed in the power of the Gospel to save drunkards, and Jesus Christ will do it if we will only let Him. There are a lot of us that have got out of sorts about catching this kind of fish; whenever we want them caught, we send the policeman after them, and try to save them by the courts, instead of by the power of Christianity. It is love, mercy, and kindness that this world is starving for to-day. If the Church would come out of its strait-jacket and take common men by the hand, it would be all right. Any temperance work that doesn't fill up the churches, and help the ministers, and bring the spirit of revival into the Church, don't amount to much.

His talk led to the story of his conversion, which was told in his own inimitable way, and held the audience spellbound from beginning to end. He inveighed strongly against the practice Gospel. "Don't be in too much of a hurry to skin a man. There are many men who, as soon as they get a man into church, sharpen their knives and get ready to cut him all to pieces." Some of the words of advice and appeal, which were scattered through this part of the address, were the following: "I want you to be so kind that sinful men will fall in love with you. People will have no more faith in you than you have in them. God help us to have faith in men, some fulcrum of power that is to seize the heart of men, and raise it on God's throne." In conclusion, Mr. Murphy graphically described the conversion of a drinking infidel in Chicago, last winter, when he and Mr. Moody were working together.

Mr. T. E. MURPHY, who had arrived the same afternoon, spoke briefly, at the conclusion of his father's appeal, in favour of the Blue Ribbon movement. It was at once a disappointment and a sorrow to many, as to himself, that Mr. Murphy had to leave Northfield next day on account of the illness of his daughter.

On the morning of the fourth day Prof. W. H. GREEN, of Princeton, presented an exegesis of the book of Job, which, though it occupied an hour, held the attention throughout, and gave the leading features of this wonderful book. In comprehensiveness of grasp, logical argument, and polished style, remarks our Springfield contemporary, Prof. Green has not been excelled upon this stage. After paying the tribute due to its literary excellence, he spoke briefly of some of the difficult questions raised with reference to Job. It is doubtful whether the book be a drama or merely a discussion on the theme of God's providential dispensations. The objection is raised that the Satan of Job is a different person from the Satan of the later Scriptures. It is claimed that here he must be an officer of heaven, that his name means "one who goes to and fro," instead of "an enemy," and that the idea of evil spirits was unknown till the Persian period; but all these statements can be disproved. After dismissing with a word the objections to the genuineness of the introduction and conclusion, Prof. Green took up the object of the book. It contains new disclosures about God's providence, but it also brings out the question of individual personal salvation. Job presents us with a type of Christ on the Divine side in his Redeemer, and on the human side in Job himself. It further illustrates the method of Divine revelation, the truth being given to hungry and thirsty souls, not to the indifferent. The theme was expanded in a most interesting, able, and profitable way.

Rev. W. W. CLARK followed, and gave the results of a recent study of the Bible for the special purpose of reconciling the apparent contradictions of Scripture. The paper was full of valuable thought. The Bible, he said, is full of paradoxes, that is, of seeming contradictions. One truth apparently refutes another, and the alleged discrepancies are legion. Neander says that God is a self-revealing and a self-concealing God. No wonder that his Word is mysterious, and his ways past finding out. The Bible is often two-sided in its testimony; that is, there are counter truths which often lead to the unfair inference that the Book contradicts itself. Many seeming contradictions arise from differences of time, place, and surroundings. Truth is many-sided, flinging back from each of countless facets a ray of a different hue. We must never set up one side or statement of truth in opposition to the other, or attempt to weaken the point of one by means of the other. Having illustrated his view by a reference to many Bible teachings he closed, by saying:—We must hold to the whole Bible as it is; God has given us two eyes to read, two ears to hear it, and two feet to walk in his paths. Such is his love, goodness, and mercy, that even upon the cross of Christ we see that the secrets of his wisdom are "double of understanding," and Divine truth has its two-fold form. Testament and the truth of the Old met together, the righteousness of the law and the peace of the Gospel have kissed each other. There is a very old stanza, whose author is unknown,

> Though various Scriptures seem to clash
> And leave the mind in doubt;
> If well with prayer you study them,
> You'll find their meaning out.

A crowded audience came together in the evening to hear Professor DRUMMOND, who seems to have been as popular at the Convocation as at the preceding Summer School. Before he spoke, Mr. Moody and the audience had read together the Sermon on the Mount. The Professor's talk was a practical application of that immortal Sermon. The mistake of the Christian world, he said, is that we expect to have the beatitudes without fulfilling the conditions attached to each of them. How often do we pray that we may have the kingdom of heaven, without thinking that before that can be given we must be poor in spirit. How often do we pray for mercy, without raising the previous question: Are we merciful? How often do we expect to be filled, when we have never made sure that what we are hungering and thirsting for is real righteousness. That is a fundamental cause of the anxiety and longing which so abound in the Christian Church. There is nothing more affecting in the world than the spiritual longing in people's hearts. Everywhere in America I have struck that stratum; it reveals itself in spite of itself. Two or three nights ago I lectured in a place two or three hundred miles from here. I intended to lecture on science, but when I saw the faces of the people and read their thoughts, I shut my specimens, and instead of opening my museum, I opened this Book, and took out some crumbs of the bread of life.

What I should like to point out to you is a principle which will give stability, and certainty, and vitality, and permanence to the Christian experience of any one of us, no matter how dishevelled and unsatisfactory it may have been in the past. That principle is that every effect produced upon the soul of man is dependent upon a previous cause: instead of praying for effects, pray for causes, and that you may be allowed to fulfil them. Let me lay the basis in nature, which can help us immensely in the Christian life. Nothing happens in this world by chance. There is no "perhaps" in nature; there is a cause for everything that we see, or feel, or hear. Though we may not always be able to trace the causes, there is nothing without a cause in the world. It is the same in religion. If a man has religious joy and peace, these things have not come down like snowflakes from heaven, they have come from Divine causes, which can be produced anew. More, if we fulfil these causes, they cannot but be produced anew. If you can get that spirit into your life, you have an infallible rule of action.

This was applied, in reference to the possession and growth of joy, patience, faith, love, and other of the Christian graces and attainments. As to friendship he observed, "You can't get a higher definition of the Christian's relation to God than friendship. There is no degradation in the level of common things; God made them all. He made the laws of society, that in and through these things we might learn that his other laws are the same laws in another relation." He closed as follows:—What we have to pray for is to get into that relation, and to be constant there, and then everything else will come. The work of driving a ship across the Atlantic is spent in keeping it in position. Pray that you may be kept in the right position with reference to Christ. Somebody says, "I wish I could keep it up." You have nothing to keep up; it is not an "it," it is a "Him." We think it is religion to be filled with enthusiasm, but religion is a personal matter.

Under Mr. Sankey, Mr. Towner, and Mr. and Mrs. Stebbins, the service of song, as may be imagined, was of the most attractive and impressive kind. An additional interest was given by the presence of Fanny Crosby, the well-known blind authoress of many of the Gospel

PIONEERING IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Writing from Ikwesi Lamaci, Natal, on April 16, Mrs. Samuel Aitchieson, says:—

"When I look over our meetings and see the red-clayed heathen mingling with the neatly clothed Christians, the contrast is far more striking than I can portray. Then, to note the wistful faces of the heathen—so anxious to learn all—some hoping that to 'come out' does not mean so very much after all, that something may still remain of the old ways. None but themselves know what leaving heathenism really means.

"Recently our Government has taken some interest in native education, and appointed an inspector to visit and report on what is being done. If trades are taught they will give some help toward maintaining the school. We hope, at the inspector's next visit, to show him much improvement. It is difficult to get the boys to keep at trades a sufficient length of time to learn them, but my husband is doing what he can towards this end. During the year he has erected a carpenter's shop, also a blacksmith's shop, and a kind friend in the colonies has given us a forge and bellows.

"The changes of climate are very trying at times; but on the whole we have fairly good health, for which we are deeply thankful. You will remember the little native girl (Squillett), brought me eight years ago by her father to adopt. She is a bright, intelligent child, and very useful in little things, and would be more so if she were bigger, but she seems as if she would never grow. You will also remember George Ujabas, who was in England, and returned with my husband, and has been studying at Lovedale. He has been with us for nearly a year as native evangelist, and also helps in the day-school. But preaching and pleading with his people seem to be his forte. He carries the glad tidings with such power and earnestness to the heathen, and they listen with so much attention, that our prayer is that the word may sink into their hearts, and that fruit may soon show itself for his labours. I feel sure it will, for he is a faithful messenger of the Gospel. We hope to be able to retain George with us, and that funds will come in for his support. I have about twelve girls in my sewing class; they are just now very busy upon various garments, to show the inspector on his next visit. They are able to make clothing for themselves now; but I find it difficult to keep up a supply of sewing materials. Many of the boys and girls, being the children of heathen parents, cannot get anything from home. They come to us naked. A request for help to clothe them would be met with scorn; for putting on garments is one step towards better things, and not to be recognised. So we must do all or nothing for them. Many friends might be glad to send us cast-off clothing, remnants of dress-stuff, calico, patchwork, cotton, needles, &c., if they only knew the need. Such parcels, if sent to the Y.M.C.A. Rooms, Birmingham, will be forwarded to us.

"My husband has been recently to Malan Cliff. Mr. and Mrs. Christison still continue in the work there. I fear they have not much support beyond what we can spare them, but they are resolved to go on in faith and love to the Master. We earnestly pray that friends may be raised up for them. There is a vast field of labour there before them; the ground has been broken, seed has been sown; shall it now lie waste? My husband has decided to erect them a cottage close upon the location, and right in the midst of the people. The huts there are now nearly worn out, and they need a dwelling-place. Doors and windows are already being made in the workshop."

Miss Bryson, 1, Belmar-terrace, Pollokshields, Glasgow, or Miss Macpherson, Home of Industry, 60, Commercial-street, Spitalfields, London, will gladly receive money help or material for this Mission among the Kaffirs.

CAMP MEETINGS AT PONTYPOOL.

The annual camp meetings in connection with the Undenominational Christian Mission, Pontypool, were renewed on Sunday the 13th inst., when successful gatherings were held in a large temporary theatre, at present pitched in the market-place, and in the very midst of a teeming population. Addresses were delivered in the afternoon and evening of Sunday and Monday, to crowded audiences by T. M. Wintle, the hon. superintendent of the Mission, Rev. O. Tidman, Mr. Opie Rodway, Rev. F. C. Spurr, Mr. John Kirk, Miss Haire, local ministers, and others, and not without "signs following." There were also overflow meetings held in the open air each evening.

On Tuesday evening new mission premises were opened in Pontypool, making the fourth centre of this aggressive agency under Mr. Wintle's care for teaching the poor and the godless in this neglected mining district. The building is located in a poor part, and is in many respects suited for the purpose. There are two floors with separate rooms, which will be used for factory girls' meetings, for a ragged school, for free dinners in winter, for classes for rough lads, as well as Gospel services, prayer-meetings, &c. The meetings in the new building have been continued nightly by Miss Haire, and much blessing has already been vouchsafed, and several have professed to have found peace in believing.

A full report of the Mission will be sent on application to Mr. T. M. Wintle, Pontymoile, near Pontypool.

TELEGRAPH CLERKS.—An interesting social gathering of about fifty telegraph clerks was held last Friday afternoon at the Y.M.C.A. Aldersgate-street, by invitation of Mr. R. Burn. Addresses were given by Mr. M. H. Hodder, Mr. G. E. Morgan, Mr. Putterill, and Mr. Burn. These were followed by a few testimonies, and several came forward before their companions as desirous of accepting Christ.

SIERRA LEONE.—The history of the mission and education work, carried on for nearly a hundred years by native agents associated with the Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion, in a place at one time desolated by the abominations of the slave trade, is deeply interesting. Recent reports state that there are now sixty native preachers and exhorters, fourteen native congregations, many of them largely attended—one of them at Waterloo, numbering over 500 communicants, with schools in and around the colony. The pamphlet containing the account, from which we gather these interesting particulars, may be obtained of Mr. F. W. Willcocks, 132, Queen's-road, Finsbury Park, N.

ARTILLERY-LANE MISSION.—For fifteen years this Mission has carried on its work of visitation in the lodging-houses of the district, and Christ crucified has been preached in the common kitchens. Here often from two hundred to five hundred of the most depraved men and women are gathered together, and great blessing has resulted from these labours. A free breakfast is given during the winter months to those destitute ones whom the workers gather in from the streets during the night. Penny dinners were also given to poor children twice a week, and upwards of a thousand substantial meals were supplied free. The hon. secretary is Mr. E. J. Hampton, 3, Frederick Place, Northwold-road, Upper Clapton.

MR. D. C. JOSEPH, writing from Jerusalem, says:—Your heart would leap for joy to see a large gathering of Jews from different countries standing in the open air to listen to the sound of the Gospel. Our large room is now, on Saturday, too small for us, so we, as it were, are driven out to the open air. Our garden is close to the road, and situated between two synagogues. The first Saturday, when coming from their synagogue, the Jews were arrested by the sweet voices of the orphan children of Sister Charloto's School singing Gospel hymns. They seemed paralysed, for they never heard open-air preaching before. Now we have a large gathering—men, women, and children; some come in the garden, others stand outside, to listen to the glad tidings of the New Covenant. Pray the Lord to send more labourers to Jerusalem among his people.

MISS MACPHERSON'S GOOD-BYE.

The proceedings at Miss Macpherson's meeting last week were full of living interest. A large company had come together before the thunderstorm burst upon London, which must have inconvenienced many on their homeward journey. During Dr. McKilliam's address the lurid lightning gleamed out of the darkness in brilliant, rapidly succeeding flashes, followed by loud, cannon-like peals of thunder, that seemed partly muffled by the pouring rain. The elemental strife without lent a touch of added grandeur to the lofty and mysterious themes on which the speaker was earnestly expatiating.

In the latter part of the tea hour Miss Macpherson held the undivided attention of the friends, by her object lesson in emigration. The party with whom she was to leave London for Canada the same evening, were ranged in front, and she gave little glimpses into the life-histories of some of the girls and big lads, a goodly number of whom are in this band. She told very touchingly of a Christian lady who had for some time entertained in her country house a small party of girls; one of these a dark-eyed, wise-looking little lass, stood on a chair as she repeated, with great composure and perfect correctness, the Twenty-third Psalm, which the lady had taught her. So delighted is this lady with the result of her experiment that she is now entertaining a still larger family of poor children. This is a form of practical Christianity that ought to be catching. Miss Macpherson had many things to say about the delights and attractions of Canadian life, and we only wish all the able-bodied unemployed of our over-crowded island had been there to hear.

Dr. McKilliam, the chief speaker of the evening, said he had been induced to take up the subject of "The Hope of Israel" by the fact that Gospel work among Jews is being largely developed in connection with the Home of Industry. He read lengthy passages from both Testaments that referred to coming times of glory and blessing for the chosen people. The Doctor believes we are living, so to speak, in the interlappings of the present and the future dispensations. He set forth in clear, if somewhat dogmatic, array his views as to the approaching and near future. In brief his points were these:—In a few years at most, this Gospel age will close, and Christ will come to accomplish the rapture of his elect Church. The Jews will ere then have returned in large numbers to Palestine, and Jerusalem will be reconstructed. An Antichrist will arise, who will draw after him those Jews who are still in unbelief, and then will come the period of great tribulation. When that is accomplished, Christ and his saints will appear at the beginning of the thousand years of peace. Repentant Israel will look on her Lord whom she has pierced, and there will follow the times of refreshing foretold by prophet and apostle. The Jews will be constituted missionaries to the whole earth. This, so far as we could catch it from the detailed address, is Dr. McKilliam's programme, as constructed from his study of the prophetic word. His main point, of course, was the coming place of dignity and power in store for the Jew, and he urged that we should all do our utmost to secure the conversion of Israel now.

Half a dozen young men who leave this week for China as missionaries, in connection with the Inland Mission, testified in a more or less bright and emphatic way as to the circumstances that led them to enter on foreign service, and all united in desiring the intercessory prayers of the stay-at-homes. Mr. Robert Scott, who presided, led in prayer for a blessing on Miss Macpherson's outgoing band, and other friends gave voice to the earnest petitions of the meeting for the China missionaries. Miss Macpherson hopes to return, we believe, early in October.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we hope to give portrait and sketch of the late Mr. James Barlow, of Bolton, the well-known Manchester merchant and Christian philanthropist.

The Sentinel for September states that the Gospel Purity Association has sent letters on the subject of licensed sin in India and other British possessions, to nearly 40,000 ministers of the Gospel in Great Britain, and to about 1500 missionaries in India.

The ingenuity which Society exerts to surround with a glamour of romance the horrible business of wholesale slaughter, is worthy of a better cause. It was a lady—the Marchioness of Londonderry—who last week presented new colours to a military company at Dublin. If it were possible to produce a photograph of the carnage of a battlefield, no lady who saw it would ever touch any part of the trappings of the agents in it.

There need be no difficulty (writes a correspondent) with a Sunday-school, although some teachers have gone for a needed holiday, without providing substitutes. The superintendent has only to change the form of teaching. Instead of classes, let five or six of the teachers present each give a short, bright address, say from six to eight minutes in length. With singing between, it will be found a delightful change. The speakers must be tied to time, and everything should be arranged beforehand. Our correspondent writes from personal experience.

Visitors to the little island of Lindisfarne one Thursday this month must have been rudely startled by the appearance of an army of masquerading picnickers who that day took the place by storm. Laden with knapsacks and luncheon baskets, and bearing shoes and stockings in their hands, a procession of some thousand Popish pilgrims waded barefooted through the sea, with a Papal Zouave and Papal banner-bearers at their head, to celebrate the centenary of one of their saints, and, erecting an altar in the ruined monastery, they sang the Mass. It is sad to learn that several clergymen of the Church of England countenanced these proceedings by their presence, some of them even joining the processions and attending the Mass.

The principle insisted upon by Mrs. Fawcett, at a recent meeting, that "it is the duty of parents to support their children, not of little children to support their parents," is of course broadly true, but it is not capable of universal application; for there are thousands of families in which the young children must of necessity begin bread-winning at a very early age, if the wolf has to be kept from the door. The interference of the State in such cases would simply mean the infliction of poverty upon deserving people. Circumstances would, therefore, seem to point to the regulation rather than the entire suppression of what may perhaps not inaptly be termed child-labour, and an extension of the restriction clauses of the Factory Acts might meet the case, at any rate for the present. There is room for our Christian philanthropists to continue to work, however, in the direction of influencing public opinion, and in disseminating healthy views upon the subject, which is at the same time both a pressing and delicate one.

We think it was the present Bishop of Durham who said some years ago that there was much reason "to forebode that Greek scholarship has reached its height in England, and that henceforth it may be expected to decline." He will certainly take the recent letter of three Head Masters of English public schools as a fresh proof of the accuracy of his statement. They declare that for their part they will not henceforth make a knowledge of Greek a sine quâ non for entrance to their schools. Even if this be not generally adopted, it cannot but tend to make the study of Greek optional, and by reducing the number of students, almost certainly diminish their excellence.

But what does it matter to us as Christian people whether the Bishop of Durham be right or not? This much, that if the study of Greek declines we lose one of the most important means we possess for arriving at the true meaning of the sacred volume. Translations, however Greek their very English may be, can never take the place of detailed examination of the ipsissima verba of the sacred writers. And the power for this can rarely be attained except by long practice and severe training in classical Greek.

"Sir, there is nothing for them to do but to go to the public-house." This was the remark made by the police to a clergyman, who gives in The Churchman some account of Christian work among the hop-pickers of Kent. As they return home they are often obliged to wait at the railway-station, and there is no place from which they can obtain refreshments but the public-house. The result may easily be imagined.

But it is not only the hop-pickers who feel at country railway-stations the need of someone else to go to than the publican. At many stations large numbers of country people leave and arrive; but while near every station may be found an inn, there is very seldom any other place of refreshment. And the weak brethren fall from the company they are obliged to seek. Cannot the friends of the temperance cause do something? Coffee-rooms or coffee-stalls might hardly pay at small stations, but at junctions they would more than pay. Taking one place with another, a company that extended its work to every country station ought not to be too great a risk. At any rate the good that it would do towards the formation of temperate habits among the country folk, is simply incalculable.

There is schism in the camp of the Parisian "realists" — those foul-minded writers who seek to hold the mirror up to the worst characteristics of fallen human nature. The latest production of their leading author is too bad even for his disciples; they declare that he evolves his characters out of his own "diseased inner consciousness," and they protest accordingly. This furnishes a glimmer of hope that the reign of realism may be on the decline. Every decent member of society would right gladly assist at its funeral obsequies, by applying a torch to the whole pile of this "devil's catechism."

A resident at one of our most popular watering-places informs us that an experiment of short "one-hour services" has been made during August at some of the largest local places of worship. These abbreviated services, in the height of the seaside "season," have been crowded to overflow, and thousands of visitors have been among the eager worshippers.

The movement for providing poor little London children with the great boon of a day in the country cannot be too highly commended. At the same time it should not be forgotten that there are others besides children to whom this very happy form of charity would be quite as welcome; and the kind thoughtfulness which prompted the offer, recently accepted by a Metropolitan Board of Guardians, to enable a hundred aged paupers to spend a day in the country, might, with advantage, find imitation. The case of these poor friendless old people, who have failed in the struggle for existence, and for one cause or another are condemned to a miserable and cheerless old age, is so pitiful that it is a real act of Christian charity to care for them in our prosperity, and to try to cast even one ray of sunlight upon the dark and cloudy evening of their lives.

A significant correspondence is being carried on in one of the Ritualistic organs for the purpose of searching out and announcing what holiday resorts offer to their visitors "Catholic privileges," in addition to the ordinary and more material attractions of nature. For the benefit of anyone unaware of the meaning of the term, it may be explained that "Catholic privileges" are only another name for the Popish performances of the High Church ritual. A contemporary sarcastically remarks that "Catholic privileges" are now-a-days as essential to the popularity of a fashionable watering-place or holiday resort, as a good band or a toboggan slide.

Dr. Chamberlain, medical missionary to the Telugus in India, has been able to lift a corner of the curtain which envelops that dark land, and this is what he has discovered. A Brahmin priest came to him secretly by night, and acknowledged that he was convinced in his heart of the truth of Christianity. "But," said he, "we mean to hold on to our highly endowed heathen temples. We Brahmins cannot afford to let you succeed. We have got to fight you." The cry is still re-echoing throughout heathendom, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians." But this admission, and the adoption of this policy of despair, ought to give fresh courage to every worker in the foreign field.

Now that so little is being heard of the recommendation of the Royal Commission on the Housing of the Poor, it is pleasant to find that at least one lady, Miss Octavia Hill, is hard at work in the noble task of improving the condition of the people. Miss Hill has succeeded in proving that the work of benefiting the poor tenant can be made remunerative to the property owner, and in doing this she has made many homes bright and cheerful. The recent gathering at Lambeth Palace grounds, of seven or eight hundred of her poor tenants from Southwark was a testimony to the value of the labours which have been as successful as they have been unostentatious.

We have not always been in agreement with the Charity Organisation Society. A recent step, however, which the Medical Sub-Committee have taken, has our heartiest approval. A circular letter, with regard to poor children who are discharged from hospitals, says:—

> Anyone walking through the wards of one of our hospitals will find his heart wrung by the spectacle of scores of patient little sufferers, whose young lives are prematurely clouded by an affliction, the gravity of which they are mercifully unable to appreciate. Yet here the spectator sees their lives at their best. Let him think what they must be in many cases, when the poor invalids go away from the comfortable cots to squalid and crowded rooms, where a struggle with downright want is being waged, and where the helpless can scarcely fail to be regarded as a burden, and hindrance, and misfortune.

The remedy for this lack of material comfort and alleviating treatment, as the letter points out, is an effectual system of visitation, "so that each poor child should have his or her friend, whose task it would be, in every way that human kindness could devise, to make the little life easier and brighter." We trust that many will find it a pleasant privilege to assist in so noble a work.

Although the Irish Sunday Closing Act does not apply to the four largest cities and the largest town in the sister island, its effect in lessening the consumption of intoxicating liquor, and consequently in reducing statutable offences and crime, has been remarkable. In 1877, the year before Sunday closing came into force, the Irish Drink Bill amounted to over twelve million pounds sterling, but in 1885 it had been reduced to about ten and a half millions; the arrests for drunkenness had fallen from 110,903 to 87,132. Similarly the limitations by two hours of the time during which on Sundays public houses in the four exempted cities, and in Belfast. are allowed to be open, substantially reduced the arrests in those places. Yet there are many professing Christians who object to legislative interference with the drink traffic.

While we do not think that Christian workers ought to look for any exceptionally favourable treatment at the hands of the authorities, neither ought they tamely to submit to the repression of the privileges they enjoy as ordinary citizens. Some of our provincial civic potentates appear to be making a dead set against the preaching of the Gospel in open spaces within their jurisdiction. The Stamford magistrates have gained an unhappy notoriety by sending successive batches of "Salvationists" to prison for preaching in a large square on Sundays, when no possible charge of obstruction could be equitably maintained. We are glad to see that the matter is receiving attention in Parliament, and hope these dispensers of "justice" will be constrained to change their views as to what justice really is.

Similarly, the Margate bench of magistrates have fined several earnest evangelists for delivering the Gospel message on the spacious Parade, where ample room was left for traffic, and no obstruction of any kind was proved. The Eastbourne authorities, also, have refused to permit colporteurs to vend Bibles and good books on the beach; for what imaginable reason we have not been able to learn. The moral of all these discreditable acts is that much greater care should be taken in electing these depositaries of power, so that men may be appointed whose sympathies lie with things that are of good report.

Public attention has been called to another phase of the gaming evil to which we lately alluded. Mr. Justice Manisty the other day at Leeds condemned the wholesale gambling of the Stock Exchange, and remarked upon the inconsistency of putting down betting whilst allowing what was "corrupting a very large portion of the community." Substitute stocks and shares for horses, and where is the difference between betting on the race-course and speculating "on 'Change"? Honest bonâ fide business of course there is, but the proportion is like that of the bread to the sack in Falstaff's bill.

An appeal is being made for funds to complete the Wakefield bishopric. But to make more bishops is to begin at the wrong end. An "overseer" with £5000 or £6000 a year and a "palace," makes little impression upon the masses of our cities and towns; his influence does not percolate so far down. We want an army of earnest self-denying lay-workers and preachers. Moreover, the way in which the Episcopal bench declines to interfere with Ritualistic vagaries, even when it does not openly encourage them, will assuredly not tempt lovers of Protestant truth and simplicity to open their purses.

While much has been done to improve the condition of the children of the poor, much remains to be done. In an article on "Starving Scholars," in the current number of The Sunday Magazine, Mrs. Pennington shows the necessity of educating the fingers as well as the brains of the young. She speaks of "boys on whom teachers were eager to bestow a good recommendation when they left school, as now qualifying in forlorn and miserable idleness, in wretched courts and slums, for becoming the roughs and thieves of the next decade." This arises from their utter incompetence to do any kind of manual labour. The writer of the paper believes that by forming labour classes in connection with our Board Schools, to give the boys a manual training, this evil might be remedied, and these lives shaped to better uses.

Could not the animosities unhappily existing between Irishmen and Englishmen be appeased by the soothing influence of a closer acquaintance? If tourists would repair more frequently to Ireland, it is certain they would enjoy a very pleasant and novel experience. When we consider how many Irish landowners live away from the country, and drain it of its resources without any return, and how prevalent are the poverty and misery of the people, it seems that the expenditure of English money in Ireland would be a just and charitable departure. Apart from this consideration, the beauty of much of the scenery, the originality of the people, and the interest of personally examining the political problem, furnish so strong an attraction that it is strange it has not already proved irresistible.

BLIND PENSION SOCIETY.—This Society celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary by distributing at its fifteenth half-yearly meeting in May last £3467 to 510 blind pensioners. Beginning at £6, the amount of the pension increases as the pensioners grow older. The good thus wrought in ameliorating the lot of the blind, and giving them such help as enables them still to live in their own homes, is unspeakably great. Mr. W. Elliott Terry, 235, Southwark-bridge-road, is the secretary.

HEREFORDSHIRE CONFERENCE.

This Conference, for the deepening of the Christian life, and the promotion of the missionary cause, was held at Leominster on Wednesday and Thursday last week, and the attendance was uniformly good. Among the speakers were Rev. J. Hudson Taylor and Mr. Reginald Radcliffe. The former dwelt on the fulness of blessing provided for the Church. Our circumstances are all intended to be spiritual helps, and everything that touches us should be an inlet of blessing. In speaking of the fulness of this blessing, Mr. Taylor pointed out that we must not be content with a little knowledge of God, and that there will be always more to learn. In order to this we must be engaged in work for Him; unless we are seeking to save, we cannot be companions of the Saviour.

Mr. Radcliffe dwelt on the demands of the world on the Christian Church, and the duty laid on the Church to meet those demands. A review of the history of missions showed how slack the Church has been in fulfilling the Divine command. Even in this century of missionary effort, how little we are doing for the heathen. He greatly feared the spirit to suffer for Christ's sake is not prevalent among us in these ease-loving days. A letter from Mr. Stanley Smith spoke of present success in China as but the precursor of showers of blessing.

TRAM AND 'BUS TEXT MISSION.—The little report of this Mission for spreading the knowledge of the Word of God states that the number of texts displayed to the thousands who travel in tram-cars and omnibuses has been increased to one hundred. An application for texts to be placed in the North London cars has long been awaiting attention through want of funds. All communications should be addressed to Mr. W. Walters, publisher, 53, Paternoster-row, E.C.

ORPHAN HOME FOR LITTLE GIRLS.—There are now twenty-four children in this orphan home at Burgos House, Sydenham-road, North Croydon. Since it was opened, two years ago, thirty-one children have shared its benefits, many of these being in an absolutely destitute condition. The educational examination at the beginning of the year was very satisfactory. It is hoped, as soon as possible, to start an emigration fund in connection with the Home. Miss E. J. Smith, Dalkeith Cottage, Wellesley-road, Croydon, is the hon. secretary.

THE UNIVERSITIES MISSIONS movement appears to be gaining ground, and much may be hoped for from the consecration of gifted and scholarly young men to the Lord's work in foreign lands. Rev. H. Lang, late scholar of St. John's College, Oxford, has volunteered for five years' service in connexion with the Mission to Assyria, and it is stated that Rev. H. C. Ogle, Fellow of Magdalen, Oxford, has now volunteered for the same Mission. Both will shortly start for Kurdistan, where they hope to join Canon Maclean and Rev. W. H. Browne, and the native lay helper, Dr. Hormuzd.

HOPE LODGE, BALLARAT.—Some little while since we referred to this Home for Inebriates, which twelve months ago was started by Rev. W. L. Morton, minister of the Ebenezer Church, Ballarat. Since its inauguration, twelve months since, eighty-four men have been received, of whom a large number, by the kindly aid given to them, have been enabled to throw off their habits of intemperance, and to recover their lost positions in society. The men themselves contributed by their earnings £175 towards their expenses whilst in the Lodge, and in several cases have since sent donations in proof of their gratitude. Mr. Morton's address is Ebenezer Manse, Ballarat.

NURSES AMONG SOLDIERS IN INDIA.—Lady Roberts' thoughtful and practical suggestion on behalf of the lady nurses in the Indian military hospitals deserves warm support. The immense boon which their presence is to our sick soldiers can only be realised by those who ever visited the hospitals before their arrival. The attendance on the sick was of the roughest description, and in many cases where good and careful nursing was indispensable to recovery, many valuable lives were sacrificed through its absence. The only gap in the original scheme was the want of any retreat in the healthier localities for overworked nurses, and this it is now proposed to remedy by the establishment of "homes in the hills" where they may retire and recuperate their strength.

Letters to the Editor.

MISSIONARIES AND LICENSED VICE.

Dear Sir,—The advocates of repeal in England must not be surprised if a few missionaries and Christians in India do not see all at once the importance of this movement. Think how slowly the bench of Bishops in the House of Lords acted in their commanding position. Think how long it took scores of ministers in the United Kingdom to see the question in its true light. Then remember that only a few breezes of your tempest of agitation ever reached India. Remember, too, that missionaries are about the busiest class of men on earth. They are generally, and rightly, too, jealous of what they may, at first glance, deem side issues; so that, when asked to look after a complex question of Government regulations, it is most natural that they should hesitate to undertake the study of such a dark problem.

Is it not possible that missionaries in India are, as a body, more under the influence of Government officials than an equal number of ministers in England? Thrown much together in the stations, more so in the comparative isolation of the smaller stations all over India, it would be quite natural if the missionary should hear the Government side of vice-regulation presented in its most plausible form. When first in India, I lived with a Christian Surgeon-Major. Sometimes he would remark, "I have an awful job to-day." And I learned a little of the strange law. But it was years before I discovered the principles and workings of those Acts. During eight years, 1872-80, I do not remember seeing more than two or three items about the subject. In one station my hall for religious services was next to the Lock Hospital. I was there two years, saw the persons frequently, but did not realise what the licensing meant. Now I see one grand reason why my labours in that vicinity were so comparatively fruitless. It was only when I went to England and read some of Mr. Dyer's books that I learned the real character of those laws.

Those who are awaking to see and feel the enormity of this Government crime, and its powerful bearing upon mission work at large, will be surprised and sad to hear a missionary speak as though only a few natives in a few stations would recognise the connection of Englishmen and the Government with these vice-promoting laws; and intimating that outside of two or three miles from the stations, the natives know nothing of the matter! The mildest expression I can use here is to say that such an impression is exceedingly erroneous. The people of India are clever. They belong to our race—the Indo-Germanic. They use their eyes, ears, tongues, and brains. They travel about much. The railways are moving multitudes daily. The travelling masses will tell all the news—or more! And does not every observant person know that news of this sort will spread more rapidly than any other kind? Remember that such questions are at home in India, and there is more readiness than reticence upon these topics.

It is a terrible fact that multitudes know of the cruel shame of our nation in the immorality of some of its laws and representatives. They must necessarily associate English laws and officers with Christianity. I am confident that a wise and strong agitation in favour of Purity and Repeal is a most essential part of mission work at the present time. Many missionaries are of the same opinion. Recognising the fact that India is behind in the Repeal cause, but that proper agitation will meet with a warm response from this land, let good people in England push the campaign more vigorously than ever.

Above all else let us remember God's solemn indictment, four times stated in four verses, "My holy name ye have profaned among the heathen whither ye went" (Ezek. xxxvi. 19—23).

Bombay, July 25. Wallace J. Gladwin.

JUDICIAL OATHS.

Sir,—There is no doubt in my own mind that all persons who acknowledge Jesus as Lord should obey his very definite injunction, "Swear not at all" (Matt. v. 34). Refer also to James v. 12, "Swear not," &c. Scripture cannot directly contradict itself. By a careful reading of Heb. xiii. 17, the advice to "obey them that have the rule over you, and submit to them; for they watch on behalf of your souls," seems, surely, to relate to eldership, and care, and guidance in spiritual things.

Another ground of objection to be called upon to speak under an oath is that the practice must depreciate the value of one's word, or affirmation; whereas the "yea" at all times should mean yea, and the "nay," nay.—I am, &c.

Bridgwater. F. J. Thompson.

Dear Sir,—A correspondent in your issue of August 12 wishes to be assured as to his Christian duty in regard to giving evidence on oath in a court of justice. Probably many of us are exercised upon that subject at some period of our lives.

To proffer an oath is one thing; to be put upon oath is another. Also to volunteer an oath upon an ordinary matter, and to volunteer it upon a special occasion, are distinguishable. It would seem that the Jews freely interlarded their promises with oaths. They swore by the heavens, the earth, Jerusalem, the head, the Temple, the gold of the Temple, the altar, the gifts upon the altar. These were in connection with voluntary promises; and if they avoided the use of the word Jehovah, they viewed such oaths as of less importance. But an oath is an oath, and the Lord Jesus forbids all oaths in our communications. The R.V. renders communication "speech," i.e., our ordinary expressions. We are to speak truly, and there leave it.

But these were not oaths for the purpose of evidence. If they had been, surely the Lord Jesus, when Himself adjured, would have replied that He had taught his disciples never to swear privately or publicly, and that He could not be put on oath. On the contrary, when the high priest said to Him, "I adjure Thee by the living God that Thou tell us whether Thou be the Christ the Son of God," He accepted the position. I note in passing how much the above adjuration corresponds to the words in use now—"the evidence which you shall give shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth: so help you God."

I will not intrude on your full columns with some remarks on voluntary oaths on very special occasions (as 2 Cor. i. 23), but only add my conclusions on the whole subject, namely (1) there is no moral evil in an oath in itself; (2) it should not be proffered in ordinary speech; (3) if put upon oath by the powers that be, we should accept the position and comply, and by our reverential seriousness spread a sense of God; (4) that voluntary oaths in special exceptional circumstances can be justified when we render our account.

Yours truly,

Wimbledon. J. Van Sommer.

Dear Sir,—A Christian may swear, not only when called upon to do so by the competent legal authority, but whenever his conscience bids him to emphasise that which he wishes to tell his neighbour, to meet his spiritual needs, by a solemn appeal to God.

For this direction the following passages of Scripture are a warrant when rightly considered, not as isolated passages, but as parts of a whole, viz., the New Testament. The Lord Jesus says: "Swear not at all" (Matt. v. 34), and in accordance with this the Apostle James writes in his Epistle v. 12: "Swear not." But against this apparently absolute command not to swear, we have the action of the Lord Jesus and the writings of Paul. We read in Matt. xxvi. 63, 64: "And the high priest said unto Him (viz., Jesus), I adjure Thee by the living God, that Thou tell us whether Thou be the Christ, the Son of God. Jesus saith unto Him, Thou hast said." The form of the high priest's address to the Lord Jesus, and the form of our Lord's answer, are exactly the form of a Jewish oath in a court of law.

Paul writes in terms which leave no doubt that he thought it necessary, in the spiritual interest of the people to whom he addressed his letters, to appeal to God (in other words to swear) in confirmation of his words. "For God is my witness," &c. (Rom. i. 9). "For God is my record," &c.—"record" is in Greek the same word as the above "witness"—(Phil. i. 8). "Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God, I lie not" (Gal. i. 20). "God is witness" (1 Thes. ii. 5). "I call God for a record"—again for "record" the same Greek word as for "witness"—(2 Cor. i. 23).—Yours faithfully, A Bible Student.

Dear Sir,—I am glad to see that the conscience of your correspondent, Mr. Bantin, is troubled about the practice of swearing in courts of justice. Let me refer him to an excellent four-page tract by Mr. F. Sessions, of Gloucester, entitled "Judicial Oaths" (W. Sessions, 15, Low Ousegate, York), in which he will find (1) evidence that Christ prohibited every kind of oath; (2) an historical account of the noble protests against judicial swearing which have been raised by bodies of devout Christians at various periods of the Church's history; (3) extracts from Acts of Parliament, under which any person may now claim to affirm in an English Court of Justice, providing that he entertains a conscientious objection to the taking of an oath.

If Mr. Bantin wishes to see the subject discussed in a more exhaustive and philosophical manner, he should refer to Dymond's "Essays on the Principles of Morality" (S. Harris & Co., Bishopsgate Without, E.C.).—Yours truly, Alfred W. Brown.

Cotswold House, Evesham.

MISSIONS IN INDIA.

Sir,—With some reluctance I accede to the wish expressed in a recent number regarding the Salvation Army in India, compared with ordinary missionary operations. I am in full sympathy with Major Tucker, and should deeply regret writing a word that was depreciative of him or his work.

At the outset, let me point out that you have inadvertently misstated his case: He does not say there is a "chasm" between foreign teachers and the natives, the latter hating the former and the former despising the latter; it is of the "English" he speaks. The civil, military and mercantile communities form the bulk of the English in India; the missionaries are but as a drop in the bucket to them: no doubt our weakest point as a nation is the discourtesy with which we generally treat the natives; but Major Tucker is the last man to place the missionaries in this category. To represent the Salvation Army as antagonistic to, or in competition with the ordinary labourers in the field, is extremely mischievous. The Salvationists, as a pioneer force, rather complete the grand army now seeking to win India for Christ, and there is no reason why all the various divisions should not work in perfect harmony for the advancement of the Master's kingdom. Would the spiritual wants of England be met by the teaching of the Salvation Army alone? What a void would be created if all other spiritual agencies were obliterated. So in India the Salvation Army has its sphere of labour, but we need a great variety of talent and labour; there is a place suitable for all God's servants, every man in his own order. The body has many members, and there is work for all, and no need for schism.

Recently there has been a tendency to elevate one branch of labour at the expense of another. Missionary organisations have been depreciated and attacked, without any attempt to improve them. Major Tucker did not begin where William Carey did. He stands on vantage ground, the result of a century of faithful labour. He joins the fight when the outworks have been carried. Fifty years ago he would have met with a very different reception from that now accorded to him. I have itinerated among the villages when I could not obtain a drop of water to drink. At my first appearance they would rush to the outskirts and form a congregation, and thus prevent my entering, lest I should pollute them; and, whilst listening, they would hold a cloth to their mouths, that my breath might not reach them. Now I can travel without tent, sleep in their huts, eat with them of their own food, and, as far as is needful for the purpose of the Gospel, be as one of them. The messengers of the churches surely may be sustained in any way found convenient. The Apostles' necessities were ministered to once and again. It is not the amount of money supplied to a missionary, but the spirit in which he labours and the use he makes of it. The societies seldom, if ever, inform a missionary, when sending him out, as to how he will be sustained; many go out at their own cost, and give themselves and all they have to Christ.

The people of India have a natural tendency towards asceticism, and this has not been sufficiently borne in mind. But it is connected with tremendous evils. Millions of religious mendicants live by begging, and produce nothing. Christian begging is in great danger of bringing into existence another army of useless loafers. In adapting ourselves to native habits, we must not imitate that which is evil. The religious marks on the foreheads of the Hindus merely exhibit so much self-righteousness, and are in spirit Pharisaical and unchristian. Why should we adopt a practice so objectional that even Hindu reformers have condemned it, and in their popular rhymes held it up to contempt? The Jesuits became European Brahmins and wore the sacred thread. They became so much like the Hindus that the people thought it scarcely worth while to make the little change demanded by Christianity; and their failure is patent to the world by their own confession.

Whilst helping the Salvation Army with our prayers and our gifts, let us not forget that in India they have not yet served out their apprenticeship, they are only putting on the harness. The strength and endurance of their agents have not yet been tested by the fierce hot winds of Northern India. I remember six natives being struck dead in one day by the sun in Agra, and with tatties and punkas in full play, in a good European house, I have dined with the thermometer at 100 degs. In such a climate, when all appliances available for modifying the heat are used, Englishmen can often only just exist; in a native hut most would die.

To send out evangelists, unattached to any society, and leave them to wander about getting all the money they can, or to dabble in land and speculate, and give no account of themselves to anyone, is likely to inflict terrible evils on India. True, the officers of the Salvation Army keep their agents well in hand; but, if they go out by hundreds, as seems likely, many of them new converts, untried, novices in experimental religion, what is to hinder them from throwing off the reins and adding to the number of English loafers, whom Government is obliged to ship to England at a great cost to the country.

I was sorry to see in The Pall Mall Gazette Major Tucker's statement that in India Christianity had failed. True Christianity never failed anywhere, and never can. Indian literature, education, and thought are becoming permeated with Christian truth. You meet proofs of it wherever you go. Tabulated converts are the smallest part of the fruit of Christian labours. Hindu cruelties and impurities hide themselves; the moral atmosphere is revolutionised. Forty years ago I have witnessed in the public streets at midday, scenes of indescribable obscenity that cannot even be whispered. Christianity a failure! It has already wrought miracles, and will yet triumph over every difficulty. We want, for the redemption of India's 300,000,000 of poor priest-ridden, superstitious sons and daughters, men and women of every variety of talent, full of the love of Christ—doctors, educationists, evangelists, preachers, pastors, Zenana ladies, artillery, dragoons and infantry, pioneers and engineers, regular and irregular. We want them to work harmoniously together, in the place for which they are fitted, without depreciating each other; then the Lord will send showers of blessing, and sower and reaper will rejoice together.

JAMES SMITH (late of Delhi).

DEAR SIR,—You truly say that Mr. Tucker's implied charge (for, I think, he hardly makes a direct charge) against all those who have spent their lives labouring for the Lord in India, is a serious one, and should be met. You may, perhaps, have room for the testimony of one who has spent all his best years in that land. True, I had left it before Mr. Tucker's peculiar modes of work were introduced, and in the years which have since slipped by changes have doubtless taken place. I can only speak for those parts of India which I know, namely, the South and West. Sadly, I must testify to the truth of some of his words, "The English despise the native habits, and the natives detest the English." True in the general, but not without exceptions. I have constantly found that the missionary, British, American, or German, and especially when working away from the larger centres of population and of vice, is trusted by the natives, and looked upon as a true friend and adviser, even where the Gospel is not accepted; and I know that it is the prevailing desire of the majority of missionaries that it should be so. I am not a missionary, and therefore feel the more free to give my testimony.

No doubt all our missionary methods are capable of improvement, and especially in the direction of greater simplicity of life, where it is possible. But, if not quite to the same extent, others, long before Mr. Tucker, have sought to come nearer to the level of those among whom they labour.—Yours faithfully, J. G. HALLIDAY.

"THE ROOT OF RITUALISM."

DEAR SIR,—Although I am one of those who have left the ministry of the Church of England for conscience sake, I cannot but, from the standpoint of my signature, protest in all brotherly love against the unfairness of the charges which your correspondent M. J. brings against the evangelical clergy in reference to their mode of administering the Lord's Supper.

He speaks of "a man separated by an altar rail." Is he aware that the word "altar" does not occur in the Prayer Book, and that the evangelical clergy distinctly repudiate the word as applied by the High Church and Ritualistic clergy to the Communion table?

He speaks of the clergyman as being "robed in the white garment of a sacrificing priest." Is he aware that all undergraduates wear such a white robe at the college chapels of their Universities as well as their seniors, and that the surpliced choirs of all cathedrals as well as churches are a standing protest against the unfair assumption that the Church of England regards the surplice as the garment of a sacrificing priest. The unauthorised sacerdotal vestments of Ritualism show that the Ritualists themselves admit this.

As to the minister putting the bread and wine into the hands of the people rather than let them pass them from one to another, no one surely imagines that this is intended to hinder communion (in the sense that M. J. takes the word) as between the communicants themselves.

Some one must take the elements to those who are to partake, and from practical experience I have found that the minister himself doing so tends least to disturb that true communion of spirit with the Lord in prayer, which is at such a time the most important meaning of the word "communion." Looking out for one's neighbours to hand the bread and wine to you, and then having to hand it on to another, tends in my judgment much more to disturb the spirit than does the mode in which a true minister will seek to act, not as a sacrificing priest, but as a servant.

I grant that one very great improvement which might be made is by the communicants remaining in their seats, and the ministers coming to them. This is done in Trinity College, Cambridge (and for aught I know in other colleges), much to the advantage of the communicants.

But my object is not to discuss a subject on which differences of judgment are sure to prevail, but only to point out that however much M. J. may prefer the mode of observing the Lord's Supper which he advocates, it is surely both unfair and contrary to brotherly charity to accuse the evangelical clergy of a sacerdotalism which they repudiate, and which the matters referred to by M. J. in no wise really signify.—Yours very truly,

A MEMBER OF THE COUNCIL OF THE EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE.

UNION IN PRAYER.—Since our last notice of this movement, local honorary secretaries have agreed to receive the names of those who wish to join, at the following places:—2, Kingswood-terrace, Gillingham, Chatham; Whatcombe, Blandford, Dorset (North); 34, Mayfield-terrace, Edinburgh; Manor House, Hastings; St. Luke's Vicarage, Ramsgate, Kent (East); 35, Node-hill, Newport, Isle of Wight; St. Aldate's Rectory, Oxford; 67, Cottage-grove, Southsea, Portsmouth; 2, Kingswood-terraee, Gillingham, Rochester; Holy Trinity Parsonage, Scarborough; Comprigney, Truro; St. Clement's, Winchester; 2, Queen's-terrace, Aberdeen; 19, James-street, Liverpool.

THE PREACHERS' NEED.—The great need of the present day is earnest and deep study of the Word of God; it is said of Blaise Pascal, that no one could incorrectly quote from Scripture without his being able at once to point out the error; how few in the present day have that deep knowledge of the Word, which ought to be a lamp to our feet and a light to our path. So often we hear a sermon which too plainly shows how little (not how long) time has been devoted to searching the Scriptures on the subject of the sermon. What is this but neglecting the sword of the Spirit, and using weapons manufactured by human skill? "Ye do err not understanding the Scriptures," like the Sadducees of old; and, I have sometimes thought, if some preachers could be shut up for one year with no other literature than their Bible it would be an immense gain for themselves and their congregations.—Le Signal.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Mr. William Sampson (Cornish evangelist) is conducting a mission at Saffron Walden.

Mr. J. C. Rainey is now engaged with a Gospel tent at Kingskerswell, and blessing is being experienced in the conversion of souls.

At Invercargill, New Zealand, a hundred conversions are reported as the result of a mission campaign by Mr. and Mrs. Mountain.

Bridgwater.—Very successful meetings have been held here for the last three weeks, in a large tent belonging to the Evangelisation Society. Mr. G. C. Norrish is the evangelist. It has been decided to continue the Mission for a while longer.

Askham, Westmoreland.—A Gospel tent mission has been conducted in this village by Mr. T. Cauker. The meetings grew in attendance and interest and were the general topic of conversation in the village. Several cases of professed conversion took place.

Evangelistic Mission.—During the past few months, tent missions have been held with very encouraging results:—At Banbury and district, Bounton, Wroxton, Barking, Margate, and Bristol, striking and cheering instances of conversion are reported. All communications to be addressed to C. Russell Hurditch, 164, Alexandra-road, St. John's Wood, N.W.

A Month's Mission was closed on Monday, August 15, at Whittle-Le-Woods, Lancashire, which has been conducted by Mr. A. Wolfe, Diocesan Lay Evangelist for Manchester. Abundant blessing has been realised and at the farewell-meeting on Monday night over one hundred men and women stood up to testify of blessing received during the mission; many of them had never been in any place of worship for years. Mr. Wolfe is commencing a month's mission at Ribchester, on August 24, and asks prayer for blessing.

East Grinstead.—Mr. J. Lovell, of the Evangelisation Society, has been holding services in a tent at Forest-row, East Grinstead. They have been greatly appreciated by many who attended, while some of the more careless have been made thoughtful. One gentleman, converted last year at Dane Hill through the instrumentality of similar services, has since built there a mission hall for the continuance of the work. At Plowhatch also there is a permanent building, and Christian work is actively carried on throughout the whole of the district of which this place is the centre.

Westerfield Hall, South Tottenham, N., has, in spite of many difficulties, been secured for Christian enterprise, though the main portion of the purchase money has yet to be raised. The services have been attended by large audiences, who appreciate the free entrance to unallotted seats, and the gratuitous services of the conductors, while the open-air services held twice on each Sunday have afforded opportunity for preaching the Gospel to many thousands in this populous locality. Mr. R. H Eastby, Market Buildings, West Green-road, will be happy to give any information to interested friends, and to receive contributions. J. W.

THE COW CROSS MISSION HOME OF REST.—Having at times one or two spare beds at Ventnor, we shall be pleased to accommodate some other tired Christian workers of the various evangelical denominations needing a fortnight's rest or change of air and scene. Terms according to means. We also desire that our Home of rest may become a little centre of work on this island, and that accredited evangelists may be sent to any place on the Isle of Wight or along the south coast of England, for which no remuneration will be asked beyond travelling expenses. W. CATLIN.

Pelham Villa, Tulse Hill, Ventnor, I.W.

MRS. GRIMKE'S TEXT CARD MISSION.—This Mission is accomplishing much in making known the message of the Gospel throughout the world. A large number of cards have already been published in various languages. A letter was lately received by Mrs. Grimké, in which the writer said he could use cards in Arabic freely if they could be supplied. A Persian card given to a boy was instantly read amidst a group of camel-drivers returning to Kabul. Mr. Hacker, in Mysore, sends particulars of one whose conversion was due to reading one of these cards. From all lands there has come abundant witness of much blessing through these portions of the Word of God. They are artistically got up and look very attractive. Mrs. Grimké's address is Prestwich, Manchester, or they may be obtained of the publisher, Mr. E. Kaufmann, 129, Cheapside, E.C.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Rock has this week an admirable portrait and sketch of Canon Basil Wilberforce.

Canon Trotter, after eighteen years labour as vicar of Alnwick, is about to leave to undertake missionary work in Qu'Appelle Diocese, Canada.

The late Miss Ball, of Islington, has bequeathed £50 each to six curates whose respective incomes are less than £100, and who have four children apiece.

Classes will be held in the Derby chapel of Manchester Cathedral during the winter months for instruction in Christian Evidences, and other subjects.

Rev. R. J. W. Wright, vicar of Selston, Notts., whose death we mentioned last week, was, it is said, only twice absent from his church during the thirty years of his incumbency.

The Christian Leader says:—The efforts of high Anglican ecclesiastics to conciliate the Copts have been unsuccessful. The Coptic patriarch failed to return the visit of the newly-appointed bishop of Jerusalem.

The Bishop of Bedford, who has been staying at Barmouth, held children's services on the sands on Sunday afternoons during his visit. About two hundred were present on each occasion, and the services were much enjoyed.

Bishop Moorhouse, of Manchester, declared the other day:—"Curates have no business to marry when they are young. Churchmen are not called upon to establish a fund for encouraging improvidence." The duty of Churchmen, we suppose, says The Christian Leader, is to give Bishop Moorhouse a stipend equal to the stipends of a hundred curates.

Canon Wiberforce recently delivered an outspoken address on the subject of Foreign Missions. There should be more flexibility, he said, and less rigidity in the Episcopal Church abroad [and at home, too, we should be inclined to add]. If the Church would successfully oppose the advancing tide of sin and evil, it must not base itself upon its pride of pedigree, but rather upon its life and power to-day, in this nineteenth century.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

The Sunday-school at Brumana, Lebanon, opened last month with a hundred and ten scholars, while the old meeting-house is now used for mothers' meetings and a day-school.

At Birmingham, the Severn-street adult scholars are appealing to the magistrates to reduce the number of public-houses, and to enforce existing laws respecting them. They feel the question to be one for working men.

In India three hundred villages have been visited during the year, and the orphanage work is hopeful. "The Lord has given us an open door in Madagascar, as well as in India. He has given us the high privilege of assisting to build up the Malagasy people into a Christian nation."

CONGREGATIONAL.

A committee has been formed to raise a fund in memory of the late lamented Rev. G. M. Murphy; part will be applied to purchase an annuity for his widow, and the remainder to the erection of a memorial building.

The anniversary services of the London Missionary Society, held in Guernsey and Jersey, have been very successful. All the Nonconformist ministers in the town took part in the united communion service held at the close, in Guernsey, and this service was especially solemn and impressive.

Open-air services have been held twice every Sunday by the pastor of Craven Chapel, Regent-street, London, since April 24. On a recent Sunday, Regent-street being repaired, the services were held in the centre of the street, and large crowds were attracted by the excellent singing of the mission band. Rev. R. Balgarnie, late of Scarborough, has undertaken to conduct an eight days' mission at Craven Chapel, commencing October 1

BAPTIST.

Rev. J. Gelson Gregson has accepted the call to succeed Rev. C. A. Davis, at Sion Chapel, Bradford.

Mr. C. H. Spurgeon preached at Foot's Cray last week. Though weak in body, the sermon was marked by his accustomed vigour.

The first Protestant bell rung in the City of Mexico—that of the Baptist Church—was heard on July 3 last. The church, commenced in February, is now finished.

Rev. P. T. Schoburgh, a native pastor of Jamaica, at present in this country, is seeking to raise funds for the erection of three chapels in destitute districts of that country.

The Church at Leominster has held its 257th anniversary. At the public meeting it was stated that for forty-three years the ministrations of Joshua Thomas, the Welsh historian, and many others of equal note, had been enjoyed.

We are requested by Rev. W. T. Moore to say that the Christian Association, whose anniversary we briefly noticed last week, do not adopt or recognise the name of "Campbellite," mentioned in our paragraph, which was culled from a contemporary.

A new building is to be erected in Porchester-road for the Westbourne-park Institute, founded nine years ago, in connection with Dr. Clifford's church. Besides lecture hall, capable of seating over 1000 persons, there will be reading-room, class-rooms, chemical laboratory, gymnasium, and other advantages.

SALVATION ARMY.

Four new corps have been opened in the neighbourhood of Burton.

A slum-post has been opened at Haggerston, which makes the thirteenth now at work.

The War Cry contains a report of an all-night meeting at Exeter, at which a female officer "became entranced;" she was followed by others, and it is asserted that they "began to speak with other tongues."

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. Dr. Wilson, of Free St. Paul's Church, Dundee will complete the fiftieth year of his ministry on September 22.

Dr. Cairns, recalling the fact that John Knox had a hand in drawing up the Anglican prayer-book, recently said he did not think it would have been any worse if he had even a greater share in its composition.

The members of the North Parish Church, Aberdeen, having protested against the selection of thirteen new elders by the Session, without a vote of the congregation being taken, were told the Session might select any person they liked, and the congregation could do nothing except go somewhere else!

Rev. David Macrae, in a lecture at Dundee on "The Press and the Langworthy Case," said that if Mr. Stead had only done as much in the way of slaughtering men on the battlefield as he has done heroically in saving the innocent and delivering the oppressed, he would no doubt have had honours showered upon him at the hands of royalty.

The question, "Why do our young people leave the Church?" is exercising the minds of English Presbyterians. A solution may perhaps be found in the statement of one who says his minister has not been three times at the Sunday-school during five years, and that there is the most chilling indifference about Christian work amongst the young.

METHODIST.

The annual camp-meeting at Littleborough has this year been a great success.

The Methodists at Framwellgate Moor, near Durham, have united in holding protracted camp-meetings and open-air services with excellent spiritual results.

At the quarterly meeting of London First Circuit of the New Connexion, it was resolved to hold a convention of workers, and prepare for an energetic winter campaign.

A special meeting to consider the state of the work of God in the district has been held by the Sunderland and Newcastle District Committee of the Primitive Methodist Church.

The Methodist Evangelist has this month a portrait of the President of the New Connexion Conference (Rev. J. K. Jackson), together with an appreciative sketch of his useful life.

Recently at Sheffield the Primitive Methodists held a circuit united camp meeting. Short Gospel addresses were delivered by several ministers, and many received special blessing.

The Methodist tent services in Springfield, near Enniskillen, under the superintendence of Rev. John S. M'Dade, general missionary, were largely attended and most successful.

The report of the Missionary Society of the New Connexion is very satisfactory. Home missions generally give great encouragement. The reports from all departments in China are cheering.

Mission services, commenced in May last, in a shoemaker's shop at Partridge Green, in the Horsham Circuit, have resulted in the erection of a chapel. At the opening service recently three hundred persons were present.

Rev. George Warner, who has for twelve years been an evangelist of the Primitive Methodist Church, and Revs. W. Woollas and G. Clements, sailed last week for Melbourne. Mr. Warner expects to spend a year amongst the Australian churches.

The Christian World, in an article on "Is Wesleyanism Wasting?" prompted by one on "The Decadence of Dissent" in The Saturday Review, shows from the "Tabulated Returns of Village Methodism," that, notwithstanding many disadvantages, there has been an increase in village membership in almost all parts of the country.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes conducted an evening open-air service in the village of Corton, near Lowestoft. The audience numbered several Members of Parliament, amongst these being Professor Stuart, who read the two Scripture lessons. Mr. Hughes followed with a powerful address from Gal. vi. 7, 8: "Be not deceived, God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

A writer in The Belfast Witness says:—"The meetings at Fenaghy have in inaugurated a new era in aggressive church work in Ulster."

The annual Christian Convention in Dublin is to be held this year from September 26 to 29, and will be addressed by well-known speakers. The afternoon of each day is to be devoted to the consideration of "Foreign Missions," "How to Reach the Masses," and "Circulation of the Scriptures in Foreign Parts," &c.

The annual meetings of the ten districts into which Ireland is divided for Methodist purposes were held last week, and at each of these an earnest conversation took place as to the best methods of promoting a revival of the work of God in the land. The Belfast meeting decided on holding a convention in Belfast, for the purpose of waiting upon God for the deepening of the spiritual life, and with the object of considering the question generally.

"FALLEN ON SLEEP."

Rev. Arthur Newcombe, of Granborough Vicarage, Winslow, Bucks.—Mrs. W. W. Howland, the oldest missionary in the active service of the American Board. —Mr. J. B. Mardin, one of the most active workers in the Congregational church at Wellingborough.—Rev. H. Clere, Vicar of Twickenham.—Rev. G. Hand, formerly Vice-Provost of King's, Cambridge.—Rev. A. F. Forde, Vicar of St. Peter's, Eltham.—Rev. C. B. Wollaston, hon. Canon of Chichester.—Rev. H. H. Rose, one of the oldest clergymen resident in Birmingham.—Mr. James Barlow, a prominent member of the Wesleyan Connexion at Bolton, and President of the British Temperance League.—Rev. William Winterburn.—Rev. W. Hammond, of Beccles, a Methodist minister for more than forty years.—Mr. William Rains, an evangelist and temperance advocate, well known in the East-end of London.—Mrs. Cross, wife of Rev. Thomas Cross, Methodist minister.—Rev. John Mahantappa, of the London Missionary Society, Belgaum.—Mr. John Brown, for nearly thirty years treasurer of Carluke Church.—Mr. Alexander Potts, one of the founders of the church at Kirkud, and one of its first deacons.—Rev. L. C. J. Daniel, formerly Vicar of Hofe, Derbyshire.—Rev. E. L. Barnwell, of Milksham.—Rev. Henry Gordon Merriman, D.D., Rector of East Woodhay, near Newbury.—Miss Wear, a prominent member of the Wesleyan body at Kettlewell.—Mr. Thomas Murrell, for some years leader among the Methodists in South Shields Circuit. —Mr. W. Peirson, an active member of the Methodist church in the Petersfield Circuit.—Mr. William Chaddock, of Burslem, where, as well as in Congleton Circuit, he was an earnest friend of the Methodist church. —Rev. George Austin, for upwards of forty years a Primitive Methodist minister.—Mr. John Hargest, of Llanfitangel-Talyllyn, a man of sterling integrity, and deacon of the Calvinistic Methodist Church for more than fifty years.—Professor Goldschmidt, the celebrated Danish scholar.—Rev. George Bryan Walker, LL.D., Rector of Landbeach, Cambridge. — Mr. Richard Jefferies, a well-known author of books on rural life.—Rev. John Cardeaux, Rector of Hooton-Roberts, Rotherham.—Rev. Hyla Holden Rose, one of the oldest clergymen in Birmingham.—Professor Spencer F. Baird, of New York, head of the Smithsonian Institute.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

The Habitual Drunkards Act expires in 1889. A Bill before Parliament proposes its permanent re-enactment.

Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt writes that all the American missions in Burmah have incorporated total abstinence in their work.

The Honolulu Friend attributes the peaceful character of the recent revolution in Hawaii largely to the influence of the Blue Ribbon League.

Mrs. Margaret E. Parker, who is now in California, has abandoned her proposed visit to the Sandwich Islands, because of the political troubles there.

At the Great Assembly Hall, Mile-End, on Sunday last, Mr. R. T. Booth began a sixteen days' crusade against intemperance. Five thousand persons were present, and a number of pledges were taken.

The superintendent of the Schuylkill Division of the Reading Railroad has positively forbidden the use of liquor by employés, whether on or off duty, and has directed the immediate dismissal of any man who is reported as having been seen drinking a single glass of spirits or beer.

Rev. G. Mackenzie Cobban, writing to The Christian World, says the statements that the Hindus are a nation of teetotallers is a pure fallacy. The literature of India proves that the earliest Brahmin settlers were spirit-drinkers. Mohammedans also, he says, have been accustomed to drink intoxicating liquors, in spite of the Koran.

Appeals.

Florida, U.S.A—The Bishop of Florida appeals to those who have friends in that country for aid to build a church at Leesburg, Sumter County; £90 are needed. There is no church for the population of 10,000. Remittances to Mr. G. H. Waring, Senior Warden, Leesburg; or to the publishers of this paper.

Tramps' Mission.—Aid is sought in carrying on a mission to tramps, recently started at Langloan, Coatbridge. A breakfast is given every Sunday morning to all the tramps in the town, the Gospel being preached to them afterwards. Contributions to Mr. J. H. Bowie, Union Bank, Coatbridge.

Mission to Platelayers on Midland Railway.—I have now a number of men waiting to be supplied with monthly packets of Gospel papers and tracts, and should be thankful if some of the Lord's people would help in thus sowing the seed by sending packets to our railway-men. Miss Murray MacGregor, 17, Castle-hill-avenue, Folkestone.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on the work at Tanner's Lane Mission, Ipswich.——For blessing on Gospel services by Rev. W. Thomas, of Cinderford, and Mr. Opie Rodway, of Stroud, in the Forest of Dean, Gloucestershire——For blessing on Gospel services on the beach, at Penarth, South Wales.

Notes on Daily Readings.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 28.—ISAIAH III.

This chapter gives a sad picture of the downward progress of the nation in sin and folly.

4.—I will give children to be their princes.—"Ahaz came to the throne at twenty, Manasseh at twelve, and the reigns of Amon, Jehoahaz, and Jeconiah ended at the ages of twenty-four, twenty-three, and eighteen years. The want of all wisdom in the rulers would cause a rank growth of lawlessness and oppression."—Birks.

16. — Because the daughters of Zion are haughty.—"The women of Judah next receive a message of severe rebuke. Their luxury, pride, and wantonness would have a large share in hastening the national ruin. The inventions and devices of fashion, whether in modern Paris or in ancient Jerusalem, however trivial or transitory, are all noted in God's book of remembrance, and have moral results for good or evil that endure for ever."—Birks.

18.—The bravery of their tinkling ornaments.—"The multiplied external decoration, being the expression of inward pride and impurity, only made their deformity in God's sight the greater, only made them less like the holy women of old time, 'whose adorning was the hidden man of the heart' (1 Pet. iii. 3)."—S.C.

26.—Her gates shall lament and mourn.—"The sudden transition from the daughters of Zion to Zion herself" points to "an allegory aimed at the Levitical Church as a whole. What were the priestly dresses and the fair beauty of the Temple now but the meretricious ornaments of the apostate city (i. 21)."—Kay. How applicable now to apostate Christendom!

MONDAY, AUGUST 29.—ISAIAH IV.

1.—And in that day seven women shall take hold.—"The division of the chapters is a wrong one here, as this verse is the closing verse of the prophecy against the women."—Delitzsch. "This last stroke completes the picture of desolation. The fire will have consumed the youth of the land, and the maidens will no more be sought in marriage."—Birks.

2.—In that day shall the branch of the Lord.—A title of the Messiah, and, as such, referred to Him in Zech. iii. 8, vi. 12. "The words 'glory' and 'beauty' are those which are used in Exod. xxviii. 2, 40, of the priestly robes. His holiness would be the reality, of which the 'holy attire' was but a figure."—S.C. The expression, "fruit of the earth" is best explained by John xii. 24.

3.—He that is left in Zion...shall be called holy.—"The word 'holy' denotes that which is withdrawn from the world, or separated from it. The church of the saints, or holy ones, is that which has been left from the smelting, and their holiness is the result of washing."—Delitzsch.

4.—When the Lord shall have washed away.—Two distinct actions are spoken of—a washing away of filth, and a purification for bloodshed in the midst of Jerusalem. The one was accomplished by the death of Christ (Zech. xiii. 1), the other by the destruction of Jerusalem. Josephus says, of the flames which he saw approaching the temple, "It is God Himself who, siding with the Romans, is bringing on it fire of purification, and is sweeping away a city laden with such pollutions."—Jewish War, vi. 2.

5.—Upon all the glory shall be a defence.—"Over all the glory shall be spread a canopy" (R.V.) The word for canopy "is the name still given by the Jews to the wedding canopy, i.e., a canopy supported on four poles under which the bride and bridegroom receive the nuptial blessing. Such a canopy would float above Mount Zion in the form of a cloud of smoke and blaze of fire."—Delitzsch. The word is the more appropriate if this cloud over Jerusalem be the dwelling-place of Christ and his Church.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 30.—ISAIAH V.

The parable of the vineyard (1—7) is followed by six denunciations of woe against the covetous (8—10), the "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God" (11, 12), the openly ungodly and profane (18, 19), the reversers of God's moral code (20), the self-satisfied as to their own wisdom (21), those who, inflamed by strong drink, were judicially unjust (22, 23). This is followed by a solemn warning of the certainty of approaching judgment (24, 25), and an intimation of the nature of that judgment, the invasion of the land by foreign nations (26—30) with the prospect of increasing darkness as the storm-cloud settled down upon the guilty land.

4.—I looked that it should bring forth grapes.—"The owner of the vineyard looked for grapes, as the Lord at Nazareth 'Marvelled at their unbelief.'"—Birks.

19.—That say, Let him make speed and hasten his work.—An unbelieving taunt like that of the scoffers at the cross—"Let Him come down from the cross."

29.—Their roaring shall be like a lion.—A connection may be traced between this description of the invasion of the nations and Daniel's vision of the four great empires which were successively to subjugate and keep the Jews in captivity. The first of these—the Babylonian—is shown under the figure of a lion (Dan. vii. 4).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 31.—ISAIAH VI.

1.—In the year that King Uzziah died.—"The national glory of Israel died out with King Uzziah, and has never revived to this day. It was in this year that Israel as a people was given up to hardness of heart, and as a kingdom and country to devastation by the imperial power of the world."—Delitzsch. "This answers very nearly to the usual Varronian date for the founding of Rome. The times of the Gentiles and the predicted judgment on Israel run side by side."—Birks. His train filled the Temple.—"It is the word used in Exod. xxviii. 33, 34 of the flowing borders of Aaron's ephod-robe. The appearance then is as a 'priest upon his throne' (Zech. vi. 13)."—S.C. The sin for which Uzziah was smitten, who died this very year, was for attempting to unite in his own person the priestly and kingly office, which the Lord here shows can alone be united in Himself. We learn from John xii. 41 that Isaiah here beheld the glory of Christ.

5.—Woe is me! for I am a man of unclean lips.—The one to be used in God's service must first be made conscious of his uncleanness in God's sight, and that with reference to the very organ about to be specially used. So Peter when called to be a fisher of men (Luke v. 8) is brought to say, "I am a sinful man, O Lord."

6.—A live coal from off the altar.—The fire, which had on the altar consumed the sacrifice, typified God's justice satisfied by Christ's propitiation. Hence it could be said, "Thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged."

9.—Go, and tell this people.—Not "My people," for they had corrupted themselves. See Exod. xxxii. 9, as a parallel case.

13.—In it shall be a tenth.—"In the lowest state of the Jewish people there would be 'a remnant according to the election of grace.'"—Birks.—Shall return—to God (x. 21).

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 1.—ISAIAH VII.

1.—And it came to pass in the days of Ahaz, &c.—"This passage (with viii. 1—4) is the historical pedestal of the great prophecy of Immanuel, as chaps. xxxvi.—xxxix. is in like manner for the later visions. God's predictions of the future are always fast rooted in the soil of present history."—Birks.

8.—Within sixty-five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people.—This refers to an event which occurred just sixty-five years afterwards: "The carrying away of the last remnant of the Ephraimitish population, and the planting in their place of colonies from Eastern Asia by Esarhaddon (2 Kings xvii. 24; Ezra iv. 2)."—Delitzsch.

12.—I will not ask, neither will I tempt the Lord.—"A better and easier bargain he thought could be struck with the Assyrian; how insatiable soever they might be they did not ask the heart. How many nowadays rather perish in sin and misery than be converted."—Hengstenberg.

14.—The Lord Himself shall give you a sign.—"You" is plural, showing that not Ahaz, but the house of David, is here addressed. The unbelief of Ahaz postpones the sign for 740 years, and then it was given in Messiah's birth.

15.—Butter and honey shall He eat.—"'Butter' is better rendered 'cream.'"—Hengstenberg. "The Divine Child should be a true human infant, fed with the produce of the land which 'flowed with milk and honey.'"—Kay. The early Christian writers regarded this as an announcement of the true humanity of Christ, as the last verse announced his Divinity. This view has some support in Luke xxiv. 42, where our Lord eats to give proof of his humanity. The words that He may know are better rendered in R.V. "when He knoweth." "Jesus 'refused the evil,' even when it was offered to Him in the form of universal empire (Matt. iv. 8). He 'chose the good,' even when it was surrounded with the horrors of the hour of darkness."—Kay.

16.—The land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings.—Ahaz might well be said to "abhor" the land into which he was introducing the Assyrian, that germ of all its future misery. The point of time referred to in "shall be forsaken of both her kings" is the death of Herod, and of his son Antipater, who reigned conjointly with him (Josephus, Ant. xvii.1.1), and was killed five days before Herod died (Ibid. xvii. 8, 1). See Matt. ii. 20:—"They are dead which sought the young child's life." Thus was Gen. xlix. 10 re-affirmed. No king of the Jews reigned after Herod; his sons were but tetrarchs.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 2.—ISAIAH VIII.

3.—Call his name Maher-shalal-hash-baz.—The name means "Spoil speedeth, prey hasteth" (so R.V. marg.). "This is plainly a sequel to the former message. The promise of Immanuel was a pledge of God's unchanging mercy to the house of David. This birth of Isaiah's son and his name were a pledge of the speedy fall of Pekah and Rezin by the Assyrian."—Birks.

6.—The waters of Shiloah that go softly.—The name "Shiloah" means "sent" (see John ix. 7), typical of Christ and his salvation.

13.—Sanctify the Lord of Hosts Himself.—The word "Immanuel" in ver. 10 (translated "God is with us") identifies the coming Saviour with the Lord of Hosts. This verse therefore is freely quoted in 1 Pet. iii. 15, "Sanctify in your hearts Christ as Lord" (R.V., best-attested reading).

14.—He shall be for a sanctuary; but for a stone of stumbling, &c.—For a "sanctuary" to those who take refuge in Him, i.e., to those who believe. For a "stone of stumbling" to those that "being disobedient," or refusing to believe, are in consequence appointed to stumble. This seems to be the meaning of 1 Pet. ii. 8.

15.—Behold, I and the children whom the Lord hath given me are for signs.—Isaiah and his two sons were by their very names, typical of Christ and his heavenly and his earthly people. Hence Heb. ii. 13 quotes these words in this sense.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 4.—ISAIAH IX.

1.—Beyond Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles.—"The same region, the borders of the Sea of Galilee, where the sorrow of captivity had begun, was to witness the first dawn of the joyful change (Matt. iv. 14—16)."—Birks.

2.—Have seen a great light.—The light of God's salvation proclaimed by Him who is the light of the world.

3.—Not increased the joy.—Another reading in the Hebrew is to be preferred, "Thou hast increased their joy." So R.V.

5.—For all the armour of the armed man . . . shall even be for burning.—This (the reading of R.V.) is much to be preferred. See Luke xi. 21.

6.—For unto us a child is born, &c.—This glorious prophecy not only sets forth Christ's person and offices, but does so in a sort of chronological order: (1) "Unto us a child is born"—The Incarnation. (2) "Unto us a son is given"—The Resurrection, in which he was "declared to be the Son of God with power" (Rom. i. 4). (3) "And the government shall be upon his shoulder"—The Ascension, when all power was given unto Him in heaven and earth. (4) "And his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor" (so LXX.)—The day of Pentecost, when He sent forth the "Spirit of Counsel." (5) "The mighty God"—the second Advent. See Ps. l. 3; Is. xxv. 9; Titus ii. 13 (see R.V.). (6) "The everlasting Father," or the Father of the coming age, as the LXX. (Alex.) has it, as Adam is the father of this age. (7) "The Prince of peace"—The Millennium succeeded by the New Heavens and New Earth.

The Book World.

STORIES ABOUT THE EARLY CHRISTIANS. By ANNIE FRANCES PERRAM. 1s. T. Woolmer. Just the sort of book to put into the hands of young people to counteract the influence of the trashy fiction of the day, and to fill their hearts with some of the beauty and nobility of the lives so lucidly sketched. Mr. Woolmer issues from his press much good and useful literature. Could not he publish a series on the lines and in the spirit of the work under notice?

OUR LOVEFEAST: Testimonies to Christ's full Salvation. Edited by JOHN BRASH. 1s. T. Woolmer. This little book contains some really good papers on holiness, as viewed by those who seek to know and to do the entire will of God in "the rest of faith." We commend the sensible, practical, and Scripturally spiritual set of papers before us, feeling sure that those who read them thoughtfully and prayerfully will be the better for the happy, healthy experiences set forth in these well-printed pages.

GOD AND NATURE. By Rev. N. CURNOCK. 1s. T. Woolmer. A precious little volume of refreshing truth, in beautiful language. "It aims to be an aid to the devout reading of Nature and of select Biblical Nature studies," says the author, and this it certainly is. It is a book to carry in the coat pocket during the holidays, to be read on the hill-top, or by the waves of the seashore.

A CONSECRATED LIFE. Memoir of Bishop Titcomb, D.D., with an introduction by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Rochester. By Rev. ALLEN T. EDWARDS. 2s. 6d. R. Banks, Racquet-Court. Those who did not know the subject of this impartial and unpretentious little memoir, should get the book, that they may learn something of the beauty and the power of his truly consecrated life. The writer, who knew Dr. Titcomb, can say that the pen and ink sketch of his life, and his protographic presentment here given, are eminently true to nature—a nature not only lovable, gentle, amiable and meek, but eminently Christian, wise and practical.

ONLY A CURATE; or, Experiences and Reminiscences of Clerical Life. By E. G. EGOMET. 6s. T. Fisher Unwin. Under the form of a story many abuses in the discipline and management of the Church of England are exposed, and improvements suggested. The writer's experience seems to have been singularly unhappy. In comparing the Church of England with colonial churches, and even with Dissent, he gives all praise tothe latter, and showers on the former contemptuous adjectives ad libitum. If the author be an adherent of the Established Church, which we rather doubt, he must be an aged man, for he describes officials, churches, and parishes as they were forty or fifty years ago.

THE INTERCESSORY PRAYER OF CHRIST. By Rev. JOS. G. RAINSFORD. 1d. Partridge & Co. A very helpful exposition of John xvii., given first in the form of an address to young men, and now published as a booklet.

DREAD OF SOMETHING AFTER DEATH. 1d. Nisbet & Co. This booklet, containing accounts of miserable death-bed scenes, reprinted from "Man's Departure and the Invisible World," will be found very useful for distribution amongst sceptics and others.

THE FIRST STEP INTO THE BLESSED LIFE. By Rev. F. B. MEYER. ½d. Partridge & Co. This step is contained in the one word Consecration, and the author shows very simply, and in a way that will commend itself to the youngest disciple, what true consecration is.

THE ESTRANGEMENT OF JOHN HARRIS AND ITS RESULT. 2d. Houlston & Sons. In this little book we have the story, simply told, of how one who had entertained infidel notions was led by the providence of God working through afflictions, to see and repent of his folly, and to trust in Jesus Christ as his Saviour.

WORLDLINESS. By Rev. J. E. SAMPSON. 1d. Partridge. "Be not conformed to the world" is the text from which the author proceeds to show the evils resulting from the entertainments and amusements by which some teachers seek to attract the world, and the inroads of worldliness upon Christian worship and work.

"MY JEWELS." By SARAH SHARP. 2s. 6d. Robert Banks. The jewels are those of the High Priest's breastplate—one for each month—and the object of the texts chosen is to bring before the reader our Lord as the Eternal High Priest. If fanciful, the arrangement of texts is very good, and may suggest a helpful thought each day as they are read in order.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Mr. J. Kensit, 18, Paternoster-row:—Rinalpho's Dream, by William Marshall.

Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.:—Household Prayers for four weeks, with additional prayers for special occasions, by the late Rev. J. E. Riddle, M.A. New Edition. 3s. 6d.

PAMPHLETS RECEIVED.

Mr. J. Hagyard, 31, St. Nicholas-street, Scarborough:—A Pastor's Farewell at Scarborough, on closing thirty-six years of work in that town, July 31, 1887, by Rev. Robert Balgarnie. 4d.—Mr. Edwin Potter, Market End, Coggeshall:—"Spiritual Power," an address at the annual meeting of the Essex Congregational Union, by Rev. Walter Legerton. 2d.—Messrs. Nisbet & Co., 21, Berners-street, W.:—Old Paths: No. 2—Justification, by Rev. J. Rate, M.A.

Notices.

COMMUNICATIONS RECEIVED WITH THANKS. — F.A.F. W.S. F.L. W.F. T.R.G. M.B. A.M. M.D. P.B. W.C.B. S.R. C.F. S.P. J.W. H.F. W.C. A.M.S. T.H. J.S.T. F.J.T. A.B.M. J.P.H. T.T.W. H.G.D. R.M.B. S.S. R.C. A.W. H.V. C.R.H. W.H. M.G.M.M. M.B.W. W.R. J.K. W.M. H.E.B. W.T.M. J.W. T.E. C.H. J.C.A. W.H.S. R.C. J.C.R. A.L.W. J.B. E.J.S. J.J.S. L.D. R.B. J.E. N.H. W.S.W. R.D. M.M.B. J.G. G.T. G.D.W. C.W.P. O.P. C.O.B. Fides, J.S. G.C.M.D. J.W. C.H.J. G.M. W.H.T. W.F.B. T.R. G.L. P.P. T.S. J.W.L. C.B. J.O.J. J.S. G.C. R.C.B. J.O.J. W.H.R.

APPLICANTS FOR TRACTS.—W. Jones, Claydon Camp, near Winslow, Bucks; M. Lait, The Lyons, Rowington, Warwick; Mrs. Garrard, 1, Plevna-terrace, Savile Town, Dewsbury, Yorks; P. H. Smith, Pitt Farm, Uffculme, Devon; Mr. Bates, 2, Albion-villas, Harringay-road, Tottenham, N.; C. Medlicott, 4, Albert-terrace, Harringay-road, Tottenham, N.; D. Whitehead, Eastbrook, near Cardiff; Mrs. Moss, 4, Ivy-terrace, Baddow-road, Chelmsford, Essex; G. Fuller, 1, Follett-street, Poplar, E.; A. C. Trew, 8, South-terrace, Burnham, Somerset; J. Rennie, colporteur, Hitchin, Herts; Mr. Bowman, evangelist, Selby, Yorkshire; H. Ellis, 174, High-street, Poplar, E.; Mrs. Phillipson, Christian Mission, Cook's-row, Scarborough, Yorkshire; Mrs. E. Stevens, 84, Russell-street, Mile Town, Sheerness; Miss Walker, 6, Stafford-place, Grove-road, Stamford-hill, London; Rev. E. J. Walkom, Wesleyan Mission, Belize, British Honduras, Central America; G. Munslow, Ghosty-hill, Halesowen; Miss Lewis, 30, Waterloo-road, Runcorn, Cheshire; Miss Andrew, 22, Yardley-street, Sheffield; J. S. Faulkner, 2, Ferdinand-street, Chalk Farm, N.W.

[As it is found that infidels and others send tracts to the persons whose names are inserted here, it is most important that all books and papers received should be carefully read before being given away.]

Forthcoming Meetings.

THE EVANGELISATION SOCIETY will send evangelists to any part of England, Scotland, and Wales on due notice. Hon. Sec., 21, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.

THE IRISH EVANGELISATION SOCIETY will send evangelists to any part of Ireland on due notice. Apply to Mr. J. Barton, Hon. Sec., Dundalk, Ireland.

THE CHURCH ARMY will send evangelists (working-men) to any clergyman on due notice, for short or long missions. Hon. Sec., 128 and 130, Edgware-road, W.

THE METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE EVANGELISTS' ASSOCIATION will send lay preachers and evangelists to any chapel or hall of any evangelical denomination in London. Hon. Sec., 121, Camberwell New-road, S.E.

Y.M.C.A., NEW METAL EXCHANGE, Whittington-avenue, E.C.—Gospel services at Bermondsey, Sundays, 7 p.m., and Thursdays, 8 p.m. Mission work at Whitechapel, Limehouse, Bermondsey, Canning Town, &c.

CONFERENCE HALL AND Y.M.C.A., Stratford, E.—Sunday, August 28, 3 and 7 p.m., Mr. William Grove. Meetings for prayer, Sundays, 7.45 a.m.; Mondays, 8.30 p.m.; Fridays, midday, and Saturdays, 7.30 p.m.

CONFERENCE HALL, Mildmay-park, N.—Sunday, August 28, 3.30 and 7, Mr. Ned Wright.

COMING CONFERENCES.—Y.M.C.A. DUNDEE, September 6—9. PERTH, September 13—15. WAKEFIELD, September 20—22. DUNDEE (Kinnaird Hall), September 20—22. SALISBURY, September 27—30. CLIFTON, BRISTOL (Victoria Rooms), October 4—6. LEAMINGTON, October 18—20.

STRANGERS' REST, 163, St. George's-street, Ratcliff-highway, E. — Monthly workers' meeting, Friday, September 2; tea at 6, meeting at 7. Address by Mr. Henry Varley: "The Irrationality of Unbelief." A party of ladies leaving for China will be present.

EDINBURGH CASTLE, Limehouse, E.—Sunday, Aug. 28, 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., Mr. H. Grattan Guinness; 3 p.m., Rev. Henry Bright.

"CHRISTIAN LIFE-BOAT CREW."—Monthly workers' meeting, Tuesday, September 6, 7 p.m., Sailors' Welcome Home, 173, St. George's-street, Ratcliff-highway. Dr. McKilliam will give a short address.

GREAT ASSEMBLY HALL, Mile-end-road, E.—Sunday, August 28, 11 a.m., 6.30 p.m., and week nights at 8, Mr. R. T. Booth.

MILDMAY MISSION TO JEWS.—Monthly Prayer-meeting for Jews, gentlemen's waiting-room, Conference Hall, Mildmay, Friday, August 26, 7 p.m.

THE MEETINGS at 3, Highbury-place, will be resumed on Tuesday, September 6, 6.30 p.m.

Y.M.C.A., FINSBURY PARK HALL, SEVEN SISTERS'-ROAD, N.—Missionary valedictory service, Sunday, Aug. 28, 7 p.m. Addresses by Rev. C. G. Moore, Mr. Arthur Eason, and several ladies about to go to China. Mr. Henry Holme will preside.

ZENANA MEDICAL COLLEGE.—The usual Saturday Bible-reading and Prayer-meeting is suspended during the vacation. It will be resumed on September 24.

FORTHCOMING CONFERENCES.

SUBJECTS OF CONFERENCE.

WAKEFIELD, September 20, 21, 22.

Subjects: Peace and Position, Surrender and Sanctification, Conflict and Conquest, Unction and Usefulness. Closing day—Evangelisation of the World. Mission subjects: Railway Mission, Bible Carriage Work, Church Army, North Africa, China Inland Mission.

DUNDEE, September 20, 21, 22.

Subject: The Man of God completely furnished by the Word—(1) for the New Life, (2) for Holiness, (3) for Service.

CLIFTON, October 4, 5, 6.

Subject: The Pastoral Offices of Christ. Addresses on (1) "Christ the Good Shepherd" in His Vicarious Death (John x. 11); (2) "Christ, that Great Shepherd of the Sheep," in His Triumphant Resurrection (Heb. xiii. 20); (3) "Christ the Chief Shepherd," at His Second Appearing (1 Pet. v. 4).

Subscriptions Received by Messrs. Morgan & Scott to Monday, August 22, 1887.

 We would respectfully urge all our friends, when remitting to us, to make Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders payable to Morgan & Scott, and to cross them "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss of same.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders, not by stamps.

	£	s.	d.
Day in the Country Fund—L.R.S. 4s.; Anon. 3s.; W.H.B. 5s.; Mr. W. 17s. 6d.; Exmouth, 5s.; T.C.G. £1; Mathetes, £1; T.E.M. 10s.; G.F.P. 5s.; J.M.M. 2s. 6d.; Katie and Alan, 2s.; M.B. 1s.; W.A.B.J. 3s. 6d.; Misses P. 10s.; Liskeard, 1s. 6d.; Band of Hope, 10s.; S.B. 2s. 6d.	6	2	6
Dr. Barnardo's Homes—D.J. 5s.; S.M.P. 10s.; E.P. 2s. 6d.; S.B. 5s.	1	2	6
Children's Home (Dr. Stephenson)—Mrs. H. & F.D.	0	10	0
E. L. Training Institute (Rev. H. G. Guinness)—Jewels	1	0	0
China Inland Mission—Jewels, £1; Ray, 2s.; M.W. £7	8	2	0
Suppression of Opium Traffic with China (Travelling Agent)—C.G. 5s.; E.V. £1; S.H. 5s.; C.E.N. £1	2	10	0
Children's Special Service Mission (Foreign Branch)—Ray	1	0	0
Richard Weaver—T.S. £10; M.S. £10; H. & S. £5; G.W. £2 2s.	27	2	0
British and Foreign Bible Society—M.W.	7	0	0
London City Mission—C.G.L. £2; M.W. £7	9	0	0
Salvation Army (Rescue Work)—Of Thine Own, £1 5s.; (Cellar and Gutter Work) Of Thine Own, £1 5s.	2	10	0
Mildmay Mission to Jews—Of Thine Own	0	10	0
Theatrical Mission—Liskeard	0	2	6
George-yard Ragged School—C.G.L.	1	0	0
Mr. Faithfull's Work (Seamen's Rest)—J.E. junr.	1	0	0
Freedman's Mission Aid Society—C.G.	1	0	0
Miss de Broen's Work, Paris—G.C.G.	5	0	0
Famine in Central Turkey—Island, £1; A. 2s. 6d.	1	2	6
Mr. Fegan's Boys' Home—X.Y.Z. £1; J.M.M. 2s. 6d.; E.B.B. 10s.; M.M. 2s. 6d.	1	15	0
Hyde-park Mission-hall—J.J.K.	3	3	0
Bitter Cry, Outcast London—X.Y.Z.	1	1	0
Home of Industry (Children's Emigration)—Of Thine Own, £1 10s.; (Widows) Of Thine Own, 10s.	2	0	0
Fresh Air Mission—Hastings	0	10	0
E. London Relief Work (Rev. J. W. Atkinson)—B.	0	2	0
Castle-yard Mission—F.E.	0	5	0
Anti-Slavery Society—J.A.L.	0	15	0
	£85	5	0

[ADVERTISEMENT.]

Dr. Barnardo's Homes—M.B 2s.; C. & D. 7s. 6d.; Tourist, £10; E.L.P. 10s.; E.A.T. £1; E.O.T. Tamworth, 5s.

IMPRISONMENT OF A PROTESTANT MISSIONARY.—The Madrid correspondent of The Daily News says:—When the Spanish Government asserted its supremacy in 1885 over the Caroline Islands, it promised the United States that it would respect the Protestant missions established for more than twenty years in the principal islands of the group. The Spanish authorities have nevertheless arrested and imprisoned at Manila since June last Rev. Edward Deane, aged seventy-nine, one of the earliest and most influential missionaries in the Island of Ponape. The cause of the arrest was the resistance he offered when the Spaniards interfered with the work of the missions, after he had offered to pay the heavy taxes levied by the new rulers, who had never appeared in Ponape before 1886. The American Government has made strong representations in order to obtain the release of the missionary.

"Dr. Barnardo's Homes for Destitute Children."

£500 has just been offered by a generous donor to complete the amount required for the erection of the sorely-needed Infirmary at the Village Home, Barkingside, Ilford (where accommodation is now provided for about 1,100 orphan and destitute little girls),

ON CONDITION THAT

two other friends will each contribute a like sum for this object. If this offer can be claimed, the whole amount required (£3,500) will have been raised, and no delay need occur in getting Builders at work.

Responses to this kind offer, or Donations in support of the general work of the "Homes," will be thankfully acknowledged if addressed to or Dr. BARNARDO, 18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, London, E.

The Treasurer, WM. FOWLER, Esq.,

IMPORTANT NEW WORK for TEACHERS of the YOUNG.

220 pages, Crown 8vo. Tinted Covers, 2s.; Cloth bds., 2s. 6d.

CHILDREN'S MEETINGS:
AND HOW TO CONDUCT THEM.

BY LUCY J. RIDER AND NELLIE M. CARMAN.

CONTAINS

FOURTH THOUSAND

Sixty Outline Lessons for the Class,
Forty-three Diagrams for the Black-board,
Twenty-five attractive Children's Hymns.

"A thoroughly practical book, by teachers who have learned by experience the best methods. Teachers will find it most helpful, especially in blackboard word-work. The Addresses are teachings — which very many Children's Addresses are not." — The Teacher at Work.

"We do not remember meeting with any better book than this for help in Children's Meetings. It is first-rate. There are objects to be drawn on the blackboard; but there are also capital lessons to go with them. Black-boards get very, very black; and the children are very bored, when it is all chalk and no sound sense. Many of these Addresses would make sermons of the first water—and what more can we say of Addresses?"

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon in
The Sword and Trowel.

"We have no hesitation in advising all who are engaged in the good work of teaching children and young people in Gospel principles, and the way of salvation, to possess themselves of a copy of this work. It will be found to be a very valuable and suggestive book, and helpful to the teacher of the Infant—as well as to the teacher of the Bible-class."—Baptist Messenger.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings E.C.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges. 2s.

BIRDS OF THE BIBLE

Chats with the Children about Bible Birds.

By JAMES BOWKER, F.R.G.S.I.

With Coloured Frontispiece and 29 other Illustrations.

Beautifully Printed on Toned Paper in Red and Black.

"We delight in books of this character. Scripture and Nature are set side by side; and the young are made to see the one illustrated by the other. Fine type makes these pages pleasant to the eye of the old, and simple language adapts it to the taste of the young."
Sword and Trowel.

"Chats with the children about birds mentioned in the Bible, in which are introduced anecdotes illustrating their instincts and habits, and explaining and applying the references to them in Scripture: contains many pictures and a pretty coloured frontispiece. A beautiful little book, and very handsomely got up."—Christian Age.

"A very pretty little volume, beautifully illustrated, handsomely printed, and very tastefully bound. It contains much information and much useful teaching about Bible birds. It is just the book for a present to our young friends, to whom it will prove very attractive."
Living Waters.

"Mr. Bowker knows much about the birds; and he makes his feathered favourites teach many a sweet lesson. By all means let the children have this prettily written and prettily illustrated book."—British Messenger.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

GEORGE YARD RAGGED SCHOOLS, &c., Whitechapel, E.

Received with much thankfulness from J. B., 1s.; M. A. G., 5s.; L. C., A parcel; Anonymous, Clothing; M. A. R., Clothing and books, &c.; W. G., Clothing.

The Infant Day Nursery. Free Ragged Day Schools. Children's Services. Toy Classes. Sunday Schools. Classes for Rough Boys. Mutual Industrial Classes for Lads. Men's Bible Classes. Temperance Meetings. Bible Classes for Women. Room to room visitation. Evangelistic Services. Open Air Meetings. And other Missionary agencies in operation.

M. J.—We shall be glad of the cuttings for our Gardens at "The Homes" and "Orphanage."

Friends are invited to visit the Institution any day but Saturday.

Post-office Orders should be made payable at 66, High-street, Whitechapel, E. Letters and Parcels should be addressed to GEORGE HOLLAND, The Ragged Schools, George Yard, High-street, Whitechapel, London, E.

"DAY IN THE COUNTRY,"

George-yard Ragged Schools, &c., Whitechapel.

Received with many thanks from H. E. B., 1s.; "Stockwell," 5s.—GEORGE HOLLAND, George Yard Ragged Schools, High-street, Whitechapel, E.

THE BENEVOLENT OR

STRANGERS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

Treasurer, Ald. Sir R. N. Fowler, Bart., M.P.
J. H. Anderson, Esq., Chairman.
Clarence Smith, Esq., J.P., Hon. Secretary.

For 101 years this Institution has visited and relieved the destitute sick, by an entirely unpaid agency, consisting of over 240 Christian men and women.

Funds are urgently needed.

The Committee will be thankful for the Society being remembered in the testamentary arrangements of the benevolent.—Office of the Society, 52, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

ANXIETY OF SOUL. — Any to whom the way of salvation is not clear, are invited to communicate, either personally or by letter, to W. S., care of Evangelistic Secretary, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

CONVALESCENT HOMES, at Bournemouth and Sandgate.—For particulars apply to Mr. JOHN JAMES JONES, Director of the London Samaritan Society, 98, High-street, Homerton, London, E.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF CLOTHING for distribution among the poorer patients and their families are earnestly solicited by the Committee of the Ladies' Samaritan Society, National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, Queen-square, Bloomsbury.—Parcels should be addressed to Miss S. WHITMORE, Clerk to the Ladies' Committee, at the Hospital. Donations in money will also be thankfully received.

EVANGELICAL HOSPITAL for Spezia and District.—Funds are urgently needed for the foundation of above. The annual expenses will amount to about £400. Suitable premises have already been secured.—Donations will be thankfully received and acknowledged by Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT; or by the Director, Mr. A. A. COATES, of Grand Hotel Royal, Spezia, Italy.

HASTINGS.—HOME OF REST.— Miss A. RODWELL regrets she must close in the autumn. Should any Lady be able to continue the Home, kindly write to 3, Holmesdale-gardens.

FEMALE REFUGE HOME, DUBLIN. —Matron wanted, an earnest Christian worker (Irish considered most suitable), to take chief control for at least six months.
RICHARD S[illegible]TT, 16, Kenilworth-terrace, Rathgar.

WORKERS GREATLY NEEDED amongst young women, to take place of some going to China. Varied service, simple Gospel addresses, correspondence, classes, &c., &c.; voluntary or otherwise, if efficient.
F., care of Hallkeeper, 186, Aldersgate-street.

HOME FOR BLIND CHILDREN, College-avenue, Hackney, E.—The present house having become too small, it is proposed to purchase a Freehold, which will be placed in the hands of Trustees. Contributions will be gratefully received by Miss S. RYE, or Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT.

PERTH CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE. —The Annual Conference will (D.V.) be held in the City Hall, Perth, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, September 13, 14, and 15. Forenoon Meeting at 11. Afternoon 2, and Evening at 7 o'clock. Information regarding lodging, &c., will be furnished by Mr. CHRISTIE, Bookseller, St. John-street.

NOON-DAY PRAYER-MEETING, Brighton, is held in the Assembly-room, ground-floor of the Y.M.C.A., 55, Old Steine.

ZENANA MEDICAL COLLEGE, 58, St. George's-road, S.W.—The Committee can give two partially free Scholarships to Ladies wishing to become Medical Missionaries. Board, residence, instruction included. Next term opens September 22.—Address the HON. SEC.

THE BETHSHAN, Leeds.—Meetings for Holiness and Divine Healing, Sundays and Tuesdays, 2.30 p.m.; Thursdays, 7.30 p.m. Christians wishing for teaching on Divine Healing, can be received into the house.—Miss GIBBS, 10, St. John's-terrace, Bible Vue-road, Leeds.

URGENT APPEAL.—CLOTHING.— Help earnestly solicited for the many necessitous and invalid gentlewomen and children known to Miss FAITHFULL, The Institute, 136, Regent-street. The need is great. See Report.

THE LONDON SAMARITAN SOCIETY for Convalescent Homes at Sandgate and Bournemouth. Mr. H. C., £1 1s.; Anon., Bedford, 5s.; Mrs. G., 6s.

Educational.

SEASIDE EDUCATION.—An Officer can highly recommend a Christian Home School at Southsea for a few Girls of good position. Pupils have successfully passed R.A.M. and R.C.P. Examinations. Terms very moderate. Terms 40 guineas to fill a vacancy.—INSPECTOR-GENERAL GORDON, R.N., View Bank, Brechin, Forfarshire, N.B.

HOME SCHOOL for Girls. Limited number of Boarders. Good education, based on Bible teaching, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness." Pupils prepared for the various Exams. Kindergarten for Juniors. Terms inclusive. Recommended by R. C. Morgan and parents of pupils.—Mrs. SILVESTER, Clarence House, Pellatt-grove, Wood Green.

SUPERIOR EDUCATION for young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. WATKINS, F.S.Sc., Dyreham College, North Finchley.—Pupils prepared for public examinations. Fees, including music, French, and drawing, 14 and 16 guineas per term, prepaid.

"I have the greatest pleasure in recommending Mrs. Watkins' School to parents seeking a good Christian home and a high-class education for their daughters. The School is situated in a fine healthy neighbourhood."—Josiah Spiers, Children's Special Service Mission.

MR. E. J. KENNEDY, OF EXETER HALL, can highly recommend an educational Home for young Ladies, where only a few are received, and where the children have individual care and guidance, and all the comforts of a superior home, combined with excellent education. References to Judge Gates, Q.C., General Elder, and other parents of pupils.—D. C. L., Farley's Library, FitzJohn's Parade, Hampstead, N.W.

MORAVIAN LADIES' SCHOOL, St. Peter's, Bedford.—Accommodation for a limited number of Boarders and Day Pupils. Pupils prepared for Cambridge Local Examinations. For terms and all particulars, apply to Miss SEIFFERTH, Principal.

BELLE VUE, AMBLESIDE.—Good School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. FLEMING. Healthy and beautiful situation; large rooms, garden, tennis. Careful Christian training, and thorough teaching. Cambridge Examinations. Resident foreign and English governesses. Masters. 50 to 60 guineas. Reduced terms for children under 12.

HIGH-CLASS CHRISTIAN SCHOOL for the Daughters of Gentlemen. — Miss PENN receives a limited number of pupils. Efficient resident governesses and visiting masters. Individual Christian influence. Home comforts. Large house and garden. Entire charge taken of pupils from abroad. Languages and music specialities. Young Ladies are also received to pursue certain studies only, or to take lessons in dressmaking, cooking, &c.
St. John's de Ocklynge, Eastbourne.

GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL, LEYTON.— Modern education with Christian training. Public examinations passed with success. Prize for singing. References: Rev. James Lunt, M.A., Rev. E. W. Bullinger, D.D.—Principal, Miss H. R. FORD.

BRIGHTON.—High-class School for Girls. Healthy situation. Home comforts. Every educational advantage. Terms moderate. Good references to clergymen and parents of pupils.—The Misses NORTON, Farndon House, Stanford-road, Brighton.

HEALTH AND EDUCATION among the Surrey hills. Christian home-life with carefully superintended studies.—Misses SHRIMPTON & GERDS, Chertsey House, Redhill.

MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE for Young Ladies, Larkbeare, Exeter, Devon.—Residents only received. Christian parents of high social position at home and abroad are referees: The buildings are considered the most complete of any private school in England.

MODENA KINDERGARTEN TRAINING COLLEGE, Peckham Rye, London, S.E. Premium, forty guineas.—For particulars apply to the Principal, Miss E. M. LOTT.

NONCONFORMIST LADIES' SCHOOL.

MACAULAY HOUSE, CAMBRIDGE.

Every educational advantage, with careful Christian training, and a refined, happy home.

Inclusive fees, 30 to 40 guineas per annum.

Reference kindly permitted to:—
R. J. Moffat, Esq., F.R.G.S., Cambridge.
Rev. T. Graham Tarn, Cambridge.
Rev. E. Henderson, Victoria-road, Clapham, S.W.
Rev. J. Rolfe Fisher, Burdett-road Congregational Church, E.
Rev. Dr. MacEwan, Trinity Presbyterian Church, Clapham, S.W.
Rev. C. A. Davis, King's-road Chapel, Reading.
Rev. W. Williams, Upton Chapel, Lambeth, S.W.
For prospectus, address PRINCIPAL.

ILFRACOMBE, 2, Oxford-park.— Home School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. RICHARD WARE. Careful Christian training and thorough teaching. Motherly care taken of delicate children. Good references.

SOUND EDUCATION FOR GIRLS. —Lexham School, Oxford.—University masters. Special advantages for science, languages, music, and art. Arrangement for Anglo-Indian children. Terms moderate. Vacancy for governess-student. Reference kindly permitted to Rev. Canon Christopher, Oxford.—Address, PRINCIPAL.

SELECT GIRLS' SCHOOL,

Cambridge House, 113, Green-lanes, London, N.

Christian training. Motherly care. Home comforts Healthful situation. Preparation for Public Examinations, at which all the Pupils entered last Christmas passed. Reference to Rev. Gordon Calthrop, 3, Highbury-grange, N.; Doctor Pittock, Margate; and to other parents of present pupils.—Further particulars on application to the Principal,
Mrs. BRODIE.

FRAULEIN EIBACH, Villa Schönblick, Wiesbaden, Germany, receives a limited number of pupils. Professors attend, and there is a resident French governess. Great advantages for languages, music, singing, and painting. References and prospectus on application.

EDUCATION.—High-class School for Young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. HALE, A.C.P., 1, Carlton-mansions, Clapham-rise, London, S.W.—Visiting masters, certificated governesses, and careful personal supervision with home comforts. Pupils prepared for any examination. Instruction made pleasant, and no overworking countenanced. French, German, Latin, drawing, class-singing, and drilling are included in the school fees, which are moderate. Highly recommended by parents of pupils, and Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. Prospectus and testimonials on application to Principal.

"Balham, May 29, 1880.

"I am very reluctant to recommend schools, because I am not always able to judge of the interior arrangements; but in this case I have the utmost pleasure in standing as reference. I can highly commend Mrs. Hale, and have the greatest confidence in her capacity, management, and character, having known her for several years."
C. H. SPURGEON.

SALCOMBE COLLEGE, Loughton, Essex.—Principal, Mrs. VIVIAN, assisted by certificated English and Foreign governesses and professors. College detached, situated on a hill. Two acres of recreation grounds, lawn tennis, and croquet. Close to Epping Forest, and 12 miles from London. Pupils prepared for university and other examinations. Excellent class-rooms, and well-furnished sitting-rooms. Terms moderate, and inclusive. References, Revs. J. Angus, D.D., W. Durban, B.A., J. A. Spurgeon; also W. Keeping, M.A., F.G.S., W. Olney, F. A. Owgan, M.D., J. Passmore, Esqs. Prospectus, with view of College, and addresses of referees, on application. No governess-pupils received.

LOWESTOFT. — CLAREMONT HOUSE.—The Misses BIGNOLD receive a limited number of gentlemen's daughters as Resident Pupils. Careful Christian training, with thorough education and home comforts. References kindly permitted to the Bishop of Exeter; the Rev. J. B. Pelham, Norwich; J. C. Worthington, Esq., Lowestoft; E. Courthorpe Todd, Esq., Macready House, Covent-garden; and other friends and parents of pupils.

LADIES' COLLEGE, Goudhurst, Kent, near Tunbridge Wells.—A happy home and School for Girls, 420 feet above sea-level. College and Cambridge examinations. Terms, twenty-seven guineas per annum.—Miss R. KENDON, M.C.P., daughter of Rev. J. J. Kendon.

VEVEY, SWITZERLAND.—A few vacancies in an old-established, superior Ladies' Boarding School. Principal in London till 1st September.—Address by letter, Miss BABINGTON PEILE, 8, Ormiston-road, Uxbridge-road, W.

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, Warminster, Wilts.—Healthy neighbourhood, house detached, tennis lawn, &c. Masters from Clifton, Bath, Salisbury. The usual Public exams. Resident French governess. A few vacancies.—For prospectus, &c., address the Misses CRUSE, Cambridge House.

SUPERIOR EDUCATIONAL advantages for young Ladies, combined with Christian training and home comforts. Little boys also received, with entirely separate supervision. House beautifully situated in its own grounds. Lovely scenery. Health resort for delicate children. Inclusive terms, 15 to 21 guineas per annum.
PRINCIPAL, Broomfield Villa, Henfield, Sussex.

EASTBOURNE. — Ladies' College (for the daughters of Gentlemen). Established 1871. A few Boarders received. The College is examined by the University of Cambridge. Referees, Rev. W. Bathurst, vicar of Holy Trinity Church, parents of pupils and others.—For prospectus, &c., apply to the PRINCIPALS, the Misses Deacon, Grassington-road, Eastbourne.

PENSIONNAT EVANGELIQUE.— Wesleyan Young Ladies' College, Nimes, South of France.—Situated in one of the finest towns of the South of France. Has been in existence for more than forty years. Large premises; extensive garden. The climate of Nimes, remarkably dry and healthy, makes the residence in that city most profitable for delicate young ladies. Moderate terms. —Apply for prospectus and admission to Pastor O. PRUNIER, Principal and Chaplain, 1, rue de Sauve, Nimes, France. The next term will begin on October 1. Pastor PRUNIER has a vacancy for two young ladies in his own house, if parents prefer a family home to a residence in the school, terms being a matter of private arrangement.

DEVONSHIRE. — Ladies' School, Heyop House, Axminster.—Principals, The Misses REECE. Careful Christian training; thorough teaching. Home comforts. Pupils prepared for public exams. Governess-Pupil required on reciprocal terms. Another at small premium. The ensuing term commences September 14.

ALTRINCHAM, CHESHIRE.—Mentmore House.—Home School for a limited number of Girls. Healthy neighbourhood. Visiting professors. Inclusive terms. Prospectus and testimonials from parents of former pupils on application to PRINCIPAL.

WIESBADEN.—LADIES' SCHOOL.— Miss BEYERHAUS is now in England, and will escort pupils in September.—Address, Care of Gen. Martyr, Mowbray-road, Upper Norwood, S.E.

BRIGHTON.—2, Sussex-square.— Miss GOULTY'S Educational Home for Young Ladies. Terms vary according to the individual requirements, and the accomplishments needed. The Rev. J. B. Figgis, of Brighton, is kindly willing to bear his testimony to the School. Pupils can prepare for the Cambridge Examinations.

FOLKESTONE. — Grove House School.—Thorough commercial training. Careful preparation for all public examinations. Good ground for cricket and football. Prospectus and reference on application to PRINCIPAL.

SUPERIOR PRIVATE SCHOOL (Girls'). Home life. Resident governess. Masters attend. Good bracing air, high ground. Small number only received. References to parents.—Misses MAW, Lime Bank, Upper Oldfield-park, Bath.

BEDFORD. — Melrose House. — Principals, the Misses RAY, daughters of the late Rev. R. Ray. Pupils received for high-class education and board. Personal supervision, with Christian training and home comforts. Preparation for Cambridge and other Local Examinations when desired. The next term will begin (D.V.) on Friday, September 16.

EDUCATION GRATUITOUS, superior, offered to a Gentleman's Daughter in a select school. Small amount required towards board, &c. References exchanged. Strictly confidential.
MARION, May's Advertising Offices, 159, Piccadilly.

HIGHER CAMBRIDGE EXAMINATION.—The Classes in connection with the N. Lond. Coll. School will be resumed September 19. Students specially prepared for Groups R (religious knowledge), A (English literature and language), B (languages), C (mathematics), H (History).
Miss TOPLIS, 202, Camden-road.

EDUCATIONAL HOME for the Daughters of Gentlemen, Hanworth House, Weston-super-Mare.—Mrs. CHARLES NASH receives a limited number of Pupils, and endeavours to combine the highest educational advantages with maternal care and Christian training. Evangelical ministry. Resident English and foreign governesses and the best visiting professors in regular attendance. References kindly permitted to the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Exeter; the Rev. W. Hunt, M.A., Vicar of Holy Trinity, Weston-super-Mare, &c. Also to many parents of pupils at home and abroad. —Prospectus on application.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL.

WELLINGTON, SHROPSHIRE.

Principal: DR. CRANAGE, M.A.

BETHANY HOUSE SCHOOL, Goudhurst, Kent, near Tunbridge Wells.—Principal, Rev. J. J. KENDON.—Careful religious training, combined with a thoroughly sound commercial education. In the last three years 150 of the pupils were passed in the public examinations at the College of Preceptors, and the Local Examination of the University of Cambridge. Terms, twenty-seven guineas per annum.

YOUR BOYS will have a happy Home and sound Education with Mr. and Mrs. DIXON, Middle-class School, Kingston-on-Thames. Christian influence; unlimited diet; beautiful neighbourhood. 20 to 25 guineas.

MORAVIAN BOYS' SCHOOL, Ockbrook, near Derby.—Pupils prepared for London Matriculation and other examinations. Ockbrook presents the advantages of central position, and beautiful rural neighbourhood.—For prospectus apply to Rev. J. M. MALLALIEU.

HIGHBURY HOUSE SCHOOL, St. Leonard's-on-Sea.—Boys prepared for commerce, public schools, or the universities. Upper, middle, and preparatory departments. Seven resident masters. The junior division taught by ladies. Delicate boys, requiring a mild climate, receive every kindness and constant care. The autumn term will commence on September 17.—For prospectus apply to Mrs. DUFF, the Lady Principal.

HARRINGAY SCHOOL, Greenlanes, N.—Sound Christian education, for professional or commercial pursuits. Careful supervision, plentiful dietary, healthy locality, easy of access. Terms moderate from entry. Principal, J. S. COOMBES.

MOUNT RADFORD SCHOOL, Exeter. —Boys are prepared for business or professional life. Many matriculate at the various universities. During the last twelve years pupils have obtained more than two hundred certificates (many passing in honours) in the Oxford, Cambridge, College of Preceptors', and London University Examinations. Special attention paid to juniors, who are taught by a lady. The Word of God is made the sole basis of a careful moral and spiritual training, and none but Christian teachers are employed. Cricket, athletics, &c.
Head Master, E. H. VINE, M.C.P.

HOME AND EDUCATION for the Sons of Gentlemen under twelve years of age, 74, Broadhurst-gardens, South Hampstead. Principals, the Misses DOUGLAS MCMILLAN, assisted by three certificated lady teachers. Pupils prepared for the public schools. The children of Anglo-Indians received for education and entire management during absence of parents. Referees: The Venerable Archdeacon Philpot, Surbiton; the Recorder of London; and James Ewen Mathieson, Esq., Mildmay.

CHIPPENHAM. — An excellent School for Boys. Healthy and beautiful country. First-class gymnasium. Tennis ground. A bathing place near. Greatest attention paid to character and Bible teaching. Terms very moderate.
H. B. BARDWELL, Orwell House

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED ON HIGH GROUND, WITH VIEWS OF THE SEA, on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and a first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this school that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS, together with the papers of Examinations passed and Honours gained, should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. THORN, Paddington, London.

CLIFTON, BRISTOL.—A few Resident Pupils desired. Locality celebrated for healthfulness and beauty. Instruction, training, companionship, personal, not delegated to others. Evangelical (Open Brethren).
Mr. HOWELL, Aberdeen-road.

NEW COLLEGE, Cliftonville, Margate.—Principal: Rev. G. H. JONES, F.A.S. High-class education, with individual attention. Prep. for exams., and commerce. Christian training. Splendid premises, loftily situated, close to sea. Moderate fees.

BRIGHTON.— EDUCATION.— Mr. ALFRED CLARK, B.A. (Lond.), receives about twenty Sons of Gentlemen, from seven to fourteen years of age. Terms from 45 guineas. Pupils are thoroughly grounded in English subjects, Latin, Greek, French, German, and mathematics, and have been successful at Cambridge Local and other Examinations. Personal care, Christian influence, and a healthy, happy home.—85, Buckingham-road, Brighton.—Referees: Rev. W. Poole Balfern, Brighton; Rev. F. Cruse, Christ Church Vicarage, Worthing; Rev. J. B. Figgis, Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, Harley House, Bow-road, London; Rev. W. Haslam, 66, Marina, St. Leonard's. Term commences on Friday, Sept. 9.

The COLLEGE, HERNE BAY.

Established 1866. A Christian home and a good School. Remarkable health. Notable success in public exams. Reasonable and strictly inclusive fees. Inquiry and inspection invited.—Prospectus, views, references from J. B. TURNER, Principal.

HURSTPIERPOINT (near Brighton), Sussex Preparatory School. Home comforts. Christian training. Visiting masters. Special attention to delicate, backward boys. Preparation for public schools. Pupils passed with distinction. Twenty guineas. Indian children received.
LADY PRINCIPAL, Hamilton Lodge.

EDUCATION IN HIGHGATE.—The Rev. G. D. BARTLET, M.A., receives ten Pupils (from 10 years) to board and educate for Commercial or Professional life, or for Public Schools. Individual attention, thorough grounding, careful Christian training, with the comforts of a superior home, are afforded. Fees from 60 guineas per term. Highgate is strongly recommended by the medical profession.

LITTLE BOYS, Brighton.—Inkerman House, Lansdowne-road. The Misses ASHBY prepare young gentlemen for senior schools. The pupils are governed by kindness, and cheerfulness is encouraged. Careful instruction. Constant supervision. Home comforts. The situation is very healthy, near the sea.

KEMPLEY HOUSE, Bristol.—Mrs. PRESCOTT, Principal. — Prospectus sent. The education of Her Majesty the Queen was conducted on the principles of moral education; and Her Majesty has been pleased to accept a copy of Moral Education by Rev. P. Prescott, and Sir Henry Ponsonby has received the Queen's commands to thank him for the book.

RESIDENT GOVERNESS.—A young Lady, late Student of Queen's College, London, desires a re-engagement after the holidays. Acquirements, thorough English, music, drawing, painting, French, and the rudiments of Latin. Good testimonials.
A. B., Bockleton, Tweedy-road, Bromley, Kent.

AS GOVERNESS.—A Lady recommends a young Lady (23) to children under 14. Certificated for English, French, drawing, College of Preceptors. Pianoforte, music, Trinity College 1st class honours. Evangelical Church. Highest [illegible] Country preferred.—ALEX., Anglesea [illegible] Marine Parade, Clacton-on-Sea.

JUNIOR MASTER wanted, possessed of good teaching ability and high Christian principle. Salary £20 to £30, resident.—D. D. D., Charles Tayler & Co's. Advertisement Offices, 154 to 157, Fleet-street, E.C.

POST - OFFICE, Telegraph, and Sorter Examinations.—Students prepared at the Classes in connection with the North London Collegiate School, 202, Camden-road.

CHRISTIAN TRAINING and Modern System of Education for Boys of all ages. Comfortable home. Warrington College, Warring[illegible] Maida-vale, London, W. Principal, WILLIAM P. BONWICK; well known to Rev. [illegible] Shepherd's-bush, and Rev. E. [illegible]

WANTED, A GOVERNESS, for a [illegible] in Kensington. Fluent French, [illegible] and music for beginners. A [illegible] wanted.
Mrs. THORNTON, 2[illegible], Bedford-place, Brighton.

A NURSERY GOVERNESS wanted, [illegible] three children [illegible] Good [illegible] to [illegible]

A LADY (wife of Solicitor), living in large detached house with good garden, wishes to meet with two little Girls to educate with her youngest daughter under excellent governess. Children whose parents are abroad not objected to. Highest testimonials given and required. — For further particulars apply to ALPHA, Record Office, Fleet-street, E.C.

A LADY, EXPERIENCED in teaching, desires engagement as Governess to children of about 12 and under. English, French, elementary German, music, drawing, needlework. Moderate salary.
A. B., Post-office, Bromsash, Ross, Herefordshire.

A CHRISTIAN NURSERY GOVERNESS wanted, to take charge of two little girls. French and music required. None need apply who have not been out before.—State terms to Mrs. TISSINGTON TATLOW, St. Thomas, Rathfarnham, co. Dublin.

REQUIRED, AN ENGAGEMENT as Governess to children under 12. Thorough English, music, and rudimentary French. Good references. Accustomed to care of children.
H., 6, Osborne-villas, Margate-road, Ramsgate.

CAN ANY LADY recommend Foreign Home or School for Young Ladies. Christian influence. French chiefly spoken. Select. Highest references required.
X. Y. Z., Mr. Craine, Bookseller, Ramsey.

AS GOVERNESS TO LITTLE CHILDREN.—English, French, music, drawing, painting, needlework. Five years' reference. Fond of children. Would go abroad.—E., Rev. E. A. Richings, Friston Lodge, Grange-road, Eastbourne.

AN EXPERIENCED GOVERNESS desires a re-engagement in either private family or ladies' school. Acquirements, English, fluent French (acquired abroad), music, drawing, elementary German. Highest references.
E., The Ferns, Wickham, Chichester.

A GOVERNESS, teaching thorough English, German, and French (Continental), elementary drawing and music, and good needlework, desires re-engagement. Church of England. Highest references.
Miss BOYS, The Priory, Boxgrove, Chichester.

EDUCATION.—Principal of Ladies' College requires Governess-Student. Finishing lessons under professors in English, music, French, German, and drawing. Preparations for exams. Premium 18 guineas. Home comforts. Light duties.—MATERNAL, Pond's Stationery Depot, St. Peter's-road, Holloway, London, N.

GOVERNESS. — A Lady can confidently recommend a young Lady, aged 25, as Governess to two or three children under twelve. Thorough English, music, French, Latin, and drawing. Coll. Precep. Church of England.
Miss M. GREEN, Sibton Abbey, Yoxford, Suffolk.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Wanted.

BARRISTER of exceptional commercial experience, wishes to join a good established business, in which his experience and a substantial part of his time would be useful. To an aged business man requiring conscientious help, this is an invaluable opportunity. Must be London district.—A. B., 171, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.

YOUNG MAN SEEKS employment in country town or village. (Any needy place). Experience as secretary, collector, clerk, and for missionary. Remuneration, Colos. iv. 1.—EBENEZER, Box P. 1938, Smith's Advertising Agency, 132, Fleet-street, E.C.

EARNEST EVANGELIST, American experience, seeks re-engagement for long or short periods in Mission Revival or Gospel Temperance work. Would undertake weak cause. Solo singer.
C., 18, Shaw-crescent, Newbury, Berks.

AN EVANGELIST (unsectarian) is anxious to hear of an opening for Evangelistic work. Twelve years' experience. Age 35. Married. Full particulars on application.—M., Chateau Beaufort, Hengist-road, Bournemouth, Hants.

MARRIED MAN, Christian, abstainer, age 26, height 5 ft. 10 in., seeks employment of any kind. Used to refreshment business and horses. Good characters and recommendation.
T. HOLLAND, 86, Pimlico-road, Pimlico.

GARDENER, Single-handed. Age 34, married; total abstainer, and Christian. Understands cows and poultry. One year's good character. Eight years from previous place.
F. BARTLEY, Abbotts Ann, Andover, Hants.

A LADY STRONGLY recommends Christian Gardener, who has lived in her family 7½ years. Leaving through death of master and mistress. Thoroughly understands his duties, both under glass and kitchen gardening. Industrious and obliging. Situation desired with quiet Christian family or widow lady, where two are kept or help given. Country preferred.—G. W., Grove Cottage, Great Totham, Witham, Essex.

AS GARDENER in a Christian family. Understands greenhouse, flower and kitchen garden, and willing to be useful. Christian and abstainer. Age 33.—F. THOMPSON, The Downlands, Rottingdean, near Brighton.

AS GARDENER (Under), under glass; or in good garden. Three years' character. Age 21. Abstainer.
M. M., East Knoyle, Salisbury, Wilts.

AN ORPHAN BOY is desirous of being placed in a Christian family, where, in exchange for his services, he will have an opportunity of learning a trade.
RELTON, 22, Lyal-road, Bow, E.

NO SALARY.—Young Man wishes to enter quiet private family. Town or country. Would make himself generally useful, act as amanuensis, or do light out-door work, in return for board and home comforts. References.
G., West Court, Chalk, Gravesend.

CLERGYMAN'S WIFE warmly recommends her widowed friend (Clergyman's Sister) as Companion-Housekeeper to Gentleman or Lady. Practical housekeeper; knowledge of cooking. Experienced, sweet-tempered; accustomed to parish work. Has acted as chaperon, reader, amanuensis.
HOPE, St. Kilda, St. John's-wood, Bournemouth.

MRS. KYNASTON STUDD would be glad to hear of a situation as Mother's Help or otherwise, for a young Widow who has been given to intemperance, but who has been in a Home for over a year. Good needlewoman; is fond of children, and can make herself generally useful.—Mrs. KYNASTON STUDD, Edinburgh House, Cromer.

A CHRISTIAN LADY, German (40), speaking English and French, desires a situation as Companion to an invalid Lady. Ten years' experience as deaconess. Understands all kinds of plain and fancy needlework. — Miss MITTIG, 66, St. Albans-crescent, Wood-green, N.

MATRON OF ORPHANAGE or Training Home. — Re-engagement by a Lady. Good disciplinarian. Careful manager. Age 36. Could partially furnish own apartments.
C. L., 10, Carlton-square, New Cross, S.E.

AS MATRON in a Girls' Home.— Wanted by a Christian Woman. Nonconformist. 40. Experienced in training children. Good needlewoman. Very good references.
Miss BOND, Vine Cottage, Brasted, Kent.

A CHRISTIAN WIDOW LADY having recently given up her home, seeks a situation as Companion-Housekeeper to elderly Lady or Gentleman. Satisfactory references.—W., St. Lawrence Hall, St. Lawrence, Maldon, Essex.

RE-ENGAGEMENT required, as Companion Attendant to Lady, by thoroughly experienced, trustworthy, middle-aged person. Mental cases not objected to. Good references.
B., Messrs. Wilson & Co., 104, Cheapside, London.

CHRISTIAN LADY from Devonshire (small income) seeks, as Companion to Lady, or as Housekeeper. Valuable to one needing help on the "narrow road."
S., 9, Ranelagh-road, Pimlico.

A CHRISTIAN LADY (30), abstainer, desires a re-engagement, either in an orphanage, care of motherless children, or similar work. Good references.
A., 89, Malpas-road, New Cross, S.E.

AS SUPERINTENDENT, Assistant, Matron of a Home, or any position of trust, by an active, energetic, Christian Lady. Six months' voluntary services. Good references.
M. V., Osborne House, Ardwick, Manchester.

A LADY WISHES re-engagement as Companion, or position of usefulness, to elderly Christian Lady requiring daughter's care. Domesticated. Good needlewoman. References exchanged. Nonconformist.—M. G., Manor Farm, Quenington, Fairford, Gloucestershire.

WANTED RE - ENGAGEMENT as Kitchen or Assistant Matron in small institution, orphanage, or convalescent home; or Working Housekeeper in Christian family. Two years in Mission work.
C. L., Sturge House, 32, Bow-road, E.

A YOUNG LADY, just left school, requires a situation as Assistant in Confectioner's or other light business. Understands bookkeeping. Fair musician. Christian family. — RUSSELL, James Tibbald & Co., Albert Embankment, S.E.

A LADY highly recommends a Gentlewoman for any position of trust. Competent manager in all home duties. Excellent needlewoman. Good salary required.
Mrs. DANVERS, Rose Lea, Castle Bar, Ealing.

A DOMESTICATED YOUNG LADY desires an engagement as Mother's Help in a Christian family, minister's preferred, where servant is kept. Highest references.
E. D., 4, Earl's-court-road, Kensington, W.

NURSE IN GENTLEMAN'S FAMILY, to first baby preferred. Wages £20 to £22. Age 30. Member Church of England.
C. F., St. George's-square, Bishops Waltham, Hants.

SITUATION AS COOK wanted, in Gentleman's family. Wages £30 to £35.—M., W. J. Cook, Northumberland House, Dartrey-road, King's-road, Chelsea.

WANTED, FOR A GIRL of 15, a place as Kitchenmaid in the neighbourhood of Lewisham or Blackheath.—MATRON, Training Home, 19, Horsham-road, Dorking.

A SITUATION AS UNDER-HOUSEMAID wanted by a young person who has been out before. Age 18. Good reference.—L., 2, Loughboro'-buildings, Cambria-road, Camberwell, S.E.

MARRIED COUPLE, highly recommended by a Lady, seek employment as Caretaker of offices, chambers, &c. Husband a useful handy-man. Both are total abstainers.
T. H., 4, Ebenezer-terrace, Kennington-park.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Vacant.

YOUNG MEN yearning to win souls, either at home or abroad, should apply to the Church Army, 130, Edgware-road, London, W. They are trained as Evangelists free of expense; those specially competent receive a small weekly grant during training, which usually lasts about six or eight weeks, for the support of their families (if any). Devout women, 25 to 35, are trained as Evangelistic Nurses.

A CHRISTIAN LADY wanted, as Governess, and to take charge of three children. Must have held similar situation, and be fully competent to teach thoroughly English, French, music, drawing. Interview necessary.—Mrs. SPENCER, Victoria House, Clarence Parade, Southsea.

LADY-HOUSEKEEPER.—A Gentlewoman required to act as Housekeeper in a Gentleman's family. She must be cheerful, thoroughly domesticated, a good manageress, economical, fond of children, and willing to act as Companion to an invalid Lady. A Lady's recommendation would be appreciated.—Address, stating age, salary required, and previous experience, with references to FIDES, 17, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

A MOTHER of a large family is desirous of finding a Lady (Protestant and abstainer), not over 40, who will be able to assist her in the management of her household, and at same time be competent to read French and German with her eldest daughter, aged 17. Supervise the music practice of four children. Be well used in the management of servants (five kept), and all the details of housekeeping. Practical experience in all the above essential. Salary dependent on capabilities, but will not exceed £60.—ALPHA, care of Lee & Nightingale, Advertising Agents, Liverpool.

BIBLEWOMAN wanted, to visit six hours daily. Must be an earnest Christian, able to sing, and conduct mothers' meetings. Testimonials required.—Mrs. WATSON, Bank, Cockermouth.

A YOUNG LADY wanted, to assist the mother in the care of two young children. Small salary, but comfortable home. No nurse kept.
Mrs. GRAVELY, 5, Silver-street, Wellingboro'.

PROBATIONER for a Mission Hospital required. Must be an earnest Christian, and able to manage boys.
SUPERINTENDENT, Church House, Bow-road, E.

COOK-HOUSEKEEPER.—A Vicar, with three young children, will feel thankful to any Christian Lady who can recommend the above. She must be a true Christian, teetotaller, experienced, and willing to make herself useful in any way she can. A happy home.—X. X., care of Housekeeper, 13, Rose-street, London, E.C.

GARDENER.—Wanted by a market grower commencing business, a truly Christian man (any denomination), accustomed to growing crops for market. Advancing wages as business increases, but willing to accept small till ground bearing crops. Well up in glass culture.
H. EASTY, Cornard, Sudbury, Suffolk.

GARDENER wanted. Must be married, without children. Wife to keep the gate, and be willing to give assistance in the house when required. Must be abstainers.—MATRON, Convalescent Home, Stanmore, Middlesex.

YOUNG GIRL wanted, to help and train under good, able servant. No children. Christian privileges.—Apply by letter only to Mrs. BAYLEY, 10, Holwood-road, Bromley, Kent.

WANTED, AS COMPANION, by a Widow Lady of delicate health, a young Lady, and to assist in light home duties. A good reader indispensable.—Apply by letter to X. Z., care of Oscar Berry & Co., 6, Arthur-street East, London, E.C.

YOUNG CHRISTIAN NURSE wanted, for delicate Baby (18 months). Cleanliness and good, cheerful temper chief requisites. Needlework required.—Full particulars to LADY ADVERTISER, 11, Carlton-crescent, Southampton.

REQUIRED, Nurse for two children. Baby from the month. Must be an abstainer, and not object to washing. Age 24. £14.
M. M., 12, Blomfield-road, Uxbridge-road, W.

A LADY TRAINED NURSE wanted, for a Convalescent Home for persons recovering from scarlet fever. Salary £40.—Address by letter to Miss MARY WARDELL, Convalescent Home, Stanmore, Middlesex.

A TRUSTWORTHY PERSON, age 20 to 30, wanted, as Nurse in a tradesman's family. Good needlewoman. A comfortable home. Good wages for a suitable person.
Mrs. CLARE, 242, Brixton-hill, Brixton.

GOOD GENERAL SERVANT wanted, who can cook. Wages £16. Age not under 20. Abstainer and early riser. Small family. No children.
M., Mr. Virgo, 54, The Broadway, Wimbledon.

GENERAL SERVANT wanted, in a quiet family. Good character, trustworthy, and one who would value a Christian home.—Apply, stating wages, &c., to Mrs. HOOPER, Elms-road, Redhill, Surrey.

GOOD PLAIN COOKS wanted (town and country), House-Parlourmaids, Nurses, good General Servants.—Miss MAULDEN'S (late missionary) Registry and Home, Church-street, Paddington-green. Please send stamped envelope for reply.

A PLAIN COOK wanted, for small school in the country. Industrious, and able to iron well. Age from 20 to 30.
Dyrham, North Finchley, near London.

To Let, Apartments, &c.

PERCY'S HOTEL, LONDON.

40, Bedford-place, Bloomsbury-sq., W.C.

This First-class Private Hotel is highly recommended by the Bishop of Algoma; Rev. M. E. Thorold, M.A., Leicester; Dr. Georgens, Ouchy, Lausanne; J. Bevan and Mrs. Braithwaite, 312, Camden-road, and many others. Beds from 1s. 6d. Tea, 1s. 3d. Tariff on application.
Mrs. LLOYD HARRIS, Proprietor.

LONDON.

WEST CENTRAL HOTEL. (First-class Temperance), 97, 99, 101, 103, Southampton-row, Russell-square.—Highly commended by Sir William Fox, K.C.M.G.; Rev. Charles Williams; Rev. John Cairns, D.D.; Rev. A. B. Grosart, D.D.; Rev. H. S. Paterson, M.D.; Rev. Forbes E. Winslow, M.A.; T. W. Russell, Esq., M.P.; Dr. Norman Kerr; Frederick Sherlock, Esq.; Dr. Ziemann; Miss Haslam, C.E.T.S.; Mrs. Lucas Shadwell, &c., &c. Plain Breakfast or Tea 1s. 3d. Beds, 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. Printed Tariff on application to FREDERIC SMITH, Proprietor.

LONDON.—First-class Private Hotel, 20, Bedford-place, Russell-square, W.C.—Patronised and highly recommended by Bishop and Mrs. Newman, Leamington; the Rev. J. R. O. West, M.A., Manchester; Tudor Trevor, Esq., Leeds; George Ward, Esq., Manchester; Thomas B. Dale, Esq., J.P., Warwick; James Baly, Esq., and many other friends. Tariff on application.—GRACE PERCY, Proprietress, late Librarian to the Warwick Library, and Grand-daughter of the late Rev. J. W. Percy, Warwick.

LONDON.—Insull's Temperance Hotel, 20, 21, Burton-crescent, Tavistock-square, W.C.—Five minutes' walk or 1s. cab fare from Euston, St. Pancras, King's Cross Railways; easily reached from other stations. Patronised by readers of THE CHRISTIAN.

HUTCHINSON'S PRIVATE HOTEL, 24, Guildford-street, Russell-square, the most central position for all parts of London; and at 24, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C. Extensively patronised and strongly recommended. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Weekly boarders taken.

LONDON.-LAW'S BOARDING HOUSE, 15, Thavies-inn, Holborn-circus.—Quiet and homely. Centrally situated for business or pleasure. Five minutes' walk of St. Paul's Cathedral and General Post Office. Terms moderate.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—A limited number of Ministers and their wives, and other Christians, are received at a comfortable private residence.—For terms address,
H., Fern Lea, Pevensey-road.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—Boarding Establishment, Meliora House, 20 and 21, Carisbrooke-road. Conducted by the Widow of the late Rev. F. WAGSTAFFE, and Mrs. LOCKE. Good table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Near sea, gardens, and rail.

INTEMPERANCE.—A private Home at the seaside for limited number of the upper and higher middle classes in a cheerful little spot where Dipsomania, Choralism, Nervous Debility, &c., has been long and successfully treated. Christian influence; home comforts and amusements; highest references.—MEDICUS, Messrs. Pascoe, 28, Stokes Croft, Bristol.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Clergyman's Widow, who has had great experience in nursing, would gladly receive two or three Ladies, invalid or otherwise, in her comfortable home. Terms from 25s. South aspect.
Mrs. H., Estens, Surrey-road South, Bournemouth.

ILFRACOMBE.—Foster's Boarding House. Close to sea. Home comforts. Highly recommended by Clergy and Ministers. Conducted on Christian and Temperance principles. Terms, 52s. 6d. per week. No extras.

BRIGHTON.—Sussex House Boarding Establishment, pleasantly situated in the Old Steine, having a sea view, and the beautiful Steine Gardens in front. Near to Pavilion, Aquarium, and piers. Liberal table, with every home comfort.
Mr. & Mrs. BOX, 58, Old Steine.

MRS. PARSONS returns sincere thanks for all kindness from Christian friends, and begs to say she has removed to larger premises.—(Private) Convalescent Home, Shaftesbury House, Seaside-road, Eastbourne.

ROTHESAY, N.B.—House of Rest. A Health Resort and Hydropathic Establishment for Christians. Summer terms, board, lodging, and baths, from 30s. per week.—Send for prospectus to COLIN CAMPBELL, Argyle Lodge.

WORTHING HOME OF REST for Christians. Close to sea, with good garden. Every comfort. Services on the ground. Terms 25s. to 2 guineas.—LADY SUPERINTENDENT, Rutherford Lodge, Worthing.

INTEMPERANCE.—Private Home for six Ladies. Terms from 1½ to 3 guineas weekly. Highest professional references given, for which, with other particulars, apply to
Miss PUDNEY, Buxton House, Earls Colne, Essex.

BROADSTAIRS.—Seafield Boarding Establishment.—Best situation in town. Close to sea. Liberal table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Highly recommended by all who have visited. Special terms for permanent boarders.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Large and airy suites of Apartments. Close to principal churches, and near pier and gardens. Hot and cold baths.

COMFORTABLE CHRISTIAN HOME, at a superior farm residence, for Lady or Gentleman, in healthy neighbourhood in North Hants. Bath-room, phaeton, shooting, fishing.
M. G., 20, Trafalgar-road, Old Kent-road, London.

BOARD AND RESIDENCE in a comfortable, quiet Home in the country. Rooms may be had for a few days only, or permanently.—The Misses PATTISON, Islington Villa, Wem, Salop.

HOME WANTED, in London, for a Youth (17) who is a Matriculated Student of the London University, and is about to become a Medical Student. He is a good shorthand writer and amanuensis, and would prefer to give his services as partial payment. Can furnish highest references.
MASTER, St. Mary's Lodge, Renfrew-road, S.E.

LAUSANNE.—The President Continental Division Y.W.C.A., desires to recommend most highly the "Pension de Famille," 7, Rue Beau Séjour, of Madame HENRIQUET, widow of a devoted French Pastor. It commands fine view of Lake and Alps. Five to six francs a day. Mlle. HENRIQUET gives lessons in French and music when desired.

CHRISTIAN HOME for commercial Young Men.—W. A. ROXBURGH has accommodation for a few more in his well-appointed private residence, 77, Queen's-road, Finsbury-park, London, N. Railway quarterly ticket to Broad-street or Moorgate-street, 30s. King's-cross in proportion. Terms 16s. per week, partial board.

A LADY LIVING in a Villa near town and station, offers a comfortable Home to a companionable Lady, on very moderate terms. A Churchwoman preferred.
BETA, care of Gazette Office, Yeovil.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Share of private House offered, on advantageous terms, to one or two Ladies interested in Christian work. Highest references required.
S., 93, Easton-street, High Wycombe.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Mancetter, West Cliff.—Superior Boarding House. Best position. Close to the sea. Very comfortable house. Moderate terms.—PROPRIETRESS.

BUXTON, Derbyshire.—Alpine Boarding House, pleasantly situated near baths and gardens. One or two Ladies would be received on very low terms permanently, or for winter months.
Proprietress, Miss PALMER.

COMFORTABLE HOME, by seaside, offered blind Christian Ladies, by one who has had charge of a blind Home. Moderate terms. Suits invalids in winter.
3, Clifton-villas, Felixstowe, Suffolk.

HOME WANTED, for a young Woman, not strong enough for housework, but could take a place as Children's Maid, or any light work. First-rate needlewoman (machine and hand-sewing). Good, trustworthy, and respectable. Country preferred.
Miss BEVAN, Fosbury Manor, Hungerford, Berks.

SALTBURN-BY-SEA.—House of Rest for Christian Workers. Bracing air. Firm, broad beach. Upland and woodland scenery. Terms from 25s. to 30s.
F. J. HOLDERNESS, Station-square.

BRIGHTON.—Part of Furnished House to be Let for about four weeks. Delightfully situated, near sea and Downs. Gardens belonging to the square. Tennis allowed. Servants will be left in the house.
Miss GOULTY, 2, Sussex-square.

BRIXTON.—Board and Residence. House newly furnished and decorated. Bath; garden. No children. Terms moderate.
55, Angell-road, Brixton, S.W.

TO BE LET, on easy terms, with attendance, during September and October, part of a commodious House, delightfully situated at Arnside, Westmoreland. Apply immediately,
Miss DREWETT, 54, Park-street, Luton.

COMFORTABLE, QUIET HOME offered one or two Ladies, in pleasantly situated private house where only four are received. Near churches, common. References.—Misses SMITH, 2, Woodbury-park-gardens, Tunbridge Wells.

HANDSOMELY FURNISHED Apartments, with private sitting-room, in a Clergyman's family, for one Gentleman or two friends. Piano, bath. Partial board. Within twenty minutes of City. Liberal terms expected.
Aberturret, Albion-road, Mildmay-park, N.

FURNISHED HOUSE to be Let for a few weeks, from the early part of September. Two sitting-rooms, four bed-rooms, bath-room, and garden.—Mrs. VEREY, 6, Park-road, Redhill.

A WIDOW LADY at Southsea will be glad to Let a furnished Bed-room, to a Lady who will board with her.—For particulars, apply S. H. J., Church-street, Coggeshall, Essex.

BUXTON.—A really comfortable Home offered in a Gentleman's family for one or two Ladies (sisters), with or without maid. Within three minutes' walk of baths and gardens.—Apply in the first place to
Mrs. M., Bow Wood Farm, Cromford, Derbyshire.

A LADY WISHES to hear of a refined Christian family in the neighbourhood of Tulse-hill, Herne-hill, or Dulwich, who would receive her Son into their home. Engaged in the City during the day. Must be abstainers.—Full particulars, Mrs. POPE, Woodside, Barcombe,

---

DOUGLAS, ISLE OF MAN.— Y.W.C.A. Seaside Home for Ladies, and young Women in business. 15s. and 20s. a week. References required.—Apply (enclosing stamp) to LADY SUPERINTENDENT, 10, Mount Havelock.

HYDROPATHIC HEALTH RESORT FOR CHRISTIANS.—Charming scenery. Moorland air among the Cotswold hills. Highly recommended.—For prospectus and terms, apply to S. PYALL DIPROSE, Pitchcombe View, Stroud, Gloucester.

A HAPPY HOME offered to one or two Ladies in the house of a country Vicar for short or longer time. Moderate terms. Evangelical ministry.
The Vicarage, Compton Chamberlayne, Salisbury.

ONE OR TWO LADIES can be received to Board in a small Christian family. Terms one guinea weekly.
M., Post-office, Clive-vale, Hastings.

GUINES EN CALAIS.—English Home for Invalids or others needing quiet, rest, or care. Children received during holidays, or ladies wishing to study French. Near extensive woods. Terms moderate.
Les Anglaises, Rue de l'Ecole, Guines.

COUNTRY HOME, refined, with high-class education, for a Girl. Resident cert. governess. Mother's care. Good training. Companion pupil wanted, for own daughter. Can remain for holidays. Healthy village near Cambridge. Terms moderate.
Mrs. S. J. WEBB, Great Chesterford, Essex.

Miscellaneous.

ANXIOUS INQUIRERS.—Numbers have received blessing through writing. All anxious ones are invited to write.—2 Cor. i. 3, 4.
EVANGELIST, Clapham, S.W.

ASTHMA.—Persons suffering from Asthma, Difficulty of Breathing, &c., are invited to try (free of charge) a remedy for affording immediate relief.—C., Mr. G. A. KEYWORTH, Hastings.

PORTABLE HARMONIUMS, ORGANS, PIANOS, &c. Mr. Gawin Kirkham, Open Air Mission, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, writes:—"I can bear personal testimony to the excellence of your instruments, which I consider the best and cheapest, shall have much personal pleasure in being your referee. Our members speak highly of them." Lowest prices.
CHARLES L. YOUNG, 21, High-street, Kingsland.

TEMPERANCE HOTEL for Sale, well situate in Central London, near the principal railway termini. It shows a good annual profit, which could be greatly increased. Price £1,000, of which £250 may remain.—Messrs. DOWSETT & Co., 3, Lincoln's-inn-fields, W.C.

ELEGANT COUNTERPANE.— Turkey twill and white calico. Coloured illustration, model, and instructions nine stamps. Artistic, short window blinds. No washing. Model and instructions, eight stamps.
CLIFFORD, Newport, Mon.

UMBRELLAS RE-COVERED FROM 2s. EACH.

IF YOUR UMBRELLA WANTS RECOVERING send it by Parcels Post (with Postal Order enclosed) to STRONG BROS., Umbrella Makers, Redhill, Surrey, who will re-cover it and return it as good as new by next post, carriage paid. Good strong twill, ladies', 2s., gents', 2s. 6d.; good alpaca, ladies', 3s., gents', 3s. 6d.; strong durable silk, ladies', 4s. 6d., gents', 5s. Patterns post free. Reference kindly permitted to the Rev. W. J. Fowell, Redhill.

BYWATER, TANQUERAY & CO., 79, Queen Victoria-street, London (late BYWATER, PERRY & CO.), are Agents for Residents abroad Missionaries, Chaplains, &c., in every part of the world. Goods and Outfits supplied at Wholesale prices. Shipping and passages arranged. Banking in all its branches. Full descriptive Catalogue post free. Specially appointed Agents to seven of the leading English and American Missionary Societies. 2,000 References.

COLONIES.—Openings for Pupils on good stock and grain farms, and larger estates in Canada, the United States, and Tasmania. Pamphlet free.—FORD, RATHBONE & CO., 21, Finsbury-pavement, London.

A MARVELLOUS TEA.—Our "Combination" Blend at 2s. per lb. is not only economical, but is peculiarly adapted to the London and Suburban water. No householder should be without it. Our 1s. 8d. also strongly recommended. Teas suitable for Ireland at 1s. 6d., 1s. 8d., 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s. Any of above Teas can be had in 5-lb., 10-lb. tins, &c. (tins free), post or carriage paid anywhere in United Kingdom on receipt of cash. Agents wanted.—THE BELFAST ANGLO TEA COMPANY, 6, George-yard, Fenchurch-street, London.

TO LADIES WITH LIMITED MEANS. —The Advertiser's son, a tea planter, seeks well recommended Agents for the sale of his Teas. Liberal commission.
Colonel MORTON, 2, Priory-parade, Cheltenham.

IRON MISSION ROOMS, &c., erected on the most reasonable terms, by R. SAUNDERS, 127, Hungerford-road, London, N. Estimates and designs free. 25 years' practical experience. Also Churches and Schools, &c. Best workmanship.

FLORIDA.—Mr. HUGH MACCALLUM, Solicitor, Winter-park, Florida, being on a visit to this country, will give reliable information regarding settlement and investment in Florida.

LADIES INTERESTED IN FANC WORK, especially those wishing to make mon thereby, should send for Dorinda's book, "Need work for Ladies, for Pleasure and Profit." N Edition, 191 pages, price 1s. 8d., post free. Conta an enormous amount of information, ample structions for every variety of work, innumera recipes and directions, novel ideas, and practi suggestions.—Ringrose, Malvern Link.

FOUR LECTURES.—A Voice fro the Wilderness. The Experience of Israel, a Co fort and Warning to God's People.—Further p ticulars, G. REYNOLDS GILL, Lady Margaret-ro London, N.W.

AN INVALID begs for orders Needlework of any description. Pocket-handk chiefs marked for 1½d. per letter. Aprons, pinafo and antimacassars, from 1s. 10d. Wool-slipp Tam-o'-Shanters, &c., &c. Work on approval.
H., Ewerby, Sleaford, Lincolnshir

NEW SHIRTS FOR OLD ONES.

Old Shirts Refitted with Irish Liner Fronts and Cuffs.
Good quality, 2/6 each. Specially fin Linen, 3/- each.
Shirts made to Pattern or Order

GEORGE O'BRIEN & CO.,
MANUFACTURERS, BELFAST

NEAVE'S

FOR INFANTS,
INVALIDS,
GROWING CHILDREN,
AND THE AGED.

FOOD.

Publications.

17th Thousand. Price 1d.

THE NEAR RETURN OF THE LO JESUS CHRIST. By CHEYNE BRADY.
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO.

MRS. GRIMKE'S TEXT CARDS. To be had from Mrs. GRIMKÉ, Prestwich, M chester, who likes orders sent to her direct, or f E. KAUFMANN, 129, Cheapside; or booksellers.

CARDS,

PRINTED IN BLUE AND GOL

2s. 6d. per 100, or 18 for Sixpenc

1. Six Short Rules for Young Christia By BROWNLOW NORTH.
2. Rules for Daily Life.
3. Oh! for a Perfect Trust.
4. The Christian's Entrance into Glo
5. Which?
6. My Prayer.
7. Pray, Always Pray.
8. Wishing You a Happy New Year.
9. Our Warrant for Coming to Christ.
10. Eight Loving Hints.
11. To Know Thee More.
12. Make Sure of Christ.
13. Looking unto Jesus.
14. Grace for the Graceless.
15. Peace, Perfect Peace.
16. My Heart's Desire.
17. "Who Loved Me."
18. Jesus is Near.

Packet of 18, assorted, 6d.

DRUMMOND'S TRACT DEPOT, Stirling
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO.

NEW COPYRIGHT TREATISE.
BY A PRACTISING PHYSICIAN.

DYSPEPSIA

WHY SUFFERED.

Also, reliable and fully detailed Dietary and M cinal Treatment of Indigestion and associ disorders, affording an absolute remedy and cu 64 pp. 8vo., 1s.; smaller size, 2d. post free f Publishers,
HAMILTON & CO., Oxford-street, Southampt

Terms for Advertisemen

IN

"The Christian

(PREPAID)

Miscellaneous Advertisements in small type charged at the following rates:—

Not exceeding 30 Words 3
" 39 " 3
" 48 " 4

And 9d. for every additional line of nine wor under, the address being in all cases charged i

To prevent disappointment, it is necessary t that in no case must Letters be addressed to a other, unless permission be previously obtain INVALUABLE TO PREACHERS OF THE GOSPEL.

Used by Mr. MOODY and other Evangelists.

"Beautiful, and containing a fundamental idea."

THE WORDLESS BOOK.

Showing in a manner intelligible to the simplest the mode of transition from the state of Sin (Black) to that of Glory (Gold).

Price 2d.; by post, 2½d.
Small Size, 1d.; by post, 1½d.

Worcester:
F. S. MACKIE, Avenue Printing Works.
London:
BROOM & ROUSE, 25, Paternoster-square.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

A Personal Narrative.

By ELIZA RICHARDSON,

Author of "PERSONAL EXPERIENCE OF ROMAN CATHOLICISM," "THE VEIL LIFTED," &c.

Neatly printed in Red and Black. Suitable for enclosing in the ordinary square envelope, 1s. per dozen, or 7s. per hundred, post free.

"It was a dark page in my experience, when first I knelt at the feet of a mortal to confess what should have been poured into the ear of God alone. I cannot dwell upon this; but a brief time before it would have for ever put to rest my longings after Romanism. Though I believe my confessor was, on the whole, as guarded as his manner was kind, at some things I was strangely startled, utterly confounded."—Extract.

MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

A BEAUTIFUL WEDDING GIFT BOOK.

MARRIAGE AND HOME.

A Volume of Friendly Counsels to the Newly-Married.

Elegant cloth binding, sides in gilt and colours, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.
Handsome leather binding, gilt edges, 4s. 6d.

"It contains excellent advice to all those who have just entered wedded life. . . . We may say it is one of the very few books which can be safely selected for a gift on their wedding day. It is elegantly bound."—Ladies' Gazette of Fashion.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-bdgs.; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

THE CHRISTIAN CHOIR.

An Attractive Quarto Volume of Music and Words.

By IRA D. SANKEY and JAMES McGRANAHAN.

May be had either in OLD NOTATION or in TONIC SOL-FA.

"It is as fine a collection of Sacred Airs as can anywhere be found. All the Hymns and the Tunes are beautiful, impressive, gracious; and the rendering of them, and the hearing them sung in private or public alike, have led many to change their whole course of life."—Oldham Chronicle.

"Of this Sacred Song Book it is scarcely needful for us to say a word. Thousands have listened and thousands have sung them, and will retain their good impressions when all the mists have rolled away."—Baptist Messenger.

Songs and Solos and Christian Choir.
WORDS ONLY.

Cloth Limp 0 6
Cloth Boards 0 9

Songs and Solos and Christian Choir.
WORDS ONLY.

LARGE PRINT. Cloth Limp .. 2 6
Cloth Bds., gilt edges 3 0

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Tinted Covers, ONE SHILLING; Cloth Boards, EIGHTEENPENCE.

SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS
NOT SINLESS PERFECTION.

By Rev. CHARLES GRAHAM,

Author of "Christ our Light," "The Highway of Holiness," etc., etc.

COMMENDATORY NOTICES.

"We are glad to see that Mr. Graham does not come forward as an advocate of what is called 'sinless perfection'; and his arguments in favour of striving towards the attainment of a higher life than any of us live are sound and Scriptural."
The Rock.

"His treatment is simple and Scriptural, and not the least satisfactory point in his argument is his refutation of the idea of 'sinless perfection' from the writings of that very apostle who is supposed by some people to teach it."—The Baptist.

"The book is full of the marrow of the Gospel, and will do anyone good who reads it."
Irish Baptist Magazine.

"Mr. Graham clearly teaches the truth of complete and certain victory, always within the reach of all believers. He teaches also how this victory is to be sustained day by day, and how also it may be lost. Our readers will do well, with open Bible, to read this little eighteenpenny book."—Penuel.

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

DAILY LIGHT ON THE DAILY PATH.

IN THE VERY WORDS OF SCRIPTURE.

Two Volumes. Morning Hour, and Evening Hour. Sold separately or in sets.

"These are very precious little books, and few more suitable gifts could be found."
Christian.

Small Edition, each volume, cloth, 1s.; French morocco, gilt edges, 2s.
Large Type Edition, each volume, cloth extra, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.
Various Styles in calf, morocco, and German calf.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, 15, Paternoster-row.

DAINTREE & CO., DYERS, LONDON.

The LARGEST WORKS IN LONDON for Dyeing and Cleaning in every Branch.
98, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.; 365, Southwark-park-road, S.E.; 44, Leicester-square, W.C.

Carts Collect and Deliver to all parts.—PRICE LISTS BY POST.

SCRIPTURAL PROOFS

THAT GOD OFFERS US IN OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST PERFECT DELIVERANCE FROM ALL SIN, INWARD AS WELL AS OUTWARD, IF WE WILL BUT RECEIVE HIM AND BELIEVE ON HIS NAME FOR ALL THAT GOD HAS MADE HIM TO BE TO US. (John i. 12; 1 Cor. i. 30.)

BY

J. P. WILSON.

"Holiness by faith in Jesus,
Not by effort of thine own,
Sin's dominion crushed and broken
By the power of grace alone.
God's own holiness within thee,
His own beauty on thy brow;
This shall be thy pilgrim brightness,
This thy blessed portion now."
Miss HAVERGAL.

LONDON:
S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO., 9, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.
1887.

THE above is the title-page of a book of 408 pages, price in cloth two shillings, consisting of the contents of three little books, "First Sheets of Scriptural Proofs," "Further Sheets of Scriptural Proofs," and "Third Series of Scriptural Proofs," hitherto sent out separately, and only to applicants by letter for them, now put together for general publication. The object of the book is simply to direct attention to what God says in his Word on the extent of deliverance from sin given us in our Lord Jesus Christ. Many letters have been received from readers of the separate parts, showing that this object has been attained in their case. The following are extracts from a few of them:—

"Reading your books has driven me more to the precious truth; and our loving Father has opened more light to me—more than ever I expected to get. Praise his dear name!"

"I have read it carefully, and can find nothing of man in it, but all in it to be the revealed power of God. I have received great encouragement and strength from the reading of it."

"Thank you so much for your little book. It has helped me to realise more fully 'the glorious gospel of Christ.'"

"I have read the 'Proofs,' and they have opened my eyes greatly to what may be obtained by faith and prayer."

"I have read several parts of it many times over. It seems to me just the kind of book to put a solid scriptural foundation under the faith of those who are conscious of a real and godly change of heart, and of an eager desire to be wholly the Lord's."

"I rejoice greatly in it. It is well calculated to stimulate an earnest desire in the hearts of the Lord's dear people to search the Scriptures more diligently and prayerfully, like the Bereans, 'daily whether these things were so.'"

"I have read your little book, lent me by a friend, and I do desire heartily to thank my God that it was put into my hands.

"Though for years I have known my Saviour's love, and experienced the incoming of the Holy Ghost in power in my soul, yet since reading 'Scriptural Proofs' I have had a fresh revelation of what Jesus is to me in his capacity of Saviour; and I have been able to grasp Him in a fuller and more comprehensive faith as my deliverer from indwelling sin; and that on the truth of the living God as shown so clearly in your little book.

"My heart goes with every line of it. I do trust and believe it will be blessed wherever it is read: there is so little of man in it, and so much of God."

BY SPECIAL ROYAL AND IMPERIAL WARRANT!

FASHIONABLE DRESS MATERIALS

For Ladies', Children's, and Gentlemen's Dress. Unsurpassed for Beauty, Novelty, and Sterling Value. The Immense Variety of Patterns comprise Specialities to suit all Classes, all Climates, all Fashions, and all Purses, from 10½d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.

PATTERNS FREE.

REGISTERED.

Egerton Burnett's Royal Serges

REGISTERED.

NEW PATTERNS FOR SUMMER, 1887.

Any Length of Material Sold.

Carriage Paid on Orders of £1 in value to any Railway Station in the United Kingdom.

Goods Packed for Exportation.

Address: EGERTON BURNETT, Serge Warehouse, WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.

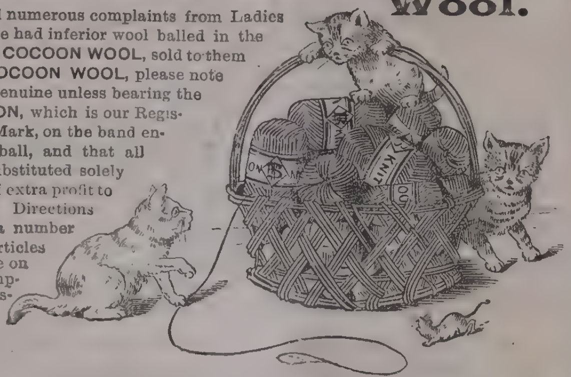
CAUTION.—Egerton Burnett has no Agents. All orders are executed direct.

"COCOON" Knitting Wool.

Having had numerous complaints from Ladies that they have had inferior wool balled in the same style as COCOON WOOL, sold to them as genuine COCOON WOOL, please note that none is genuine unless bearing the word COCOON, which is our Registered Trade Mark, on the band encircling the ball, and that all others are substituted solely for the sake of extra profit to the retailer. Directions for knitting a number of useful articles free of charge on receipt of stamped and addressed envelope, mentioning name of this paper.



COCOON
KNIT

"The fastest possible dyes are used for Cocoon Wool."

WOOD & BURTT, SPINNERS, HOLMFIRTH.

INDIAN MUSLIN.

Pure Cream-coloured Muslin (25 inches wide). Washes well. Useful for DRESSES, CURTAINS, BLINDS, DRAPERIES, SHADING, &c.

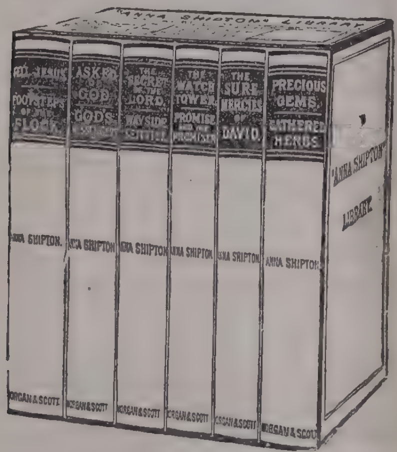
45 Yards for 6s. 6d. Free per post on receipt of Postal Order.

90 Yards for 12s. 6d. Free per post on receipt of Postal Order.

And in Colours. Much used for Decoration, Bazaars, Entertainments, &c. Beautiful Effects at a Small Cost. Novelties also in Useful and Fancy Fabrics for Dresses and Draperies.

Patterns and Prices Post Free.

JOHN KAY AND SONS, BURNLEY WOOD MILLS, BURNLEY.



ANNA SHIPTON'S LIBRARY
TELL JESUS FOOTSTEPS OF THE FLOCK
ASKED OF GOD GOD'S MESSENGERS
THE SECRET OF THE LORD WAYSIDE SERVICE
THE WATCH TOWER PROMISE AND THE PROMISER
THE SURE MERCIES OF DAVID
PRECIOUS GEMS GATHERED HERBS
"ANNA SHIPTON" LIBRARY
ANNA SHIPTON
MORGAN & SCOTT

The "ANNA SHIPTON" Library.

CONTAINING ELEVEN OF ANNA SHIPTON'S FAVOURITE WORKS BOUND UP IN SIX VOLUMES

Contents:

1. Tell Jesus. Footsteps of the Flock.
2. The Secret of the Lord. Wayside Service.
3. Precious Gems. Gathered Herbs.
4. The Watchtower in the Wilderness. The Promise and the Promiser.
5. —The Sure Mercies of David.
6. Asked of God. God's Messengers.

10/6 NETT

☞ The Ordinary price of the Volumes separately, in Cloth binding, would amount to 17s. 6d.

"We have just been dipping into the above volumes, and are exceedingly struck with their singular freshness of thought and tastefulness of style."—Word and Work.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

SODDY'S BAKING POWDER IS THE BEST
TO PROVE IT
A SAMPLE PACKET WITH NEW RECIPE FOR A CAKE WILL BE SENT GRATIS & POST FREE
BY B. SODDY, WALWORTH RD. LONDON.

HYMNS for OPEN-AIR MEETINGS.

A large Variety of Sheet Hymns for OPEN-AIR and other MEETINGS kept in stock. FIFTY-ONE different sorts. Prices—6d. per 100; 9d. per 100; 1s. 6d. per 100. From Six Hymns to Twenty Hymns on Sheet.

Complete Lists and Specimens sent free on application.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster Buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

The Christian:

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED "THE REVIVAL."

A Weekly Record of Christian Life, Christian Testimony, Christian Work and Missionary Enterprise.

No. 918.] LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS, E.C. FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1887. REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. AS A NEWSPAPER. [ONE PENNY. POST FREE, 1½d.

THE LATE

MR. JAMES BARLOW, J.P.

IT is often urged that, whilst persons freed from business cares may lead the higher life, a man who is constantly engaged in commerce, and who has to rub shoulder to shoulder with men of the world, cannot maintain a high standard of spirituality. The subject of our present sketch was a living contradiction to such a libel upon the power of God.

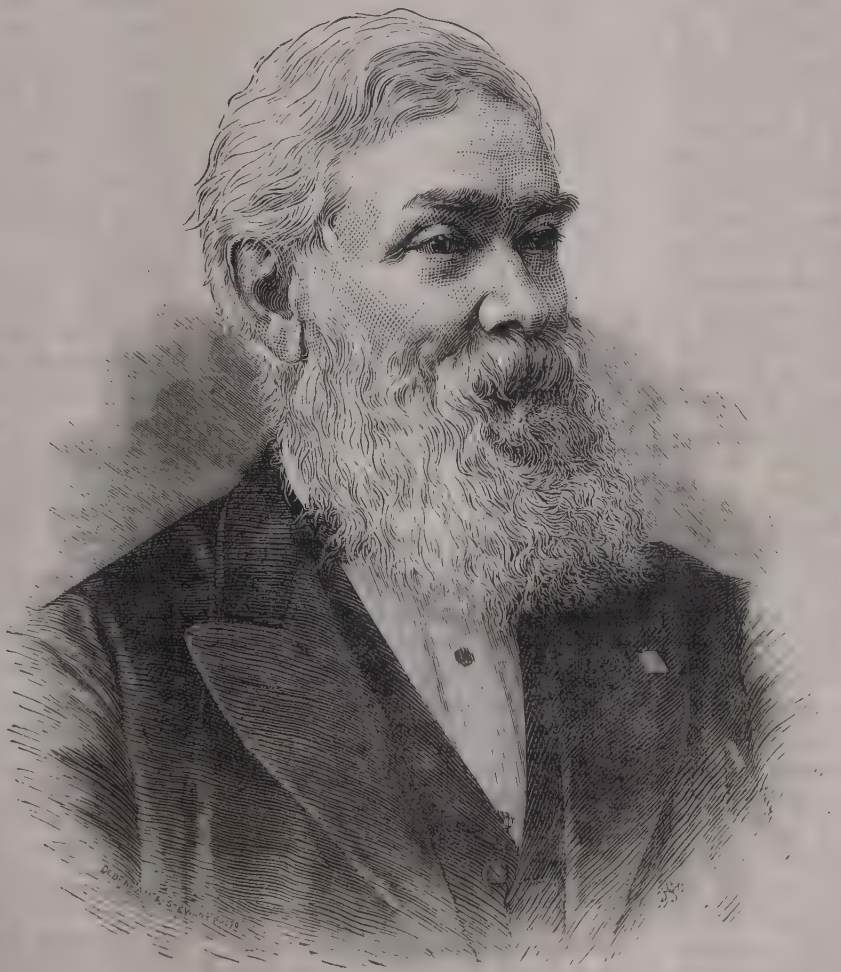
James Barlow's life was one of such devotion and self-sacrifice as to be specially worthy of admiration and study. Some of the teachers of Christianity would have us believe that religion consists in the art of doing good; but this is not a cause, it is a consequence. True religion consists in being good, and the effect—doing good—must follow. It was Mr. Barlow's deep personal spirituality that was the source and secret of the long and effective service which he rendered to the world.

JAMES BARLOW was born at Tottington, in 1821. His father was in humble circumstances—half farmer and half weaver. When not attending to his cattle and fields, he worked at the hand-loom at the rear of the farmhouse. He was well known and esteemed as a godly man, with a strong and consistent attachment to the Methodist Society. The atmosphere of his home was fragrant with Christian influences, and though James sustained a great loss, when he was but four years old, in the death of his mother, his young life was rightly directed, and from his youth he feared the Lord.

This was one great secret of his power. There was strength and stedfastness about his character, because the fear of God was the ruling principle of his life from youth onwards. He learnt something of both farming and weaving, but his tastes lay in the direction of the latter employment. While but a boy he attended the Manchester market for his father, and evidenced a shrewdness in buying and selling which gave promise of the business capacity which he afterwards developed.

His first experience of business life after leaving home was most unfortunate. He entered into partnership with a Manchester salesman, but the union was unhappy, and Mr. Barlow not only lost all the capital he had invested in the business, but found himself considerably in debt. With the energy and determination which always characterised him, he set to work to retrieve his position, and soon discharged all his liabilities, entering into business in Bolton in 1846, in the quilt trade. From this period his career was marked by a series of splendid successes.

He had not been long in Bolton before he resolved to introduce steam in the place of hand power. In this he was strenuously opposed by some of his workpeople. None of these obstacles diverted him. The business became firmly established, and grew until it attained its present dimensions, finding employment for nearly 3000 persons, and paying £100,000 yearly in wage.



(From Photograph by Messrs. Debenham & Stewart.)

Mr. Barlow's workpeople soon found that he meant well by them, and from that time there were repeated evidences of the mutual good feeling which existed. When the firm entertained their staff in 1857, Mr. Barlow spoke on the relations which ought to exist between employers and employed, and declared it to be the duty of employers to give their hands full employment, if possible, and the largest remuneration the state of trade would allow. He wished them, he said, to regard him always as a friend.

In 1876 the firm took their workpeople generally into partnership with them, and a goodly number of shares in the concern are now held by the employés.

Matthew Henry points out that when Abraham came up from Egypt he brought a great number of souls. "In the old time," he says, "a man's servant was a soul." To-day, with too many masters the servant is simply a hand, into which they put as little wages as possible, and out of which they get as much work as they can. Mr Barlow saw behind the hand a living soul. He realised that business does almost more than anything else to train the habits of millions; demanding men's thought and energy, asking of them the exercise of their judgment, requiring the verdict of their conscience every hour, and that it was supremely important that business should be carried on with the strictest adherence to the laws of Christ.

Of his municipal life we need only say that he was twice elected to the position of chief magistrate of Bolton, and when his services in this capacity were acknowledged, special reference was made to the "calmness, fearlessness, and inflexibility with which he had done that which was right, ever looking to that higher source from whence he derived his strength."

Mr. Barlow has left many a lasting monument of his labours as a Christian philanthropist. All through his life he was an enthusiastic temperance advocate. He was a liberal supporter of the United Kingdom Alliance, and in 1876 was elected President of the British Temperance League, which office he held to the time of his death. He laboured most energetically to secure healthy habitations for the people, and originated a movement for providing halls for working men where they might obtain refreshment and recreation without the temptations of the public-house.

In the Social Purity Crusade he took the deepest interest, and when attention was directed two summers ago to the awful perils surrounding the lives of the daughters of the poor, his whole soul was stirred with righteous indignation. So deeply did he feel the disclosures then made, that his physical system received a shock which for a short time completely prostrated him.

In James Barlow, the strength and gentleness which have ever been harmoniously blended in the lives of the truly great were clearly marked. As Rev. C. Garrett said at the funeral, "While he had an iron will, he had a wonderfully tender heart." His was just the nature children loved, and young life had to him a special charm and interest. Nothing illustrates this more strikingly than an incident which took place during the late Conference at Manchester. A little waif was brought to the Central Hall, where the Conference was assembled, by one of the missionaries—a boy with scarcely a particle of clothing about him. Mr. Barlow heard his story, and then patting him on the head said, not "I will send someone with you," but, "You shall go home with me."

One of the most successful branches of the Children's Home was his gift. It consisted of 100 acres of ground, and an endowment of £5000. His interest in the work at Edgworth was so intense, and his sympathy with the children so real, that when the news of his death reached the Home, the boys who were playing at cricket soon lost all interest in the game, while one threw down his bat, and with tears said, "I can't play while Mr. Barlow is lying dead," and so the game was abandoned.

Many men who attain the position occupied by Mr. Barlow are content with impersonal service. Not so with him. His was the highest type of sacrifice, because it was personal. He gave many princely donations to forward the kingdom of Christ among men, but, better than all, he gave himself. From his youth he found a congenial sphere of labour in the Sunday-school, and on one occasion declared publicly that the happiest portion of his life was when he had a class of young men before him, endeavouring to instil into their minds the great doctrines of salvation.

He was a faithful adherent of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, filling all the offices, receiving all the rewards open to laymen with his usual grace. Nearly thirty years ago he entertained the late Charles G. Finney, of America, for three months, and witnessed a marvellous outpouring of the Spirit in Bolton. Mr. Finney speaks of his host in his autobiography as "a man of sterling piety, and very unsectarian in his views and feelings."

Mr. Barlow returned on Monday evening, August 16, from a short holiday in the Lake District, in company with Rev. C. Garrett. He rose as usual in the morning, and appeared at the breakfast table. On going into another room he was seized with apoplexy, and became unconscious. In half an hour he passed away, in the presence of his wife and daughters, not having regained consciousness, nor having spoken to anyone.

> There was no last word of love,
>   So suddenly the sorrow on them fell.
> His bright translation to the world above
>   Was clouded with no shadow of farewell.

On the following Friday the earthly remains of Mr. Barlow was laid in the grave amid the tears and sympathy of thousands of people, including representatives of nearly all the philanthropic and religious bodies of the district. He needs no monument: his friends have only to look around to find abundant evidences of the fidelity with which he served his generation according to the will of God.

"BELIEF AND FAITH."

I HAVE read the article in THE CHRISTIAN of this week, entitled, "Belief and Faith," in which the writer calls attention to the importance of distinguishing between belief and faith, whilst conversing with anxious inquirers who say they believe and yet are not saved.

I find it most helpful in dealing with such individuals to show them the distinction and the connection between the warrant of their faith—the Word of God, and the object of their faith—the Son of God. The following incident will show what I mean :—

One evening at the close of an evangelistic service an intelligent young woman, who, with a number of others, had stayed to the inquiry meeting, and who lingered behind, said to the writer, "I am sorry I cannot say what each of my companions has said to you. I cannot say that I am a Christian."

"And what do you think it is that prevents you being one?"

"I do not know. I desire to be one, and for some time past I have been under a deep sense of sin; but I cannot find rest."

"Have you been dealt with while in this anxious condition?"

"Yes. Several individuals have spoken to me."

"Tell me something like what passed during these conversations, if you can recall them."

"Generally those who spoke to me turned my attention to some text of Scripture, such as John iii. 16. That was more frequently the verse than any other. Then they read it, or requested me to read it, and after it was read they asked me if I believed it. I said I did; that I had been taught from a child to believe the Word of God."

"And what did they say to that?"

"They said that if I believed John iii. 16 I was a Christian. I told them that I believed John iii. 16, and I knew I was not a Christian, for my life was not a bit changed. Then I could not be believing the verse, they said; I was only thinking I was believing it."

"And what followed?"

"Then they turned me to some other Gospel verse, in the hope that I might, by a change of passage, see it clearer."

"Did you see it clearer in the new verse?"

"No."

"And what did they do then?"

"Some of them argued with me, and tried to show me that I was not believing the Word; and others gave me up, saying they could make nothing of me."

"When you were pointed to John iii. 16, and asked if you believed that verse, and you replied that you did, were you not asked any question connected with your belief of the verse?"

"No. What question should have been asked?"

"This one, or something like it: Has your belief of that verse led you to trust Christ?"

Here my inquirer paused for a moment, evidently reflecting on the meaning of the question, and replied—

"Then there is a belief of the Word, and a trusting of Christ."

"Yes; we speak of the Word of God as the ground, or warrant of our faith, and of the Son of God as the object of faith. Perhaps this illustration will help you to understand the distinction. A lady friend of mine, who has money of her own, came to me once to get my opinion regarding a gentleman I knew, who had offered her a very good return for her money, if she would invest it in his business. I was able to speak confidently of my friend, and the lady was satisfied. But, tell me, when did she trust this business man?"

"Oh, not till she put her money in his hand."

"You are quite right. And just suppose that, after hearing my testimony regarding him, she had thanked me for my information, saying she believed every word I had said, but never went near him, or trusted him with her money, would her belief of my word have been of any consequence to her?"

"No. I see that clearly, and that is just what I have been doing."

"Yes, it is; for while you have had the testimony of the Father and of the Holy Spirit as to the trustworthiness of the Lord Jesus Christ (and that, you say, you have not doubted), yet at the same time you see you have not acted on your belief, you have not trusted Christ. Let us turn now to John iii. 16, 'God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him.' Observe, it is not whosoever believeth about Him, but whosoever putteth trust in Him, 'should not perish, but have everlasting life!'"

She thanked me, said she quite understood it, and went away, I have no doubt, believing the Word, and trusting the Lord Jesus as her Saviour. A. M.

A BUDDHIST PRIEST ON CHRISTIANITY.

Criticisms of Christ and Christianity are numerous enough, but few of them are free from prejudice. To be the friend or foe of a system affects our opinions regarding that system; only one who occupies an entirely neutral position can give a thoroughly unbiassed judgment. This being so, it is with peculiar interest that we read the opinions of a Buddhist priest on Christianity, as they are set forth in an article in The Nonconformist of August 18. Kenjin Kasawara came from Japan to this country in search of knowledge. He studied hard and successfully. The tutor who taught him English found that his acquaintance with Christianity was extremely superficial, and conceived the idea of putting him face to face with the Christ of the Gospels, in the hope that he would give utterance to the impressions made on him by those records of the person and life of the Saviour. The plan was carried out, with the result that we have honest criticisms of Christianity from the standpoint of an intelligent Buddhist. The pupil did not know how deeply interested his teacher was in the opinions he expressed with simplicity and candour. This unconsciousness adds to the value of the opinions.

Mr. Kasawara was, to begin with, naturally struck by the coincidences between Buddhism and Christianity he met with in the Gospels. Many moral ideas and aspirations were identical; but a serious difference emerged in the emphasis laid on the Christ. His supreme conception as a Buddhist was that of the "Infinite Light," but Jesus, while claiming to be the Light, rose to a higher platform of Divine manifestation when He spoke of Himself as the expression of Infinite Love. The opening verses of John's Gospel had a peculiar charm for the follower of Buddha. Difficult as they are to many theologians, they were not difficult to him. He said that God was always necessarily manifested, that He could only be known by manifestation, and that, therefore, the Word or manifestation was from the beginning, was with God, and was God. This manifestation, or Word, becoming flesh is John's idea of Jesus the Christ, just as it is the Buddhist's idea of the Buddha. Mr. Kasawara apprehended that the Word of God means that God revealed Himself in the person of the man Jesus. "Man," according to him, "can only rise to the conception of God by the help of humanity. The ideal man must needs be the image of the invisible God."

Of the person and character of Christ, as presented in the Gospels, he spoke in terms of highest admiration. He could think of nothing more morally beautiful in spirit and life. The consistency of the portraiture carried with it the evidence of its truth. In every word and deed were the consciousness of superior grandeur and intimate relations with the invisible essence. On one occasion the tutor asked his pupil how he should describe Christianity to his Buddhist friends. He expressed the conviction that "Christ has spoken the first and last word of true religion, and is the first and last example of it in the purity and perfection of his own personal life." Buddhist as he was, he could not help hoping that Christianity would spread over Japan. Through the preaching of Christ his fellow countrymen would, he believed, be lifted up into a nobler and happier life. He readily, if sadly, admitted that Christianity was immensely superior to his own religion in the emphasis it laid on individuality, and in the hope of personal immortality it held out. The beauty and grandeur of the doctrine of the resurrection impressed him greatly. He never heard a Christian minister preach, but he thought such a man would always be talking about Christ and seeking to bring all human life to Christ. (Would that it were so!)

These are some of the conclusions reached by an unbiassed and intelligent critic of Christianity. It must be remembered that his sole source of information was the four Gospels. His tutor did not in any way influence his judgment. We cannot help wondering that Mr. Kasawara did not go further when he went so far. Perhaps the absorbing nature of the studies he was engaged in prevented him from following up his studies in Christianity. Sanskrit engrossed his time and thoughts. His health, always delicate, was seriously impaired by devotion to research. Soon after he left Oxford on a mission to the Buddhist communities of Ceylon he grew worse and died. His friends bear witness to the beauty of his life, and his criticisms of Christianity prove the rare candour of his thinking.

◆

"Such PEOPLE are so THRIFTLESS!"

With these words, the hard case of the unemployed villager has often been dismissed from the conversation and consciences of those who have discussed it around some well-spread dinner-table. Some often-told story of ham and eggs for breakfast, or tinned salmon discovered in a cottage at tea-time, has served to settle the whole question, and to relieve minds that had just begun to realise responsibility in the matter of what was threatening to become a painful burden.

"How did they manage to get the money thus extravagantly spent?" I have often asked, when told how labourers have been found revelling in luxuries excluded from the tables of richer neighbours; and at such times I have discovered a desire on the part of certain fast talkers to leave the matter veiled in mystery. But determined to have the truth, it has generally turned out that the amount supposed to have been squandered in salmon, &c., has been the residue of a labourer's weekly pay (never averaging more than eleven shillings through the year), when the price of fire, rent, clothing, and a host of other money-demanding matters, together with that of food for a man, a woman, and three or four children has been taken from it. Instead of allowing thriftlessness, the circumstances in which a married villager generally finds himself enforce necessary thrift, and it becomes simply marvellous how many large families manage to subsist at all.

I was watching a number of youths who were bathing in the Ouse last week, when one of them got out of his depth. As there were so many in the water, his struggles were unnoticed, till someone shouted, "Jem's drowning." Instantly a splendid young fellow shot through the water, and, slipping his arm under the other as he came up the second or third time, brought him to the bank, and then coolly returned to teach some lesser boys to swim, as if nothing unusual had happened. Admiration for his pluck, skill, and strength having awakened an interest in him, I found that, though he was as big as many married men in factory districts, yet, being under thirteen years of age, he was kept by law to school, and was consequently dependent on his parents for his very food.

At sixteen years of age, if paid as other lads, that young hero will only get about five shillings weekly on a farm; and having from the time of going to work to keep himself and clothe himself, to pay a pound a year into some benefit society, and another to his shoemaker—to possibly lose several weeks in every year through scarcity of work—with wages only rising ultimately to about eleven or twelve shillings a week, how much money will he probably have saved, if spared to reach man's estate? Let there have been ten pounds stowed away in the elm box holding all his other earthlies, and he will not have done amiss.

But then there may come a time when he shall be weeks, and possibly months, without work; and how about the ten pounds then? Oh, how it went to my heart, last "Plough Monday," when I found I had spoken roughly to two young men from a neighbouring village, who, with blackened faces, were begging halfpence. "I have had no work, sir, for thirteen weeks," said one of them, sorrowfully. "Nor I for eleven," added the other, and there was little prospect of their obtaining work then.

I spoke to a young man, the other night—steady, industrious, and almost a life-long "abstainer"—who had, at one time, saved a nice little sum of money; but, having had some dispute with his employer, he lost his work and remained for five or six months with scarcely anything to do. Then, of course, was lost for ever the greater part of a life's earnings, and the poor lad found himself on a level with those that had made no single effort to raise themselves.

Some would have us to believe that money saved by the wife while in service is stored up against an evil day. But it is small opportunity for saving money that the girl who becomes a labourer's wife finds while she is out at service. For the first year or two, she needs all she gets to pay for clothes and shoes, and, then, so many are the appeals from home when the mother is sick, the father out of work, and the little baby born or buried, that, poor lassie, the whole of her savings generally disappears in the purchase of the plain but necessary furniture that is found in the cottage home.

At marriage, the possibility of saving anything vanishes altogether, and happy the couple that can keep wholly out of debt. Formerly a labourer could manage five pounds extra in harvest, if working sixteen or seventeen hours out of the twenty-four. It is seldom he can do this now. Harvest "extras" are now possible but to few, and as, within a short distance of where I sit to write, machines are being worked that not only cut the wheat but bind it into sheaves, I suppose that ere long they will cease entirely.

If privileged another week to have a last word, on the aged poor, I believe I shall find it possible while giving a few simple but truthful details, to stir up something like indignation against the present order of things, and possibly against some of ourselves as being involved in this. But I would now conclude this brief article by commending to its readers a passage from Holy Writ. It is this:—

"While we have time, let us do good unto all men, and specially unto them that are of the household of faith." I was so struck on Sunday night with the first four words that I could not help repeating them—"While we have time."

Another Scripture tells us that this "time is short," and experience makes us feel that it is ever growing less. Oh, then, to do good while opportunity lasts! Rightly or wrongly rejecting the idea of some that at the end of Matt. xxv., the Lord Jesus speaks with reference to the treatment of missionary Jews; and believing that in the sick and needy, hungry, thirsty, and naked ones of whom He speaks to those on either side of Him, are those believers which are found in the poor that surround us, I would fain myself remember, and have all my brethren in Christ remember, that what is done to any one of these is done also unto Him. John E. Linnell.

Pavenham Vicarage, Bedford.

THE GOSPEL ON THE CONTINENT.—The forty-seventh annual report of the Foreign Aid Society for the Diffusion of the Gospel on the Continent contains a number of facts concerning the work being done by this instrumentality, and the way in which the Gospel is making its way amongst the country people in many villages of France and Belgium. Six well-known continental societies are aided by the funds of this Society, and the accounts from the various stations are full of interest. They show that still it is true, as when Christ was upon earth, that "the common people" hear Him gladly as He speaks through his Word, whilst the learned and rich too often turn a deaf ear to the story of his love. It will suffice to say that by one of the societies thus helped—the Société Evangélique Belge—the Gospel is regularly preached in eighty-three different places, whilst fifty-seven Sunday-schools, regular colportage and other work, attest the earnestness with which evangelistic work is being carried on in many a town and village on the Continent. The importance of such work makes it the more regrettable that want of funds should have suggested the advisability of giving up some of the stations. The secretary of the Foreign Aid Society is Rev. H. J. Browne, M.A., Barnet, N.

ELIJAH THE PROPHET.—16.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Leicester.

EVENSONG.

2 Kings ii.

It was the cherished wish of Dr. Chalmers that there should be granted to him a Sabbatic decade, after the six decades of work, between the sixtieth and seventieth years of life, so completing its entire week. And it was surely a natural desire on the part of one who ranks amongst the foremost workers of our time. Whether or not this had been a specific desire of Elijah, in God's gracious providence it fell to his lot. And after a life full of storm and tempest it came to pass that at eventide there was light and peace, and a parenthesis of rest, as if the spirit of the world which he was about to enter were already shedding its spell over his path. There is always something beautiful in the declining years of one who in earlier life has dared nobly and wrought successfully. Younger men gather round the veteran to whom they owe the inspiration and model of their lives, and call him father, enwreathing his grey locks with crowns in which love is entwined with reverence. Harvests sown years before from seeds almost forgotten, or reckoned lost, yield their golden returns. Memory rescues from the oblivion of the past many priceless records; whilst hope, standing before the thinning veil, tells of things not perfectly seen as yet, but growing on the gaze of the ripened spirit. The old force still gleams in the eye, but its rays are tempered by that tenderness for human frailty, and that deep self-knowledge, which years alone can yield. The crudities are ripened; the harshnesses are softened, the bitternesses are mellowed. Marah waters no longer forbid the thirsty lips, but an Elim invites the weary. And from those revered lips flow rivers of wise and loving counsel to the younger generations grouped around. Such a life-evening seems to have been Elijah's. He did not reach a great old age. In all likelihood he showed no signs of physical decay. His eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated. He probably betrayed his age more in the deeds he had done, and in the mellowness of his spirit, than in the infirmities of the natural man. Still there is little room for doubt that the noon of his life was well passed when he prepared himself for his final journey. And it must have been very grateful to him, as it was most fruitful of blessing to his country and to the cause of God, that there was granted a time of comparative calm at the close of his tempestuous career.

For those years of retirement were valuable, in the highest degree, both in their immediate results upon hundreds of young lives, and in their far-off results on the coming times.

I. The work of the closing years of Elijah's life.—His life has been called a "One-man Ministry," and there is much in it to warrant the description. This one man was, as Elisha said, "The chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof." He made his age. Towering above all the men of his time, he cleft his way through the crowds of meaner souls, and withstood the onslaughts of evil, as a rock shakes off the waves that break on it into volumes of spray. By heroic exploits, and by deeds of superhuman might, he strove single-handed against the tides of idolatry and sin that were sweeping over the land. In this he reminds us perpetually of Martin Luther, and of John Knox; all these men were spiritual giants; by reason of their faith, which could appropriate the power of God, as the lightning-conductor can rob the thunder-cloud of its electric stores, and bring them to the earth.

But, though largely successful in keeping the cause of true religion from dying out, Elijah must often have realised the desirability of carrying on the work more systematically, and of leavening the country more thoroughly with the influence of devoted men. So, under Divine direction, he carefully fostered, if he did not altogether inaugurate, an institution which was a relic of former times, and known as the Schools of the Prophets.

The Christian traveller among the Western Isles of Scotland will hardly fail to visit one small, bare, lone spot, far out amid the roll of the Atlantic waves. It is thy shore, Iona, of which I write! No natural beauties arrest the eye or enchain the interest. There is but one poor village, with its two boats, and a squalid population. Yet who can visit that low shore, and stand amid those crumbling ruins, without intense emotion, since it was there that Columba built the first Christian church, to shed its gentle rays over those benighted regions; and to shelter the young apostles who carried the Gospel throughout the pagan kingdoms of Northern Britain. With similar emotions should we stand amid the ruins of Bethel, Gilgal, and Jericho, where, in his declining years, Elijah gathered around him the flower of the seven thousand; and educated them to receive and transmit something of his own spiritual force and fire. These were the missionary seminaries of the age; the repositories of sacred truth and learning; and beneath his influence, an Isaiah, a Hosea, an Ezekiel may have first received impulses which have since thrilled through the world.

These young men were formed into separate companies of fifty, in different towns. They were called "sons," the chief among them, like the abbot of a monastery, was called father. Clad in a simple dress, they had their food in common, and dwelt in huts slightly made of the branches of trees. They were well versed in the sacred books, which they probably transcribed for circulation, and read in the hearing of the people. They were frequently sent forth on the errands of God's Spirit, to anoint a king, to upbraid a high-handed sinner, or to take the part of oppressed and injured innocence. It was, therefore, no small work for Elijah to put these schools on so secure a basis that, when he was gone, they might perpetuate his influence and guard the flames which he had kindled.

II. The attitude of his spirit in anticipating his translation.—The old man clung to those young hearts, and felt that his last days could not be better spent than in seeing them once more; though he resolved to say nothing of his approaching departure, or of the conspicuous honour that was shortly to be conferred on him. Here is the humility of true greatness! He foresaw that he was to enjoy an exodus, to which, in the whole history of the race, there had been but one parallel. Yet he was so reticent about it that, if he had had his way, no mortal eye would have beheld it. Anyone less great would have let the secret out, or have contrived to line the heights of the Jordan with expectant crowds of witnesses. But, instead of this, he kept the secret well locked up within him, and tried to dissuade Elisha from accompanying him a single step. "Tarry thou here." Perhaps that loyal heart feared attracting to himself, either then or afterwards, honour due only to God.

Alas! what a rebuke is here for ourselves! The prophet's evident desire to die alone shames us, when we remember how eager we are to tell men, by every available medium, of what we are doing for the Lord. There is not a talent with which He entrusts us, which we do not parade as a matter of self-laudation. There is not a breath of success that does not mightily puff us up. What wonder that our Father dare not give us much marked success, or many conspicuous spiritual endowments, lest we be tempted further to our ruin! Oh, when shall we be free of ourselves! Would that we could live so perpetually facing the sun that we might never see the dark shadow of self. "I could not see for the glory of that light." The Holy Spirit of life, alone, can set us free from the law of sin and death. Let us urge Him to hasten the performance of His gracious office; and to give us the sweet humility of this man, who was willing to efface himself that men might think only of his Master and Lord.

We are also deeply impressed by the calm tenor of the prophet's course through those closing days. He knew that ere many suns had set he would be standing in the metropolis of the universe among his peers, understanding all the mysteries that had puzzled his eager spirit, and beholding the face of God; and we might have expected him to fill the preceding hours with ecstatic offices of devotion. But instead, he spent the days, as he had often spent them before, visiting the schools of the prophets, and quietly conversing with his friend, till the chariot swept him from his side. And, as we consider that spectacle, we learn that a good man should so live that he need make no extra preparation when death suddenly summons him; and that our best method of awaiting the great exchange of worlds is to go on doing the duties of daily life. That was a wise and true reply of Wesley to the inquiry, "what would you do if you knew that you would have to die within three days?" "I should just do the work which I have already planned to do; ministering in one place; meeting my preachers in another; lodging in yet another, till the moment came that I was called to yield my spirit back to Him who gave it." When our summons comes, we should wish to be found, not in the place which sentiment or a false sense of religious propriety might suggest, but just doing the work which we have been appointed to do; and in the place where duty would demand our presence at that very hour. The workshop and the factory are as near heaven as the sanctuary; the God-given task as fair a height for ascension as Olivet or Pisgah.

III. The affectionate love with which he was regarded.—It strongly showed itself in Elisha. The younger man stood with his revered leader, as for the last time he surveyed from the heights of Western Gilgal, the scene of his former ministry. And, in spite of many persuasives to the contrary, he went with him down the steep descent to Bethel and Jericho. He followed him even though they had to cross the Jordan, which means death and judgment. The sacred historian accentuates the strength of their affection, as he says thrice over, they two went on; they two stood by Jordan; they two went over. And again the strength of that love, which the cold waters of death could not extinguish, approved itself in the repeated asseveration: "As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee." It is sweet to think that there were in the rugged strong nature of Elijah such winsome qualities as could elicit so deep and tenacious an affection. We catch a glimpse of a tenderer side, for which we had hardly given him credit.

Unusual emotion also welled up in the hearts of the young men, whose reverence shared the empire with their love, as they beheld their master for the last time. With delicate reticence they would not speak on a topic which he did not mention; but, drawing Elisha aside, they asked him whether the moment of separation had not come. "Yes," said he in effect, "but do not speak of it. Let there be no parting scene. Give and receive the parting farewells in expressive silence." And thus the old man tore himself away from them.

But in all their intercourse, how real and near the Lord seemed. To Elijah it was the Lord, who was sending him from place to place: "the Lord hath sent me." To Elisha, it was the living Lord, to whom he constantly appealed; "as the Lord thy God liveth," living on the other side of the great change through which his master was to pass to Him. To the prophets, it was the Lord, who was taking their head and leader to Himself. Surely those who speak thus have reached a position in which they can meet death without a tremor. And what is death but, as we shall see in our next, a translation!

What is the Lord to thee, my reader? Is He a dear and familiar friend, of whom thou canst speak with unwavering confidence? Then thou needest not fear to tread the verge of Jordan. Otherwise, it becomes thee to get to his precious blood, and to wash thy garments white, that thou mayest acquire a right to the tree of life, and to enter in through the gates into the city.

For the Young.

DR. BARNARDO'S EMIGRANTS.

In the August number of Night and Day, just issued, Dr. Barnardo gives some interesting particulars of the party of 158 lads with whom he sailed for Canada on the 11th instant. We extract the following from "Personal Notes," which are headed:—

Posted at Moville, off the Coast of Ireland,
August 12, 1887.

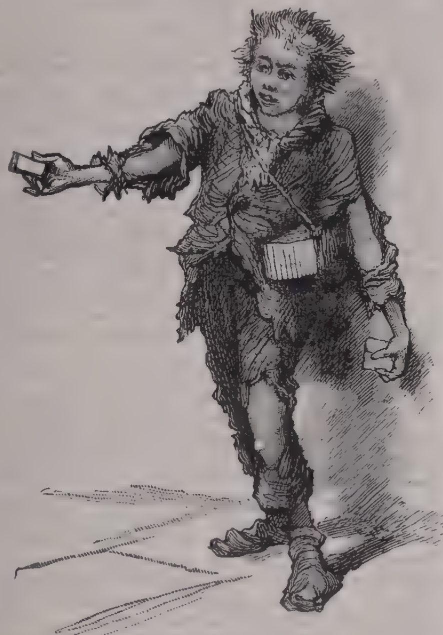
There were three farewell meetings for the young Canadian emigrants who travel with me: one at the Y.M.C.A., Aldersgate-street, at 12 noon on Monday, the 8th instant, presided over by Mr. Matthew Hodder; the second at the "Edinburgh Castle," on the same evening at eight, presided over by Alderman Sir R. N. Fowler, Bart., M.P., one of the Vice-Presidents of the Homes; and the third in the Board-room at Euston railway-station, on Wednesday, the 10th, at 2.30 p.m., just prior to the boys going into the train. This last meeting was presided over by Colonel Howard Vincent, C.B., M.P., another of our Vice-Presidents. The boys were in thoroughly good spirits, and looked a stalwart, well-grown set of lads, evidently much delighted with the prospect of adventure and of the new life which lay before them. Well might they be so! For, of the 158 going out, no fewer than 107 had actually been rescued from the streets of London, where hunger, cold, the fiercest temptations, and the greatest misery, had been their unhappy lot for years.

Of one of these lads a very vivid impression abides with me. He was admitted to the Homes as far back as November twelvemonth, and has therefore had nearly two years of careful training and instruction. But the forlorn wretchedness of the boy when first I encountered him can hardly be well described. Certainly the view of him which our little picture gives does not do complete justice to the utter misery of his appearance. He is now nearly fifteen years of age, and was therefore then between twelve and thirteen. On the day I met him he had matches to sell; but, owing to bad weather, and what he called "ill luck," had disposed of very few.

Although but a mere child, he had no home of his own, and had never remembered any other dwelling than the common lodging-house, to which he turned with perfect naturalness as to his only home, when he earned pence enough to pay for a bed. The lodging-house Harry occupied was neither better nor worse than some hundreds of such houses in the great metropolis which have been described again and again in the pages of Night and Day. There were a few boys there like Harry, honest but poor, while there were a good many others who were downright thieves, and who, although as young as Harry, were already proficient in dishonesty.

The companionship of a decent but hungry and friendless lad with such young thieves is a source of the very gravest danger to him, and is manifestly one of the most active causes in the manufacture of young thieves. Harry struggled hard to keep honest, and up to the day I met him had been fairly successful; but it was a long-continued and stern conflict with starvation, loneliness, cold, and wretchedness, in which the poor boy was often sorely pressed to give up and become a thief. The day I met him the weather was bitterly cold, and the clothes he had on were the merest rags, affording but little warmth or shelter. He had only had one halfpennyworth of bread within the preceding twenty-four hours, and there was before him the dull and hopeless outlook which a November day in London presents to any homeless boy who, like Harry, is "down on his luck."

Conversation with him soon led to the poor boy's telling me all about himself. I went away with him to the lodging-house where he told me he had slept for a week, and the deputy, a decent Irishwoman, confirmed much of Harry's story, and told me that (with a kindness which did her infinite credit) she had often, when he had no pence, allowed the "poor motherless cratur," as she said, to sleep on the settle in the kitchen rather than turn him out, as was her strict duty to have done, into the cold streets. I gave Harry the offer of the Home—an offer which he gladly accepted. I made the fullest inquiry into his story. I traced out every clue I could get as to his relatives, and discovered that the history he gave me was fairly accurate, and that the statement which arrested my attention at the first, and which I am sure our Legislature would hardly have credited, was actually true—that Harry never had had any other dwelling than the common lodging-house, and that during all his life he had been compelled to herd with thieves and persons (male and female) of abandoned character and life! Harry was not a bad-looking fellow, especially when he was washed and dressed. He entered our Home, did fairly well at school, and settled down with great content in our carpenters' shop. Having a musical ear, he became a member of our band, and was always a cheery, well-conducted, civil, honest boy. Grown strong and hearty, Harry's present appearance gives no evidence of his past sorrowful history, and in his emigration outfit he really looks a bonny youth, and, better than all, I believe the lad's heart has been truly given in faith and hope to the Saviour. Certainly his life and conduct manifest a great spiritual change.



"Box o' lights, sir!"

I am delighted to know that Harry is one of my fellow-passengers to the fair Dominion of Canada, and that never again will the cold, bleak streets of London, and the hunger and misery of a neglected and friendless condition, be his experience. I think the kind-hearted solicitor, who, having heard of Harry's story, at once expressed a desire to pay £8 10s., the amount needed for his emigration, must always feel thankful when he reflects from what Harry has been saved, and remembers the bright opening presented through his benevolence to the poor London street-boy. But every one of the 158 lads who are Harry's companions has also been carefully trained in our Homes, there developing an honest and industrious character and a first-rate physique, and so asserting his eligibility for Canada, for I have long determined, as has been before announced in the pages of our Magazine, that no lad shall leave us for Canada who is not thoroughly honest, industrious, and of good physical health. Only by keeping the moral and physical standard of our young emigrants high, and by determining that nothing shall induce us to send out the maimed, the halt, or the blind, or even the doubtful, can we hope to win and retain the confidence of the Canadians in our scheme. They very properly, and, I think, justly, too, resent and protest in the strongest way, against the residuum of our streets being shunted upon their shores. I, at least, spite of all that has been said to the contrary, have taken the utmost care to keep myself free from the reproach of having encouraged a class of emigration calculated in my judgment to inflict grave injury upon the Dominion, and even upon the unfortunate emigrants themselves.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sunday, September 4, Matt. xxi. 17—32; Monday, September 5, Matt. xxi. 33—46; Tuesday, September 6, Matt. xxii. 1—14; Wednesday, September 7, Matt. xxii. 15—33; Thursday, September 8, Matt. xxii. 34—46; Friday, September 9, Matt. xxiii. 1—15; Saturday, September 10, Matt. xxiii. 16—28.

SEASIDE SERVICES FOR CHILDREN.

August:—Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Scarborough and Filey; Mr. Hutchinson, Bridlington; Mr. Dennes, Whitby; Mr. Spiers, Redcar; Captain Chapman, Cromer; Mr. Seagrove, Broadstairs; Mr. Livesey Carrot, Deal; Mr. S. C. Woods, Walmer; Mr. C. P. Harford-Battersby, B.A., Eastbourne; Mr. Pitts, St. Leonards; Mr. Hall, Southsea; Mr. Geo. Banaster, Bournemouth; Rev. A. Storrs, Sandown; Mr. Harris, Weston-super-Mare; Mr. A. J. Barnard, B.A., Littlehampton; Mr. Moore, Ilfracombe; Hon. W. G. Scott, Elie (Fife); Rev. W. Talbot Hindley, Margate.

Seaton.—Gospel and song services have been regularly held on the beach at this favourite South Devon watering-place. Special meetings for young men have also been held, as well as others for united prayer and conference. The attendance has steadily increased, and there has been evidence that these services have not been in vain.

Redcar.—Mr. Spiers is holding beach services at this watering-place, and there has already been great blessing, many having already received Christ. Every day there is a large distribution of good Gospel literature. The 16th, being Mr. Spiers' birthday, was a very happy day. The crowds on the sands were evidently much impressed as the preacher spoke on Heb. xi. 7 (the preparing of the ark by Noah), and Matt. ix. 27—29 (the story of the two blind men). In the afternoon there was a cricket match for boys and girls on the sands, and the day was closed with a Chinese lantern procession along the pier, followed by singing. Two indoor children's services have been held, and at each from eighty to ninety stayed behind, and many found the Saviour.

◆

ITALIAN PENINSULA MISSION.

This Mission has just been founded for the proclamation of the Gospel in the unevangelised parts of Italy. Two evangelists have gone to an old Ligurian village inhabited by a fanatical people, descended, it is said, from a Turkish colony. Sufficient Gospel work was done in two visits to arouse the sleeping enemy, and as our brethren entered the village for the third time, they found that a united attack, by stoning, was about to be made upon them. They remained calm and fearless, and witnessed to many of the salvation in Christ alone. It was only when a shower of huge stones poured over them that they retired, one of them receiving three wounds, which, happily, did not prove serious. "We left the scene assured that persecution against the Gospel is the best method of propagating it."

According to the means the Master may send us, other evangelists will be sent on two by two to those who sit in darkness.

John S. Anderson.

Glenaiken, New Kilpatrick, N.B.

BUFFALO BILL AND THE INDIANS from the American Exhibition are announced to be present at the Great Assembly Hall, Mile-end-road, on Sunday morning next, September 4, at 11 a.m. Mr. James B. Wookey will be the preacher.

MIDNIGHT MEETING MOVEMENT.—Mr. Christien, organising superintendent of this society, has been holding well-attended and important meetings of the fallen, in Lancashire, Cheshire, and Warwickshire. In Birmingham 100 women were gathered together in a few hours. Many of them were dreadfully wild, but upon being induced to listen to those who had kindly invited them to a free supper, their demeanour changed, and the usual results of faithful Gospel teaching was evident to all. This society is doing an excellent work, and greatly needs the help of Christian friends. The offices are at 8a, Red Lion-square, W.C.

A STRANGE EXPERIENCE.

It was in this way. A few of us had been talking together. There was much zeal and much piety, but we all agreed that things generally in the Churches were far from happy. We longed for the days of the early Church and a return of those early preachers. "Oh," said one, excitedly, "if St. John could only come among us! How quickly would he kindle the flames of holy love! I can fancy how his very voice and manner and countenance—yea, his very presence—would be living with Divine power! What ascensions, what inspirations we should have! Even the most lukewarm and icebound would be made to glow with devotion."

"Yes," said another, "and the saintly Paul, with his fervency and zeal and lofty spirituality! How he would thrill us with his impassioned words, and hold us spellbound as he spoke of the 'no condemnation,' the 'more than conquerors,' and 'the eternal weight of glory'! How he would send us forth into the world like 'giants refreshed with wine,' full of enthusiasm for a living Christ!"

"Ah," said a third, and his voice quivered slightly, "if He could come and speak to us; He whom we all love! Should we not wonder, and bear Him witness at the gracious words? Should we not drink them in more eagerly than thirsty land the showers? Would not tears of sweetest delight stream from our eyes, as He spoke, in his own simple, perfect way, of the Father and the kingdom? Oh, that we could sit at his feet, if it were only for one short hour!"

It was not long after our conversation, and still filled with these thoughts, that I went to pay a long-promised visit. Having rather carelessly arranged my trains, and starting somewhat late on Saturday afternoon, I was compelled to leave my journey unfinished; and so, instead of the quiet little country home, I found myself on Sunday morning a stranger in a large city. Leaving my lodgings conveniently early, I sought and found a place of worship. The preacher, of course, was perfectly new to me, and I examined him carefully. His face had a sweet, loving expression, but tender and sad; and womanly gentleness seemed strangely mingled with strong decision of character. His voice was rich and firm, delighting equally in sweetest music and loudest thunder. As he gave out his text I was full of eager expectation. "God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him." It was, like the sunrise, quiet, gradual, glorious; but, oh! just as we were beginning to bask in the sunshine, suddenly the air was darkened, the storm-clouds gathered, and almost as suddenly burst in torrents of rain and peals of thunder. We all trembled—his cannonings of sin and unrighteousness and uncharitableness were so terrible. His earnestness was unquestionable; but honey more completely turned to gall could not have been, for a more solemn sermon I never heard. "Well," said I to myself, "if you sought effect you have got it, but a better understanding of St. John and of the Gospel of love would be good for you and your hearers. Oh, that the Lord would send us an Apostle!"

In the afternoon I sought another church, keeping my first acquaintance at a goodly distance. Again misfortune seemed to follow me. This time the preacher was anything but prepossessing, but his text was promising—"Being justified by faith, we have peace with God." Now, I thought, prejudices aside—bodies are not minds—here comes a sermon. And the sermon came. Such loads of arguments and Old Testament references! I was literally tired of Abraham and David and Isaiah and old Jewish types. I longed to hear the good old Gospel of the grace of God, and was thankful when he finished. I sighed again for an Apostle.

In the evening, regretting my experiences, I turned to a more remote part of the city; and, if anything, seemed more unfortunate than ever. I must confess that the preacher was remarkably impressive. There was a majesty and grandeur in his face that spoke of indomitable will and unflinching courage, but at the same time a strong touch of tenderness and what I thought far too much sadness for a Christian and a minister of the great Joy-giver. His text rather alarmed me—"Not everyone that saith unto Me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." I will say that there was a fair amount of loving invitation and encouragement, and a glowing picture was given of the glories of the kingdom; but then such wailings, warnings, and such denunciations of sin, impenitence, and Christian inconsistency! We were told, too, so fully about the narrow way, the cross, reproach, tribulation, and worldly persecution, that I quite trembled, and rejoiced to be in the open air again. "Well, well," I thought, "trying to drive and frighten people to heaven! He can never have read, 'God so loved the world,' 'Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden.' Well, this is a happy Sunday; three sermons and scarce one bit of the Gospel. Where is the Church? Oh, for one day of the Lord Himself!"

So, wrapt in sad thought and wonderings, I walked along, thinking more of the sermons than the path I took; and, as might be expected, presently encountered the body of a man, who was standing still, but looking away from me. The sudden recall and the foolishness of the accident made me feel uncomfortable, but his pleasant face and kindly voice soon reassured me. "You look sad," he said. "Yes, I am a little," and somehow I was led to confide in him my whole day's experience. "Come in with me a while; we may be able to comfort you. I have a few friends, and was looking for another, but perhaps he will be here shortly." I readily assented. We entered the house, and being brought into a little garden at the back, I found, to my intense surprise, the very men of whom my thoughts were so full.

Somehow, they seemed to know me, but—whatever impelled me to it I could not tell—without waiting, I spoke my mind plainly to them:—"Well, gentlemen, I believe you have preached in all sincerity, and your earnestness is beyond praise; but together you have completely spoiled my Sunday. Have you no idea of love, sir; of winning and drawing souls to Christ? Are you going to thunder them to heaven? And you, sir, who taught you the Gospel of logic and argument and Jewish history? Take my advice: ponder the Epistles of St. Paul—learn the doctrines of grace. And you, sir," turning to the third—but as I looked into his face I quailed, and language failed me; and suddenly a strange feeling overpowered me, as though a great shadow had been withdrawn, and a light from heaven had broken in upon me; and, without waiting to be told, I felt and knew that I was in the presence of the Lord, and of the Apostles St. John and St. Paul. Then I awoke.

It was only a dream, but it has set me thinking I have thought that if we really had the preaching of Christ or the Apostles, many Christians would be violently displeased at it, and, failing to recognise the nature and scope of the word, bitterly denounce the preacher.

While many offend foolishly, and many preach acceptably, I have thought that as men preach according to Christ so will they drive away as well as draw hearers; and that perhaps some of the first to leave would be those who clamour loudest for Apostolic preaching.

I have thought, too, that Christ's word has a unity. The word of love and anger, of pity and reproach, of encouragement and warning, of comfort and exhortation, of praise and reproof, are all his; and the soul that truly receives one will receive them all, and read his love as clear in the thunder as in the sunshine.

W. F.

THE FULHAM GOSPEL MISSION exercises vigilance in rescuing children from vice, and carries on rescue work. The preaching of the Gospel is also attended with blessing. The superintendent is Mr. E. C. Roper, and the headquarters of the Mission are at 85, Estcourt-road, North-end-road, Fulham.

MARAH; or, BITTER WATERS MADE SWEET.

"And when they came to Marah, they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter. Therefore they were called Marah."—Exod. xv. 23.

Bitter are the waters now in Marah's fountain,
Sad the disappointment which here the traveller finds,
When after three days' wandering 'mid wilderness and mountain,
On spring, well, and watercourse, he fondly sets his mind.

Loud were the murmurings when ancient Israel halted,
With their myriad army-host, around this sacred well;
Bitter as these waters, when their tribes revolted,
Were the loud curses which there on Moses fell.

Bright were the gleams of joy on all their sunburnt faces,
When the healing tree was cast into the bitter wave;
Fast fled their angry looks and sorrow's faintest traces:
Deep was their gratitude to Him who thus could save.

So, in our pilgrim-life, with highest expectation,
We look for bliss unfailing in pleasure or in sin,
And find by sad experience, as we find from Revelation,
"Vanity of vanities!" all is bitterness within.

At length, we seek the tree of life, whose power the waters healing,
Doth sweeten all life's bitterness, turns mourning into joy;
To pilgrims in life's wilderness such blessedness revealing
As gives a peace that knows no end, no measure, no alloy.

Written at Marah. J. Oswald Jackson.

KNOWLEDGE OR FOOD?

How vast is the army of inactivity which has to be maintained by the industrious classes of the Metropolis! Nearly 88,000 paupers were relieved during the first week of the current month in London. To those who know the sins and sorrows of the city it would appear that a still larger number is qualifying for admittance into this helpless company. The possibility of cutting off any portion of this river of misery at its source is a problem still waiting solution.

To know how to be of real help is half the battle, and how few have the time and the will even to discover this. Mr. Henry Eyre, M.P., has been devoting portions of the past six months to a series of visits to the East-end, with the view of finding out how many hungry children attend school. He has interviewed in class 20,000 children. He has found that out of that number 13 per cent. have insufficient food, and 7 per cent. are always in a state of hunger.

He found that, in a class of about fifty children, twelve had no breakfast, four no breakfast or tea the preceding evening, and that one or two would hold up their hands to signify that they had not broken their fast since breakfast the day before. The dull, listless eyes, worn looks and nervous manner, of these children confirmed the statement. Is it not a farce to suppose that starving children can profit by the instruction of their teachers?

What, then, is the use of compulsory attendance? The reply is, it brings a child into a situation where its condition can be investigated and its wants relieved. We would like to see the meshes of the School Board net so close that not one destitute and hungry child could escape it. Mr. Eyre does not think that the feeding of these little ones should be undertaken by the State; he thinks it would be much better done by private charity. What harvests are to be reaped in working in such a field as this!

Another worker in this field of inexhaustible resources is Miss Agnes Lambert, who, in the current Nineteenth Century, details some of her efforts to establish school banks as a part of elementary education. It is an excellent idea, and we rejoice to know that this lady's work is meeting with hearty appreciation. And the moral effect of a bank account is found to be worth more than all the figures that fill its money column.

SEPTEMBER 2, 1887.

The Christian.

CONTENTS.

The Late Mr. James Barlow, J.P. 1
"Belief and Faith" 2
A Buddhist on Christianity 3
"Such People are so Thriftless" 3
Elijah the Prophet.—16 4
Dr. Barnardo's Emigrants 5
A Strange Experience 6
Poetry—Marah 6
Knowledge or Food? 6
Letters from Northfield.—2 9
The Gospel in China 10
The Ainu of Japan 10
Conference at Dufftown 11
A Mission Tour in India.—5 11
Notes and Comments 12
Testimony of G. B. Studd 14
The Gospel in India 14
News from Uganda 15
The Gospel in Africa 15
Evangelistic Notes 15
Among the Churches 16
Continental and Foreign Notes ..16
Notes on Daily Readings 17
Temperance Notes 19

WORKS PUBLISHED BY MORGAN & SCOTT.

By REV. DR. PENTECOST.

"OUT OF EGYPT." A Series of Addresses and Bible Readings on the Exodus of Israel, and its Spiritual Lessons. Tinted covers, 2s.; Cloth limp, 2s. 6d. PRESENTATION EDITION—Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d. Third Thousand.

"Dr. Pentecost's power as a teacher and expositor of the Word is anew displayed in these Addresses; and we are not surprised to learn that there has been an earnest demand for their publication."—Word and Work.

"IN THE VOLUME OF THE BOOK;" Or, The Profit and Pleasure of Bible Study. With Introductions by Revs. JOSEPH COOK and J. H. VINCENT, D.D. Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth limp, 2s.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d. Eighth Edition.

"We cannot too highly commend this little publication. Plain, concise, thorough and spiritual, it is a handbook differing from all others, inasmuch as it takes up the spiritual rather than the material aspect of the Word of God."
Preacher's Analyst.

By REV. J. MACPHERSON.

DUNCAN MATHESON, THE SCOTTISH EVANGELIST. Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth boards, 2s. 6d. Thirty-sixth Thousand.

"No Christian can read it without profit."—Methodist Family.

"This is a soul-stirring book, and will repay him who shall purchase and read it."—Lay Preacher.

"This biography will not only interest but benefit a wide circle of readers."
Rev. C. H. SPURGEON, in The Sword and Trowel.

HENRY MOORHOUSE, THE ENGLISH EVANGELIST. With Lithographic Portrait. Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d. Fourth Thousand.

"Is a well-written account of a faithful life, which we commend to the earnest study of all...labourers in the Lord's vineyard."—Footsteps of Truth.

ROBERT ANNAN, THE CHRISTIAN HERO. Tinted covers, 6d.; Cloth neat, 1s. In Large Type, tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

"The memory of Robert Annan is worthy to be had in remembrance."
Christian Work.

By REV. J. CULROSS, D.D.

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED. FIFTH THOUSAND. Chromo-Lithographic Views of the Sea of Galilee and the Isle of Patmos. New and Enlarged Edition. Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d. Special Cheap Edition—Tinted covers, 2s.; Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

"In Dr. Culross' new work, entitled 'John whom Jesus Loved,' we have found a book. It is a part of our appointed suffering in this present life to be compelled to winnow heaps of literature, with great result in chaff and dust, and small gain in bread corn; and therefore our rejoicing is the greater when grain comes to our garner as clean provender in good weight and measure."
Rev. C. H. SPURGEON, in The Sword and Trowel.

"BEHOLD, I STAND AT THE DOOR AND KNOCK:" Christ's Message to Laodicea. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.; Cheap Edition—Paper, 1s.; Cloth, 1s. 6d. Special Cheap Edition—Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

"A book that throbs with spiritual life and tenderest love from the first line to the last."—Literary World.

"THY FIRST LOVE:" Christ's Message to Ephesus. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d. Special Cheap Edition—Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.

"The glow, as from a golden sunset, which his imagination sheds over his style, gives it a great charm."—British Messenger.

By ANNA SHIPTON.

THE BROOK IN THE WAY: A Volume of Original Hymns and Poems, Illustrative of the Christian Life. Third Edition. Cloth extra, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.; now offered at 2s. 6d.

"A string of pearls such as a true Christian only could give us."
Evangelical Christendom.

WHISPERS IN THE PALMS: A Volume of Hymns and Poetic Meditations. Fourth Edition. Cloth extra, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.; now offered at 2s. 6d.

"Very touching and beautiful. The book is got up with exquisite taste."
Christian World.

WAYMARKS OF MY PILGRIMAGE: A Collection of Later Poems. Cloth extra, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

"It is full of elevated thought and quiet beauty."—The Christian.

By ALICE GRAY.

SUITABLE GIFT-BOOKS FOR CHILDREN.

NETTIE'S MISSION SERIES.
A Series of Six Small Books illustrating the Lord's Prayer. Cloth boards, 6d. each.

NETTIE'S MISSION; Or, "Hallowed be Thy Name."
LITTLE MARGERY; Or, "Thy Kingdom Come."
MARGERY'S HOME; Or, "Thy Will be Done."
MAGGIE RILEY; Or, "Give us this Day our Daily Bread."
ROSY CONROY; Or, "Forgive us our Debts."
NED DOLAN; Or, "Lead us Not into Temptation."

The above Six Books may be had in a neat Box, price 3s.

"Without exception, among the very best sixpenny books for children ever published. Nothing better as gift-books for the young can be desired."
The Hive.

"A story of the right sort. Short, telling, with a thoroughly sound, moral, and religious ring about it."
From a Review of "NED DOLAN" in The Sword and Trowel.

By JOHN B. GOUGH.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF JOHN B. GOUGH. REVISED BY HIMSELF. With Portrait; View of his Residence in Massachusetts; and Two other Illustrations. Special Cheap Edition—Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d. Superior Edition, with Four full-page Illustrations—Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.; Bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"One of the most interesting and instructive biographies ever written."
Christian Week.

THE ORATIONS OF JOHN B. GOUGH. CORRECTED AND REVISED BY HIMSELF. With Portrait. Containing Eleven different Orations delivered in London. Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d. PRESENTATION EDITION—Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"To those who have not had the good fortune to hear Mr. Gough, these printed orations will convey some idea of the wonderful dramatic force and eloquence which hold audiences of many thousands spellbound."
Good Templar.

The above ORATIONS may also be had separately at 1d. each, or in an assorted Packet of Ten Orations for 10d.

ILLUSTRATED GOSPEL TEMPERANCE TRACTS. In Large Type. An assorted Packet of 64 Tracts, 1s.

PORTRAIT OF JOHN B. GOUGH. Suitable for Framing. Size 15 by 20 inches, 1s.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

The Pilgrim's Progress.

By JOHN BUNYAN.

With Thirteen Original Illustrations, specially drawn for this work.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 6d.; Fancy Boards, Cloth Back, 1s.

"It is a marvel of neatness and cheapness. No home need now be without this wonderful work."
Oldham Chronicle.

Superior Edition—Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Cruden's Concordance

(Morgan & Scott's "Portable" Edition)

To the Old and New Testaments, with the Scripture Proper Names newly Translated by a Competent Scholar.

Strongly bound in Cloth Boards, 3s. 6d.

"The best Cheap Edition of 'Cruden's Concordance' that we have seen is the one published by Morgan & Scott."—The Christian Leader.

Cruden's Concordance may also be had at 5s., 7s. 6d., and 10s. 6d.

A Detailed Prospectus of the Various Editions will be forwarded on application.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Notes for Bible Readings.

A Collection of over Six Hundred Subjects, carefully compiled and arranged by

S. R. BRIGGS and JOHN H. ELLIOTT.

WITH INTRODUCTION BY D. L. MOODY.

Suitable for Bible Readings, Cottage Lectures, Sermons, Addresses, Sabbath School Lessons.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 2s. 6d.

"This is a book which every Bible student should possess. It will be of special value to the class teacher, and an assistance also to the preacher. It brings together an immense number of subjects, with groupings of Scripture texts on each. It supplies valuable matter for private meditation; and those who conduct Bible Readings will find it most suggestive."
Christian Progress.

Superior Edition—Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

J. CURWEN & SONS'

HARVEST THANKSGIVING MUSIC.

PRAISE FOR HARVEST.—Service of Song by A. J. Foxwell. 4d.
HARVEST THANKSGIVING.—Service of Song by J. S. Curwen. 3d.
THE HAYMAKERS.—Cantata for Choral Societies by G. F. Root. 3s. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.
AUTUMN'S QUEEN.—Entertainment for children. 4d
HARVEST ANTHEMS AND HYMNS IN LEAFLETS. 1s. and 1s. 6d. per 100.

London: 8 and 9, WARWICK LANE, E.C.

THE MOTHER'S COMPANION

For SEPTEMBER contains—

"MARY LAMB," by Mrs. Henry Fawcett; "HOW TO FEED A FAMILY," by J. L. Richmond; "NOTES ON HEALTH," by Mrs. Atkins, M.D.; "OUR NEIGHBOUR, WIDOW YATES," by Grace Stebbing; "TWILIGHT THOUGHTS FOR WIVES AND MOTHERS," by J. E. Pardon; "A TIME FOR EVERYTHING," by Francis Epps; "DAY BY DAY," by Margaret Haycraft; &c., &c. Many Illustrations.

Of all Newsagents. One Penny.

S. W. Partridge & CO., 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Bible Remembrancer.

A Complete Handbook to the Old and New Testaments.

By means of this Handbook any Biblical incident or event may be readily referred to.

With Twelve Beautifully Coloured Maps.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"A more helpful book for Sabbath-school Teachers and others we can scarcely think of."—Presbyterian.

Superior Edition—Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, 2s.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

The Sure Mercies of David,

or, God's Dealings in the Sanctuary.

By ANNA SHIPTON.

Special Cheap Edition.
Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"It breathes a spirit of high-toned faith and fervour, impressing the reader with the earnest zeal which animates the writer."—Free Press.

Superior Edition—on Toned Paper, with Gilt Edges, 4s. 6d.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

CONSUMPTION CURABLE!

"MR. G. T. CONGREVE on CONSUMPTION

AND ITS SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT.

Showing that direful disease to be curable in all its stages; with observations on

ASTHMA, CHRONIC BRONCHITIS, ETC."

SIXPENCE (Post Free), or Large Edition (cloth), 1s. 3d., from the Author, Coombe Lodge, Peckham, S.E., and Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.

The Twenty-second Series of Weekly Cases is now publishing, from August to October.

NOTICE TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN," WHO MAY BE PERSONALLY OR RELATIVELY

INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED in this journal BEFORE, EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

ADVANCED CONSUMPTION.—A YOUNG LADY OF B——, IN SUSSEX—also HER SISTER.

The father of this young lady, writing me May 14, requests me not, for special private reasons, to publish his name, but he adds: "You are at liberty to show this letter to anyone, and you may refer any person privately to me."

"My daughter, 16 years of age, was very, very ill. Her symptoms—an exceedingly bad cough, expectoration mixed with blood, great pains in her sides, and weakness, so that she could scarcely stand. Dr. J., her medical attendant, said he could do no more for her—she must die. An old patient of yours earnestly recommended your treatment. I followed the advice you sent me, and she persevered for nearly two years. Her recovery was so unlooked for that everyone who knew her was amazed. She has since married.

A sister of hers in business at Manchester was taken ill there, had medical advice there, also at Torquay where she was ordered, and since then was under one of the surgeons at Brompton Hospital, but got gradually worse the whole time, and came home last year in a pitiable state. She is now wonderfully better, and in a fair way to recovery.

My gratitude is due to you under God.—Yours faithfully, S."

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

ESTABLISHED
A.D. 1793.

UNDER ROYAL & IMPERIAL PATRONAGE.

HADDON'S SHRINKLESS FLANNELS

DRESS FABRICS. BLANKETS. SERGES. FLANNELS.
HADDON & SON
TRADE MARK.

ROYAL WELLINGTON
WOOLLEN COMPANY.

"ROYAL CLAREMONT" FLANNELS are the only PURE WOOL Flannels manufactured that will NOT · SHRINK WHEN WASHED.

Special Makes for Morning and Walking Gowns.

Patterns Post Free. Any Length Cut.
Carriage Paid on 20s. Parcels.

PURE WOOL FLANNELS of every description, well shrunk, from the heavy makes suitable for Charitable Societies to those of the finest texture.

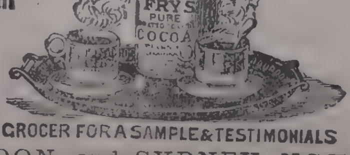
Prices from 6½d. yard.

HADDON & SON (ROYAL WOOLLEN COMPANY), WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.

Fry's Cocoa

·Pure·
·Concentrated·
·Cocoa·

33 PRIZE MEDALS
awarded to the Firm



ASK YOUR GROCER FOR A SAMPLE & TESTIMONIALS

J. S. FRY & SONS, BRISTOL, LONDON, and SYDNEY, N.S.W.,
Makers to the Queen and Prince of Wales.

FIVE GOLD MEDALS AWARDED.

Goddard's Plate Powder

NON-MERCURIAL.

FOR NEARLY HALF A CENTURY this Powder has sustained an unrivalled reputation throughout the United Kingdom and Colonies as the Best and Safest Article for Cleaning Silver and Electro Plate. Sold in Boxes 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Chemists, Ironmongers, &c.

ADDRESSES BY D. L. MOODY.

Delivered in Great Britain in 1874-75.

Tinted Covers, 1s. Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.
Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

ONE HUNDRED AND TENTH THOUSAND.

"Manly, clear, and pointed, they strike home to the heart."—Primitive Methodist.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

FULL ASSURANCE OF FAITH.

By D. L. MOODY.

Tinted Covers, 2d. Cloth, 6d.

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

LETTERS FROM NORTHFIELD.—2.

This extensive valley of the Connecticut is one of the loveliest spots in the world. As we sit on Mr. Moody's piazza, and watch the sun set, sometimes in silver whiteness, sometimes in golden glory, behind the opposite hills, those words of Mrs. MacAndrew's poem "Coming" are brought to mind:—

It may be in the evening,
When the work of the day is done,
And you have time to sit in the twilight,
And watch the sinking sun;
While the long bright day dies slowly
Over the sea,
And the hour grows quiet and holy
With thoughts of Me;
While you hear the village children
Passing along the street,
Among those thronging footsteps
May come the sound of my feet:
Therefore, I tell you, Watch!
By the light of the evening star,
When the room is growing dusky
As the clouds afar;
Let the door be on the latch
In your home,
For it may be through the gloaming
I will come.

Speaking of Mr. Moody, it was my pleasure, with Mr. Herbert Francis and Professor Drummond, to be his guest. We know a man by living with him, and I was glad, but not surprised, to find that as Mr. Moody is mellowed by time, so he is more esteemed and loved in his own town, and in America generally, as the years go by.

My last visit was in 1881, when the Northfield Schools consisted only of the Seminary and the Recitation Hall, now known as the East Hall. To these have been added Marquand Hall, the Stone Hall, Western Hall, and another, the Library, is in course of erection. While on the other side of the river, at Mount Hermon, where in 1881 were only the wooden farmhouse and buildings, there stand the large building known as Recitation Hall, with its noble class-rooms, its library containing 400 volumes, and chapel capable of seating 400 persons.

The Convention (which followed the Summer School) was held from August 2 to 12, and brought together some 600 people from various parts of the country; and, as they were coming and going, and some only stayed a few days and others supplied their places, fully a thousand strangers must have visited Northfield during the ten days. On Sunday evening the people from the town and surrounding villages doubled the congregation.

Mr. Moody's plan is to give great liberty to those who speak, and instead of a set programme he leaves the subject to themselves, asking only for the best address, exposition, or exhortation they can give.

Mr. Sankey for several days, and Mr. and Mrs. Stebbins during some of them, led the singing, and sang special pieces to the delight of the congregation; while Mr. and Mrs. Towner, on whom most of the work fell, and the Mount Hermon Male Choir, admirably fulfilled their parts.

On one occasion when Fanny Crosby, the blind hymn writer, was present, she and all the congregation were gratified by Mr. Moody calling special attention to her hymns, and having some of them sung. "Safe in the arms of Jesus" was one of them.

In the early days Rev. W. W. Clark, of New York, gave some very helpful lessons on the black board. One of these was on assurance; another on the characteristic differences of the four Gospels, which he showed to be far more important than to construct a harmony of the Gospels; for the former leads us to study what the Holy Spirit has given, while the latter is an attempt to put together what He has purposely set forth from different points of view. It is interesting to know the order of events, but far more necessary to consider Jesus as King, as Servant, as Son of Man, and as Son of God.

Our old friend, Rev. Payson Hammond, to whom we owe so much for teaching us that young children may easily be led to Jesus, thrilled the meeting with the story of a Roman Catholic lady, who, under distress of soul, had sought the help of her confessor, and been told to seek pleasure as an anodyne to her convictions, but strayed into Exeter Hall, and found the Saviour, and the peace of God.

Mr. Francis Murphy and his son came over from Pittsburg, and spoke on Gospel Temperance in their inimitable way. Dr. Green, professor of Hebrew at Princeton College, read an excellent paper on the Christian graces in 2 Pet. i. 5—11; and another on the Book of Job.

Professor Drummond's addresses formed a prominent feature of the Convention, as they had of the Summer School in July. The easy, cultivated, and deliberate style of the professional lecturer was of itself an attraction; and the logical method of his statements made it easy to follow his line of thought. One of his addresses was based on the affirmation that the true purpose of human life is not to get good, nor even to do good, but to do the will of God.

Mr. Herbert Francis, of London, gave a thought on the security and practical life of believers, taking John x. 28 as his text, and illustrating it from Exod. xxviii., where the breastplate of the high priest is described. The names of Israel were placed on the shoulders according to their birth, and on the breastplate according to their tribes. All believers are equally secure, but having gained or lost position by faithfulness, or unfaithfulness in service. He gave the meaning of the names engraven on each stone, and its spiritual lesson. A concise Bible-reading, about which many questions were afterwards asked.

Mr. Moody conducts all the meetings, and keeps everything going in a way that no other man in the world seems to have attained to. And he continually tells some interesting incident, or makes some happy suggestion for the comfort of his guests, or the benefit of the outside world. He praised the reporters, and urged the purchase of the papers for transmission to friends. A gentleman had met with a young man in a boat on the Hudson, with an open Bible, studying a lesson which he had found reported in the newspaper.

Mr. Clark, who has been already mentioned, recited various useful sayings, which were carefully taken down, e.g.:—

(1) "The New is in the Old contained; the Old is by the New explained."

(2) "The New Testament is enfolded in the Old; the Old is unfolded by the New."

Rev. Jacob Freshman, with whom many of our readers are acquainted, spoke about the Jews, and elicited from his audience 150 dollars.

Mr. Moody gave an address on Sunday morning on the Lord's coming, which put no programme of the order of events between us and Him, but set the blessed hope before us in the way that made those who received it, thirty and forty years ago, speak of their joy in receiving it as like a new conversion. This led to some smaller meetings on the subject, the last of which was closed, at the request of a (I think post-millennial) minister present, with the hymn beginning—

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love.

Dr. Gordon, of Boston, and Dr. Pierson, of Philadelphia, arrived in time for the few closing days, and contributed greatly to the profit of the Convention.

Dr. Pierson spoke of the perfect law of liberty as a mirror, connecting James i. 23—25 with 2 Cor. iii. 12—iv. 6, to which Professor Drummond had referred. Dr. Pierson said there were three mirrors—Creation; the New Creation; and the Written Word. But creation and Christians are both imperfect mirrors; the only perfect one is the Word of God. He also spoke of the dark and bright side of the pillar of cloud; and at another time gave what he considered a more accurate division of the dialogue in Solomon's Song.

On Sunday afternoon a number of short addresses were given, introduced by Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Philadelphia, who read of the serpent lifted up (Numb. xxi. and John iii). Then Mr. Bridgman, publisher, of Northampton, Mr. Moore, merchant, of Boston, Mr. Dixon Williams, evangelist, of Lebanon, Tennessee, gave brief pointed practical talks of five to ten minutes. They were followed by Mr. Ellsing, pastor of a mission church in one of the most degraded parts of New York. His story of the condition of the people, a thousand of whom were packed into one tenement house, was appalling, relieved only by the manifestation of God's love and power in the salvation of some despairing or abandoned creature. One of these was a poor mother who had determined to throw herself from the window, when she saw what seemed a cross of fire in the sky. This symbol of salvation astonished and arrested her. She told a neighbour of it, who replied, "Oh, that is the gilded cross on the top of the mission church." The troubled heart went there, and was delivered from her sins and sorrows by finding Christ.

On Monday morning Mr. Moody gave a remarkable address on prayer, of which the conditions were adoration, confession, restitution, thanksgiving, unity, forgiveness, faith, perseverance, submission. It was full of incidents and pungent, stimulating application.

Dr. Pentecost, who came for two days only, ably followed on the same subject. On the next evening he spoke on Ps. viii. 3—6, with Heb. ii. 5—9. Man in three relations—Attached to God; Detached by sin; Re-attached by Jesus Christ.

I notice incidentally a humorous little story told at the dinner table, illustrating somewhat sadly the tendency of business to break up family life—not only in America, but in England also. A boy had disobeyed his father, who boxed his ears. The child went crying to his mother, and she asked, "What is the matter?" "I've been struck on the head." "Who struck you?" "A man." "Well, what man? Who was it struck you?" "The man that stays here Sundays." It is to be feared that many children only know their father as "the man that stays there on Sundays."

Dr. Gordon spoke with force and unction from Heb. i. ii., on the exaltation and submission of Jesus; and, again, on the anointing of the priest and the leper with the blood of redemption and the oil of consecration, on the ear, the hand, and the foot. Speaking of the hand, he told of an avaricious man whom he had gone to visit when dying, and as was his custom he wanted to take his hand while he prayed with him. But the dying miser would not give his hand, and when life was gone, the key of his safe was found in his death grasp. There are, added Dr. Gordon, eight billions of dollars stored up by Christians in the United States, like the Lord's talents wrapped in napkins and hid in the earth. If that money were used for Christ He would at his coming receive his own with usury of saved souls. Speaking of the ears, he said that too often what went in at the ear went out at the tongue, which became coated with the malaria of scandal. We want our feet consecrated to go after the sinner. How beautiful are the feet of those who enter into the places of the poor to tell them good tidings of peace!

R. C. Morgan.

The eighth day commenced with a lecture on Pre-millenianism, by Rev. W. W. Clark, who had the whole scheme marked out in a diagram on the blackboard. His argument was essentially this: Christ is the subject of the Bible; in the Old Testament we are told He is coming; in the Gospel He is here; but in the Acts and Epistles of the New Testament his return is prophesied. By the light of the New Testament we can distinguish the Old Testament prophecies concern his First and Second Comings. The Second Coming is a personal return, and does not refer to death. Twenty passages were quoted in support of this view. It is to be a visible appearing in clouds of glory, for He would never tell us to look for what we could not see. The coming is pre-millennial. The scheme of the pre-millennial doctrine was then given, which is briefly this: The first dispensation was that of conscience, which lasted during the 2083 years between Adam and Abraham; the next was that of promise, for 430 years, down to the time of Moses. This was followed by the dispensation of the law, which lasted 1441 years, to the time of Christ; then came the Messianic dispensation of 33 years; and we are now living in the dispensation of the Church, which has already lasted 1887 years. When Christ comes again, and catches up the saints into the air, there will be a time of tribulation on earth, when from all sinners will be picked the elect who shall be saved through this tribulation, The Book of Revelation, chapters vi.—xix., covers this period. Then Christ shall descend again with his saints and with the holy angels, and reign over them and the elect for a thousand years. The dead will rise, and the good participate in this reign; at the end of the thousand years Satan shall be loosed a little while, and then in the day of judgment he shall be cast into the lake of fire, and the sheep and goats shall be divided. All these points were backed by plenty of references, and it was stated that this doctrine was accepted, not only by the apostles, but by Luther, John Knox, and Calvin. Its power was said to be such as would keep hearts, minds, and thoughts on Christ and his coming.

At a Ladies' Foreign Missionary Meeting, Mrs. Blatchford, secretary of the Woman's Board of the Interior, dwelt upon the joy of seeing Jesus, this sight enabling the heart to grasp a little of that knowledge which passeth understanding. Miss Gouldy, from Osaka, Japan, made an earnest appeal for more helpers, and pictured the change among the people, from her arrival in 1872 to her return in 1883.

The morning session was enlivened with a number of short speeches. Mr. H. L. Hastigns read and commented on the story of the woman whose daughter was tormented by a devil (Matt. xv. 21—31). The prayer of the mother was an outcry of the soul in distress, and the simplicity of the prayer made it a model for anyone in trouble. It consisted of three words—one about heaven, one about earth, and one, the golden link, that bound the two together. Mr. Hastings concluded by picturing a vision of Christ as the King of Glory, reaching out to all burdened ones the golden sceptre, and saying, "What is thy request?"

Professor Drummond then addressed the meeting. He said: We want a life based on principles, or there is no use in our religion for ourselves or others. In answer to the question, "How can we be sanctified and made whole, which is the same thing as holiness?" he said: First we must give up all false methods, such as trying to live by rule, &c. The true method he founded upon the Bible and upon Nature. In 2 Cor. iii. 18 there is a principle set forth, and if the cause is fulfilled the effect cannot fail. "We are changed." The change is not the result of our effort. The glory of Christ is his character, and of this glory we shall be made partakers. The only reserve in the passage was to the effect that men should not veil their faces, should not shut out the light from God's love. To those who make Christ their constant companion his promise is that they shall become like Him, being changed into his image.

Dr. Gordon followed with an exposition of sanctification, based on Old Testament Scripture, comparing for this purpose Lev. xiv. 14 with Lev. viii. 23.

At the afternoon meeting Mr. Moody devoted half an hour to the answering of questions. One was, "How to awaken in the ordinary Church an interest in revivals?" The reply was characteristic: First, get revived yourself. Don't scold the Church, but talk about the love of God. Another was, "How to cause the unconverted to attend church?" The reply being, give them something, and there will be no trouble about it. Have good singing and short meetings.

Both the subsequent speakers selected themes suggested by Prof. Drummond's morning address. Mr. George C. Needham, of Manchester, took Christ's Loveliness for his subject, reading the last few verses of the fifth chapter of Solomon's Song. The unfolding of Christ, he said, was the object of the Conference. Expounding the picture given in the passage read, he insisted that Christ is really "altogether lovely" to the true believer.

Dr. Pierson followed with an admirably ingenious exposition of the passages of the Bible referring to mirrors, as showing the Christian's duty to reflect Christ, which was insisted on by Prof. Drummond in the morning. He said in reference to Prof. Drummond's address, that it had "lifted us about as high as we have been at any time during these meetings." He took up the subject where it had been left, and applied certain passages of Scripture to it. In 2 Cor. iv. 1, he called attention to the connection between the Gospel and the glory of which Christ had just been speaking. What is the mirror in which we are told that we catch glimpses of the person of Christ? There are three mirrors undoubtedly referred to in the Bible, which reflect the glory of Christ; the creation, the new creation in the human soul, and the Word of God. The difficulty with the first mirror is that the reflection is only partial, and with the second that it is imperfect. The only true mirror is the Word of God.

The evening session was occupied entirely with short speeches. Mr. Hastings, Mr. Moody, Mr. S. E. Bridgeman, of Northampton, and Rev. H. L. Wayland, of Philadelphia, each contributed something of value. Dr. Gordon urged the necessity of a balance between knowledge and soul. Some men and some churches are all one, and none of the other. The twofold blessing of knowledge and life is the best that any can have.

Professor Drummond's speech, which closed the session, was the speech of the evening, and this we shall reserve till our next issue.

SOUL-WINNING & PRAYER UNION.

The members of this Union, which is now in its eighth year, join together on the 10th of each month in waiting on the Lord for a fresh endowment of power from on high, to bring souls to Christ for the glory of God. There are now 3219 members. The Soul Winner, a little paper published monthly, contains the promise for each month, which the members are requested to plead at the Throne of Grace, as well as special requests for prayer and thanksgiving, information about the home and foreign work of the Union, and lists of texts for daily devotional Bible-reading. Mr. J. C. Smith, Newport-on-Tay, is the secretary.

Promise for September 10 (Mark xi. 24):—"All things whatsoever ye pray and ask for, believe that ye have received them, and ye shall have them."

FOREIGN POSTAGE.—We are often informed by missionaries to whom friends kindly send The Christian, that the copies are insufficiently stamped, as a consequence of which the recipient has to pay double postage. Will senders please be careful to ascertain the correct postage?

A MOTHERS' PRAYER MEETING has been held for nearly fifty years in Glasgow. It received fresh impetus on the first visit to that city of Messrs. Moody and Sankey. Round this gathering of Christian women many hallowed associations linger, and many of the Lord's best blessings have descended on the families which they represent. Young mothers are earnestly invited to join as members, and also ladies, who, though unmarried, are called upon to take charge of the young. The gatherings were resumed on Thursday last, Sept. 1, at 18, Sauchiehall-street.

MORAVIAN CHURCH.—The story of this church, its claims on Christian sympathy and aid is told in a little book by Dr. J. R. Macduff. It is one that should touch to the quick the hearts and consciences of those who are asleep in Zion, and stir up a warm and fervent interest on behalf of a church which has from its earliest days been fired by the missionary spirit. The heroism of these early missionaries is, we think, scarcely matched in the history of missions. There are now employed in the various fields 319 European and native missionaries. The book may be obtained of Mr. G. E. Roberts, 29, Ely-place, Holborn, E.C.

COTTAGE HOME, KINGSTOWN.—The new building for this home will, it is hoped, be opened in a short time, but some £400 are still required to defray the cost of erection, about £2200. The home is for very young children, and the many applications continually received show how great is the need. Several urgent cases have lately been received and boarded out, there being at present no room in the Home. Amongst these are the two children of a soldier whose wife is dead, and two others of a man who died in hospital and left to the care of a clergyman. These are illustrations both of the need for the Home and of the kind of work it is doing. Miss Rosa M. Barrett, 6, De Vesci-terrace, Kingstown, co. Dublin, is the hon. sec.

THE GOSPEL IN CHINA.

Mr. C. H. Judd writes from Ninghai, near Chefoo, on July 4:—

The Misses Parker, Webber, and Groves, with my wife, self, and three youngest boys, left England on March 25, and had a very happy voyage per French mail. Miss Parker went to Yangchoo, and we left Miss Webber at Chefoo.

Dr. Cameron opened a station here a few months ago, with a suitable native house, and procured a proclamation from the authorities giving permission to open a dispensary. Circumstances have, however, prevented this being done at present. On May 24 I came here and joined our brother in Christ, Mr. Terry, who is still studying the language. Before long one soul professed faith in the Lord Jesus, and we have been greatly pleased with his conduct. Others have become interested.

And now has come Satan's opposition. About three weeks ago stones were thrown at our doors and shutters, then fireworks were ignited and pushed under the door, and filth thrown outside. After one evening meeting stones were thrown at me, but without injuring me. But Saturday evening a severe bang came at our shutters. One of the offenders was caught, spoken to kindly, and then released. Shortly after numbers of stones and tiles were thrown at and into the house. This threw my dear wife into such hysterics that I feared for her recovery.

We had sought the Lord's protection and guidance, and felt that He alone must be our keeper and stay. But it appeared right to send to the magistrate, and let him know what was going on, and help was very kindly sent, and the ruffians scattered. My wife, however, passed a restless night, and was too weak to risk any further attack or danger. We therefore engaged mules, and sent her with Miss Groves and the children to Chefoo, about twenty miles distant, accompanied by Brother Sturman, who had been over on a visit. This morning the magistrate has put out, voluntarily, a proclamation in six different parts of the city, forbidding anyone to give us further annoyance. What this is worth we do not pretend to say, but under our God's hands it may prove of great value. I know that many of your readers will plead with God, in faith, that Satan's evil attack may turn back on his own head, and that we may be kept in peace, and many souls saved.

THE AINU OF JAPAN.

The island of Yezo, in Japan, is about the size of Ireland. Parts of the island are inhabited by a curious people called Ainu. They are Japanese subjects, extremely poor, ignorant, and dirty. They can speak a little very corrupt Japanese, but cannot read or write it, and are unable to follow an address in that language. None of the people understand English, or any foreign language, and it is said that there is only one foreigner who understands their language. Happily, this one man cares for their souls. He is Mr. John Batchelor, a missionary of the Church Missionary Society. He has reduced their language to writing, and has taught a few of the people to read it, and by their help he has translated part of the Gospel of Matthew.

A little church has been formed, consisting of four members, and a few more of the people are under instruction. They have offered, if the Church Missionary Society will put up a small building as a chapel, to give the land, pay all taxes, keep the building in order, and pay for fires, cleaning, &c. It is "the day of small things" among the Ainu, who have hitherto been downtrodden, and driven back by people of stronger thews. They are not a promising race, but the leverage is now being applied which alone can exalt any people. And even the Ainu are not too degraded for the Gospel to lift them up, and make them men.

MISSIONS IN CHINA.—The Chinese Recorder, which is edited by Rev. L. H. Gulick, M.D., gives a statistical summary of Protestant missions in China, of which the following are the main items:—Number of societies engaged in missionary work, 38; total number of missionaries, 919; of whom 446 are men, 316 are wives, and 157 are single women; native ordained ministers, 140; unordained helpers, 1,296; communicants, 28,000; pupils in schools, 10,579.

A MISSION TOUR IN INDIA.—5.

DECEMBER 6, 1886.—I left Bangalore, and travelled as far as Jollarpett with Mr. Beattie, a chaplain who has just been appointed by Government to succeed Rev. J. Gelson Gregson, in his temperance work amongst the soldiers. To one unlearned in the logic of these subjects it does seem a little strange that the authorities should, by the canteen system, themselves provide the necessity for the temperance chaplain.

On reaching Shoranur, I had to leave the train, and travel south by road to Trichur, taking the common mode of conveyance in this part of the country—i.e., a bullock-cart, which seems as if it had been invented to demonstrate how uncomfortable it is possible to make carriage exercise. Travelling in a bullock-cart without springs is at all times excruciating; but in my case it was intolerable, as I had unfortunately contracted fever at Coimbatore, and every bone in my body was aching. The journey from Shoranur to Trichur lasted only seven hours, but to me it seemed interminable. At last, travelling through a lovely country, the bullock-cart pulled up at the C.M.S. Mission House, and I was very heartily welcomed by Mrs. Bishop, wife of the missionary, Rev. J. H. Bishop, who was away on a preaching tour.

I am now in Travancore territory; it is very different to anything else I have seen in India, and is specially interesting. It is a native State, and while in some respects under what one might call very enlightened rule, it is in others terribly backward. For instance, this town of Trichur is said to be the crême de la crême of Brahminism; and caste in all its hideousness reigns supreme. Mrs. Murray Mitchell, in her very interesting book, "In Southern India," says, in speaking of Trichur:—

> Caste is intensely and exceptionally strong, and, as elsewhere, stands in the way of all progress. The degradation of the lower castes, consequent on the absurd and oppressive laws of caste, is terrible here, and hardly to be believed. For example, no native Christian, however educated and intelligent, nor any person of low caste, can obtain employment in a public office, for fear of polluting those officials who may be of higher caste! Then the school difficulties are endless. The children of some of the inferior castes dare not even approach a school where higher caste lads are taught. The disabilities are inconceivable, and so are the injustice and inequality of the laws. Women, too, are degraded to a degree you hardly find equalled in these days of reform in any other part of India. It is terrible to look at some of the poor, miserable-looking creatures, with hardly any clothing, and no sense even of decency.

Notwithstanding this sad picture, mission work is being faithfully and earnestly carried on by Mr. and Mrs. Bishop, and by the Misses Coleman of the Church of England Zenana Mission. To Mrs. Bishop belongs the honour of having started the first day-school for Hindu girls in this place. Recently there has been quite a revival in the native church, under the preaching of Mr. Rowe, of the Anglo-Indian Evangelisation Society; Mr. Bishop had invited him, and though he laboured under the disadvantage of preaching through an interpreter, his message was greatly blessed.

There are two interesting boarding schools here, one for boys and one for girls. There are more Christian girls than boys, as the latter are drafted off to a Christian college at Cottayam. I was awakened at five o'clock this morning by the girls singing their morning hymn; it was very pretty.

December 9.—The route to Allepie is by boat along the Backwater, a series of lakes, connected by canals which are filled by the numerous streams and rivers coming down from the hills. I am in a long boat, rowed by ten men, at one end of which is a little covered-in space, dignified by the name of cabin, in which my bedding is spread for the night, the ten oarsmen occupying the rest of the boat; fine fellows they are too, of tremendous muscle, and full of endurance. It is forty-five miles to Cochin our next stopping place.

December 10.—I passed a very trying night, suffering a good deal of pain owing to the fever still keeping its hold upon me. Had I been well this journey would have been by no means unpleasant. The endurance of these boatmen is to me marvellous; they have pulled steadily all night, enlivening the proceedings every now and then with song, which from its style and strength was anything but soothing to my poor feverish brain!

At 6 a.m. we arrived at the Pallypuram Leper Asylum, and I went on shore to see it. The poor lepers were greatly taken by surprise by such an early visit from a stranger. Most of them had not yet come out of their houses. This is an excellent asylum, clean, airy, and in good order; the men and women are kept apart. The inmates are mostly Roman Catholics, and low caste people (all natives). There is one Protestant; he, too, was once a Roman Catholic, but became a Protestant twenty years ago. He was servant to a European, had been in England, and could speak a very little English; he became a leper about two years ago. He said he was in the habit of reading the Bible himself, but he did not like reading it to the others, as the priests would be angry with him. Though in a native state this leper hospital belongs to the British Government. A C.M.S. missionary, after having paid a visit to this place, says there is plenty of room for more patients if only more funds were granted. There are many lepers, he adds, in Ernakulam and Pallypuram itself who should be sent there. According to the last census report there were 148 lepers in native Cochin.

It appears to me that there is a grand opening for our Leper Mission here; for £100 a year we could get sixteen more poor sufferers admitted, bringing the total number up to fifty; and might have an interesting mission work amongst them. I saw the usual sad, sad sights that are never absent from these leper asylums, but was especially struck by a young leprous mother with a dear, bright little baby in her arms. Surely this poor child must be drinking in poison every day!

WELLESLEY C. BAILEY,
Secretary, Mission to Lepers in India.
17, Glengyle-terrace, Edinburgh.

◆

AN INDIAN PRINCE ON MISSIONS.

PRINCE HURNAM SINGH, who, with his wife, came to this country as the representative of the Kupparthalla principality at the Jubilee celebration, recently presided at a crowded missionary meeting held in Inverness. The Prince was brought up at the station of Jullundhur, in which there was an American Presbyterian Mission, and having been baptized as a young man, has ever since evinced a strong attachment for Christianity.

In the course of his address he said missionaries and Missions are doing much good in India, though its people are not readily coming forward to embrace Christianity. The strong hold their own religion has upon them, and the great sacrifices necessary on giving it up and becoming a Christian, explain this. But the seed is being steadily and patiently sown by humble pioneers of the Gospel, and in God's own time there is no doubt it will bear abundant fruit. Many Hindoos believe on Christ in their heart, who are afraid to acknowledge Him openly. There is every reason for the friends of Missions to be encouraged, for castes and prejudices are dying away, and people are already longing for something firm and lasting, which can be found in the religion of Christ alone. What India wants is more workers of all denominations, more mission schools for boys and girls, more medical men, and, above all, women to educate the women of India.

WATCH.

Christian Pilgrim, watchful be,
Many eyes are watching thee.
Satan watches to enthrall;
Worldlings watch to see thee fall.
Saviour, watch thy servant too,
Guide and guard him safely through.

—New York Observer.

CONFERENCE AT DUFFTOWN.

THIS annual gathering, which was commenced in 1885 by Rev. James Smith, was again held on Tuesday and Wednesday, August 16 and 17, in the Town Hall, Dufftown, Banffshire, N.B. Hitherto the Conference has occupied one day only, but this year the conveners, with some fear and trembling, decided to extend the work so as to cover two days. The result justified the wisdom of the arrangement. Enthusiastic audiences came together, and the spirit of expectancy, unity, and power was most manifest. The subject for study was, "The Gospel: its Present Power and Future Prospects." Tuesday morning was occupied with the first of these two themes: Present Power, taken in its two divisions of power to save, or Regeneration, and power to sanctify, or Consecration. A hearty, clear, and powerful statement on regeneration was given by Rev. D. Smith, of Grimsby (late of Formosa), emphasising it as a fundamental doctrine of Scripture, showing its moral necessity for man, and the Divine means by which it is effected. Dr. Elder Cumming, of Glasgow, followed with a soul-searching and practical address on consecration, showing the necessity for and hindrances to complete surrender of the whole man to God for holy living and testimony.

Wednesday morning was occupied with the second part of the main subject, namely, Future Prospects, taken in its two divisions of present prospects among the nations, or Evangelisation, and the future prospect of hope, or the Second Coming of Christ. The first of these themes, Evangelisation, was treated in a masterly manner by Dr. J. Marshall Lang, of Glasgow, whose heart-stirring address was full of instructive facts and spiritual force. The second theme, the Second Coming of Christ, was set forth as a Scriptural fact and as a cheering and practical hope, by Rev. J. Smith, Dufftown.

Open Conference meetings were held in the afternoon of each day: on Tuesday, when Dr. Elder Cumming presided, and testimonies on regeneration and consecration were given by Dr. Gauld, Mildmay Medical Mission; Rev. W. Hutcheson, Coats; Rev. J. Smith, and others; and on Wednesday, when Mr. James E. Mathieson, of Mildmay, presided, and short addresses were delivered by the Chairman; Rev. H. L. Mackenzie, from China; Rev. D. Smith; and Mr. J. Archibald, of the National Bible Society, on Evangelisation and Christ's Second Advent. These talks, in open conference, helped greatly to add light and clear up difficulties.

Evangelistic meetings were held on the two evenings of the Conference days, when the Town Hall was crowded, and earnest addresses were given by Rev. W. Hutcheson. The Lord blessed the testimony to the saving of some.

Altogether, the Conference was a time of refreshing and great joy—a season of saving and sanctifying power.

CONTINENTAL BIBLE AND HOTEL MISSION.—In connection with this Mission, large numbers of Bibles have been given away in hotels and pensions on the Continent. Every landlord is first asked if he will receive such as a gift, and many readily accept it. They give a receipt for the Bibles (large ones, which are considered as inspiring more regard both on the part of the proprietor and his guests), the names of the hotels are inscribed in the books, and they are then placed on the chimney-pieces or wardrobes. In many cases Bibles are also given to the servants, and in this quiet way thousands of Bibles have been distributed in Roman Catholic countries. Even in Naples, Sicily, South of France, and Spain, where most bigotry prevails, hotel-owners and others have promised to take care of the books, and in each place some society or resident Christian gentleman seeks to keep up the interest in them. The conviction is growing that the Bible itself is the most powerful missionary for the Lord Jesus, especially in Roman Catholic countries; and when it is remembered how many opportunities for conversation are thus opened up, the importance of this Mission's work is at once obvious.

Notes and Comments.

OUR next issue will contain portrait and sketch of Mr. Henry Thorne, the Travelling Secretary of the Y.M.C.A.

It is an encouraging sign of the growth of a healthier public feeling that two hundred members of Parliament have signed a memorial to the President and Congress of the United States in favour of establishing a Court of International Arbitration. United as the two countries are by so many bonds of ancestry and mutual intercourse, a war between them would be an even greater calamity than between Continental nations. Moreover, "nothing succeeds like success," and the establishment and skilful conduct of such an Anglo-American tribunal would be a most powerful and practical argument in favour of a more general, if not universal, system of International Arbitration.

The recent inquiry into the loss of the steamship Tasmania points a sad but instructive moral upon our national vice. After an exhaustive investigation, in which everything of any importance was placed before the Court, the Wreck Commissioner expressed his conviction that "the Lascars were almost the only sailors in this case who conducted themselves thoroughly well." Further than this, two of the assessors—practical seafaring men—said that in circumstances of difficulty and danger they would as soon have a Lascar as a European crew to command. And why? Simply because the oft-despised Lascar, though inferior in physical strength, has been proved to be sober, obedient, and well-behaved, whereas "Jack Tar" is too often intemperate and surly.

A good deal has been said by the English Press against the bull-fights of which, from time to time, we hear as taking place in France and Spain. An advertisement is before us announcing a lion and bull fight at Gibraltar on Sunday, the 21st ult. This advertisement was published in The Chronicle, the official organ, and the promoters are an Anglo-American company stationed on the Rock. The encounter was to take place outside the garrison lines, but that it should be permitted at all, and especially under the ægis of the British flag, is surely a disgrace to this country. Curiously enough, almost immediately under this advertisement is another of the Gibraltar Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, inviting anyone witnessing an act of cruelty to give information to the Secretary. We hope the Government will take steps to prevent, if possible, such heathenish exhibitions in future, or at any rate to show its disapproval of them.

This, unfortunately, is not the only case which calls for notice. On the same day (Sunday), at Malaga, there was to be a large fête and band contest for £200, in which three English military bands from the Gibraltar garrison were to compete with three Spanish bands. The English bands were to be conveyed to and from Malaga in one of H.M. warships. Such a contest would not surely be allowed between military bands at home! Neither should such God-dishonouring desecration of the Sabbath day be countenanced by our authorities, military or otherwise, abroad. In too many cases, alas! there is but little honouring of God on the part of our officials amongst the peoples with whom their lot is cast.

There are many farms for sale in the New England States, and young English farmers, with a moderate capital, may find good opportunities to settle there, instead of pushing on into the wild far West.

What a change has come over the Church of England since Whitfield and Wesley were practically turned out of it for irregular, i.e., open-air preaching! The parish church of Lambeth is under the shadow of the Archbishop's Palace, and close by this church the rector, the Hon. and Rev. T. G. Pelham, preaches from a pulpit on wheels to large crowds on summer Sunday evenings, and this pulpit is wheeled into the Archbishop's premises for its weekly rest. Nor are the curates a whit behind their rector in prosecuting this branch of ministry, for no less than three of them were present at a meeting in Lambeth-walk a few evenings ago.

This parochial preaching might be increased with immense advantage both to the workers and the parishioners. The refinement of the ladies in this Lambeth band (one of whom played a harmonium) evidently had a soothing effect upon the rough men and dejected women, who are more likely to believe in the reality of religion, and eventually to come inside to worship, after seeing earnest, educated men and women go out into the highways "to seek and to save that which was lost."

With respect to the operation of caste in India, referred to in Mr. W. C. Bailey's letter on another page, the following, from The Indian Witness, will be read with painful interest:—

> We sympathise with the native brethren of Travancore, who are being seriously injured by Mr. Ragunatha Row's decision that Christians being of no caste, are therefore low caste. The High Court of this self-styled model native State has confirmed the magistrate's decision. Mission schools have been broken up, and Christians refused the privilege of sending an address to Her Majesty, because they were "low caste;" and also refused the privilege of drawing water from tanks resorted to by "high caste" people, and likely to be compelled to keep off certain streets where these people walk. If the English Government can overlook such an atrocity, they may expect to hear that as the Queen Empress is of "low caste," the laws of the Empire are not binding upon people of "high caste"! The attention of humane people is being turned to the caste legislation of Travancore, and we cannot doubt the result.

The Times has published a defence of missions in Central Africa. Professor Lenz, on his return last spring from an expedition of adventure, criticised severely the methods and results of missionary work in general. But such travellers, who earn by rapid exploration of the country a condign worship and renown, should not seek to minimise the yet more arduous labours of those who devote their whole lives to the interests of the dwellers in the Dark Continent. The work already accomplished there is enormous; the natives are stimulated to greater industry by the acquirement of civilised methods and arts; they are induced to abandon the sensual orgies of their heathen rites; they learn the use of books, clothes, trade, and money; and, above all, they obtain the priceless heritage of assured salvation through the perfect love of Christ. Those who are tempted to criticise what has yet been left undone should reflect upon the vastness of the field of labour, and rather bow the head and return thanks to God for the great blessing which has already been vouchsafed upon the labours of his servants.

The Christian Million has some remarkable statistics of the drink traffic. It appears that the great brewers and distillers are rapidly absorbing their smaller fellows, and extending their control over all licensed houses. The traffic is gradually becoming more and more of a monopoly, and independent publicans will soon be absolutely extinct. And meanwhile, despite the undoubted spread of temperance, the profits of the monopolists have been largely on the increase. The annual profits of the firm of Guinness have risen from £550,000 in 1885 to £850,000 to-day, and the Allsopp profits from £204,000 to £350,000 during the same period. The only source of congratulation in this concentration of the liquor trade is that we have thus in some sense a realisation of the longing of Nero. If the traffickers in this engine of destruction have but one neck, it will be the easier, when the day of reckoning comes, to destroy them.

We hope the forcible article in The Echo last week, on behalf of the young women at City restaurants, will receive the attention it deserves. The writer calls attention to a flourishing restaurant—a type of many—at which thirteen hours per day are demanded for 15s. per week. Of this sum 2s. 6d. is deducted for "glass money" whether breakages occur or not:—

> Here are young girls, many of them originally of good social position, and most of them of pleasing appearance and address, placed from morning to night in positions where they are peculiarly exposed to the temptations of unscrupulous seducers. Handicapped in every way, unable to resent the doubles entendres with which the City cad think sit no shame to ply a modest woman, so long as she is behind a bar, wearied to death with continual standing, is there much to wonder at if she falls a victim to one smooth-tongued among the many which she has to listen to, and takes the first fatal step downwards? The rest is merely a question of time. Her employer cares little. It never even occurs to him, probably, that he has been the most important factor in the ruin of a human soul, and the vacancy left when the plunge into the dark waters of sin is made soon fills, and the story is told over again.

The editor of The British Weekly complains of our having seriously mistaken the meaning of his article on "The Coming Battle." We, however, could see no way of escape from the inferences which the article in question compelled. The writer affirmed that only Hebrew scholars could appreciate the arguments relating to the Old Testament canon, and that virtually the foremost Hebraists everywhere were ranged under the destructive banner. But we believe that the article was much too alarmist, and we cannot but note that Principal Douglas, in the following issue, considerably qualified the picture drawn.

The British Weekly then, in its issue of August 26, charged us with teaching that "if the Old Testament critics are so unanimous in their conclusions they must be yielded to." This we repudiate. What we pointed out, and substantiated, was that according to the premises of The British Weekly the hostile critics were, for the time being at least, victorious. Our contemporary relegated the whole question of the Old Testament canon to Hebrew scholars of highest repute, virtually denying to others the right or capability of judgment. But it is open to Christians generally, whether Hebraists or not, to see the folly of much, if not all, of the advanced destructive criticism, for if our Lord quotes the Psalms, for example, as written by David, what room is there for the theory that "David wrote no Psalms?" We do not believe that the outlook is so dark as represented. But whether or not, we are fully assured that no bone of Scripture can be broken.

We welcome the decided opinion expressed by the Bishop of London on the subject of ballet dancing, as shown in his recently published correspondence with Rev. Stewart D. Headlam. The latter, whose advocacy of the stage far eclipses his zeal for the Gospel, applied to his lordship for "a general leave" to officiate in the diocese. But the Bishop replied that, being of opinion that Mr. Headlam was doing serious mischief by his encouragement of the ballet, he was not prepared to give him further facilities for doing so. This has called forth the following remonstrance, signed by fifty-nine "ladies at present dancing in London," to the Bishop's implied charge that the dress of the ballet is indecent:—

> We, members of the Christian Church, earning our living by dancing, protest against this monstrous and shameful charge, which you, the chief pastor in the diocese, have brought against us, and declare that it is absolutely false.

Mr. Headlam also endeavours to persuade the readers of The Pall Mall Gazette that the influences of music-halls are most elevating, and that the endeavour of the Bishop "to keep Christian people away from them, and to leave the artistes to be patronised by the depraved," is largely responsible for the dreadful state of things which was recently brought to light concerning the ruin of English girls in Continental dancing saloons. We would rather bear the responsibility of the Bishop in keeping people out of such places, than that of Mr. Headlam, whose influence leads multitudes into the jaws of ruin, from which, with strange inconsistency, he then endeavours to snatch them, and poses as the champion of modesty and virtue. We agree with the Bishop's words, "To encourage them to go into temptation, when our Lord has taught them to pray that they may not be led into temptation, is, in my opinion, most mischievous."

◆

THE C.M.S. IN METLAKAKTLA.

DEAR SIR,—From the paragraph in your paper of the 19th referring to the Metlakaktla Mission, you are evidently under the impression that the original cause of the difference between the Church Missionary Society and Mr. William Duncan was the fact that the Society did not allow the Indian Christians of Metlakaktla, "to develop their Christian and Church life, according to their own circumstances and ideas." The real cause of the difference was that Mr. Duncan refused to allow the Metlakaktla Christians to receive the Lord's Supper, on the ground that from their previous ignorance and superstition they could not understand the nature of that ordinance.

As some of the converts had been Christians for more than fifteen years, and had frequently been very highly spoken of by Mr. Duncan for their piety, the Society could not consent to this restriction. This led to Mr. Duncan's severance from the Society, and the majority of the Indians followed him. A minority of about one-sixth, one hundred in number, adhered to the Society. These the Committee felt that they could not desert. Hence the existence of two bodies of Christians in the same Indian settlement. But there seems to the Committee no reason why these two bodies should not live amicably side by side.

Our annual report, just printed, will show that the blessing of God is very markedly resting on the Society's labours in the North Pacific Coast.—Yours very sincerely,

CHR. C. FENN, Sec. C.M.S.

JESSIE VEITCH: A WORKER FOR GOD.

THERE recently died in Edinburgh, at the venerable age of eighty-one, a woman who was literally worn out in the Master's service. Jessie Veitch was for many years a burning and shining light wherever she went. Her life emphasised the power of the words she spoke. It was evident to all who came into contact with her that the constraining love of Christ ruled and moulded her actions. She could not be idle; one who knew her well tells us that she grudged every hour that was not spent in doing what would promote God's glory, and the salvation of souls. Man's praise was nothing to her; but the approbation of "King Jesus," as she loved to call our Saviour, was to her what the sun is to flowers. She drank deep of the Spirit of Christ; it was her meat and her drink to do the will of our Father in heaven. After a long life of obedience and unceasing effort, she has gone to the restful service that lies beyond the grave at the honoured age of eighty-five. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord: they rest from their labours, and their works do follow them."

Miss Veitch was one of the saintly McCheyne's converts. His influence was strong on her to the end. His way of putting truth, and some of his favourite expressions, were often on her lips. The love he bore to Jews seized hold of her. After coming to Edinburgh she joined Dr. Moody Stuart's congregation. In it were a number of the sons of Israel. She sought them out, and helped them as much as she could. Her best work was done in the Canongate, where she laboured as a Bible-woman with striking success. Day and night she climbed long stairs and entered squalid homes with the message of life. Fatigue seemed to be unknown to her. No case was too hopeless, no rebuff too severe for her. After years of sowing in tears she had a reaping-time of joy. Only the Day can proclaim the results of her self-denying service, but even on earth she was privileged to see some of the fruit which sprang out of it. She conducted meetings in Chalmers's Close, a locality densely crowded with men and women who never went to church. Her loving ministry had a unique attraction for the lapsed. They felt sure of her friendship, and the Gospel as told by her sounded very sweet. She preached Jesus with a yearning tenderness which drew tears from eyes unused to weeping, and which softened hard hearts.

During the thirty years she was an agent of the City Mission, she did more than any one man or woman to raise the fallen, and comfort those who had no comforter. This is heartily admitted by workers for God in the dark places of Edinburgh.

But the Canongate was too small for Miss Veitch; her sympathies went beyond her district. She took a deep interest in soldiers. At the Castle, Piershill, and Leith Fort she was a welcome visitor. Her womanliness and sweet unselfishness paved the way for speaking about Christ. The roughest soldier could not resist her winning earnestness. She did not come with a preaching air, and so repel those she wished to help. With the tact which was her power, she made men feel first she was their friend, and then because she was their friend, she spoke to them about their spiritual welfare. She might justly be called the Miss Robinson of Scotland; she did in her smaller sphere what the latter has done in a larger sphere. The two came into contact more than once, and were, we understand, closely attached to one another.

Miss Veitch was laid aside from active service during the last two years; but she was not idle. She wrote many letters of comfort and advice, and sent hundreds of tracts to soldiers and others in whom she was interested. Death was gain to her, for it was a summons to see the King in his beauty, and to be with the Saviour she loved. Her funeral was largely attended. Many soldiers were present. When the coffin was lowered into the grave, Peter Jackson, a dear friend and valued fellow-labourer of Miss Veitch, fulfilled a promise he made to her by singing, "My Jesus, I Love Thee." So, through the last scene in her earthly history there rang a note of that love which blessed and gladdened her life. It was characteristic of the woman that, after her death, it should be discovered that out of her scanty earnings she had saved enough to pay her funeral expenses, and to leave her room in perfect order for the next occupier. Her desire was to be in everything worthy of the name she bore.

◆

SOME SEPTEMBER MAGAZINES.

THE Bishop of Ripon, Rev. Dr. Thain Davidson, Rev. Charles Garrett, Rev. C. Spurgeon, and Rev. S. A. Barnett (Warden of Toynbee Hall) are among the contributors to the September number of The Young Man.

The Sunday at Home is bright, healthy, and useful, as it always is, containing a stimulating paper on "High Ideals," by Lily Watson; a charming and suggestive one, by J. F. Mayo, on the relations of children, the middle-aged, and the aged, and the ways in which they each help one another; and the concluding chapters of the interesting series on "Life in New Guinea," by Rev. James Chalmers.

Good Words has a good paper by Rev. J. G. Wood on "Some Phases of Animal Life," and a very bright and breezy one, entitled "My only Day after the Deer." We like best, however, Robert Walker's biographical sketch of Josef Israels, the Dutch artist. There is much more than pleasure, or even instruction, to be got from this paper; it is calculated to invigorate and inspire.

The Leisure Hour contains another paper by Prof. Patisson, F.G.S., on "The Coral Reefs of England," which should be of great interest to those concerned with the Evolution controversy. His conclusion is that neither among living corals, nor among the vast collection of fossil ones, gathered from so many different geological strata, can any traces be found of the law of Evolution; "there is no appearance whatever of any change or transformation from one species to another." In these days, when the vast problems which are connected with labour and capital press so heavily, and weary the heart and brain of Christian philanthropists, it is delightful to hear of some wise and noble pioneer who, in his own sphere, has faced these questions and answered, not in thought and theory only, but in practice. Such a one was Karl Metz, a German manufacturer, whose story is told by Rev. John Kelly with much force and skill.

In The Sunday Magazine Alexander Lamont's concluding paper on "The Poets and Child Life" is itself a poem, in which lovers both of children and poetry will revel. The pictorial illustrations equal the poetical. Henry A. Harper's paper "Goschen to Sinai" brings out the interesting fact that the cross was used as a sacred symbol by the Assyrians, Phœnicians, and Egyptians as early as 825 B.C. and 1600 B.C. It was not commonly adopted by the early Christians. "Before 300 A.D. Christian emblems were the fish, the lamb, the dove, the palm-branch, and others." The cross was a heathen sign. "Dr. Schliemann, speaking of the cross, says, 'It is the most ancient of all religious emblems, but as an emblem of Christianity it came into use after Constantine.'" Dr. Samuel Cox supplies a delightfully fresh and suggestive article on the proverb: "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." Formerly he turned from this saying with discontent and aversion. Its metaphor seemed grotesque and uncouth. "Massive apples of gold in any conceivable framework of silver would furnish forth a very heavy and loaded style of ornament, offensive to all artistic taste." But now he has learnt, from Neil's "Palestine Explored," that "apples of gold" is a poetic name for the orange in more than one Eastern tongue. "If the gold of the proverb is figurative, why should not the silver be figurative also, and point to the creamy white blossoms of the orange tree? Take it so, and the Proverb at once becomes as true to nature as it is beautiful in itself. For the orange tree is one of the few trees which bear blossom and fruit together. . . The beauty of the golden fruit is set off by its framework of white fragrant blooms." There is also an admirable sketch of the Friends' Adult Schools in Birmingham.

MR. RICHARD T. BOOTH, the well-known advocate of total abstinence, has during the last twelve days been holding a Gospel Temperance Mission at the Great Assembly Hall, Mile End (Mr. F. N. Charrington's). On Monday evening last, before a magnificent audience in point of numbers, he gave the narrative of his "Personal Experiences of the American War."

TESTIMONY OF G. B. STUDD.

GIVEN IN SHANGHAI, MAY, 1887.

About four years ago, I started in life, as men say. It had always been my ambition to go to the Bar, and so I began to read law. I had only been reading for a few months when I was overtaken by a very serious illness—an illness that laid me on what, for some time, seemed to be my death-bed. Then it was I began to think of my past life, and I could not but see that it had been very unsatisfactory and full of ingratitude to God. I made resolutions, that, if God would raise me up, I would live a better life and begin to do some Christian work. But they were resolutions with reservations—I was not prepared to live entirely for God.

In his infinite mercy God did raise me up, and I did begin to do a little Christian work; but it was very little, done fitfully, and left undone when any small excuse offered. I went back to work at law, but I got ill again and had to leave England for a time. I returned after a few months with fresh vigour to work, and settle down this time really for good, I thought, and after eighteen months' hard work I began to look forward to doing something in my profession. However, last October I was again overtaken by illness, and was ordered to go away to Australia for the winter. I felt very despondent: it seemed as if I was never going to get on.

At this time it was suggested to me that possibly I was not intended for the Bar. This suggestion, however, did not please me, as I was quite set on it; and I went away hoping to get back to England in the spring, well, and equal to work at my profession. I spent four months in Australia and was just starting again for home when I got a letter from my brother [C. T. Studd] here, saying that if I would return by China he would come down to within a reasonable distance of the coast and see me. Right glad I was to get that letter, for I wanted to see my brother; I had not seen him for two years and a half. As I was getting near Shanghai I began to think to myself, I won't stay very long in China: my brother is so keen about missionary work he will perhaps be persuading me to stay and go inland with him: and I did not want that. I arrived at Shanghai about ten days ago, on (May 19), and found to my great surprise that he had come here to meet me. When it was suggested that I should stay with my brother at the Inland Mission House I was somewhat alarmed; for I was afraid of being thrown too freely into the society of such earnest Christian workers. I did not know what they might not want me to do, and I was afraid of being identified too much with Christians by men of the world. Yes, I liked the good opinion of men; and the world does not like much real religion. Religion is tabooed even as a subject of conversation: it throws, I suppose, too strong a light on men's lives, and, as the Bible says, "Men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil."

For the first day or two it was all right, though I could not help noticing the calm and the peace amongst the people with whom I was living. No troubles or difficulties seemed really to bother them. They had their trials and difficulties, but these did not seem to burden them. With me it was quite different: I was sometimes vexed and troubled by small, petty things. I asked the secret of this peace, and was told, "Oh! whenever we have a difficulty we lay it definitely before the Lord in prayer, and He always does according to his promise: 'Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee.'" That was all very well, but I did not understand it. I believed in prayer, but I knew nothing of it as such a power in everything.

Unconsciously I began to wish that I might have this peace, this settled calm. I knew I had not got it myself, and I saw that in was something worth having. I began to ask how I might get it, and was told to submit myself entirely to the Lord Jesus and trust Him for everything. I did not feel I could do that: I did not want to submit myself wholly; I didn't know what it might lead to; it might lead to my going to missionary work in China, and I didn't want to do that, as I was determined to go home and go back to the Bar. I then heard there were to be some revival meetings in Shanghai and that made me quite determined to go away at once. I thought they might want me to take part in them, which I was afraid to do; so I took my passage in the Japan Mail starting on Friday last. However I began to feel such a craving, such a hungering for this peace that I made up my mind at all costs that I must have it, and after much prayer I surrendered myself to the Lord Jesus, trusting that He would make my will his own. That was on Wednesday; and since that time I have had such peace, such joy in my soul, that I cannot express it in words. I know it has made me feel altogether a different creature, and really last Thursday and Friday I could scarcely believe that I was not in a trance, that I should not suddenly wake up the old self: but no, thank God! it is no trance, but just this, the Lord Jesus Christ is my Keeper. He kept me then, He keeps me now, and He will continue to keep, I know, so long as I trust Him. I felt that I must confess before men what the Lord Jesus had done for me, but I do not hesitate to say I was frightened at standing up and confessing before men that I was on the Lord's side. My stumbling-block through life had been fear of man. I liked to stand well with my fellow-men; to be applauded by them; to have a good reputation: and I had always been afraid of being too religious, lest men should sneer and give me the cold shoulder; and, oh! I couldn't stand that.

I still felt the fear of man, but I was trusting Jesus for everything, and so I just trusted Him to take that away from me and make me boldly confess Him. Thank God! He did answer my prayer, and I did confess on the platform on Thursday night in a few words what I had been, and what the Lord Jesus had now done for me.

I was still going away by the Japan Mail next day; I was quite sure of that. But my first thought on Friday morning, even before I was half awake, was just this:—You confessed last night that you had been a coward in the past, but henceforth you were going to stand up for Jesus; and now, isn't it just like firing the first shot in the battle and then running away to shelter, if you go away to-day instead of waiting for those meetings? I could not go away then. At once I went and got my passage transferred, and I am staying on here to tell out the story of God's love to me.

Now, I have not told you all this long story about my past life because I like talking about myself, or because I want to hold myself up as a good example to you; God forbid. You will admit it is not a nice thing to have to confess of cowardice. I feel I must testify to the infinite mercy and wondrous grace of God to me. It may be there are some here now who are in the same position as I was, afraid to come right out on the Lord's side, because they fear that the world will say, what their friends will say—in fact because they fear man rather than God; and this too after having come to Jesus for the forgiveness of their sins and having accepted from Him salvation as a free gift. Surely this is cowadice indeed. You may say I can't overcome this fear of man; no, I don't suppose you can, in your own strength. I know I couldn't; but if you trust the Lord Jesus in this thing, He will overcome it for you. His strength will be made perfect in your weakness if you will put yourself unreservedly into his hands. Oh! I wish I could make you believe what real joy and real peace you can find in Jesus if you will only trust Him fully. The Christian's life is not an unhappy one then. I can now understand what I never could fully before, the self-denial of my brother and others who have given up home and comforts in order to preach the gospel in China, and to live as Chinamen. Why, I see now it is truly their greatest pleasure to tell of the love of Jesus, and to be always on his service—it is no hardship to them—they have given up a sham that they might obtain a reality. Their sole aim now, and I pray God that mine may be for the future, is to be telling of the love of the Lord Jesus, and of the salvation which He is offering to every man who will only believe. Don't let anyone here now refuse that salvation because he is afraid of what his fellow-men will say. "O taste and see that the Lord is good; blessed is the man that trusteth in Him."

THE GOSPEL IN INDIA.

MESSRS. MATEER AND PARKER.

A cheering visit has been paid by Messrs. Mateer and Parker, Mr. Spurgeon's evangelists, to the mission station at Trevandrum. On the first Sunday they addressed the native congregation in the morning, and again in the evening spoke to an audience of about 150 Hindus at the Free Reading Room. In response to invitation, many inquirers, Hindu and Mohammedan as well as Christian, came to the mission house, for counsel in the Christian life.

A ten days' mission was subsequently held in the London Mission church. The meetings were well attended by English, and Eurasian, and native Christians, with a varying proportion of Hindus and Roman Catholics. The addresses on some of the later days were translated sentence by sentence into Tamil or Malayalam, both these languages being well known. Many remained to the inquiry meetings.

A visit was then paid to Neyattunkara, one of the pastorates in the district, about thirteen miles from the capital. This pastorate comprises seven congregations with 1500 people, and is entirely self-supporting, as is another pastorate at Nellikakuri. The congregation on Sunday morning numbered upwards of a thousand, including some two hundred Hindus, curious to hear the preaching and the singing. The meetings here, which lasted several days, were closed by a testimony meeting, and the pastor subsequently wrote: "A hundred and twenty souls were awakened, and believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, while others were quickened." A country station of a much poorer class was next visited. The chapel is large and central, and on Sunday morning about eight hundred persons came in from the surrounding congregations.

The evangelists were much struck with the extent and value of the work accomplished by the mission, and Rev. S. Mateer, the Society's missionary, says of this period: "The past month has been a time of reaping in this mission district such as we had not been privileged to enjoy before."

Rev. G. M. Bulloch, L.M.S., Ranee Khet, North India, says:—"We have here a small band of true-hearted Christians, and there is evidence that God's Spirit is working in the hearts of more, inducing them to decide for Christ. We have around us, on these mountain tops, during the summer months, rather more than 2000 European soldiers. They sometimes find it monotonous, and are glad of something good to read. I shall be glad to receive religious publications for distribution among the men. There is plenty of scope for it, as well as great need. Our work amongst the natives is also being vigorously prosecuted. We have three day-schools for boys, two for girls, and sixty zenanas are regularly visited; there are three Sunday-schools, and three village preachers are always on the move, making known the glad tidings, sometimes meeting with encouragement, and oftentimes with disappointment. We have some Chinamen in the province who came here in connection with tea-planting. The other day I met one of them rather tipsy, with a bottle of native spirits in his hand. I remonstrated with him, but his reply was, 'The Sahib' (meaning the European) 'drinks lots, and very strong, so why do you grudge me this little drop?'"

NEWS FROM UGANDA.

DR. ALEX. MACKAY, of Ventnor, has received a letter, dated March 16, from his son, the imprisoned missionary in Uganda, in which he says:—"About three weeks ago I received your long-looked-for letters, which have been of great comfort to me, as they give the assurance that you and many more are continually remembering in prayer the struggling little church in this land of darkness. I have not the least doubt that, to a very great extent, we owe our preservation to the believing prayers of Christian friends in England, and wherever else anyone takes an interest in the progress of the Gospel in East Africa. I can give you more than one striking proof of this assertion. Very recently the King gave out, on more than one occasion, that he meant to have another grand massacre of the Christians. But the prayers of God's people restrained him from his purpose, and that, too, by a marvellous intervention. His mother heard of his fell purpose, and sent to advise him not to kill his best friends in the country. I believe also that the two biggest chiefs ventured to remonstrate with him, and recommended him to let alone the Christians, who had been guilty of no crime.

"Thus, for the present we are delivered from another spell of dread and horror. Still, one lad has been secretly murdered, and several others had to flee for their lives, executioners having been sent for their arrest. But the converts are now more on the alert, and are ready to flee on the first suspicion. One can only wish they had any quarter to flee to, for this miserable country has made enemies of all its neighbours, and therefore the persecuted Christians have little hope of finding shelter anywhere. On the south is the impassable barrier of Lake Nyanza; east is the Nile, issuing out of the lake, with cruel enemies beyond; north is a country constantly at war with Uganda; west is the river Katonga, seldom fordable, and such fords as there are perpetually guarded. Notwithstanding all this, a few have risked their lives and have finally left the country, while the greater part of those in hiding manage to secrete themselves in remote parts of the kingdom. There is no little risk, however, in that, as the natives are continually travelling about in all directions within the limits of the country, and refugees may thus be detected and caught any day. One lad sitting by me now was thus detected recently. He at once fled, and his enemy went after him. He had nearly escaped, but, seeing this, his pursuer speared him in the back of the leg, and took him prisoner. Being sure of being condemned to death when brought to the capital, he contrived to break his bonds, and effected his escape."

Writing to another friend on March 5, Mr. Mackay says:—"Notwithstanding the exceeding great power of the enemy, and all the wrath of man, we are still preserved—a little flock amid prevailing heathenism. The day for which we long and pray, when this dreadful land of darkness will become permeated by the light of life, is drawing near. The stone is rolling—the stone cut out without hands, and it shall fill the earth. Our work goes on as far as opportunity and strength permit, and our numbers increase. We look for the time when some active steps will be taken to bring these savage lands more into living contact with Christian civilisation, for the progress of the race has hitherto been chiefly the effect of such intercourse."

A telegram from Zanzibar, dated August 27, says that messengers who have arrived there from Uganda report that Mr. Mackay has obtained permission from King Mwanga to return to the coast.

ROMISH MISSIONS.—The New South Wales Government having offered a free grant of 300,000 acres of land to any missionaries who would undertake the task of civilising the native races of the colony, the Pope has requested the Propaganda to send missionaries at once, lest they should be anticipated by Protestants.

THE GOSPEL IN AFRICA.

A MOVE is being made for the cause of West Africa. Rev. James Johnson, from Lagos, has spoken to many in meetings in England on the backward state of the women of West Africa, and of the great need among them for Christian women's teaching. This great subject is now under the consideration of Mr. Darwin Fox, Mrs. Meredith, and others, who are forming an organisation for helping out women missionaries to that coast. Good and earnest men are doing their part, and the field now remains open and ready for women to enter it. The Africans are asking if any Christian women could be spared for them, that in coming their influence may be felt on the social life and homes in that country.

It is proposed that a party should leave England for this purpose, at the end of October, for Sierra Leone, to stay four months, visiting the women in houses, huts, hospitals, and forming a branch of the Y.W.C.A. in that town. Inquiries may be made to Miss E. Buxton, Easneye, Ware; or addressed to "West Africa," Morley Halls, 316, Regent-street, W.

MARYHILL, N.B.—Mr. W. D. Dunn has been preaching in a tent here for some weeks, and the Spirit of God has been working in a wonderful manner among the people. Christians have received a great quickening, and many unsaved have been gathered in. Mr. Dunn is now at Dundee. Prayer is requested that rich blessing may accompany the word spoken. A. J. S.

SCRIPTURES IN NORWAY.—A lady who has just returned from Norway writes to suggest that Christians going to Norway on a holiday should take a quantity of Gospels, little books, text cards, and tracts for distribution, and for which there is plenty of scope. Our correspondent says that the people in some districts live at great distances from chapels or churches, and Bibles being much dearer there than in this country, they are most eager to get them.

BIBLE COLPORTAGE SOCIETY OF IRELAND.—The report of this Society describes the great and successful work silently carried on in that country through its agency. Thousands of Bibles and Testaments, and other good books have been sold, and the Gospel preached to persons who, but for the colporteur's visits, would have still been in the darkness of ignorance. The Society, through its agents, the number of which is larger than formerly, is scattering the Gospel seed in many parts of Ireland, for whose evils and sufferings the grand truths thus proclaimed are the most effectual cure. Rev. John Elliott, Armagh, Ireland, is the hon. sec.

SUNDAYS IN SWITZERLAND.—I have just returned from a few weeks' visit to Switzerland, and spent happy days in the midst of our great Creator's mighty works, with the exception of the Sundays, when, almost invariably, the sermons to which I listened were nothing but "dry bones." Cannot Christians travelling about help one another to make Sunday a really happy day? Surely there are many laymen who could give a bright Gospel address, introducing in a short service suitable hymns; say after table d'hôte on Sunday evenings, from eight to nine o'clock, so as not to interfere with any of the services. Notice of this could be sent round at meal time. Christians might thus be brought together, and words of help and sympathy be spoken to weary hearts. E. T. G.

BEACH ROCKS CONVALESCENT HOME, SANDGATE.—The London Samaritan Society's Home at Sandgate continues its beneficient work on behalf of those "in city pent" who sorely need such a change. Recently, there was a large public gathering in the grounds on the occasion of a presentation by the inmates to Dr. Chubb, who, by giving his services to them, has established a lasting claim on their gratitude. The Vicar of Sandgate presided, and, with Dr. Campbell, expressed his high sense of the value of the institution. Mr. Jones, the director of the Society, said that in this Home at Sandgate, and in that at Bournemouth, there was accommodation for eighty inmates. He referred also to the blessings conferred by these Homes on those who would otherwise have been unable to obtain the change of air and rest they so much needed. Dr. Chubb also spoke in acknowledgment of the presentation. Communications for the society should be addressed to Mr. J. J. Jones, 98, High-street, Homerton.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Mr. H. Varley preached in the Tabernacle, Shoreditch, last Sunday evening to a full audience, composed largely of young men, a large number of whom confessed Christ in the after-meeting.

Oban, N.B.—Occasional open-air services have been held here during the season by various visitors on the parade. Rev. T. Walker, M.A., United Presbyterian minister, lent his aid in convening them.

Clapton.—Rev. W. Sawyer, Wesleyan Methodist evangelist, has recently been conducting a series of open-air services in the neighbourhood of Clapton Park and Homerton. Special power and blessing have attended the meetings.

Lay Evangelists' Mission, Diocese of Manchester.—Missions are about to be commenced in connection with the above at Ribchester, Lytham, Withnell, Manchester, Oswaldtwistle, Ashton-under-Lyne, Bamford, Rochdale, and Chorley, in each case to be conducted by a trained working man evangelist, under the guidance of the vicar of the parish. Rev. E. G. James, Rector of Chorley, is superintendent of the Mission.

Yarmouth Sands.—Mr. Charles Cook, of the Hyde Park Mission, and Mr. Charles Inglis, have been holding a fortnight's mission on Yarmouth Sands. The meetings were well attended, and the audiences attentively listened to the Gospel message. Several came forward and told of blessing received, and many decided for Christ. On Sundays the concert stand on the sands, seating 1500, was hired, and filled twice during the day.

Bristol.—A successful three weeks' mission, conducted by Mr. David Newell, of the Evangelistic Mission, was concluded in St. Silas' Parish on Saturday last. The meetings were held nightly in a tent, which was generally well filled, and the evangelist's appeals to the unsaved were most solemn. Many, mostly from amongst the young, were brought out into the joyous liberty of the Gospel of peace, and it is hoped that Mr. Newell will soon visit the district again.

Largs, N.B.—In June a very interesting work originated with a week's meetings by Mr. Rogers, Y.M.C.A. evangelist. So evidently did God bless, that, on his departure, the Christian visitors to the place took up the work, and carried it forward in the open air every night for eight weeks or more. Every evening on the pier-head crowds of visitors gathered together to hear the singing and short Gospel addresses. Many praise God to-day for the short summer holiday spent at that place. The Established, Free, United Presbyterian, and Baptist Churches joined in the work. Prayer is requested for continued blessing.

The Gospel and Bible Van.—Messrs. Leonard Weaver and Wharton paid a visit to Walsall recently with their van. Crowds of people were attracted every night by the preaching of the Gospel, and many expressed the fervent wish that they had so heard the truth before. The masses have been reached as they seldom are. On the Sunday evening, when about 1500 persons were present, hundreds joined heartily in the singing, and listened intently to the Word. Many derived a great blessing. A large number of Bibles, Testaments, and other books were sold. These evangelists intend finishing the season in the Black Country.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on the work at Pontymoile, near Pontypool.——For blessing on a mission at Airdrie and Coatbridge, from September 3 to 25, conducted by Mr. George Clarke.——That God in his mercy may so guide the course of events, that the Gospel may spread and his name be glorified in Ireland.

MISS WESTON'S SAILORS' REST.—The Crown Princess of Germany and other members of the Royal Family visited this Sailors' Home last week, going over every part of the building. Much interest was manifested in Miss Weston's description of the different features of the work. At the two Rests 70,000 men sleep annually, and last year 1025 pledges were taken after the Saturday night temperance entertainments. The Crown Princess was especially pleased to hear of the crowded Bible-classes and the earnest spirit of prayer animating the men, and said she would like such an institution in connection with the German Navy, and that something must be done to copy the Portsmouth Sailors' Rest at Kiel. She also promised to endow a cabin in perpetuity at the Portsmouth Sailors' Rest.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

At a conference on Church Army work, held recently at Lowestoft, several working men bore testimony to its happy results.

The Church Army is holding meetings on the beach at Eastbourne, and hundreds are being attracted by the proclamation of the grand old story of the Cross.

The Hon. J. G. Adderley, son of Lord Norton, who has for twelve months been head of the Oxford House, Bethnal Green, has resigned that office, having decided to take holy orders.

The labours of the Church Army at Dudley have been already greatly blessed. Many meetings are held in the open air, and the indoor meetings are also well attended. There has been evidence of a great spiritual awakening.

One of the subjects on the programme of the Church congress, to be held this year, under the presidency of Bishop Maclagan, at Wolverhampton, is "The Priesthood of the Laity." Amongst others will be Child Life in our Great Cities, Hindrances to Religion in Common Life, and Socialism in its Relation to Christianity. One morning will be devoted to papers on the Epistle to the Hebrews.

PRESBYTERIAN.

The Scots Church, Melbourne, has been crowded since the arrival of Dr. Cameron Lees.

The church at Shandon has more than doubled its membership since Rev. Hugh Miller, M.A., settled there in 1882.

Rev. W. S. Swanson, Moderator of the English Church, is still actively engaged in stirring up the missionary zeal of the Church.

In the Presbyterian Orphanage at Ballina, which for many years has been under the care of Rev. T. Armstrong, there are at present more than sixty orphan or neglected children.

An evangelistic evening service announced to be held in the school at Gobshealloch, on the occasion of the visit of Rev. Duncan Munro, from Manitoba, had to be held on the hillside on account of the large gathering.

Rev. Henry Montgomery has just entered on the sixth year of his pastoral charge of Albert-street Presbyterian Church, Belfast, and during that time nearly five hundred new members joined the church for the first time.

BAPTIST.

Rev. F. B. Meyer, of Leicester, preached twice for Rev. Newman Hall on Sunday last, Dr. H. Grattan Guinness occupying his pulpit in Melbourne Hall.

Special sermons were preached by Rev. Dr. Clifford in the Baptist Church, Waterford, on the occasion of the two hundred and thirty-fifth anniversary of its foundation.

The pastor of Queen's-street Chapel, Erith, has been conducting frequent services, with bright singing, amongst the hop-pickers in Kent, and in other ways manifesting a kindly interest in them.

Rev. George Grenfell who left Liverpool last week on his return to the Congo, to take the place of the late Rev. T. J. Comber, is described in The Athenæum as a "prince among missionary explorers."

The church at St. George's Park, Great Yarmouth, is giving itself zealously to evangelistic effort. Much of this is for young men, of whom about eighty are gathered into a Bible-class, and there is also a similar class for young women. The pastor, Rev. G. P. Mackay, is also aided by an efficient staff of local preachers, whose services in the neighbouring villages are highly appreciated.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Sarah Barcroft, of Grange, county Tyrone, has just been recorded a minister of the Gospel by Grange monthly meeting.

William Edward Turner, of Liverpool, and William Hobson, of Cardiff, were both present, and had considerable service in Belfast meeting, on Sunday, August 21, and on the following Thursday.

SALVATION ARMY.

There are over six hundred soldiers on the roll of the Oldham corps, more than a hundred having joined in the last seven months.

Though the Army has been established so short a time in Denmark, there are already over a hundred soldiers, besides several officers.

During three days' special meetings at Nottingham there were 150 seekers, and one hundred stood up to testify their decision to live henceforward for Christ.

The Toronto War Cry has the authority of the Government Instructor for saying that since the advent of the Army amongst the Indians of the Six Nations liquor has almost entirely disappeared from the Grand River Reserve.

The Army officers, having been refused permission to hold meetings in Stuttgart, have applied for a hawker's licence, so that they may sell War Crys, and hope by private meetings and conversations to secure a footing in the place.

Eighty-six souls have been brought to Christ during the last six months in Norwich as the result of Army effort. Four members have collected sufficient money to maintain a cadet in training. A slum brigade and drunkards' rescue brigade have been started.

A young engineer, impressed with the necessity for missionary work in British Guiana, has just thrown up his position and gone to the headquarters of the Salvation Army, with the money to pay for a training that will qualify him to go and pilot a contingent of the Army there.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. R. Balgarnie will conduct an eight days' mission in Craven Chapel, Foubert's-place, Regent-street, commencing on October 1.

During Rev. Ll. H. Parsons' twelve years' pastorate of Emanuel Church, Leicester, a debt of £7000 has been liquidated, and the church roll increased from 40 to 250.

Several subscriptions have been already promised to the fund for providing for the widow of Rev. G. M. Murphy, and for carrying on his work at the Lambeth Baths.

Congregationalism is growing in Pennsylvania. It has now ninety-five churches in that State, and has made a net gain of eighty per cent. in church membership since 1880.

Rev. J. Edward Reilly, formerly of Passage West, co. Cork, has commenced his ministry at Straide, co. Antrim. Already the congregations are increasing, and in many respects there are signs of revival.

Several hundred railway employés were present at Redland-park Church, Bristol, on a recent Sunday, when Rev. W. R. Thomas preached a special sermon on behalf of the Great Western Railway Employés' Widows' and Orphans' Fund.

Rev. J. Ossian Davies gave a powerful sermon in defence of the Bible at New-court Chapel, Tollington Park, on Sunday morning last. His deduction from internal evidences was, "It is too un-human to be less than super-human; it is too super-human to be less than divine."

METHODIST.

Rev. John Bond has a list of one hundred local preachers ready to take work within forty miles of the Bank of England.

The annual camp meeting at Middlesborough was largely attended. A public love feast in the evening closed the day's services.

A powerful camp meeting has just been held at Woodlands-street, Bradford, Primitive Methodist Second Circuit. It is considered the most successful open-air service held here for many years.

The Sunday-school at Baptist Mills, Bristol, has now on its books 2336 scholars. The juvenile missionary society raised last year £142, nearly the whole having been contributed in halfpence and pence.

At Darlington, recently, a band of sixty or seventy Methodists processioned, after the usual evening service, down the main road, led by the minister, who gave two or three invitations, and short and pointed addresses were given.

Rev. Gideon Draper, D.D., sailed for New York last Saturday after two and a half years of continuous work for the Master in London, in spite of bodily weakness. His address will be 805, Broadway, New York. He desires prayer for guidance as to future service.

Rev. E. E. Jenkins, M.A., preached on Modern Thought in the Mint Wesleyan Chapel, on the occasion of its reopening. In presence of the great problems of life, he said, the wise are just where they were in Paul's time—not in the field, but at home, criticising, writing, and disputing. On the other hand, every beneficent course now at work springs from the Cross.

For the last four weeks very successful evangelistic services have been conducted in the Methodist Mission tent at Springfield, co. Fermanagh, by Rev. J. S. McDade and others, and have resulted in gathering many precious souls into the fold of Christ. It is believed that about two hundred persons were converted during the mission. A large number also enrolled their names as total abstainers.

Sir William McArthur, of London, has just laid one of the memorial stones of a new lecture hall in connection with the Methodist church, Enniskillen, and in addition to furnishing the building at his own cost, has promised £1000 to the undertaking. Sir William spent a portion of his youth in Enniskillen, and in the course of a most interesting address stated that he owed more than he could express to some of the excellent men who were then living at Enniskillen, and that impressions were made upon him at that time which he had never lost.

"FALLEN ON SLEEP."

Rev. J. B. Vinton, Baptist missionary at Rangoon for twenty-six years.—Mr. Robert Johnson, of Edinburgh, an active elder in the Tron Church.—Rev. John Kinnison, of Medina, Jamaica.—Rev. John Jones, vicar of Llandysilio Gogo.—Rev. George Lawrence, one of the oldest Presbyterian ministers in Canada.—Dr. Nelson, the oldest Presbyterian minister in Queensland.—Mrs. Heaviside, wife of Rev. Canon Heaviside, of Norwich.—Rev. J. Johnston, vicar of Haxey.—Mr. G. Cummings, a prominent and useful member of the church at Blythe.—Rev. A. Bryce Muir, of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Higher Tranmere.—Canon Wesley, of St. Patrick's National Cathedral, Dublin.—Rev. Thomas Hayes, vicar of Barnoldwick.—Rev. John Cordeaux, rector of Hooton Roberts, near Rotherham.—Rev. John Henry Hughes-Hallett, rector of Westbere.—Rev. R. Holgate-Brown, vicar of St. Paul's, Stayley, and honorary canon of Chester.—Rev. John Tyrrwhit Drake, rector of Cottisbrook, Northamptonshire.—Rev. Edward Lowry Barnwell, of Melksham, Wiltshire. — Rev. Edward Herbert Smith, rector of Killamarsh.—Mr. William Ferguson, F.L.S., a botanist, of Colombo, and a member of the Baptist denomination.—Rev. James Edwards, of Finchley, sixty years a Baptist minister.—Mr. William Abbott, the oldest member of the Methodist Society at Raunds, Northamptonshire.—Mr. John Jones, one of the oldest members of the Baptist Church in the Welsh Carnarvon Circuit.—Rev. H. S. Faull, for some years minister in the Wesleyan Connexion.—Mrs. Dorothy Parkin, a prominent member of the Methodist Church at Haworth, near Gateshead-on-Tyne.—Dr. Atkins, of Mile-end, an active and earnest member of Globe-road Chapel, and an earnest philanthropist.—Mr. Michael Scoates, for many years connected with the Ramsgate Methodist Society.

CONTINENTAL & FOREIGN NOTES.

SIBERIA.—A Polish converted Jew, M. Scheinmann, exiled for his religion to Siberia, has there begun a work of evangelisation.

CONSTANCE. — M. Strohmayer, formerly burgomaster here, and who took a prominent part in the Congress of "Old Catholics" in 1875, has now joined the Protestant Church.—Le Signal.

PERSIA.—The Shah has authorised the American missionaries to establish at Teheran a hospital in which, without regard to nationality or religion, all applicants for relief may be received for treatment. Dr. Torrence, physician to the Mission, has been appointed director of the hospital, and the Shah has named him Grand Officer of the Order of the Lion and the Sun of Persia.—At the meeting of the American Bible Society, in New York, on August 5, it was reported that two colporteurs had been thrown into prison in Persia, and their money and Bibles confiscated.

MASSACRE OF A MISSIONARY PARTY.—According to information from Cooktown, North Queensland, the natives of Motu Motu (New Guinea) have massacred the missionary teacher and five friendly natives who were with him. The district had been in a disturbed state for some time, and even the Government agent, who was residing on the island, did not appear to be safe with the natives. Immediately the news of the massacre of the six missionary people reached Port Moresby, the special commission at that place left in the cutter Ada to give assistance to Mr. Edelfelt, the Government agent at Motu Motu, and to inquire into the massacre.

CHRISTIAN UNION.—The English Episcopalians and the French Reformed Church are unitedly erecting a wooden châlet church at Champéry (Valais). It is to hold about two hundred persons, and will serve for the worship of the two denominations in the morning and evening of the Lord's-day. We may hope that this example of Christian unity, economy, and love will be followed in other places; an edifice erected for the worship of God ought never to be vacant. There are buildings in Paris where two and even three sections of the Church of Christ assemble for worship at different hours on the Lord's day.—Le Signal.

HOBART TOWN.—Pastor G. Soltau conducted a fortnight's mission here recently. The addresses of the first week's afternoons were on the Tabernacle, the evenings being especially devoted to Christians. The attendance, small at first, grew until in the second week hundreds thronged the Town-hall to hear him. Two meetings for men only, when four hundred were present on each occasion, were times of much heart-searching and plain dealing with sin. The closing meeting was a very crowded one, and the Lord owned his word to the conversion of several. Some of the Government charitable institutions were visited, and at the Asylum for the Infirm and Aged at New Town a very happy half-hour was spent, many weary faces being made bright as they listened to the Gospel story.

RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION IN SPAIN.—Mr. Blamire writes concerning the work that several members of the church at Marin, Pontevedra, have been suffering persecution from their friends at the instigation of the priests. A wife and seven children were cruelly beaten and turned from their home because the mother, a Christian, would not go to confession. In another family a daughter was sent adrift for the same reason. A third, while quietly buying bread, was severely beaten and abused, but her quiet demeanour so touched her persecutors that some of them afterwards invited her to meet them at one of their houses, and to bring her Bible with her and explain how she could bear so patiently their abuse when, before her conversion, her behaviour was so different. This strange meeting lasted several hours, the people themselves reading the Bible, and this woman explaining the Gospel message and testifying to the love of God to guilty sinners like herself. So effectual was her testimony that several of her hearers were melted to tears, and, doubtless, there will be fruit from such sowing of the Word of God.

The past few months, says Mr. Blamire, have been a time of keen opposition on the part of the priests, who have combined to wage war against the truth. The authorities also have lent themselves to the hindrance of the spread of the Gospel in a way that shows that the records of the Acts of the Apostles are repeated even in these days. The testimony of the past few years to the truths of the Gospel has, however, been preparing the way for a great work of God, to be seen, it may be, at no distant date. Already there has been much precious fruit. Both at Marin and in San Tomé many have been brought to Christ, and several more are now asking for Church membership. Meetings have also been begun in a village named Cela, but here, again, fresh opposition was encountered. The man in whose house the meetings were held was fined eight dollars, and those who attended were also fined in smaller amounts, but so many have an intense desire to hear the Gospel that this opposition will, it is believed, only forward the cause of truth.

Mr. Blamire concludes by saying that the Gospel ought to be taken more rapidly to the regions beyond, and that he should hail the coming of God-sent brethren who would help to speed it onward. The opportunities for making known the Gospel are great, and the Church of God should make the most of them.

Mrs. Blamire desires also cordially to acknowledge the kindness received from many friends when recently in this country.

Notes on Daily Readings.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 4.—ISAIAH X.

"The whole of this section (ix. 8—x. 34) is closely connected in itself, and with those that precede and follow. After the completed promise of the coming Immanuel, the destined heir of David's throne, it resumes the warning of ver. 24—30, describes the first stage of it as already fulfilled in the Syrian invasion of Rezin and Pekah, denounces the unrepenting stubbornness both of Ephraim and Judah, and goes on to predict more fully the Assyrian desolation."—Birks.

5.—O Assyrian, the rod of mine anger.—"There are two views presented of the Assyrian in these chapters. Really, he was a rod or a staff in God's hand wielded by his righteous anger (x. 15). In his own self-deifying thoughts, he smote the nations with a sceptre that was all his own (xx. 24)."—S.C. It is well to remember that under the name of "the Assyrian," the first of the Gentile powers that subjugated Israel, is set forth Gentile domination to the end, including its last or Antichristian form—"the beast that goeth into perdition" (Rev. xvii. 11).

12.—When the Lord has performed his whole work.—A grand prophecy, which yet awaits its ultimate fulfilment in the last representative of Gentile power (Dan. vii. 11).

20.—Shall no more stay upon him that smote them.—Israel's calling in the aid of Assyria is no doubt alluded to (chap. viii. 6), but it has had many fulfilments, none, perhaps, more signal than in the fourth century after Christ, when the Roman empire, which had so long smitten the Church of Christ, became their stay.

21.—The remnant shall return.—R.V. is more accurate—"a remnant." The Hebrew words are "Shear-jashub," the name of Isaiah's elder son. From St. Paul's quotation of the next verse (Rom. ix. 27) it is evident that "Shear-jashub" typified the elect remnant of this and the former dispensation, with whom believing Gentiles are now joined (Eph. iii. 6) as a heavenly people; whereas "Maner-shalal-hash-baz" typifies Israel after the flesh, a prey and a spoil to their enemies now, but hereafter to be brought to repentance, and restored to their land.

MONDAY, SEPT. 5.—ISAIAH XI.

1.—And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse.—"There is a strongly marked contrast between the worldly power hewn down in chap. x. 33 and the root of Jesse, for when a cedar is cut down it sends forth no fresh suckers."—Kay. And a Branch shall grow out of his roots.—The Hebrew for "Branch" is "netzer." "In the historical fulfiment even the ring of the words of the prophecy is noticed: the netzer, at first so humble and insignificant, was a despised Nazarene (Matt. ii. 23)."—Delitzsch.

2.—And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him.—"There are seven spirits which are enumerated in order, from the highest downward. The Spirit of Jehovah is the heart of all. It corresponds to the shaft of the seven-branched candlestick and the three pairs of branches proceeding from it."—Ibid.

4.—With the breath of his lips will He slay the wicked.—This is referred to in 2 Thess. ii. 8, in connection with the destruction of Antichrist at Christ's second coming.

6.—The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb.—"The words, taken literally, correspond to Gen. i. 30 and to Rom. viii. 21. The creatures will be subject to man, when man is subject to God."—Birks.

9.—The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord.—A promise not to be fulfilled till Christ's coming, and Antichrist's destruction (4).

10.—And in that day, &c.—"The vision returns from a picture of the completed redemption, to mark two main steps in its progress. The first is the reconciling of the world when Israel was cast away; and the second that recovery of them which will be 'life from the dead' (Rom. xii. 15).—Birks.

15.—And the Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian Sea.—"Signal acts of Divine power, as in the Exodus, are to attend the restoration (Micah vii. 15—17)."—Birks.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 6.—ISAIAH XII.

"The prophecy closes fitly with a song of praise, the utterance of restored Israel, and this links itself with the five-fold burden of the previous vision (v. 25; ix. 12, 17, 21; x. 4) in a most impressive contrast. The hand of God, once stretched out in judgment, is now extended in mercy. His anger once sore and heavy is now turned away."—Ibid.

3.—With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation.—"The water was that which they had once rejected—the water of Shiloah (viii. 6)—the teaching and work and spiritual grace of Him who said, 'If any man thirst let him come unto Me and drink.'"—S.C.

5.—This is known in all the earth.—R.V. renders this "Let this be known in all the earth," which accords with Israel's function, after their reception into Divine favour, to make known to all the earth the name of their God.

6.—Great is the Holy One in the midst of Thee.—"It is the knowledge of the Holy One of Israel, made known through the proclamation, that brings salvation to all the nations."—Delitzsch. "Blessed themselves, the house of Israel shall be a blessing to others. All nations are loudly invited to share in Zion's gladness, and in the joy of their long-delayed and full redemption."—Birks.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 7.—ISAIAH XIII.

"The first series of Isaiah's prophecies (i.—xii.) is followed by a second, composed of burdens on the Gentile nations (xiii.—xxiii.), and summed up in a common sequel of judgment and blessing (xxiv.—xxvii.)."—Birks.

1.—The burden of Babylon.—"The original meaning of 'burden' is seen in 2 Kings ix. 25, where it is used of the Divine sentence upon Ahab, 'The Lord lifted up upon him this burden.' The sentence issued against an individual or a community hung as a heavy weight, which at last dragged them down."—Kay.

The sight granted to Isaiah was prophetic vision, for when he wrote Babylon was not yet the great empire it afterwards became. As there was a literal Babylon, and afterwards a mystical Babylon (Rev. xvii.), so this prophecy includes both. For in a sense, which the Jews themselves admit, the Babylonish captivity is not yet over. Hence ver. 10—13 plainly depict the end which is still future.

3.—I have commanded my sanctified ones.—Most commentators take this expression to denote the Medo-Persian armies which took Babylon; but, allowing that this may be the primary or literal fulfilment, the ultimate fulfilment seems that spoken of in Rev. xix. 14.

5.—To destroy the whole land.—The word "land," both here and in ver. 9, is the ordinary word for "earth," and the parallel expression in ver. 11 ("world") points to its being better to render it by "earth."

10.—The stars of heaven, &c.—It is much better to take this literally (as so often referred to in the New Testament—Matt. xxiv. 29; Rev. vi. 13) than to regard it as a mere figurative description of the destruction of Babylon.

17.—I will stir up the Medes against them.—A rapid transition from the final to the primary fulfilment, from the mystical to the literal.

20.—It shall never be inhabited.—The objection raised that "Hillah is on the site of Babylon" is scarcely justifiable. The boundaries of the city are still undiscovered. "No vestige of its mighty walls has yet been found."—Rawlinson. "The wild Arab, for long ages, has shrunk with superstitious terror from the ruins of ancient Babylon."—Birks.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 8.—ISAIAH XIV.

1.—For the Lord will have mercy on Jacob.—A primary and literal fulfilment took place when Babylon was taken by Cyrus, who restored the Jews to their own land; but a still further fulfilment is to be expected when the mystical Babylon shall fall.

4.—Thou shalt take up this song against the king of Babylon.—"Who is the king to whom the song refers? His conquests, pride, and boasting suit with Sennacherib or Nebuchadnezzar; but his sudden fall at the time when the city is taken and the exiles return, answers to Belshazzar alone. Hence a variety of interpretations. But the true reference is to the dynasty viewed as one collective person, just as in Dan. vii. 17—24, viii. 20—23."—Birks. But it is also probable that Satan, the real monarch of the mystical Babylon (see Rev. xii. 3, xiii. 2), is the one in whom the prophecy receives its ultimate fulfilment. See Rev. xx. 3.

12.—How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer.—"The Hebrew word for Lucifer is here 'the Morning Star.' Lucifer (the Latin for the Morning Star), as a name given to the devil, was derived from this passage, which the fathers interpreted as relating to the apostasy and punishment of the angelic leaders."—Delitzsch.

16.—Is this the man?—The word here used for "man" is often rendered "one," and therefore does not here necessarily prove that any particular man is meant.

22.—Will cut off from Babylon the name, and remnant, and son, and nephew.—The word "nephew" is better rendered "son's son" (R.V.). "After the storming of Babylon by the Medes, the new Babylonian kingdom and royal house, which had been established by Nabopolassar, vanished entirely from history."—Delitzsch.

29.—Rejoice not thou, whole Palestina.—Better in R.V., "O Philistia, all of thee," R.V. "The word in Scripture always means the land of the Philistines, not Palestine in the wider sense. The broken rod referred to is the king of Assyria Tiglath-Pileser, whose son Shalmaneser is the 'basilisk' under whom Samaria fell; Sennacherib is the 'fiery flying serpent.'"—Birks.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 9.—ISAIAH XV.

1.—The burden of Moab.—This and the next chapter contain a prophetic announcement of the approaching judgment upon Moab. "Shalmaneser, before his long and tedious siege of Samaria, spoiled all the open country, both east and west of Jordan, when Moab suffered an almost entire devastation."—Birks. If it be asked what interest had Israel in Moab that their destruction should be thus a subject of prophecy? the answer is that Solomon (1 Kings xi. 7) had built "an high place for Chemosh, the abomination of Moab, in the hill that is before Jerusalem." Jehovah's answer to this insult is the description of the approaching doom of a nation whom their false God could not save. But this is done with the utmost sympathy for the sufferers. "There is no other prophecy in the book of Isaiah in which the heart of the prophet is so painfully affected by what his mind sees, and his mouth is obliged to prophesy. All that he predicts evokes his deepest sympathy."—Delitzsch.

5.—His fugitives shall flee unto Zoar, an heifer of three years old.—Jer. xlviii. 34 (a parallel passage) shows that "it is the lowing cry of a young heifer to which the prophet compares the lamentation of the fugitives."—Birks.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 10.—ISAIAH XVI.

1.—Send ye the lamb, &c.—"This passage (to the end of ver. 5) has been very diversely explained. Many moderns take it for a consultation of the Moabites to renew their tribute to Judah (2 Kings iii. 4), followed in ver. 6 by the reasons of the men of Judah for rejecting their prayer. But this wholly distorts it, and destroys its real force. It is a voice of the Spirit of God to Moab, through the prophet, exhorting them in their distress to take shelter within God's covenant, by renewing their allegiance to the house of David, and lending shelter to the Israelites who might suffer from this Assyrian foe. They would then share with Judah in the deliverance near at hand. 'The lamb' is a collective term for the lambs of sacrifice, of which Moab supplied an ample tribute under David and Solomon. The ruler is Hezekiah, whose accession was close at hand."—Birks.

4.—Let mine outcasts dwell with thee, Moab.—They had formerly done so in the days of the Judges (Ruth i. 2), and one of the daughters of Moab had thus been taken into the Royal line of David's house, and had become one of the progenitors of the Messiah (Matt. i. 5).

12.—He shall come to his sanctuary to pray; but he shall not prevail.—"He will not submit to the merciful and faithful King; he cannot extort assistance from his idol gods."—Kay.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY INSTITUTE,

CLAPHAM ROAD, S.W.

President:—The Bishop of Winchester.

THREE DAYS' SPECIAL PRAYER AND CONFERENCE.

Mrs. MEREDITH most cordially invites Sisters going to Foreign Missions (as well as others interested in the work) to assemble at Clapham Road for THREE DAYS OF PRAYER AND CONFERENCE, on September 15th, 16th, and 17th, that they may be endued with power from on High to publish the Gospel of Christ among the heathen and Mahomedan women.

PRAYER EACH DAY AT INTERVALS, FROM 10 TO 6 O'CLOCK.

Ladies attending can live in the Institute for 5/- per day; but early application is requisite, as the accommodation is, of course, limited.

There will (D.V.) be present Mrs. INGRAM, wife of the Bishop of Sierra Leone: also Miss BISSETT (of the C.M.S.), from Sierra Leone; Miss WALKER, and Miss LORD, from Syria (three Sisters of the Association). Mrs. DARWIN FOX will conduct the Prayer Meeting on the 16th; and Miss LLOYD and Miss CAVENDISH will give accounts, each evening, of Missions in Egypt, Syria, and the Holy Land. Several other ladies will also take part, including Miss C. E. BUXTON, who will speak on work among the women and girls of West Africa.

The evenings will thus be devoted in a very special manner to receiving practical accounts of the work now actually in progress in various Foreign Fields from our Travelling Sisters, fresh from the Missions they will describe.

It is believed that not only will the gatherings be of deep interest, but also that by God's blessing they will prove a very real inspiration to all ladies engaged, whether at home or abroad, in Missionary effort.

WILL OUR READERS, ONE AND ALL, SEEK TO MAKE THE MEETINGS KNOWN AS WIDELY AS POSSIBLE?

Conference Hall, Clapham Road, S.W.

NOW READY.

LIGHT ON THE WORD.

(2 PETER ii. 19.)

Addresses delivered at the Fourth Annual Prophetic Conference in connection with the World-wide Prayer Union for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Held in the CONFERENCE HALL, on APRIL 27th, 28th, and 29th.

The following is a list of Contents:

The Church of Christ, and Her Destiny to Reign because She has overcome the World. By CANON FAUSSET.

The Worldly Church, and Her Punishment by the World. By CANON FAUSSET.

The Three Destinies; or, Firstfruits, Harvest, and Vintage. (Exposition of Rev. xiv.) By G. H. PEMBER, Esq.

Satan's Opposition to the Three Covenants of God; the Woman in the Ephah; the Woman with the Leaven; Mystery Babylon. By G. WARRAND HOUGHTON, Esq.

Prophecies Concerning the Church. By Rev. C. GRAHAM.

Modern Delusions. By LOUIS LEISCHING, Esq.

The Time of Jacob's Trouble. By Rev. J. GOSSET TANNER.

What Manner of Persons ought ye to be? By W. B. HARINGTON, Esq.

PUBLISHED AT THE CONFERENCE HALL, CLAPHAM ROAD, S.W. PRICE ONE SHILLING.

[Sent post free if prepaid.]

CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY.

The 115th ANNUAL REPORT of this Society has just been issued, a copy of which may be had from the SECRETARY by anyone interested in the work.

Help is greatly needed to carry on the good work here done. Address

MR. JAMES ATKINSON,
28, Enfield-road, Kingsland, N.

Tinted Covers, 1s.

READINGS FOR THE SICK-ROOM,

FOR

INSTRUCTION, COUNSEL, AND COMFORT

IN THE

HOUR OF WEAKNESS OR SUFFERING.

BY

ALEXANDER W. WALLACE, M.D.

FIFTH EDITION.

"There is no human composition better adapted than this for giving to the afflicted, and we believe it will be circulated by tens of thousands."—British Herald.

Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards (Antique), 2s.

READINGS FOR THE SICK-ROOM,

"Will be found very helpful and profitable to the numerous class for whom the publication is designed. This little volume has the recommendations to the invalid of being printed in a clear type, so as to be easily read, and of being light to the hand, so that it may be held without fatigue."—The Revival.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

MISSIONARY TRAINING COLLEGE,

PUERTO SANTA MARIA, SPAIN.

Principal—THE REV. WILLIAM MOORE, M.A.

OBJECT.—To train pious and talented young men as teachers and evangelists for Spain.

CONTRIBUTIONS will be thankfully received by D. MATHESON, Esq., Hon. Sec., 120, Queen's Gate, S.W.; or by Messrs. RANSOM, BOUVERIE & Co., 1, Pall Mall East, London, S.W.

SOCIETY for RELIEF of PERSECUTED JEWS.

SYRIAN COLONIZATION FUND.

PRESIDENT—THE EARL OF MEATH.

Funds needed for aiding Jews driven by persecution—NOW ACTIVE—from Russia, &c., to the Holy Land. Suitable land for settlement of Trained Men offered for purchase. A Jubilee Gift of £50 has been received towards this object. Recent visitors describe extreme misery of Jews in Jerusalem, who starve unless given food or work.

Bankers—Messrs. DRUMMOND & Co., 49, Charing-cross; BARCLAY, BEVAN & Co., 54, Lombard-street; BANK OF ENGLAND; ROYAL BANK OF SCOTLAND; PROVINCIAL BANK OF IRELAND.

Secretary—E. A. FINN.
41, Parliament-street, London.

THAMES CHURCH MISSION

(INSTITUTED 1844).

Patron: His Grace the Archbishop of CANTERBURY.
Vice-Patron: The Right Hon. and Right Rev. Lord Bishop of LONDON.
President: The Right Hon. the LORD MAYOR.
Chairman: WILLIAM ELLICE, Esq.
Treasurer: SAMUEL HOARE, Esq., M.P.
Bankers: MESSRS. LLOYDS, BARNETTS, BOSANQUET & CO., LIMITED.

The Thames Church Mission Society's parish extends from Putney to the Nore; every steamer, sailing-vessel, barge, or boat, is reached by the agents of this Mission. This great work calls for a larger income. New subscribers are urgently needed. There can be no extension of the work unless the Lord's people strengthen the hands of the Committee. All are asked in this Year of Jubilee to help the agents to proclaim more widely and more fully than has been done before, a full, free salvation for all.

Rev. H. BLOOMER, Secretary.
Offices: 31, New Bridge-street, E.C.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

HOME.

There was not a single arrest for drunkenness in the Shetland Isles last year.

Mr. Frederick Sherlock is retiring from the editorship of The Church of England Temperance Chronicle.

A plebiscite on the liquor traffic is to be taken at Burnley. The points will be the veto, reduction, and restriction of licenses.

Mr. Ryan, secretary Cabmen and 'Busmen's Association, W.E., reports the meetings have been well attended and many pledges taken.

Rev. Robert Hill, M.A., Free St. Luke's, Glasgow, was the chief speaker at a recent Sabbath evening open-air temperance meeting on Glasgow Green.

A highly successful week's mission has just been concluded at Barking, Essex. A camp meeting held on the Sunday was attended by over 2000 persons.

The Methodist New Connexion Band of Hope Union reports an increase on the year of 11 bands and 1299 members; totals, 256 bands, 32,837 members.

It is said that the new Bishop of Sodor and Man, Dr. Bardsley, will be the first bishop of the Church of England who has been a total abstainer all his life.

The Central Review urges that the National Temperance League should more directly than hitherto aim at influencing the working classes in favour of temperance.

The Medical Press and Circular gives results of more than one thousand observations on the influence of tobacco on those engaged in its manufacture, and finds it exceedingly hurtful.

In the five exempted cities and towns in Ireland, the total Sunday arrests for drunkenness for the past official year were 2·115; those for the whole of the rest of Ireland were only 2·716!

A deputation, representative of the churches generally, waited recently on the Birmingham magistrates to urge the enforcement of the licensing laws, and the restriction of the traffic.

A "Lecture Bureau," intended to be a medium of communication between temperance and other societies and lecturers, entertainers, &c., has been opened in London by Mr. William Tarver.

Mrs. A. Allan, Glasgow, recently entertained the Glasgow City missionaries, with Rev. J. Renfrew, their superintendent, to a trip to Arran and back, on board the temperance steamer, The Ivanhoe.

In the House of Lords the Duke of Argyll heartily supported Dr. Cameron's Earlier Closing Bill (Scotland). Lord Lothian was in favour of excluding towns of over 50,000 inhabitants from the ten o'clock closing rule.

A temperance demonstration, in which all the churches assisted, was held lately at Rawton, Durham, and was very largely attended. Tea was served in the Drill Hall, lent for the occasion by the Marquis of Londonderry.

There are twenty-seven workhouses in the kingdom where intoxicants are not allowed. Notwithstanding that the experience of these shows that stimulants are unnecessary, enough money to maintain 2000 more paupers is yearly squandered in strong drink.

The Baptist says that one of the "unbiassed" minds of the denomination, remonstrating with that paper for showing interest in the temperance cause, says that amongst other modest statements, are the following:—"Total abstinence is as much of the devil as is infant sprinkling;" that "there is as much sin in giving up drink as in taking too much;" and, finally, "that temperance has done more real harm than all the drunkenness outside the church!"

FOREIGN.

A considerable trade in intoxicants is carried on by Germans with the Samoan Islands.

A temperance society, consisting of Chinese Christians, has been formed at Foochow. Brass buttons were adopted as a badge instead of the blue ribbon.

Mr. T. C. Rayner, barrister-at-law, has just concluded in The Alliance News a valuable series of articles on "The law relating to the granting of licences."

At the recent meeting of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference, Newfoundland, an encouraging report was presented of the temperance work of the year.

The new Belgian liquor law provides for stated inquiry into the character and business conduct of publicans, and makes it illegal to give credit for drink.

The Auckland Leader says that city celebrated the Queen's Jubilee with great enthusiasm, without the aid of alcohol, and so as to advance the cause of temperance.

In the late session of the Newfoundland House of Assembly a motion for an appeal to the people on the question of Prohibition was lost by the casting vote of the speaker.

The Pioneer Press, St. Paul, Minnesota, complains that drunken men are to be met with on the streets in such numbers as to be a nuisance. St. Paul has a "high license" law, fee 1000 dollars!

It is stated that since the departure of Rev. J. G. Gregson the basis of temperance societies in the Indian Army has very unwisely been changed from simple total abstinence to that known as "dual."

The Catholic Total Abstinence Union of the Archdiocese of Chicago reports an increase of 400 members during the past six months. The retiring president condemned Sunday picnics—a hopeful sign.

The Earl of Onslow stated in the House of Lords, recently, that the United States Government "did not see its way to enter into an international agreement" on the drink-traffic with certain native peoples.

From The Times we learn that at the Port of Havre drink is used as a prime agent for leading the sailors into the lowest debauchery. Mrs. Bernal, wife of the British Consul, has established a Sailors' Home there, and with good results.

Notices.

M. E. C.—Please send name and address.

COMMUNICATIONS RECEIVED WITH THANKS. — G.A.C. H.B.P. J.H. R.S. J.E.H. J.L. T.F. J.E.R. E.B. J.S. H.K. R.A.B. A.E.B.L. G.J.E. F.P. W.S. J.F. M.P. C.A.B. J.E.L. M.E.C. J.H S.M.H. P.J. J.C.A. N.R.H. W.D. J.S.A. J.E.M. R.D.F. J.W. M.C.W. A.E.W. C.B.S. W.G.L. T.O.L. A.J.B. M.B.G. W.C.B. W.A. A.V.W. E.W. J.F. G.K. J.C. T.J. M.H.S. H.V. E.B. J.A. A.M. J.M.R. R.S.H.S. J.A.M. W.H. E.G. K.H.Z. J.E. M.A.B. J.B. B.H.G. R.C. A.W.C. W.P.B. J.H.L.C. M.F. T.E. R.W. A.M. J.P.H. E.K.N. S.R.B. C.A.S. J.H. E.H.S. G.W.S. H.Z. W.H.C. J.D. E.C. H.H. A.S.C.A. C.F. J.M. L.B.G. C.M. E.B. C.C.F. M.J.M. W.D.

APPLICANTS FOR TRACTS. — H. Morley, 13, Church-street, Old Town, Eastbourne, Sussex; E. Peters, High-street, Stevenage, Herts; Miss L. Smith, 2, Trafalgar-Cottages, Weston, near Bath; E. Martin, 4, Upper Thames-street, London, E.C.; A. Coker, 12, Hall-street, St. Paul's-road, Burdett-road; M. Mayse, 65, Bradford-street, Attercliff Common; E. Roper, 11, Rosaline-road, Dawes-road, Fulham, S.W; W. Grundy, 19, Bollo Bridge-road, South Acton, Middlesex; J. W. Hogg, 24, Wellington-street, Garston; Miss A. Day, 159, Cassland-road, South Hackney, E.; C. Skinner, 13, Water-lane, Homerton, E.; H. Akhurst, 4, Elm-villas, Eltham, Kent.

Forthcoming Meetings.

THE EVANGELISATION SOCIETY will send evangelists to any part of England, Scotland, and Wales on due notice. Hon. Sec., 21, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.

THE IRISH EVANGELISATION SOCIETY will send evangelists to any part of Ireland on due notice. Apply to Mr. J. Barton, Hon. Sec., Dundalk, Ireland.

THE CHURCH ARMY will send evangelists (working-men) to any clergyman on due notice, for short or long missions. Hon. Sec., 128 and 130, Edgware-road, W.

THE METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE EVANGELISTS' ASSOCIATION will send lay preachers and evangelists to any chapel or hall of any evangelical denomination in London. Hon. Sec., 121, Camberwell New-road, S.E.

Y.M.C.A., NEW METAL EXCHANGE, Whittington-avenue, E.C.—Meeting of members at Mr. Cawston's, Bromley Hill, September 3. Parties leave Cannon-street 2.53, and 3.13 p.m. Gospel services at Bermondsey, Sundays, 7 p.m., and Thursdays, 8 p.m. Mission work at Whitechapel, Limehouse, Bermondsey, Canning Town, &c.

CONFERENCE HALL AND Y.M.C.A., Stratford, E.—Sunday, September 4, 3 p.m., Rev. J. Banfield; 7 p.m., Mr. Finlay Gibson. Meetings for prayer, Sundays, 7.45 a.m.; Mondays, 8.30 p.m.; Wednesdays, 8.30 p.m.; Fridays, midday, and Saturdays, 7.30 p.m.

COMING CONFERENCES.—Y.M.C.A. DUNDEE, September 6—9. PERTH, September 13—15. WAKEFIELD, September 20—22. DUNDEE (Kinnaird Hall), September 20—22. EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE, Aberdeen, September 20—22. SALISBURY, September 27—30. CLIFTON, BRISTOL (Victoria Rooms), October 4—6. LEAMINGTON, October 18—20.

STRANGERS' REST, 163, St. George's-street, Ratcliff-highway, E. — Monthly workers' meeting, Friday, September 2; tea at 6, meeting at 7. Address by Mr. Henry Varley: "The Irrationality of Unbelief." A party of ladies leaving for China will be present.

"CHRISTIAN LIFE-BOAT CREW."—Monthly workers' meeting, Tuesday, September 6, 7 p.m., Sailors' Welcome Home, 173, St. George's-street, Ratcliff-highway. Dr. McKilliam will give a short address.

BIBLE READINGS for German governesses and others, Thursdays, 8 p.m. French Bible-readings for governesses, Saturdays, 3.30, except last of the month. French Bible-classes for maids and others, Sundays, 3.30, Y.W.C.A., Morley Halls, 316, Regent-street, W.

ZENANA MEDICAL COLLEGE.—The usual Saturday Bible-reading and Prayer-meeting is suspended during the vacation. It will be resumed on September 24.

MR. NED WRIGHT will preach on Sundays during September at Earlham Hall (formerly Maberly Chapel), Balls Pond-road, at 7 p.m.

CONFERENCE HALL, Mildmay-park, N.—Sunday, Sept. 4, 3.30 and 7, Mr. W. R. Lane.

GREAT ASSEMBLY HALL, Mile-end-road, E.—Sunday, September 4, 11 a.m., and 6 30 p.m., Mr. R. T. Booth.

EDINBURGH CASTLE, Limehouse, E.—Sunday, Sept. 4, 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., Mr. Henry Varley; 3 p.m., Rev. Henry Bright.

CHRISTIAN EVIDENCE SOCIETY.—The lecturing operations in the open spaces of the Metropolis have been continued vigorously during the summer. Their September list is before us, giving titles of lectures and names of lecturers at the following stations:—Battersea Park, Bethnal Green-road, Camberwell Green, Clapham Common, Clerkenwell Green, Columbia-road, Hackney-road, Hyde Park, Kensal Green, Kingsland Green, Midland Arches (St. Pancras), Mildmay Grove, Mile-end Waste, Old Pimlico Pier, Peckham Rye, Plaistow Green, South Tottenham, Victoria Park, and Whitechapel. The subjects indicate affirmation and defence of the truth; there appears to be very little direct attack on infidelity; and this appears to us to be the best policy and most likely to achieve gratifying results. Tract distribution accompanies every lecture.

Subscriptions Received by Messrs. Morgan & Scott to Monday, August 29, 1887.

 We would respectfully urge all our friends, when remitting to us, to make Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders payable to Morgan & Scott, and to cross them "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss of same.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders, not by stamps.

	£	s.	d.
Dr. Barnardo's Homes—M.J.F. £1; Natal, £5; F.N.Z. £25; Devonian, 10s. 6d.; M. 5s. ..	31	15	6
Msn. Deep Sea Fishermen—M.J.F. £1; M. 4s...	1	4	0
Mr. Eoll's Work, Port Said—M.J.F.	1	0	0
Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children—M.D.A.	0	10	0
Home of Industry—Haggai ii.8, £5; Natal, £2 10s.	7	10	0
Mrs. Butler's Work—M.M.	0	2	6
Salvation Army—M.M. 2s. 6d.; M. 4s.; (France) Natal, £3	3	6	6
Working-men's Mission, New-cut—M.M.	0	2	6
Mr. E. Wright's Work—M.M...	0	2	6
Church Army—V.T.	0	5	0
Suppression of Opium Traffic with China (Travelling Agent)—F.W.M. £2; Misses G.S. and R.M. 10s...	2	10	0
Day in the Country Fund—L.H.E. 5s.; Scott, 1s.; J.S.W. £1; Miss B. 5s.; J.J.B. 10s.; W. 2s. 6d.; E.A.A. 5s.; S.E.M. £1; M.F.B. 5s.; M. 2s...	3	15	6
Mr. Fegan's Boys' Home—Miss G. £1; E.M.G. 10s.; Natal, £2; Mrs. G.P. 10s.; E.S.D. 5s...	4	5	0
China Inland Mission—H.H.E. £1; Natal, £5; J.P.P.B. £50; Foy, 2s.; M. 5s.; Little Canadians, £1 0s. 7d.	57	7	7
Ragged-school Union—G.M.	0	5	0
Mildmay Mission to Jews—Thank-offering ..	1	0	0
Spezia Mission (Mr. Clarke)—Mrs. C.R. £5; C.C.F.A. 10s.	5	10	0
Irish Evangelisation Society—Natal	3	0	0
Gray's-yard Ragged School—Natal	2	0	0
George-yard Ragged School—Natal	2	10	0
Marylebone Medical Mission—Mrs. G.P.	0	10	0
Open-air Mission—Mrs. G.P.	0	10	0
St. Giles' Christian Mission—Birthday Offering	0	8	0
Fresh Air Mission—Faithies	0	2	6
Bridge of Hope, Ratcliff—G.L.M...	0	10	0
Children's Week by the Sea (Mr. Allen)—W. ..	0	2	6
British Syrian Schools—F.N.Z. £25; M. 5s. ..	25	5	0
Mrs. Hilton's Creche, &c.—F.N.Z.	25	0	0
E. L. Training Institute (Rev. H. G. Guinness)—F.N.Z.	25	0	0
Hyde-park Mission-hall (Mr. C. Cook)—C.C.F.A.	0	10	0
Miss Weston's Work—Isle of Wight, £10; M. 5s.	10	5	0
Scandinavian Sailors' Home—Isle of Wight ..	10	0	0
Miss Daniell's Work, Aldershot—Isle of Wight, £10; M. 5s.	10	5	0
Woolwich Soldiers' Home—Isle of Wight	5	0	0
Pastor Rodriguez's Figueras Mission—Isle of Wight	10	0	0
Miss Sharman's Orphans' Home—Isle of Wight	10	0	0
McAll Mission—Isle of Wight	10	0	0
Miss Anstey's Colar Mission—M.	0	5	0
Miss Leigh's Work, Paris—M.	0	5	0
Mr. Fenn's Work, Spain—M.	0	5	0
Mr. Rabinowitz's Work—M. 5s.; J.A.R. £2 1s. 1d.	2	6	1
Mr. Wall's Work, Rome—M.	0	4	0
Children's Home (Dr. Stephenson)—A.N.	0	2	0
Gee-street Mission—M.G.G.	0	5	0
Mrs. Collie's Work, Jamaica, for Child—A reader	6	0	0
Converted Priests (M. Revillaud)—T.N.J.	1	0	0
Runcorn Gospel Msn—A Friend, 1s.; E.J. 2s. 6d.	0	3	6
Bethel Santhal Mission—M.H.G.	1	0	0
Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland—M. ..	0	5	0
	£233	10	2

[ADVERTISEMENTS.]

Hop-pickers' Mission.—T.O., Yes.
Evangelistic Mission—Anon., Northampton, 5s

THE SLAVE TRADE.—On the West Coast of Africa, we learn, the work of suppression is being carried on with vigour and success, but on the East Coast, notwithstanding the vigilance of the British cruisers, the cruel trade is still very brisk. From Egypt comes the gratifying news that under the vigorous management of the Slavery Department the nefarious system is dying out, and in Brazil whose present emperor is fully alive to the evils of the trade, there is good reason to hope that ere long it will exist only as a memory. But there is still a great work to be done. A letter received by the Secretary of the Anti-Slavery Society points to Abyssinia as the great hunting-ground of the dealers in human flesh and blood. Few Parliamentary grants will be better spent than the paltry £2400 voted during the small hours of one morning last week for the suppression of this revolting traffic.

GEORGE YARD RAGGED SCHOOLS, &c., Whitechapel, E.

Received with much thankfulness from H. W., 5s.; Ross-shire, a Box of Flowers.

The Infant Day Nursery. Free Ragged Day Schools. Children's Services. Toy Classes. Band of Hope. Children's Scripture Union. Sunday morning, afternoon, and evening Schools. Classes and Meetings for Elder Girls and Young Women. Mutual Industrial Classes for Lads. Men's Bible Classes. Mothers' Meetings. Women's Bible Classes. Temperance Meetings. Mission to Inebriate Women. Evangelistic Services and other agencies in operation. An interesting "Record" of Work done during 1886, will be sent to friends, who would like one, free of charge.

Friends are invited to visit the Institution any day but Saturday.

Post-office Orders should be made payable at 66, High-street, Whitechapel, E. Letters and Parcels should be addressed to GEORGE HOLLAND, The Ragged Schools, George Yard, High-street, Whitechapel, London, E.

GEORGE YARD RAGGED SCHOOLS,

"Day in the Country."

Received with many thanks from J. K., 7s.; C. F., 7s. 6d.

About 800 Children have been taken out for a Day in the Country to the following places, Petersham Park, Clivedon, Highgate, and Theydon Bois. About 600 Adults have been taken to Neasdon, Theydon Bois, and Buckhurst Hill. They were supplied with necessary food. 150 Little Children will be taken in a day or two.—GEORGE HOLLAND, George Yard, Whitechapel, London, E.

EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE.

ABERDEEN CONFERENCE.

SEPTEMBER 20—22.

The following, among others, have consented to take part in the proceedings: The Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Polwarth (the President), the Lord Provost of Aberdeen, Sir W. McArthur, General Sir Robt. Phayre, Wm Ferguson, Esq., J. A. Campbell, Esq., M.P., the Revs. Professor Charteris, Principal Cairns, H. C. G. Moule, Dr. Murray Mitchell, Dr. Herdman, Dr. Clemance, Principal Brown, J. S. Russell, Dr. Sinclair Paterson, W. L. Watkinson, W. S. Swanson, W. Wyatt Gill, J. Mitford Mitchell, D. Beatt, and Dr. S. C. Morgan, and Donald Matheson, Esq.

Programme, containing full particulars as to the addresses which will be given, on important subjects, will be forwarded on application to the SECRETARIES of the ALLIANCE, 7, Adam-street, Strand.

THE BENEVOLENT OR STRANGERS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

Treasurer, Ald. Sir R. N. Fowler, Bart., M.P.
J. H. Anderson, Esq., Chairman.
Clarence Smith, Esq., J.P., Hon. Secretary.

For 101 years this Institution has visited and relieved the destitute sick, by an entirely unpaid agency, consisting of over 240 Christian men and women.

Funds are urgently needed.

The Committee will be thankful for the Society being remembered in the testamentary arrangements of the benevolent.—Office of the Society, 52, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

ANXIETY OF SOUL. — Any to whom the way of salvation is not clear, are invited to communicate, either personally or by letter, to W. S., care of Evangelistic Secretary, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

CONVALESCENT HOMES, at Bournemouth and Sandgate.—For particulars apply to Mr. JOHN JAMES JONES, Director of the London Samaritan Society, 98, High-street, Homerton, London, E.

HOME HOSPITAL, 9 and 32, Lupus-street, St. George's-square, S.W., for Ladies and Children (medical, surgical, and confinement cases). Private wards. Ladies taken as dispensing and midwifery students. The Trustees ask help for free bed.—Address LADY SUPERINTENDENT.

HOME FOR BLIND CHILDREN, College-avenue, Hackney, E.—The present house having become too small, it is proposed to purchase a Freehold, which will be placed in the hands of Trustees. Contributions will be gratefully received by Miss S. RYE, or Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT.

PERTH CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.—The Annual Conference will (D.V.) be held in the City Hall, Perth, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, September 13, 14, and 15. Forenoon Meeting at 11. Afternoon 2, and Evening at 7 o'clock. Information regarding lodging, &c., will be furnished by Mr. CHRISTIE, Bookseller, St. John-street.

NOON-DAY PRAYER-MEETING, Brighton, is held in the Assembly-room, ground-floor of the Y.M.C.A., 55, Old Steine.

URGENT APPEAL.—CLOTHING.—Help earnestly solicited for the many necessitous and invalid gentlewomen and children known to Miss FAITHFULL, The Institute, 136, Regent-street. The need is great. See Report.

THE LONDON SAMARITAN SOCIETY for Convalescent Homes at Sandgate and Bournemouth. Mr. C. A. R., £1 1s.; Miss R. F., 5s.; Anon., 2s.; Collected by Mrs. E. O., 13s.

THE BETHSHAN, Leeds.—Meetings for Holiness and Divine Healing, Sundays and Tuesdays, 2.30 p.m.; Thursdays, 7.30 p.m. Christians wishing for teaching on Divine Healing, can be received into the house.—Miss GIBBS, 10, St. John's-terrace, Bible Vue-road, Leeds.

DIVINE HEALING and Power for Service.—Meetings conducted by the Rev. JOHN ALLEN or his workers. Bishopsgate (32, Spital-square), Tuesdays, 7.30 p.m. Camberwell Gate (The Hall, Horsley-street). Tuesdays, 7 p.m. Hackney (Trinity Church, Triangle, Mare-street), Sundays, 3 p.m.; Mondays, 7 p.m.; on Fridays, Baptism of the Spirit, 7 p.m.

Postal address, Balclutha Lodge, Southgate, N.

BRITISH and FOREIGN SAILORS' SOCIETY.

LEGACIES RECEIVED for the VICTORIA and ALBERT MEMORIAL FUND, to assist our aged Missionaries (themselves chiefly sailors). Already upwards of £4,000 (equivalent) given and promised.

Patron—H.R.H. PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR.

Lord Brassey (President) "pleads with increased confidence."

Lord Bishop of London (Vice-President), presiding at the Mansion House Meeting, "wished the Society's operations better success, and hoped the fund of £10,000 would be completed this Jubilee Year."

Contributions may be sent to the Treasurer, Thomson Hankey, Esq., Bank of England; or to the Secretary, Edward W. Matthews, Sailors' Institute, London, E.

MRS. BOTTING'S ORPHANAGE for Motherless Children, taken at any age, kept until 16 years. Maintained, clothed, educated, and trained for service. Contributions would be thankfully received.—23, Ridley-road, Dalston, London.

Educational.

SEASIDE EDUCATION.—An Officer can highly recommend a Christian Home School at Southsea for a few Girls of good position. Pupils have successfully passed R.A.M. and R.C.P. Examinations. Terms very moderate. Terms 40 guineas to fill a vacancy.—INSPECTOR-GENERAL GORDON, R.N., View Bank, Brechin, Forfarshire, N.B.

HOME SCHOOL for Girls. Limited number of Boarders. Good education, based on Bible teaching, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness." Pupils prepared for the various Exams. Kindergarten for Juniors. Terms inclusive. Recommended by R. C. Morgan and parents of pupils.—Mrs. SILVESTER, Clarence House, Pellatt-grove, Wood Green.

SUPERIOR EDUCATION for young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. WATKINS, F.S.Sc., Dyreham College, North Finchley.—Pupils prepared for public examinations. Fees, including music, French, and drawing, 14 and 16 guineas per term, prepaid.

"I have the greatest pleasure in recommending Mrs. Watkins' School to parents seeking a good Christian home and a high-class education for their daughters. The School is situated in a fine healthy neighbourhood."—Josiah Spiers, Children's Special Service Mission.

MORAVIAN LADIES' SCHOOL, St. Peter's, Bedford.—Accommodation for a limited number of Boarders and Day Pupils. Pupils prepared for Cambridge Local Examinations. For terms and all particulars, apply to

Miss SEIFFERTH, Principal.

BELLE VUE, AMBLESIDE.—Good School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. FLEMING. Healthy and beautiful situation; large rooms, garden, tennis. Careful Christian training, and thorough teaching. Cambridge Examinations. Resident foreign and English governesses. Masters. 50 to 60 guineas. Reduced terms for children under 12.

HIGH-CLASS CHRISTIAN SCHOOL for the Daughters of Gentlemen. — Miss PENN receives a limited number of pupils. Efficient resident governesses and visiting masters. Individual Christian influence. Home comforts. Large house and garden. Entire charge taken of pupils from abroad. Languages and music specialities. Young Ladies are also received to pursue certain studies only, or to take lessons in dressmaking, cooking, &c.

St. John's de Ocklynge, Eastbourne.

GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL, LEYTON.—Modern education with Christian training. Public examinations passed with success. Prize for singing. References: Rev. James Lunt, M.A., Rev. E. W. Bullinger, D.D.—Principal, Miss H. R. FORD.

BRIGHTON.—High-class School for Girls. Healthy situation. Home comforts. Every educational advantage. Terms moderate. Good references to clergymen and parents of pupils.—The Misses NORTON, Farndon House, Stanford-road, Brighton.

ILFRACOMBE, 2, Oxford-park.—Home School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. RICHARD WARE. Careful Christian training and thorough teaching. Motherly care taken of delicate children. Good references.

SOUND EDUCATION FOR GIRLS.—Ascham School, Oxford.—University masters. Special advantages for science, languages, music, and art. Arrangement for Anglo-Indian children. Terms moderate. Vacancy for governess-student. Reference kindly permitted to Rev. Canon Christopher, Oxford.—Address, PRINCIPAL.

HOME TUITION. — A Christian Lady wishes to meet with a little Girl as Companion to hers. Terms moderate.—Address in the first instance, M., 31, Richmond-road, Dalston.

SUPERIOR PRIVATE SCHOOL (Girls'). Home life. Resident governess. Masters attend. Good bracing air, high ground. Small number only received. References to parents.—Misses MAW, Lime Bank, Upper Oldfield-park, Bath.

BEDFORD. — Melrose House. — Principals, the Misses RAY, daughters of the late Rev. R. Ray. Pupils received for high-class education and board. Personal supervision, with Christian training and home comforts. Preparation for Cambridge and other Local Examinations when desired. The next term will begin (D.V.) on Friday, September 16.

EDUCATION GRATUITOUS, superior, offered to a Gentleman's Daughter in a select school. Small amount required towards board, &c. References exchanged. Strictly confidential. MARION, May's Advertising Offices, 159, Piccadilly.

SELECT GIRLS' SCHOOL,

Cambridge House, 113, Green-lanes, London, N.

Christian training. Motherly care. Home comforts Healthful situation. Preparation for Public Examinations, at which all the Pupils entered last Christmas passed. Reference to Rev. Gordon Calthrop, 3, Highbury-grange, N.; Doctor Pittock, Margate; and to other parents of present pupils.—Further particulars on application to the Principal,

Mrs. BRODIE.

FRAULEIN EIBACH, Villa Schönblick, Wiesbaden, Germany, receives a limited number of pupils. Professors attend, and there is a resident French governess. Great advantages for languages, music, singing, and painting. References and prospectus on application.

EDUCATION.—High-class School for Young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. HALE, A.C.P., 1, Carlton-mansions, Clapham-rise, London, S.W.—Visiting masters, certificated governesses, and careful personal supervision with home comforts. Pupils prepared for any examination. Instruction made pleasant, and no overworking countenanced. French, German, Latin, drawing, class-singing, and drilling are included in the school fees, which are moderate. Highly recommended by parents of pupils, and Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. Prospectus and testimonials on application to Principal.

"Balham, May 29, 1880.

"I am very reluctant to recommend schools, because I am not always able to judge of the interior arrangements; but in this case I have the utmost pleasure in standing as reference. I can highly commend Mrs. Hale, and have the greatest confidence in her capacity, management, and character, having known her for several years."

C. H. SPURGEON.

LOWESTOFT. — CLAREMONT HOUSE.—The Misses BIGNOLD receive a limited number of gentlemen's daughters as Resident Pupils. Careful Christian training, with thorough education and home comforts. References kindly permitted to the Bishop of Exeter; the Rev. J. B. Pelham, Norwich; J. C. Worthington, Esq., Lowestoft; E. Courthorpe Todd, Esq., Macready House, Covent-garden; and other friends and parents of pupils.

LADIES' COLLEGE, Goudhurst, Kent, near Tunbridge Wells.—A happy home and School for Girls, 420 feet above sea-level. College and Cambridge examinations. Terms, twenty-seven guineas per annum.—Miss R. KENDON, M.C.P., daughter of Rev. J. J. Kendon.

VEVEY, SWITZERLAND.—A few vacancies in an old-established, superior Ladies' Boarding School. Principal in London till 1st September. — Address by letter, Miss BABINGTON PEILE, 8, Ormiston-road, Uxbridge-road, W.

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, Warminster, Wilts.—Healthy neighbourhood, house detached, tennis lawn, &c. Masters from Clifton, Bath, Salisbury. The usual Public exams. Resident French governess. A few vacancies.—For prospectus, &c., address the Misses CRUSE, Cambridge House.

SUPERIOR EDUCATIONAL advantages for young Ladies, combined with Christian training and home comforts. Little boys also received, with entirely separate supervision. House beautifully situated in its own grounds. Lovely scenery. Health resort for delicate children. Inclusive terms, 15 to 21 guineas per annum.

PRINCIPAL, Broomfield Villa, Henfield, Sussex.

EASTBOURNE. — Ladies' College (for the daughters of Gentlemen). Established 1871. A few Boarders received. The College is examined by the University of Cambridge. Referees, Rev. W. Bathurst, vicar of Holy Trinity Church, parents of pupils and others.—For prospectus, &c., apply to the PRINCIPALS, the Misses Deacon, Grassington-road, Eastbourne.

HAMMERSMITH HIGH SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.—Pupils successful at Cambridge, St. Andrews, and Royal Academy Local Examinations, and London Matriculation. Boarders received in the house of the Head Mistress at moderate terms.—Full particulars on application to

Miss MARY E. PAGE.

BOURNEMOUTH.—MOIRA COLLEGE for Ladies.—Principals: Miss CONNAH and Miss INGHAM. Children requiring care receive especial attention. References to well-known gentlemen, and to the parents of past and present pupils. Prospectuses on application.

THE PRINCIPAL of well-established Ladies' School, in the country, has vacancies for Boarders. A good education and home comforts offered, on moderate terms. An hour from London.

M. E., 95, Talfourd-road, Peckham-road, S.E.

MRS. ROBERT BILKE receives young Ladies to board and educate. Christian home life. Thorough teaching. Moderate terms. Indian children received. Term commences September 5. Greenhill Park College, Greenhill-road, Harlesden.

COOMBE LODGE SOUTH, Hamilton-road, Reading. — Miss PUGH receives into her parents' home a few Girls for instruction. Domestic arrangements those of a comfortable home. Situation healthy. Large play garden.

EDUCATIONAL HOME for the Daughters of Gentlemen, Hanworth House, Weston-super-Mare.—Mrs. CHARLES NASH receives a limited number of Pupils, and endeavours to combine the highest educational advantages with maternal care and Christian training. Evangelical ministry. Resident English and foreign governesses and the best visiting professors in regular attendance. References kindly permitted to the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Exeter; the Rev. W. Hunt, M.A., Vicar of Holy Trinity, Weston-super-Mare, &c. Also to many parents of pupils at home and abroad. —Prospectus on application.

BRIGHTON.—2, Sussex-square.—Miss GOULTY'S Educational Home for Young Ladies. Terms vary according to the individual requirements, and the accomplishments needed. The Rev. J. B. Figgis, of Brighton, is kindly willing to bear his testimony to the School. Pupils can prepare for the Cambridge Examinations.

GENTLEMAN'S DAUGHTER will be received in a School near London, as Companion-Pupil to little girls from India, aged 8 and 10, on very moderate terms. Entire charge if desired. Christian training.—Madame S., Rue Victor Hugo 16, Boulogne-sur-Mer.

CHRISTIAN HOME, with good education offered to two little Girls in seaside village. Terms moderate. Also young Lady to assist and pay £20 per annum.—A. B., Mr. Clarke, School Stationer, 108, High-street, Southampton.

STUDY.—Exquisite mountain and river scenery in South Wales. Very healthy.—An Undergraduate of Oxford, Classical scholarship, will be glad to take one or two pupils for the month of September.—Rev. A. GRIFFITHS, Maesgwartha, near Abergavenny.

ALTRINCHAM, CHESHIRE.—Mentmore House.—Home School for a limited number of Girls. Healthy neighbourhood. Visiting professors. Inclusive terms. Prospectus and testimonials from parents of former pupils on application to PRINCIPAL.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL.

WELLINGTON, SHROPSHIRE.

Principal: DR. CRANAGE, M.A.

BETHANY HOUSE SCHOOL, Goudhurst, Kent, near Tunbridge Wells. — Principal, Rev. J. J. KENDON.—Careful religious training, combined with a thoroughly sound commercial education. In the last three years 150 of the pupils were passed in the public examinations at the College of Preceptors, and the Local Examination of the University of Cambridge. Terms, twenty-seven guineas per annum.

YOUR BOYS will have a happy Home and sound Education with Mr. and Mrs. DIXON, Middle-class School, Kingston-on-Thames. Christian influence; unlimited diet; beautiful neighbourhood. 20 to 25 guineas.

MORAVIAN BOYS' SCHOOL, Ockbrook, near Derby.—Pupils prepared for London Matriculation and other examinations. Ockbrook presents the advantages of central position, and beautiful rural neighbourhood.—For prospectus apply to Rev. J. M. MALLALIEU.

HIGHBURY HOUSE SCHOOL, St. Leonard's-on-Sea.—Boys prepared for commerce, public schools, or the universities. Upper, middle, and preparatory departments. Seven resident masters. The junior division taught by ladies. Delicate boys, requiring a mild climate, receive every kindness and constant care. The autumn term will commence on September 17.—For prospectus apply to Mrs. DUFF, the Lady Principal.

HARRINGAY SCHOOL, Green-lanes, N.—Sound Christian education, for professional or commercial pursuits. Careful supervision, plentiful dietary, healthy locality, easy of access. Terms moderate from entry. Principal, J. S. COOMBES.

MOUNT RADFORD SCHOOL, Exeter.—Boys are prepared for business or professional life. Many matriculate at the various universities. During the last twelve years pupils have obtained more than two hundred certificates (many passing in honours) in the Oxford, Cambridge, College of Preceptors', and London University Examinations. Special attention paid to juniors, who are taught by a lady. The Word of God is made the sole basis of a careful moral and spiritual training, and none but Christian teachers are employed. Cricket, athletics, &c.

Head Master, E. H. VINE, M.C.P.

HOME AND EDUCATION for the Sons of Gentlemen under twelve years of age, 74, Broadhurst-gardens, South Hampstead. Principals, the Misses DOUGLAS MCMILLAN, assisted by three certificated lady teachers. Pupils prepared for the public schools. The children of Anglo-Indians received for education and entire management during absence of parents. Referees: The Venerable Archdeacon Philpot, Surbiton; the Recorder of London; and James Ewen Mathieson, Esq. Mildmay.

CHIPPENHAM. — An excellent School for Boys. Healthy and beautiful country. First-class gymnasium. Tennis ground. A bathing place near. Greatest attention paid to character and Bible teaching. Terms very moderate.

H. B. BARDWELL, Orwell House.

THANET LODGE SCHOOL.—Principal, Mrs. HENRY W. BUTCHER, widow of the late Rev. H. W. Butcher of Margate. Conducted on the public school principle. Vacancies for Boarders. Four only received. Term commences September 12.—24, Finsbury-park-road, London.

A MORNING GOVERNESS wanted. Good English and music.—Apply by letter only, E., 24, Fitzroy-street, W.C.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED ON HIGH GROUND, WITH VIEWS OF THE SEA, on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and a first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this school that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS, together with the papers of Examinations passed and Honours gained, should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. THORN, Paddington, London.

CLIFTON, BRISTOL.—A few Resident Pupils desired. Locality celebrated for healthfulness and beauty. Instruction, training, companionship, personal, not delegated to others. Evangelical (Open Brethren).
Mr. HOWELL, Aberdeen-road.

NEW COLLEGE, Cliftonville, Margate.—Principal: Rev. G. H. JONES, F.A.S. High-class education, with individual attention. Prep. for exams., and commerce. Christian training. Splendid premises, loftily situated, close to sea. Moderate fees.

BRIGHTON.— EDUCATION.— Mr. ALFRED CLARK, B.A. (Lond.), receives about twenty Sons of Gentlemen, from seven to fourteen years of age. Terms from 45 guineas. Pupils are thoroughly grounded in English subjects, Latin, Greek, French, German, and mathematics, and have been successful at Cambridge Local and other Examinations. Personal care, Christian influence, and a healthy, happy home.—85, Buckingham-road, Brighton.—Referees: Rev. W. Poole Balfern, Brighton; Rev. F. Cruse, Christ Church Vicarage, Worthing; Rev. J. B. Figgis, Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, Harley House, Bow-road, London; Rev. W. Haslam, 66, Marina, St. Leonard's. Term commences on Friday, Sept. 9.

The COLLEGE, HERNE BAY.

Established 1866. A Christian home and a good School. Remarkable health. Notable success in public exams. Reasonable and strictly inclusive fees. Inquiry and inspection invited.—Prospectus, views, references from J. B. TURNER, Principal.

HURSTPIERPOINT (near Brighton), Sussex Preparatory School. Home comforts. Christian training. Visiting masters. Special attention to delicate, backward boys. Preparation for public schools. Pupils passed with distinction. Twenty guineas. Indian children received.
LADY PRINCIPAL, Hamilton Lodge.

EDUCATION IN HIGHGATE.—The Rev. G. D. BARTLET, M.A., receives ten Pupils (from 10 years) to board and educate for Commercial or Professional life, or for Public Schools. Individual attention, thorough grounding, careful Christian training, with the comforts of a superior home are afforded. Fees from 70 guineas per term. Highgate is strongly recommended by the medical profession.

LITTLE BOYS, Brighton.—Inkerman House, Lansdowne-road. The Misses ASHBY prepare young gentlemen for senior schools. The pupils are governed by kindness, and cheerfulness is encouraged. Careful instruction. Constant supervision. Home comforts. The situation is very healthy, near the sea.

KEMPLEY HOUSE, Bristol.—Mrs. PRESCOTT, Principal. — Prospectus sent. The education of Her Majesty the Queen was conducted on the principles of moral education; and Her Majesty has been pleased to accept a copy of Moral Education by Rev. P. Prescott, and Sir Henry Ponsonby has received the Queen's commands to thank him for the book.

RESIDENT GOVERNESS.—A young Lady, late Student of Queen's College, London, desires a re-engagement after the holidays. Acquirements, thorough English, music, drawing, painting, French, and the rudiments of Latin. Good testimonials.
A. B., Bockleton, Tweedy-road, Bromley, Kent.

HOME (South Downs), with education, for children. A Lady will gladly receive one or two little ones into her pleasant home by the seaside, to whom she will devote much time and affection. Terms £40 inclusive. References offered.
S. W., care of George F. Austin, Stationer, Lewes.

THE PRINCIPAL of a high-class Private School wishes to meet with a Christian Graduate in Arts as a Junior Master, capable also of taking the higher forms in Latin and Greek.—Address, stating qualifications, &c., HEADMASTER, 13, Rose-street, Newgate-street, E.C.

DOCTOR'S SISTER (31) seeks re-engagement as Governess. Thorough English, arithmetic, elementary Euclid, algebra, Latin, drawing, good grammatical French, German, music, and needlework. Certificated.—M. R., Mrs. HOOPER, Governess' Home and Institute, opposite Highbury Station Upper-street, London, N. Many governesses disengaged. No preliminary fees. Board and residence (permanency or otherwise), 12s. to 16s. weekly. References required.

GOVERNESS-PUPIL required in a High-class Girls School. Premium, 20 guineas per annum. English, French, music, and painting from professors.
H. W., 133, Salisbury-square, Fleet-street, E.C.

GOVERNESS - PUPIL required at once, to assist with juniors, and to receive lessons. Good country school (Girls). Premium small. Home comforts. Healthy neighbourhood.
Misses WISEMAN, Kelvedon, Essex.

CHRISTIAN TRAINING and Modern System of Education for Boys of all ages. Comfortable home. Warrington College, Warrington-crescent, Maida-vale, London, W. Principal, WILLIAM P. BONWICK; well known to Rev. Charles Graham, Shepherd's-bush, and Rev. E. Payson Hammond, America. Term begins September 9.

PRIVATE EDUCATION.—MR. HERBERT TAYLOR will be glad to hear of one or two sons of gentlemen, to educate with his own son, about 14 years of age.—Hadley, Barnet.

ENGAGEMENT required as Daily, Resident, or Companion Governess, to elder girls. Useful. English, French, elementary Latin, good music, drawing. Experienced, 12 and 3 years. Age 35. Reliable references. Good salary. Neighbourhood of Warrington or Bowdon preferred.
E. H., care of P. Proudfoot, Esq., Lymm, Cheshire.

JUNIOR GOVERNESS.—A young Lady (19) would be happy to give her Services, in return for board, laundress, and lessons in music, French, and German.
C. H., 5, Morland-road, Croydon.

GERMAN LADY, 29 (certificated), desires engagement Daily Governess. English, elementary French; certificates music (Royal Academy, Berlin); high class needlework (Lette Verein). State salary. Best testimonials.
FRÄULEIN, Rock Villa, Liss.

AS GOVERNESS.—A Lady recommends a young Lady (23) to children under 14. Certificated for English, French, drawing, College of Preceptors; pianoforte-music, Trinity College, 1st class honours. Evangelical Church. Highest references. Country preferred.—ALEX., care of Mr. Bachhoffner, High-street, Clapham, S.W.

CHRISTIAN GOVERNESSES, Companions, and Lady Housekeepers of high principles are frequently supplied to Ladies seeking such, by application to the Governess Registry, Soho Bazaar, Soho-square, London, W. Testimonials never dispensed with. Free of all expense to Parents.

A LADY, over 25, wanted, in London, to teach a girl 7, and superintend two older girls out of school. Good needlewoman. School-room maid kept.
Mrs. LYLE, Rocklands, Ilkley, Yorkshire.

DAILY GOVERNESS wanted, to instruct four Girls, ages 7 to 13, in English, music, and drawing. Must be a Christian.—Apply by letter only, stating terms, which must be moderate, to
A. J., 17, Portland-road, Finsbury-park, N.

REQUIRED, for young Lady, just left school, an engagement as Governess to young children, or Companion to a Lady. Would assist in light duties.—A., Mr. Ogle's Library, New Barnet.

A YOUNG LADY seeks re-engagement as Governess to children under 12. Certificated English, French, music, drawing, and mathematics, elementary Latin. Good references.
EMILIE, 11, Frederick-road, Clifton, Bristol.

RE - ENGAGEMENT desired by Clergyman's Daughter (21), as Governess in Preparatory School for Boys.
C. L. G., Dovedale, Walton-park, Clevedon.

WANTED FOR END OF SEPTEMBER, a young Christian Lady as Nursery Governess to four children (two at day school). Must be able to undertake wardrobes, and teach two children of 6 and 7. Good music required. Must have filled similar situation.
Mrs. MORRIS, Dunkeld, Walthamstow, Essex.

THORNCLIFFE, BOURNEMOUTH.—Principal, Mrs. DEW. Thorough education, with Christian training and home comforts. Situation most bracing. Terms moderate. Ministers' daughters from 20 guineas. Autumn term commences September 14.

GERMAN GOVERNESS.—Wanted, a Christian Young Lady, to take entire charge and teach three children. Good English, French, music, and needlework.—Apply by letter, stating references and salary, to Mrs. TAYLOR, Holly Lodge, Keswick-road, Putney.

GOVERNESS - STUDENT required, in select finishing school, near London. English, French, music, German, and drawing under first-class masters. Premium 18 guineas. Light duties. Home comforts.—MATERNAL, care of Mr. Pond, Stationer, St. Peter's-road, Holloway, London, N.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Wanted.

BARRISTER of exceptional commercial experience, wishes to join a good established business, in which his experience and a substantial part of his time would be useful. To an aged business man requiring conscientious help, this is an invaluable opportunity. Must be London district.—A. B., 171, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.

CLERGYMAN'S WIFE warmly recommends her widowed friend (Clergyman's Sister) as Companion-Housekeeper to Gentleman or Lady. Practical housekeeper; knowledge of cooking. Experienced, sweet-tempered; accustomed to parish work. Has acted as chaperon, reader, amanuensis.
HOPE, St. Kilda, St. John's-wood, Bournemouth.

BUTLER, with boy under him or single-handed.—A Lady wishes to find a situation, in a family of abstainers, for a Man-servant who has lived with her for nearly three years. He thoroughly understands his duties.
Mrs. G., Sandford St. Martin, Steeple Aston, Oxon.

AS GROOM or Gardener, or both combined. — Wanted, situation, by an earnest Christian, 37. Married. Twelve years with the Rector of Hadley. Family gone abroad.
WILLIAM PURROTT, Hadley, Barnet, N.

A LADY WISHES to recommend a young Man as Coachman. Country preferred. Steady, conscientious, good knowledge of horses and work.—W. MONK, Queen-street, Chipperfield, King's Langley, Herts.

COACHMAN, or Groom and Coachman. Thoroughly understands his duties. Excellent character. Ride and drive well. Age 30. Married. A Christian.
L. H., 41, Tennyson-road, Penge, S.E.

COACHMAN, thorough. 4½ years' good character. Recommended by Mr. J. R. Wood, Barvins.—J. OSBORNE, High-street, Potter's Bar.

GARDENER. — A young Man, single, age 21, highly recommended, abstainer, seeks situation. Can do anything required in an ordinary country garden. Is handy about lamps, or in house.
W. WINGATE, Longton Matrovers, Wareham.

MISSION WORK desired by an ex-Deaconess of nearly five years' experience in London. Baptist views.
A., 26, Charlotte-street, Leamington.

MR. JOHN M. PAMMENT, just returned from America, having experience during last 14 years in business, secretarial and pastoral duties, desires a re-engagement. Can give highest references.—Ware, Herts.

YOUNG MAN seeks employment as Missionary, Secretary, Collector, Clerk, &c. Country town or village (any needy place). Remuneration, Col. iv. 1.—EBENEZER, Box 1,970, Smith's Advertising Agency, 132, Fleet-street, London.

READER, CHRISTIAN WORKER.—Advertiser earnestly seeks employment.
T. H. DENISON, Glencar, Sligo, Ireland.

AS HONORARY ORGANIST.—Gentleman who has had some experience wishes to give his services as such, in or near Manchester.—For further particulars write ORGANIST, E. Walker, 56, Downing-street, Manchester.

A YOUNG LADY seeks re-engagement in China, Toy, or Fancy business, early in October.—M. F., Pier Bazaar, Weston-super-Mare.

A LADY WISHES to recommend a young Lady as Wardrobe-keeper. No objection to school or institution work. Is thoroughly trustworthy, and willing to make herself generally useful.
C., Cavendish Library, Weymouth-street, W.

WANTED, BY A YOUNG LADY, a situation as superior Mother's Help, or useful Companion. Salary £20. Musical. Good references.—S. M. H., The Poplars, Norman's-place, Altrincham, Cheshire.

LADY HIGHLY RECOMMENDS a well-connected, accomplished, and thoroughly domesticated Doctor's Daughter as Lady-Housekeeper, Companion, or Amanuensis. Experienced Continental traveller. Unexceptionable references. Dissenter.
M., 336, Messrs. Deacon, Leadenhall-street.

NO SALARY.—Can anyone recommend useful Companion? Good reader, amanuensis. Good health. Age about 30. Home comforts offered. Everything found, save wine and beer.—M., 32, Park-road, Bromley, Kent.

HOUSEKEEPER, Companion, or care of motherless children. Experienced, domesticated, musical. A Lady (35) seeks re-engagement. Highest references. Churchwoman.
BETA, 26, Cambridge-street, Hyde-park, W.

AS WORKING HOUSEKEEPER, or any place of trust wanted, by a thoroughly trustworthy person with one child. Total abstainer. Small salary. Good reference.
X. Y., Post-office, Clapton-road, Clapton, E.

DOMESTICATED LADY (28) seeks situation as Help in a family. Good needlewoman. Or as Useful Companion to a Lady. Musical, good reader, and amanuensis.
F., 109, Hertford-road, London, N.

RE-ENGAGEMENT.— Housekeeper or other position of trust, by Lady who has had charge of a widower's household, and much experience in care, training, &c., of motherless children. Five years one engagement. Domesticated, cheerful, reliable.—Address first,
M., Downton, Newsagent, Southsea.

COMPANION, CHAPERONE, or Lady Housekeeper. Advertiser is experienced in housekeeping, and active in habits. No objection to travel. Can give references in England and Ireland.
E., Mrs. Hatchell, Maryboro', Ireland.

A GENTLEWOMAN, abstainer (25), decided Christian, wishes for a situation as superior Help, either in a family or school. Good music.
STELLA, 41, Nightingale-road, Clapton, London.

A LADY RECOMMENDS an Officer's Widow, as Companion or Housekeeper to an invalid or elderly Lady or Gentleman. Middle-aged, abstainer. Salary £25.—Mrs. B., care of Mrs. Donaldson-Selby, Folkestone-road, Dover.

WANTED, TO PLACE a young Woman as Laundress in a Christian family or institution. Abstainer. Capital ironer of shirts, &c.—For particulars, apply M., 267, Glossop-road, Sheffield.

AS PLAIN COOK in a quiet family in or near Tonbridge Wells.—M. A., 85, London-road, Southborough, Tonbridge Wells.

A YOUNG LADY (27) desires re-engagement as Governess to young children, or Companion to a Lady. Seven years in last situation. Good references.
Care of M., 4, Queen-street, Derby.

RE - ENGAGEMENT AS HOUSE-KEEPER. Farmer's Daughter, over 40, thoroughly experienced. Tradesman or private family. Or as Companion-Housekeeper to an elderly lady and gentleman. Highest references.
G., 46, Leconfield-road, Highbury, N.

RE - ENGAGEMENT required as Housekeeper, or Attendant Companion to Lady, invalid or otherwise. Thoroughly domesticated. Good needlewoman. Good references.—BETA, care of Mrs. Brown, 20, De Crespigny-park, Denmark-hill, S.E.

A CHRISTIAN LADY desires a situation as Companion-Housekeeper, or Mother's Help. A native of Scotland. About 30 years of age. Thoroughly domesticated. Can be highly recommended. Has no objection to going abroad.
J. M., Kippelaw, Dalkeith, near Edinburgh.

A YOUNG CHRISTIAN, age 23, wishes to meet with a situation, either as Companion or Maid to a Lady. Good needlewoman; has a knowledge of dressmaking. Bright and cheerful. Total abstainer.
F. E., 9, Manor-road, Brockley, S.E.

AS YOUNG LADIES' or Children's Maid, or to take entire charge of children, by a respectable young person, age 19. Knowledge of dressmaking.—G., Park House, Glastonbury.

A HIGHLY RESPECTABLE elderly person, with her daughter, 20, seeks a comfortable Home with Christians. Domesticated, light duties. Salary £12 together.
Mrs. DAWSON, 9, Oxford-road, Kilburn, London.

AS USEFUL MAID, or Maid-Housekeeper to an elderly Lady. Good needlewoman; plain dressmaking. Good reader. Age 34.
B., 3, Derby-street, King's-cross.

USEFUL MAID in a family, or to wait on an elderly Lady. Good needlewoman. Age 22. Willing to make herself generally useful.
J. SHARPE, 8, Hartley-street, Dover.

A LADY RECOMMENDS a useful person (35). Very kind and trustworthy, fond of children; dressmaking and sewing. Not very strong. Many stairs objected to.
Miss PARISH, Old Town Hall, Hackney.

A LADY RECOMMENDS a young Lady as Nurse to children over a year. Or as Companion and Help, or in any useful capacity.
Z., 34, Loftus-road, Shepherd's-bush.

A LADY SEEKS situation as Under Housemaid, for a steady, respectable Girl of 17, who has been in her service nearly a year.
Mrs. LUNT, Leyton Vicarage, Essex.

MRS. CORDEAUX, Woodford Green, Essex, desires to obtain a situation for a young Woman of respectable family, as General Servant. Without character, but is anxious to gain one. Wages £12.

AS UNDER - SERVANT, out of London. Will any Lady take a Girl, nearly 16, who has been in training home for one year.
Miss MALAN, 42, Stanhope-gardens, London.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Vacant.

COUNTRY BUILDER AND CONTRACTOR'S BUSINESS.—Wanted, with a view to partnership, a Carpenter and Joiner (Christian) well up in the business, and able to contract for work. About £600 required. Every investigation can be had by applying in the first instance to
A. CLARK, 268, Kingsland-road, London.

AUDIT CLERK.—Occasional employment. Must be quick at figures, and good writer.—Apply by letter only,
R., 27, Clements-lane, E.C.

EVANGELIST wanted, by Gospel Temperance Union, to give Spiritual and Temperance addresses, and work in connection with hall holding 1,200. Opportunity for Christian with small income.—PARKER, Fell-road, Croydon.

MATRON.—Wanted, for a small Home, a Matron, capable of training and managing young girls. An abstainer and decided Christian desired.—Miss TURSTED, Lewes.

PRINTERS. — Working Foreman Compositor wanted. Scottish country news and jobbing office. Capable of taking control. Energetic. Christian principles. Testimonials. State wages. Week 48 hours.
Box 3628, Sell's Advertising Offices, London.

A KITCHEN WORKING HOUSE-KEEPER wanted, for a farm-house. A servant kept.—Mrs. COLEMAN, Butter-milk Hall, Buntingford, Herts.

HOSPITAL TRAINED NURSES wanted, for district work. Also a surgical, medical, and monthly private Nurse for Burton-on-Trent Nursery Institution.—LADY SUPERINTENDENT, 41, Duke-street, Burton-on-Trent.

NURSE WANTED for three little Girls, from 8 to 3 years of age, and a baby five weeks old. Good needlewoman. Wages £18 to £20. No beer nor beer money. Country. Three other servants kept.
Mrs. MAXWELL, Thorpe Rectory, Tamworth.

A CHRISTIAN PERSON wanted, for household work, and attendance on invalid Lady.—State full particulars to
A. B., 8, Stafford-road, Swanage, Dorset.

A CHRISTIAN NIGHT NURSE wanted (trained) for Mildmay Mission Hospital, Turville-street, Bethnal-green.
Apply to MATRON.

A LADY wanted immediately, to assist in the Y.W.C.A. Home. No salary.
51, Old Steine, Brighton.

CAN ANY LADY recommend a clean, steady Girl, about 20, who has a fair knowledge of cooking. Two in family. Housemaid kept. State wages.
S., North's Library, Hove, Brighton.

AS PLAIN COOK in a Gentleman's family, a steady respectable person wanted. Wages £16. All found.—Apply by letter first, to Mrs. G. M. ROBINSON, Long Heath, Watford, Herts.

A GOOD PLAIN COOK wanted (for Devonshire). Christian and abstainer.—Apply by letter to
C. A. M., 13, Cathcart-hill, Highgate, London.

GOOD PLAIN COOK wanted. Also PARLOURMAID. Ages about 30. Wages £20 and £18. Dissenters.
4, The Grove, Highgate-road, N.W.

COOK WANTED, for Harrogate, by October 1. A thorough good Plain Cook. Clever manager. A good baker. Assistance given. Abstainer valued.—Mrs. WENTWORTH FAWKES, Frant Rectory, Sussex.

WILL ANY LADY recommend a nice clean strong Girl, about 16, for clergyman's family, to go between nursery and kitchen. The girl is required for Harrogate. Wages given £8.—Mrs. WENTWORTH FAWKES, Frant Rectory, Sussex.

GENERAL SERVANT wanted, in a small family; one who would be glad to improve herself under cook-housekeeper. Some housework. Active, early riser, abstainer. Age 20 to 25.
UNDERCROFT, Reigate, Surrey.

AN EXPERIENCED General Servant, between 25 and 30, who can cook plainly well for a Widow Lady, living alone. No fringe; early riser. No washing. Parlour-maid kept.
Clayton, Cumberland-park, Acton, Middlesex.

TRUSTWORTHY, ACTIVE General Servant wanted, of Christian principles, who can cook well. Small family. Early dinner. Housemaid kept. All found except beer. Abstainer preferred. Age about 30. Wages £20. Must have good personal character. Write stating age, length of character, why leaving, &c., to B. C., care of Mr. Jenkins, Stationer, &c., The Ridgway, Wimbledon, S.W.

AS SINGLE-HANDED HOUSEMAID. —Can any Lady recommend a good single-handed Housemaid, who thoroughly understands her work. Age about 30. A Christian servant desired.
Lady A., Neale Lodge, Upper Norwood.

AS HOUSEMAID and to wait at table, in a quiet, private family, a respectable young Woman wanted. Wages £18 to £20. Good personal character indispensable. Dissenter preferred. —Address, stating age, length of character, and full particulars, M. S., Post-office, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

A HOUSEMAID wanted, for the London College of Divinity. Must be strong and healthy. Member of the Church of England. Age from 25 to 30. Wages £16, all found.—Miss CLARKE, Willmount, Athenry, Co. Galway, Ireland.

WANTED, in Christian Private Dressmaking Association, First and Second Hands, outdoors. First Hand entire management, measuring, fitting, &c. Second Hand good machinist.—Letters, Madame CATHERINE, Manager, 21, Norfolk-road, St. John's Wood.

GOOD PLAIN COOKS wanted (town and country), House-Parlourmaids, Nurses, good General Servants.—Miss MAULDEN'S (late missionary) Registry and Home, Church-street, Paddington-green. Please send stamped envelope for reply.

To Let, Apartments, &c.

PERCY'S HOTEL, LONDON.
40, Bedford-place, Bloomsbury-sq., W.C.

This First-class Private Hotel is highly recommended by the Bishop of Algoma; Rev. M. E. Thorold, M.A., Leicester; Dr. Georgens, Ouchy, Lausanne; J. Bevan and Mrs. Braithwaite, 312, Camden-road, and many others. Beds from 1s. 6d. Tea, 1s. 3d. Tariff on application.
Mrs. LLOYD HARRIS, Proprietor.

LONDON.
WEST CENTRAL HOTEL.
(First-class Temperance), 97, 99, 101, 103, Southampton-row, Russell-square.—Highly commended by Sir William Fox, K.C.M.G.; Rev. Charles Williams; Rev. John Cairns, D.D.; Rev. A. B. Grosart, D.D.; Rev. H. S. Paterson, M.D.; Rev. Forbes E. Winslow, M.A.; T. W. Russell, Esq., M.P.; Dr. Norman Kerr; Frederick Sherlock, Esq.; Dr. Ziemann; Miss Haslam, C.E.T.S.; Mrs. Lucas Shadwell, &c., &c. Plain Breakfast or Tea 1s. 3d. Beds, 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. Printed Tariff on application to FREDERIC SMITH, Proprietor.

LONDON.—First-class Private Hotel, 20, Bedford-place, Russell-square, W.C.—Patronised and highly recommended by Bishop and Mrs. Newman, Leamington; the Rev. J. R. O. West, M.A., Manchester; Tudor Trevor, Esq., Leeds; George Ward, Esq., Manchester; Thomas B. Dale, Esq., J.P., Warwick; James Baly, Esq., and many other friends. Tariff on application.—GRACE PERCY, Proprietress, late Librarian to the Warwick Library, and Grand-daughter of the late Rev. J. W. Percy, Warwick.

HUTCHINSON'S PRIVATE HOTEL, 24, Guildford-street, Russell-square, the most central position for all parts of London; and at 24, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C. Extensively patronised and strongly recommended. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Weekly boarders taken.

W. TAVERNER, Temperance Hotel, 41 and 43, Judd-street, Euston-road, London, W.C. Five minutes from G.N., Mid., and N.W. Railways. Beds from 1s. 6d. Plain breakfast or tea, 1s. Tariff and testimonials on application. Patronised by ministers of all denominations.

LONDON.-LAW'S BOARDING HOUSE, 15, Thavies-inn, Holborn-circus.—Quiet and homely. Centrally situated for business or pleasure. Five minutes' walk of St. Paul's Cathedral and General Post Office. Terms moderate.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—A limited number of Ministers and their wives, and other Christians, are received at a comfortable private residence.—For terms address,
H., Fern Lea, Pevensey-road.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—Boarding Establishment, Meliora House, 20 and 21, Carisbrooke-road. Conducted by the Widow of the late Rev. F. WAGSTAFFE, and Mrs. LOCKE. Good table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Near sea, gardens, and rail.

INTEMPERANCE.—A private Home at the seaside for limited number of the upper and higher middle classes in a cheerful little spot where Dipsomania, Choralism, Nervous Debility, &c., has been long and successfully treated. Christian influence; home comforts and amusements; highest references.—MEDICUS, Messrs. Pascoe, 28, Stokes Croft, Bristol.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Clergyman's Widow, who has had great experience in nursing, would gladly receive two or three Ladies, invalid or otherwise, in her comfortable home. Terms from 25s. South aspect.
Mrs. H., Estens, Surrey-road South, Bournemouth.

ILFRACOMBE.—Foster's Boarding House. Close to sea. Home comforts. Highly recommended by Clergy and Ministers. Conducted on Christian and Temperance principles. Terms, 42s. per week. No extras.

☛ BRIGHTON.—Sussex House Boarding Establishment, pleasantly situated in the Old Steine, having a sea view, and the beautiful Steine Gardens in front. Near to Pavilion, Aquarium, and piers. Liberal table, with every home comfort.
Mr. & Mrs. BOX, 58, Old Steine.

MRS. PARSONS returns sincere thanks for all kindness from Christian friends, and begs to say she has removed to larger premises.—(Private) Convalescent Home, Shaftesbury House, Seaside-road, Eastbourne.

ROTHESAY, N.B.—House of Rest. A Health Resort and Hydropathic Establishment for Christians. Summer terms, board, lodging, and baths, from 30s. per week.—Send for prospectus to COLIN CAMPBELL, Argyle Lodge.

WORTHING HOME OF REST for Christians. Close to sea, with good garden. Every comfort. Services on the ground. Terms 25s. to 2 guineas.—LADY SUPERINTENDENT, Rutherford Lodge, Worthing.

INTEMPERANCE.—Private Home for six Ladies. Terms from 1½ to 3 guineas weekly. Highest professional references given, for which, with other particulars, apply to
Miss PUDNEY, Buxton House, Earls Colne, Essex.

BROADSTAIRS.—Seafield Boarding Establishment.—Best situation in town. Close to sea. Liberal table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Highly recommended by all who have visited. Special terms for permanent boarders.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Large and airy suites of Apartments. Close to principal churches, and near pier and gardens. Hot and cold baths. Terms moderate.—Mrs. MOON, St. Peter's-road.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Mancetter, West Cliff.—Superior Boarding House. Best position. Close to the sea. Very comfortable house. Moderate terms.—PROPRIETRESS.

BUXTON, Derbyshire.—Alpine Boarding House, pleasantly situated near baths and gardens. One or two Ladies would be received on very low terms permanently, or for winter months.
Proprietress, Miss PALMER.

LAUSANNE.—The President Continental Division Y.W.C.A., desires to recommend most highly the "Pension de Famille," 7, Rue Beau Séjour, of Madame HENRIQUET, widow of a devoted French Pastor. It commands fine view of Lake and Alps. Five to six francs a day. Mlle. HENRIQUET gives lessons in French and music when desired.

HYDROPATHIC HEALTH RESORT FOR CHRISTIANS.—Charming scenery. Moorland air among the Cotswold hills. Highly recommended.—For prospectus and terms, apply to S. PYALL DIPROSE, Pitchcombe View, Stroud, Gloucester.

COMFORTABLE CHRISTIAN HOME, at a superior farm residence, for Lady or Gentleman, in healthy neighbourhood in North Hants. Bath-room, phaeton, shooting, fishing.
M. G., 20, Trafalgar-road, Old Kent-road, London.

GUINES EN CALAIS.—English Home for Invalids or others needing quiet, rest, or care. Children received during holidays, or ladies wishing to study French. Near extensive woods. Terms moderate.
Les Anglaises, Rue de l'Ecole, Guines.

BANKS OF THE WYE.—Hoarwithy. —Harp Temperance Hotel. Comfortable boarding house for a quiet family. Terms very moderate.—Apply to the Manageress, Mrs. Shaw, Hoarwithy, Ross.

HULME CLIFF COLLEGE, CURBAR, in the Peak of Derbyshire.—This beautiful and healthful summer resort for Christian families will be open from the middle of July till the middle of September. Climate bracing. Scenery lovely. Excursions of great interest. Close to Chatsworth and Monsal Dale, Matlock, Buxton, and Eyam. Comfortable accommodation; large grounds (through which the river Derwent flows), with farm attached. The house will be open for visitors until September 28. Inclusive terms from £2 2s. a week.
SECRETARY, Harley House, Bow, E.

BEXHILL.—Residential and temporary Home of Rest, for Christians, Station-road. Bracing air. Sea views. Pretty scenery. Including board 1 to 2 guineas per week. Reduction in exceptional cases.

QUIET HOME with partial board, for Gentleman, close to station, near omnibus and car. Cleanliness and comfort studied. No children. Bath, piano. Good references.
99, Paulet-road, Camberwell.

CHELTENHAM.—Two good Furnished Rooms vacant in small Training Institution for servants. Good cooking and attendance; use of gas. Terms open to arrangement.—Mrs. RIDDLE, Rose Cottage, Leckhampton, Cheltenham.

BABBACOMBE DOWNS, Torquay. —Lovely scenery. Board and residence. Private sitting-room if required. Suitable for one or two Ladies. Terms moderate.
Mrs. H., 6, Sydenham-terrace, Babbacombe.

PAKEFIELD, LOWESTOFT.—To Let, furnished, from September 9, for a few weeks, eight-roomed House on the cliff. Bracing air. Terms 3½ guineas per week.
W., Florence House, Pakefield, Lowestoft.

ISLE OF WIGHT.—Small semi-detached private House to be Let, furnished, from September 1. Terms moderate. Short distance from beach.
ALFRED ST. JOHN, Totland Bay, Isle of Wight.

Y.W.C.A. SEASIDE HOME for Governesses, Christian Workers, young Ladies in businesses. Liberal board. Four meals daily. Terms 14s. weekly. Few vacancies for September.
MATRON, Y.W.C.A., 8, Clarendon-road, Southsea.

SEASIDE HOME.—Bracing air.— Lady with two little children desires charge of others; or would receive young ladies. Every care taken. Highest recommendations.—Mrs. SURGEY, 8, Mount Pleasant, Gorleston, Suffolk.

REV. P. & MRS. WARSCHAWSKI offer a happy Christian Home to two Ladies or Gentlemen. Healthy locality. Close to tram, omnibus, and rail to City and West-end. Terms, one guinea and 25s.
11, Torriano-avenue, Camden-road, N.W.

TO BE LET.—Furnished Apartments on Richmond-hill, close to the Park and Terrace Gardens. Every home comfort. Good cooking and attendance. Or full board at inclusive moderate terms can be arranged.
HOME, Herald Office, Richmond, Surrey.

TO BE LET, on easy terms, with attendance, during September and October, a well-furnished and convenient House, delightfully situated at Arnside, Westmoreland. Apply immediately,
Miss DREWETT, 54, Park-street, Luton.

TO LET, Furnished Apartments, in the country. Sitting and two large Bed-rooms. Ten minutes' walk from station. Most healthy and pleasant neighbourhood. Terms 25s.
Mrs. BURNETT, Park House, Glastonbury.

COMFORTABLE HOME.—Two furnished bed-rooms, box and sitting-room. Attention, comfort, cleanliness. One guinea weekly. Pleasantly situated, large garden, conservatory. No children or other lodgers.—BETA, Blenkhorn's Dairy, Grove-place, High-road, Leyton, Essex.

COMFORTABLE HOME, with partial board, offered to Gentleman or two friends (Christian abstainers). Piano and bath. Pleasantly situated; quiet and healthy. Terms moderate.
53, Wray-crescent, Tollington-park, N.

COMFORTABLE HOME for two young Men. Separate bed-rooms, use of piano, and partial board if required. Close to Cambridge Heath Station. Terms low.
S. LUDFORD, Crescent Lodge, Oval, Hackney.

CHRISTIAN HOME & REGISTRY. —Miss LOVEJOY offers comfortable Home to Servants seeking situations. Lodgings, 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. weekly, in compartments. Meals provided moderately. Registry charge for ladies, 1s. entry and 2s. 6d. and 3s. 6d. when suited. Servants free until suited. Established 1881.
32, Sydney-street, Fulham-road, London, S.W.

FURNISHED, one or two bed-rooms with sitting-room. Pleasantly situated, overlooking the Forest. Use of piano. Suit married couple or friends. Good cooking. Near rail and trams. Terms moderate.—M. F., 3, Malvern-terrace, St. Paul's-road, Tottenham.

A NICELY-FURNISHED, well-appointed Home offered two young or middle-aged Ladies with Widow Lady. No family. Every comfort studied. Locality good: cheerful, healthy, extensive views. Twenty minutes' walk to Downs.
BETA, Lindon, Cotham-grove, Bristol.

BOARD AND RESIDENCE, or Residence only, in a quiet, comfortable cottage. One bed-room, with use of two sitting-rooms. Terms moderate. References required.
9, Rosefield-street, Leamington Spa.

UNFURNISHED DRAWING-ROOM FLOOR, two or three rooms. Large, lofty, and convenient. Close to Finsbury-park and station. —Young Women's Christian Institute, 1A, Coleridge-road, Seven Sisters'-road, N.

A LADY seeking Board and Residence at the seaside, can be received in a school upon moderate terms. Pleasant and comfortable home. Well recommended.
PRINCIPAL, Clive House, Havelock-road, Hastings.

Miscellaneous.

ANXIOUS INQUIRERS.—Numbers have received blessing through writing. All anxious ones are invited to write.—2 Cor. i. 3, 4.
EVANGELIST, Clapham, S.W.

ASTHMA.—Persons suffering from Asthma, Difficulty of Breathing, &c., are invited to try (free of charge) a remedy for affording immediate relief.—C., Mr. G. A. KEYWORTH, Hastings.

A YOUNG CHRISTIAN offers gratuitously to lend his Magic Lantern and apparatus, together with services, on Saturday evenings, during winter months.
ARTHUR JACKSON, 116, Southgate-road, N.

THE SECRETARY of the Y.W.C.A. Business Employment Agency will be glad to send reliable Dressmakers and Needlewomen to Ladies' houses by the day or week. Also to receive orders for plain and fancy needlework.
Miss HALL, 316, Regent-street.

UMBRELLAS RE-COVERED FROM
2s. EACH.
IF YOUR UMBRELLA WANTS RE-COVERING send it by Parcels Post (with Postal Order enclosed) to STRONG BROS., Umbrella Makers, Redhill, Surrey, who will re-cover it and return it as good as new by next post, carriage paid. Good strong twill, ladies', 2s., gents', 2s. 6d.; good alpaca, ladies', 3s., gents', 3s. 6d.; strong durable silk, ladies', 4s. 6d., gents', 5s. Patterns post free. Reference kindly permitted to the Rev. W. J. Fowell, Redhill.

BYWATER, TANQUERAY & CO., 79, Queen Victoria-street, London (late BYWATER, PERRY & CO.), are Agents for Residents abroad Missionaries, Chaplains, &c., in every part of the world. Goods and Outfits supplied at Wholesale prices. Shipping and passages arranged. Banking in all its branches. Full descriptive Catalogue post free. Specially appointed Agents to seven of the leading English and American Missionary Societies. 2,000 References.

COLONIES.—Openings for Pupils on good stock and grain farms, and larger estates in Canada, the United States, and Tasmania. Pamphlet free.—FORD, RATHBONE & CO., 21, Finsbury-pavement, London.

A MARVELLOUS TEA.—Our "Combination" Blend at 2s. per lb. is not only economical, but is peculiarly adapted to the London and Suburban water. No householder should be without it. Our 1s. 8d. also strongly recommended. Teas suitable for Ireland at 1s. 6d., 1s. 8d., 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s. Any of above Teas can be had in 5-lb., 10-lb. tins, &c. (tins free), post or carriage paid anywhere in United Kingdom on receipt of cash. Agents wanted.—THE BELFAST ANGLO TEA COMPANY, 6, George-yard, Fenchurch-street, London.

TO LADIES WITH LIMITED MEANS. —The Advertiser's son, a tea planter, seeks well recommended Agents for the sale of his Teas. Liberal commission.
Colonel MORTON, 2, Priory-parade, Cheltenham.

IRON MISSION ROOMS, &c., erected on the most reasonable terms, by R. SAUNDERS, 127, Hungerford-road, London, N. Estimates and designs free. 25 years' practical experience. Also Churches and Schools, &c. Best workmanship.

FOUR LECTURES.—A Voice from the Wilderness. The Experience of Israel, a Comfort and Warning to God's People.—Further particulars, G. REYNOLDS GILL, Lady Margaret-road, London, N.W.

O'BRIEN'S
IRISH SHIRTS
UNSURPASSED FOR VALUE.
Their "SPECIAL," 39s. per half dozen,
Carriage Paid. A Sample Shirt, 6s. 9d.
Sizes 14 in. to 16½ in. neck. Shirts made to order.
GEORGE O'BRIEN & CO.,
MANUFACTURERS, BELFAST.

CARDS,
PRINTED IN BLUE AND GOLD,

2s. 6d. per 100, or 18 for Sixpence.

1. Six Short Rules for Young Christians. By BROWNLOW NORTH.
2. Rules for Daily Life.
3. Oh! for a Perfect Trust.
4. The Christian's Entrance into Glory.
5. Which?
6. My Prayer.
7. Pray, Always Pray.
8. Wishing You a Happy New Year.
9. Our Warrant for Coming to Christ.
10. Eight Loving Hints.
11. To Know Thee More.
12. Make Sure of Christ.
13. Looking unto Jesus.
14. Grace for the Graceless.
15. Peace, Perfect Peace.
16. My Heart's Desire.
17. "Who Loved Me."
18. Jesus is Near.

Packet of 18, assorted, 6d.

DRUMMOND'S TRACT DEPOT, Stirling;
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & Co.

NEW COPYRIGHT TREATISE.

BY A PRACTISING PHYSICIAN.

DYSPEPSIA:
WHY SUFFERED.

Also, reliable and fully detailed Dietary and Medicinal Treatment of Indigestion and associated disorders, affording an absolute remedy and cure.

64 pp. 8vo., 1s.; smaller size, 2d. post free from Publishers,
HAMILTON & CO., Oxford-street, Southampton.

DAILY LIGHT ON THE DAILY PATH.
IN THE VERY WORDS OF SCRIPTURE.

Two Volumes. Morning Hour, and Evening Hour. Sold separately or in sets.

"These are very precious little books, and few more suitable gifts could be found."
Christian.

Small Edition, each volume, cloth, 1s.; French morocco, gilt edges, 2s.
Large Type Edition, each volume, cloth extra, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.
Various Styles in calf, morocco, and German calf.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, 15, Paternoster-row.

DAINTREE & CO.,
DYERS, LONDON.

The LARGEST WORKS IN LONDON for Dyeing and Cleaning in every Branch.
98, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.; 365, Southwark-park-road, S.E.; 44, Leicester-square, W.C.

Carts Collect and Deliver to all parts.—PRICE LISTS BY POST.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL.

WRITE FOR PAMPHLET, 43, SNOW HILL, E.C.

NEAVE'S

FOR INFANTS,
INVALIDS,
GROWING CHILDREN,
AND THE AGED.

FOOD.

Publications.

17th Thousand. Price 1d.

THE NEAR RETURN OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST. By CHEYNE BRADY.
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & Co.

MRS. GRIMKE'S TEXT CARDS.—To be had from Mrs. GRIMKE, Prestwich, Manchester, who likes orders sent to her direct, or from E. KAUFMANN, 129, Cheapside; or booksellers.

Neatly printed Tinted Paper.
Price 6d. per dozen; 3s. 6d. per 100.

With God All Things are Possible.
A PRAYER-MEETING TESTIMONY.

This personal testimony was publicly given at one of the meetings held by Messrs. Moody and Sankey. It is here reproduced for the help and encouragement of others.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-bldgs.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Terms for Advertisements
IN
"The Christian"
(PREPAID)

Miscellaneous Advertisements in small type are charged at the following rates:—

Not exceeding 30 Words 3 0
" 39 " 3 9
" 48 " 4 6

And 9d. for every additional line of nine words or under, the address being in all cases charged for.

CHRISTIAN WOMEN AND THEIR WORK.

FIDELIA FISKE.
Records of a Consecrated Life.

Edited by REV. W. GUEST. With Engraved Portrait.

PRESENTATION EDITION—Large Type, Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.; with Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

Special Cheap Edition—Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"This is a biography of no commonplace character. Miss Fiske was a descendant of godly ancestors, and her life is a record of self-sacrifice and usefulness such as is rarely met with. Both in America and in connection with the mission in Persia her labours were abundantly blessed. The story of her life ought to be widely circulated."—Methodist Recorder.

"A book after our own heart, a veritable history of a consecrated life. Here is truth stranger and more thrilling than fiction, the incidents of a missionary career which are to the glory of God and of his truth. . . . Buy it and read it, pray over it and imitate it, is our advice to all, and especially to our sisters in the Lord, who will do well to be followers of her in her faith and patience, her consecration, and self-sacrificing love."
REV. C. H. SPURGEON, in The Sword and Trowel.

DOROTHEA TRÜDEL;
or, The Prayer of Faith.

With Life-like Portrait.

PRESENTATION EDITION—Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

Special Cheap Edition—Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"DOROTHEA TRÜDEL appears to have been a simple-minded woman, of remarkable devotedness and faith. She became deeply penetrated with the striking passage of St. James, 'The prayer of faith shall save the sick.' Led by circumstances to minister to the afflicted, she carried into practical action the settled conviction of her heart, and in 'hundreds' of cases soul and body were alike healed without other visible means."—The Record.

PUNROOTY;
or, The Gospel Winning its Way among the Women of India.

By CLARA M. S. LOWE. Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"A most interesting account of Miss Reade's mission work in India, showing what God can do by means of a really devoted woman. These are the sort of books which Christians should read and circulate as 'light reading.' They are far more instructive and interesting too than the religious fiction, which is far too popular."—Christian Progress.

"We have been charmed by this book. We could not lay it aside till we had read it through. Exciting as a novel, it stimulates a reader's faith, prayer, consecration, and love of souls."—Star in the East.

MARY LYON.
Recollections of a Noble Woman.

By FIDELIA FISKE. With Engraved Portrait.

PRESENTATION EDITION—Out of Print.

Special Cheap Edition—Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"The work is full of quiet power, rich spiritual experience, and practical guidance."—Oldham Chronicle.

"The volume will be prized by all who can appreciate devotedness to Christ; and we trust that it will lead some to employ to better account than in days bygone the talents entrusted to them by their Divine Master."—Weekly Review.

"This is a biography worthy to be written, and a book well written. Miss Lyon was a saintly woman, whom God called to the work of teaching, and whose instructions were eminently useful to her pupils. Ladies engaged in tuition, mothers of girls, and girls themselves, will do well to read this life of Mary Lyon."—Wesleyan Advocate.

TELL JESUS.
Recollections of Emily Gosse.

By ANNA SHIPTON,
Author of "Waiting Hours," "Sure Mercies of David," &c., &c.

Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.; with Gilt Edges, 2s.

Special Cheap Edition—Tinted Covers, 6d.

"Calculated to produce a certain impression upon the hearts of true Christians that will be greatly beneficial to them throughout the whole of their future course. We sincerely commend the author, whether in poetry or prose, both for her composition and her theme."—The Sword and Trowel.

"A life spent in loving, intimate, and uninterrupted communion with a personal Lord."—Christian Times.

FAITHFUL RECORDS.
Visits to the Sick and Suffering.

By E. GILPIN. Illustrated.

Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

A Volume of Narratives specially adapted for perusal in the Sick-room.

"A series of very earnestly-written tracts; containing narratives on vital subjects, printed in good bold type. . . . Cannot fail of being useful."
Wesleyan Times.

"Founded on facts, and given with great simplicity and power."—The Freeman.

These "RECORDS" may also be had as a series of Twelve Tracts, in a Packet, price One Shilling.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

SHOPPING BY POST!!

Ladies', Children's and Gentlemen's Dress Fabrics

DIRECT from the DARLINGTON LOOMS, SAVING FROM 25 to 50 Per Cent.

LADIES are invited to write for

ONE THOUSAND PATTERNS

OF THE BEAUTIFUL

Darlington Dress Materials

AS WORN BY THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

Sent POST FREE to any address in the United Kingdom

◆◆◆

HENRY PEASE & Co.'s SUCCESSORS are now ready to deliver their New Dress Goods for the Present Season, fresh from their Looms, comprising all the latest Fashionable Novelties in Pure Wool, together with their celebrated Cross-Warp Serges and Gold Medal Cashmeres, renowned for their Beautiful Appearance and Hard-Wearing Qualities. These splendid goods are SOLD DIRECT TO THE PUBLIC without the intervention of Wholesale Merchants, Drapers, Agents, or Middlemen, all intermediate profits being given to the purchaser.

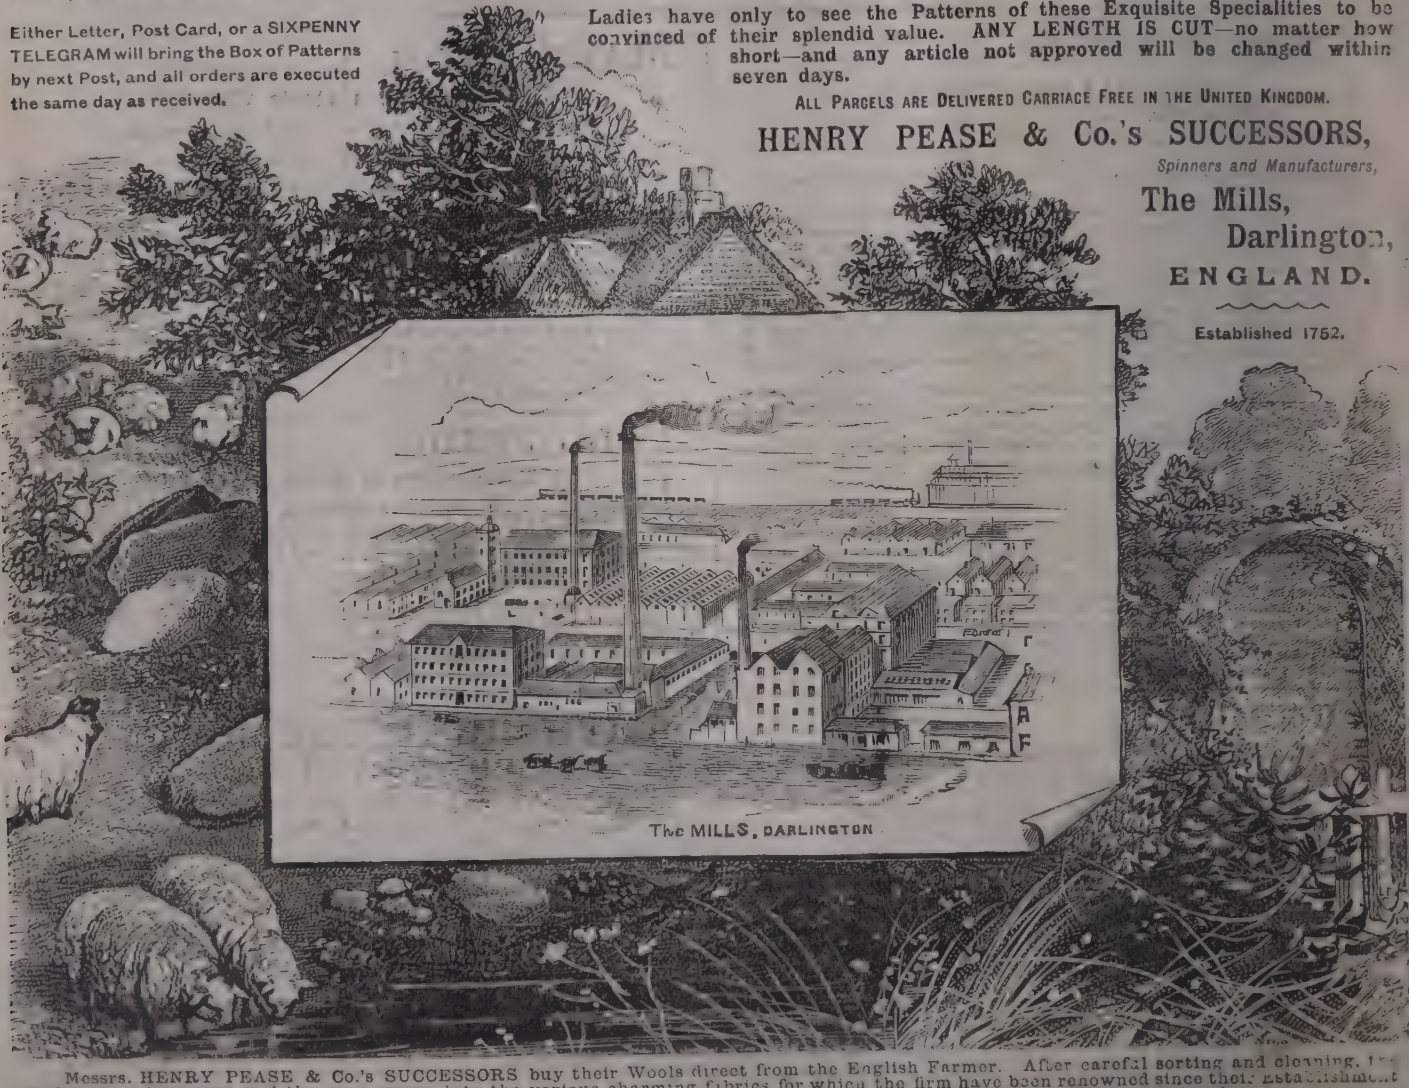
Either Letter, Post Card, or a SIXPENNY TELEGRAM will bring the Box of Patterns by next Post, and all orders are executed the same day as received.

Ladies have only to see the Patterns of these Exquisite Specialities to be convinced of their splendid value. ANY LENGTH IS CUT—no matter how short—and any article not approved will be changed within seven days.

All Parcels are Delivered Carriage Free in the United Kingdom.

HENRY PEASE & Co.'s SUCCESSORS,
Spinners and Manufacturers,
The Mills,
Darlington,
ENGLAND.

Established 1752.



The MILLS, DARLINGTON

Messrs. HENRY PEASE & Co.'s SUCCESSORS buy their Wools direct from the English Farmer. After careful sorting and cleaning, the wool is spun into yarn and the yarn woven into the various charming fabrics for which the firm have been renowned since their establishment in 1752,—the entire process of manufacture being carried on in their own Mills at Darlington, employing more than 1000 hands.

The Christian:

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED "THE REVIVAL."

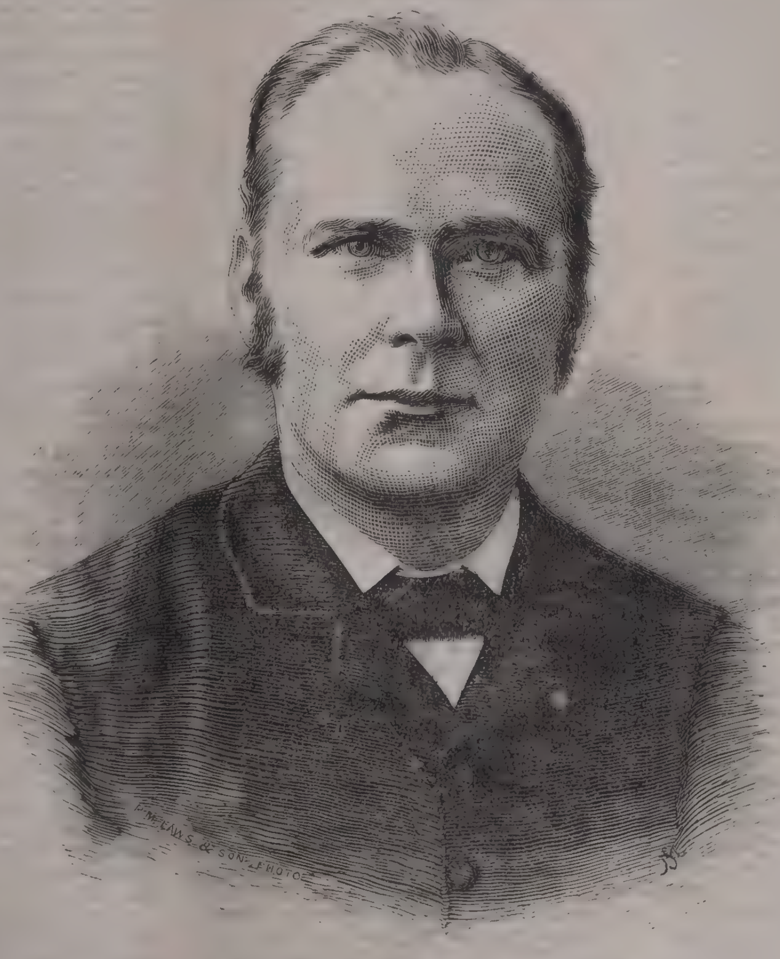
A Weekly Record of Christian Life, Christian Testimony, Christian Work and Missionary Enterprise.

No. 919.] LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS, E.C. FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1887. REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. AS A NEWSPAPER. [ONE PENNY. POST FREE, 1½d.

MR. HENRY THORNE,

Travelling Secretary of the Y.M.C.A.

OF late years a field altogether new has been opened up in connection with our Y.M.C.A.'s, and in this field Mr. Henry Thorne has long been a prominent labourer. The importance of this field cannot be exaggerated, and it is not too much to say that, if our young men can be moulded as is sought to be done through the agency of these Associations, a change will be wrought which will have a wonderful influence for good on the future of the country.



P. M. LAWS & SON PHOTO

(From Photograph by Messrs. P. M. Laws & Son, Newcastle.)

HENRY THORNE was brought up to the stage, and when still but a lad acted minor parts at his father's theatres. In this profession his father and brothers have won fame, but such fame was not for him. "Man proposes but God disposes."

When about sixteen years of age, he attended a social party at Margate, when he met with some young people who were being prepared for confirmation. Desiring to conform to the usages of the Church of England, he applied to the curate of St. John's Church, Margate (Rev. Robert Brown, M.A., now rector of St. Clement's, Ipswich), with a view to preparation for the confirmation service. At a meeting with this earnest and devoted servant of the Lord, Luke xv. was read, and while it was being expounded, the arrow of conviction was sent home to the heart of the young candidate. The point of the arrow was the resolution of the prodigal, "I will arise and go to my father." Rising from his seat, young Thorne went to the Father with a prayer for mercy. The good clergyman directed him to the Saviour, and he found "joy and peace in believing."

Thus, in a moment, the stream which had been running strong in one direction was diverted into another channel, and this at the prompting of a voice as strange and mysterious, and as little heard by others, as that which said to Abraham, "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee." Previously there had been the trust in self, as the architect of his own fortunes. Now there must be faith in God, as the unseen, yet so near, guide of life. Before, the thought had been how to please men, how best to cultivate mind and voice with this object in view. The "new man" feels that the praise of men becomes as the vapour that soon passeth away—he will henceforth strive to live as seeing Him who is invisible—his delight now to listen to that "still small voice," the eager question ever rising to his lips, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?"

This crisis in his life led the young actor to abandon his profession, and for some time he earned his living in a secular calling, working in his spare time as Sunday-school teacher, open-air preacher, and as honorary secretary of the Margate branch of the Y.M.C.A., which he helped to form.

Before he was twenty years of age, he was busily engaged as an evangelist, taking meetings as the Lord opened the way in Buckinghamshire, Sussex, and Kent. He was often in sore straits financially, but was never suffered to want, his needs being met again and again by remarkable interpositions of Providence. For several years Mr. Thorne laboured as a missionary at Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Here he established what afterwards became well known as the Ouseburn Mission. Great blessing rested upon the work done here amongst the lapsed masses of the people. Many were converted; Sunday-schools, cottage-meetings, penny banks, temperance societies, and other agencies, religious and philanthropic, were started, and a commodious mission house was erected to meet the requirements of the work.

In 1872 Mr. Thorne entered upon what promises to be his life-work, succeeding Mr. Hind-Smith as General Secretary of the Leeds Branch of the Y.M.C.A. Here he laboured with much acceptance and blessing for a number of years, and became acquainted with Mr. Moody, Rev. W. Hay Aitken, and other eminent evangelists. The rousing missions in which Mr. Thorne took part during his residence in Leeds rekindled his former love for direct evangelistic work, and, with the understanding that he was to be free to engage in such work as the way might be opened, he accepted the appointment he now holds as a representative of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A., which has its headquarters at Exeter Hall. This appointment was made in 1881, and has been followed by the most remarkable results. In the course of the six years which have intervened, Mr. Thorne has laboured in more than a hundred towns in England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales, and has visited the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man, and a considerable number of towns on the Continent of Europe. The attendances at many of the meetings held have been enormous, and everywhere large numbers of young men and others have been led to the experience of newness of life.

At Ipswich Mr. Thorne met his old friend Rev. Robert Brown, and addressed a meeting of young men in the vestry of St. Clement's Church, taking for his subject the words, "I will arise and go to my Father." This portion of Scripture—blessed to his own soul many years before at Margate—was, it is believed, blessed to others here.

During Mr. Moody's last mission in London, Mr. Thorne was set apart by the National Council to take such part as Mr. Moody might direct. He rendered important service during a period of nine months in conducting men's meetings, overflow meetings, and in personal dealing with young men, and Mr. Moody afterwards wrote: "I have known Mr. Thorne for a number of years, and esteem him much for his own worth and his work's sake."

Mr. Thorne never forgets that he is the agent of the Y.M.C.A. He works under the auspices of the Association, and seeks by all legitimate methods to promote their welfare. Many very important branches have been formed as the result of his efforts, and others have been quickened and helped. His plan is to get the committee of the local Association to form a committee representing the churches to co-operate with them in this work, and he uses all possible means to garner the result of his work into the fellowship of the churches.

Mr. Thorne's district extends from the south of Warwickshire to the north of Lancashire, and includes Wales and the Isle of Man, but he has the privilege of going beyond these limits to any part of England during three months of each year.

During Mr. R. T. Booth's mission to Leeds Mr. Thorne put on the blue ribbon, and he has done much to promote the cause of temperance. He became a total abstainer shortly after his conversion, as the result of a sermon preached by Dr. Close, the late Dean of Carlisle. He is an accomplished sacred orator. His style is spiritually forcible and sensible. He uses anecdotes wisely, to make the theological framework of his address the more attractive and interesting. Added to this, he has genuine sympathy, especially with young men, to whom his ministry is much blessed.

Mr. Thorne has prepared several papers to be read at various Conferences of Y.M.C.A. delegates, besides publishing two or three works of more than passing interest. Amongst others may be mentioned "Bible Readings on the Gospel of Mark." He is also a frequent contributor to some of the monthly magazines.

WHAT LIVE I FOR?

I live for those who love me,
For those who know me true;
For the heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit too;
For the cause that lacks assistance,
For the wrong that needs resistance,
For the future in the distance,
For the good that I can do.

SYMPOSIUM on the SECOND ADVENT

In this article we purpose drawing the attention of our readers to a few of the more important aspects of the discussion upon the Second Advent which for some weeks past has been proceeding in the pages of The British Weekly. No one will deny the rapidly growing interest in the subject of the Second Advent. The change of late years which has come over the minds of evangelical Christians on this question is very marked. And now the flow of the tide is more decisive than ever.

The signs of the times, as Canon Fausset indicates, agree with Daniel's prophecy as to "the time of the end." It would, indeed, seem as if the long-sealed book were being opened at last. The results of deepened and widened inquiry thus far have been mainly in favour of pre-millennial beliefs. Nor can we think that the recent symposium in The British Weekly will limit the flow of the tide in that direction. Everywhere, so far as we can judge, and we have noted for many years the modern trend in this respect, there is a stirring up of expectation in view of the near approach of the coming King; the hope of the Church is more and more being directed to the personal Advent of the Bridegroom; there is the looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of Christ, the concentration of desire in the one cry, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

With respect to the symposium with which we are at present concerned, the whole contention has centred on the one inquiry, Will the Second Advent be before the Millennium? the affirmative view being taken by Canon Fausset, Mr. and Mrs. Grattan Guinness and Professor Godet, while the negative aspect has been maintained by Professor Agar Beet and Principals Edwards and Brown.

It is certainly unfortunate for the negative side of this discussion that those representing it are so often at issue one with another. Thus, in respect of Rev. xx., which is brought forward more prominently than any other passage in this symposium, the three negatives negative each other's positions. And what is still more unfortunate for their cause, the leader, Professor Beet, has his principal quarrel with reputed Scripture itself. In his opening letter he admits that Rev. xx. is against himself, but declines to allow a few verses of what he calls the most mysterious book of the New Testament "to outweigh the plain and harmonious teaching of the Gospels and the Epistles." Such a course was far from assuring, but worse follows; for, in his summing up, Professor Beet places the entire Book of Revelation under the ban of modern scholarship. "Few scholars," he says, "will deny that its authorship is involved in serious difficulty. Consequently, any doctrine which rests only on the Book of Revelation rests on a foundation altogether different from, and inferior to, that of all the great doctrines of the Gospels. This question of authorship led me to approach the matter in discussion from the solid platform of the agreement of the other New Testament writers." It pains us to transcribe such a sentiment as this. Certainly the scholarship of the kingdom of God has never arrived at the conclusion alleged, either in this or any foregoing age. Besides, the symposium was not constituted to re-edit the Bible, but to bow before its recognised and unquestioned Divine authority.

Principal Edwards, Aberystwyth (Negative II.), however, makes no attempt to weaken or suspend the authority of Rev. xx., or, to evade the obvious meaning of the passage. He says: "I am bound to admit that the spiritual interpretation of the passage completely breaks down. It is quite impossible to suppose that the words 'they lived,' in verse 4, mean the life of regeneration, but that the same words in verse 5 mean the life that follows a resurrection. I frankly accept the interpretation that finds in the passage the doctrine of two resurrections, and that a long period, symbolically designated a thousand years, comes between the resurrection of the saints and that of the rest of the dead."

Having conceded this point, he goes on: "This passage contains no hint that Christ comes before the thousand years begin." Well, supposing it did not, it is perfectly evident from other Scriptures that in the concession he had made Principal Edwards had relinquished his whole case. For, as 1 Cor. xv. 23 and 1 Thess. iv. 14—17 shew, it is at Christ's coming that the saints living and dead are translated. If, then, Rev. xx. proves, as Principal Edwards admits, that there is an interval of a thousand years between the resurrection of the saints and that of the rest of the dead, and Paul's testimony in 1 Cor. xv. and 1 Thess. iv. certifies that it is at Christ's coming the saints rise, it must be admitted that the premillennial coming of the Lord Jesus Christ is demonstrated. The only conceivable way of evading this conclusion is either to dispense with the Book of Revelation altogether, after the manner of Professor Beet, or else to read into the passage a figurative meaning, which is the course adopted by Principal Brown (Negative III.).

A further serious weakness on the part of the negative side is seen in the disposition to pass judgment on the question canvassed, not entirely by an appeal to Scripture, but on à priori grounds touching what is probable or credible. Thus Principal Edwards defines the question as "partly one of inherent probability, partly of interpretation"; and, having taken this course, he pronounces judgment against the premillennial view, because, in his opinion, "inherent probability" points the other way. On the same lines, Hume constructed his fallacious argument against the miracles of Christ and his Apostles, and from the same armoury such sceptics as the author of "Supernatural Religion" still draw their hostile weapons. The fact is, such a division as Principal Edwards institutes is unworthy of a Christian apologist, and is a method which stultifies itself. For, as Canon Fausset urges, supposing it were as alleged, yet "the improbability is no greater than that there should be a resurrection at all. We believe, not because it is probable, but because God hath said it, and 'the Scripture cannot be broken.'"

Turning to the affirmative side, we regret that no real attempt is made to meet the case for the premillennial view as submitted by Mr. and Mrs. Grattan Guinness. Briefly put, the aim of these writers was to show, in opposition to Professor Beet, that premillennial beliefs are supported by a wide induction from the prophetic Scriptures. Professor Beet would allow nothing to tell in favour of the premillenarian save the passage in Rev. xx., which he himself shelves. It was, therefore, meet, and not a matter for censure, as Principal Brown thinks, that Mr. and Mrs. Guinness, in their reply, should show cause, by an appeal to the prophetic Word, for an opposite finding, and in our judgment they have eminently succeeded in this. They have shown, e.g., from the symbolic prophecy of Daniel, "that the anti-Christian power continues to the Advent, and that the Advent introduces the Kingdom." Next, 2 Thess. ii. is cited to prove "that the Advent immediately succeeds the rule of the Antichrist, leaving no room for a millennial kingdom between." And, finally, the sequence of events in the Book of Revelation supports this view. This would seem to indicate the following order: first Antichrist; then the Advent for his destruction; then the Kingdom.

We hope to allude further to this subject in our next issue. Meanwhile our readers, we feel assured, will welcome the following paragraph from Canon Fausset's summing up, bearing as it does on a point on which much confusion of thought has rested. "The question is asked, Is the millennial reign of Christ earthly or heavenly? Herein was the error of the later Chiliasts. They confounded what will be distinct, the earthly and the heavenly glories. The saints in transfigured bodies shall 'not in any sense be subjected to earthly weakness, or circumscribed by the limitations of the present life,' but shall be 'equal unto the angels' (Luke xx. 36). But as they are to have authority over cities they must have subjects (Luke xix. 17). These subjects are the nations of men in the flesh, with Israel at their head. These shall be 'circumscribed by the limitations' of the flesh. But Satan (who, with his demons, had hitherto been 'Prince of the power of the air,' and had thence tempted and assailed man) being bound, and Christ with the transfigured saints from the heavenlies, whence Satan shall have been supplanted (Isa. xxiv. 21), ministering as king-priests unto their brethren in the flesh, in a manner analogous to our Lord's manifestations during his forty post-resurrection days on earth, there shall ensue a blessed age of peace and all but universal righteousness, described by Isa. lxv., lxvi. Isaiah's language about the Millennium foreshadows the final perfect state, which shall only be when the present sin-tainted home of man shall be burnt up at the close of the Millennium, to be replaced by the new heavens and new earth wherein shall dwell righteousness. Not the millennial earth, where, though much restricted, sin still shall have place, but the new heavens and new earth, shall be the fitting and eternal home of the transfigured saints."

THE WILL OF GOD.

By PROFESSOR DRUMMOND.

AN ADDRESS AT NORTHFIELD CONVENTION.

In answer to the question how to find out God's will, he read the following from the fly-leaf of his Testament. First, pray. Second, think. Third, talk to wise people, but don't regard their judgment as final. Fourth, beware of the objection of your own will, but don't be too much afraid of it. God never unnecessarily thwarts a man's nature and likings; it is a mistake to think that His will is always in the line of the disagreeable. Fifth, meanwhile, do the next thing, for doing God's will in small things is the best preparation for doing it in great things. Sixth, when decision and action are necessary, go ahead. Seventh, you will probably not find out till afterwards, perhaps long afterwards, that you have been led at all.

The Professor then went on: I am reminded by the addresses of to-night, and by this, the second last night of the Conference, that in a few hours we shall all be off the mountain top, and down again into the valley, and I remember that mountain tops were never made by God to be inhabited. They are places to go up to and have a look around, and rest a little, and take a good view, and get near heaven and then come down again. The use of a mountain in nature is to send streams down into the valleys, where are villages and towns and cities, and that is the use of a conference like this. What we are to take with us is some running stream of this mountain, that it may refresh and satisfy the body of the world that God has given us to influence. But for the most part we shall have to go and live commonplace lives. Most of us will not have to go home to pulpits, but to household duties and business and professional cares. I shall have to lay down my Bible, and take my geological hammer, and open my closet and take out my fossils and skeletons. Is it a downcome, or all the same to God? The answer is contained in the words which I have read to you.

I wish that we could all get into our minds one other little principle. What is the end of life? The end of life is, not to do good, although many of us think so. It is not to win souls, although I once thought so. The end of life is to do the will of God. That may be in the line of doing good or winning souls, or it may not. For the individual, the answer to the question, "What is the end of my life?" is, To do the will of God, whatever that may be. Spurgeon replied to an invitation to preach to an exceptionally large audience, "I have no ambition to preach to 10,000 people, but to do the will of God," and he declined. If we could have no ambition past the will of God, our lives would be successful. If we could say, "I have no ambition to go to the heathen, I have no ambition to win souls, my ambition is to do the will of God, whatever that may be;" that makes all lives equally great, or equally small, because the only great thing in a life is what of God's will there is in it. The maximum achievement of any man's life after it is all over is to have done the will of God. No man or woman can have done any more with a life; no Luther, no Spurgeon, no Wesley, no Melancthon can have done any more with their lives; and a dairy-maid or a scavenger can do as much. Therefore the supreme principle upon which we have to run our lives is to adhere, through good report and ill, through temptation and prosperity and adversity, to the will of God, wherever that may lead us. It may take you away to China, or you who are going to Africa may have to stay where you are, you who are going to be an evangelist may have to go into business, and you who are going into business may have to become an evangelist. But there is no happiness or success in any life till that principle is taken possession of.

How can you build up a life on that principle? Let me give you an outline of a little Bible reading. The definition of an ideal life: "A man after mine own heart, who will fulfil all my law." The object of life: "I come to do thy will, O God."

The first thing you need after life is food: "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me."

The next thing you need after food is society: "He that doeth the will of my Father in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother."

You want education: "Teach me to do thy will, O God."

You want pleasure: "I delight to do thy will, O God."

A whole life can be built up on that one vertebral column, and then when all is over, "he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."—Springfield Union.

◆

BIBLE STUDY.

DIVINE UNDERTAKINGS.

Ex. vi. 6—8.

(1) I will bring you out.—"He sent from above, He took me, He drew me out of many waters" (Ps. xviii. 16). "He brought me up also, out of an horrible pit" (Ps. xl. 2). (The Father) "hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son" (Col. i. 13).

(2) I will rid you out of their bondage.—"The Lord hath anointed Me...to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound" (Isa. lxi. 1). "Sin shall not have dominion over you" (Rom. vi. 14). "The glorious liberty of the children of God" (Rom. viii. 21).

(3) I will redeem you with a stretched-out arm.—"Who is this that cometh from Edom?...I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save...And I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold: therefore mine own arm brought salvation unto Me; and my fury, it upheld Me" (Isa. lxiii. 1).

(4) I will take you to Me for a people.—"Fear not; for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine" (Is. xliii. 1). "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light; which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God" (1 Pet. ii. 9, 10). "They shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels" (Mal. iii. 17).

(5) I will be to you a God.—"This God is our God for ever and ever; He will be our guide even unto death" (Ps. xlviii. 14). "God is light" (1 John i. 5). "God is love" (1 John iv. 8). "God, that comforteth those that are cast down" (2 Cor. vii. 6). "God is able to make all grace abound toward you" (2 Cor. ix. 8). "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son" (Rev. xxi. 7).

(6) I will bring you in unto the land.—"The ark of the covenant of the Lord of all the earth passeth over before you into Jordan" (Josh. iii. 11). "When He putteth forth his own sheep, He goeth before them" (John x. 4). "He brought me to the banqueting-house, and his banner over me was love" (Cant. ii. 4).

(7) I will give it you for an heritage.—"The kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost" (Rom. xiv. 17). "Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost" (Rom. xv. 13). "Sorrowful, yet alway rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things" (2 Cor. vi. 10). "My beloved is mine, and I am his" (Cant. ii. 16). "All things are yours...and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's" (1 Cor. iii. 21—23).

I will—"Where is boasting then? It is excluded."

Janet Clark.

ELIJAH THE PROPHET.—17.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., LEICESTER.

THE TRANSLATION.

We have reached at length one of the sublimest scenes of Old Testament story. We should have been glad to learn the most minute particulars concerning it; but the historian contents himself with the simplest statements. Just one or two broad, strong outlines; and all is told that we may know. The veil of distance, or the elevation of the hills, was enough to hide the receding figures of the prophets from the eager gaze of the group that watched them from the neighbourhood of Jericho. And the dazzling glory of the celestial cortège made the only spectator unable to scrutinise it too narrowly. What wonder then, if the narrative is given in three brief sentences. "They still went on, and talked; and it came to pass that there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven."

But there was one symptom, at least, of the coming wonder, which was clearly witnessed by more than the solitary companion who had so faithfully and tenaciously kept by Elijah's side. The two friends halted for a moment before the broad waters of the Jordan, which threatened to bar their onward steps; and then Elijah's spirit was thrilled with the old omnipotent faith; such as had so often enabled him to overcome the working of natural laws, by the introduction of the laws of that higher sphere which only answer the summons of a mighty faith.

True, he took off his well-worn mantle, and wrapped it together, and smote the waters. But that, at the best, was only an outward and significant sign. At that same moment, his spirit was grappling the power of the Infinite God, and was bringing it to bear on the hurrying stream. He knew that the Lord had sent him thither, and that his road lay further into the country on the other side. He saw no means of pursuing the God-marked path. He was sure that, since his way led through the waters, God was prepared to make it possible and easy for him to tread it. And, therefore, he dared to strike the waters, believing that Divine power was working in every stroke; and the waters parted hither and thither, leaving a clear passage, through which they went.

Child of God! your path seems sometimes to lie right through a flowing Jordan. There is no alternative but that you should go straight on. Forward moves the cloud. Forward points the sign-post of circumstance. Forward bids the inward prompting. But how, when Jordan rolls in front? Now is the time for faith. Where God's finger points, there God's hand will make the way. Believe that it shall be so. Advance in unfaltering faith. Step down the shelving bank, and the waters of difficulty shall part before you; and you shall find a pathway where to human vision there was none. So through parting Jordans you shall march to your reward.

I. THE FITNESS OF THIS TRANSLATION.—There was fitness in the place, not the smiling plain of Esdraelon, with its cornfields and vineyards, and dotted hamlets, speaking of the toils and homes of men. Not the desert of Sinai, so closely allied with the memory of his fatal fall. Not the schools of Gilgal, Bethel, or Jericho. None of these would furnish a fit setting for his farewell to his earthly ministry. But, away from all these; amid the scenery familiar to his early life; in view of localities for ever associated with the most memorable events of his nation's history; surrounded by the lonely grandeur of some rocky gorge; there God chose to send his chariot to fetch him home.

There was fitness in the method. He had himself been as the whirlwind that falls suddenly on the unsuspecting world, and sweeps all before it in its impetuous course, leaving devastation and ruin in its track. It was meet that a whirlwind-man should sweep to heaven in the very element of his life. His character was well depicted in the panorama of the desert, with its shivering wind, and its glowing fire. And nothing could be more appropriate than that the stormy energy of his career should be set forth in the rush of the whirlwind, and the intensity of his spirit by the fire that flashed in the harnessed seraphim. What a contrast to the gentle upward motion of the ascending Saviour!

There was fitness in the exclamation with which Elisha bade him farewell. "He cried, My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof." Doubtless, amid that sudden flash of glory he hardly wist what he said. Yet he closely hit the truth. That man, whom he had come to love as a father, had indeed been as an armed chariot of defence to Israel. By his faith, and prayers, and deeds, he had often warded off evil and danger with more certain success than could have been effected by an armed troop. Alas! that such men are rare. But, in our time, we have known them; and when they have been suddenly swept from our side, we have felt as if the Church had been deprived of one main source of security and help.

II. THE REASONS FOR THIS TRANSLATION.—(1) One of the chief reasons was, no doubt, as a witness to his times. The men of his day were plunged in sensuality, and had little thought of the hereafter. At the very best, the Jews had but vague notions of the other life, and those notions were probably still further darkened by the obscuring influences of idolatry and sin. But here a convincing evidence was given that there was a spiritual world into which the righteous entered; and that, when the body sank in death, the spirit did not share its fate, but entered into a state of being in which its noblest instincts found their befitting environment and home—fire to fire; spirit to spirit; the man of God to God.

A similar testimony was given to the men of his time by the rapture of Enoch before the Flood, and by the ascension of our Lord from the brow of Olivet. Where did these three wondrous journeys end, unless there were a bourne which was their befitting terminus and goal? And as the tidings spread, thrilling all listeners with mysterious awe, and as they heard that no sign of the rapt ones could be discovered by the most diligent search, would there not break upon them the conviction that they likewise would have to take that wondrous journey into the unseen, soaring beyond all worlds, or sinking into the bottomless pit.

(2) Another reason was evidently the desire on the part of God to give a striking sanction to his servant's words. How easy was it for the men of that time to evade the force of Elijah's ministry, by asserting that he was an enthusiast, an alarmist, a firebrand. It would be convenient for them to think that his denunciations and threats began and finished with himself. The workings of a distempered brain! And if he had passed away in decrepit old age, they would have been still further encouraged in their impious conjecturings. How would they have known that he spake the truth of God? But the mouths of blasphemers and gainsayers were stopped, when God put such a conspicuous seal upon his servant's ministry. It was as if Jehovah had stepped out of the unseen to vindicate him, and to affirm that he was his chosen ambassador, and that the word in his lips was true. The translation was to the life-work of Elijah what the resurrection was to that of Jesus. It was God's irrefragable testimony to the world.

As a servant, Elijah had failed in one fatal moment, and by that moment's failure had missed a splendid chance; but for all that, the general tenor of his ministry was such as God could approve, and concerning it He could bear his sanctioning testimony to men. It may sometimes happen that our Father will greatly honour his servants in the eyes of men, whilst He will be very strict in his private dealings with them, in reference to certain failures in duty of which only He and they are aware.

III. THE LESSONS OF THIS TRANSLATION FOR OURSELVES.—Let us take care not to dictate to God. This was the man who lay down upon the ground, and asked to die. If he had had his will, he would have had the desert sands for his shroud and the desert winds for his requiem. How good it was of God to refuse him the answer he craved! Was it not better to pass away, missed and beloved, in the chariot which his Father had sent for him, and with which Ahab's, though he had run before it, could bear no comparison!

This is no doubt one reason why our prayers go unanswered. We know not what we ask. We ask for things which we would not dream of, if we only knew the infinite superiority of the lot which our Father has planned out for us. We shall have to bless Him for ever, more for the prayers He refused, than for those He granted. When next your request is denied, reflect that it may be because God is preparing something for you as much better than your request as the translation of Elijah was better than his own petition for himself.

(2) Let us learn what death is.—It is simply a translation: not a state, but an act; not a condition, but a passage. We pass through a doorway; we cross a bridge of smiles; we flash from the dark into the light. There is no interval of unconsciousness, no parenthesis of suspended animation. "Absent from the body," we are instantly "present with the Lord." Oh, do not think of death as the gaoler of a prison-house, in which he is collecting the saints against some final order for their liberty. It is nothing of the sort. It is but the grim disguise of one of the angels of God's presence-chamber, specially commissioned to bring faithful souls into the audience-room of the King. As by the single act of birth we entered into this lower life, so by the single act, which men call death, but which angels call birth (for Christ is the Firstborn from among the dead), we pass into the real life. The fact that Elijah appeared on the Transfiguration Mount in holy converse with Moses and with Christ, proves that the blessed dead are really the living ones, sentient, active, intensely in earnest; and they entered that life in a single moment, the moment of death. Would it not be truer to speak of them not as the dead, but as those who have died, and are alive for ever. It must be remembered, however, that while it is far better for the emancipated soul and spirit to be with Christ, present with the Lord, the blessedness will not be complete until the resurrection of the body, which will then have put on incorruption and immortality.

(3) Let us see here a type of the rapture of the saints.—We do not know what change passed over the mortal body of the ascending prophet. This is all we know, that "mortality was swallowed up of life." There was wrought on him a change like that which took place in the grave of Joseph, when the crucified body of Jesus became transformed into the risen body, which was largely independent of the laws of nature, but which was so like the body which he had worn for thirty-three years that it was readily and universally recognised. Corruption put on incorruption. The mortal put on immortality. The body of humiliation was exchanged for the body of glory.

Such a change, unless Christ tarry longer than the term of our natural life, shall be the portion of many who read these lines, "Caught up to meet the Lord in the air." It becomes us then to walk as Elijah did, with alert and watchful spirit, talking only on themes that would not be inconsistent with an instantaneous flash into the presence of God. Thus, whenever our Father's carriage comes for us; and wherever it overtakes us; whether in the storm at sea, or in the railway accident; in the tumult of a catastrophe, or in the gradual decay of prolonged illness; may we be prepared to step in, and "sweep through the gates, washed in the blood of the Lamb."

Was it not some reference to this august event that was in the mind of the great Welsh preacher, Christmas Evans, who, when dying, majestically waved his hand to the bystanders and looked upward with a smile, and uttered these last words, Drive on. "The chariots of God are twenty thousand." May we not suppose that one awaits each departing spirit, standing ready at hand to convey it into the presence of the King, to whom be glory for ever and ever!

For the Young.

"MY LITTLE CRIPPLE."

"How good of you to live in the East-end," says some sympathetic friend; which always makes me feel ashamed as I reply, "How good of the Lord to allow me such a privilege!" Life here is life, and those who see the toiling, struggling people of the Mile End-road from morning till night, and night till morning, must realise "Life is real, life is earnest."

In Mr. Charrington's Great Assembly Hall, Mile End-road, which stands as a good peck of salt in the midst of much corruption, while a meeting was being conducted, though during a violent storm of thunder, lightning, and rain, a gentleman said to me, "There is a poor little cripple in a cart at the end of the aisle; will you go and speak to him?" From his description I knew it was a little favourite of mine, so I hastened towards the spot. There was a sort of vehicle, once a little invalid carriage, but now only a skeleton of bare boards, shaky and decayed. The springs had been worn out with rust, the two little shafts had disappeared, and the whole machine smelt musty.

In it, with large, soft, brown eyes, was my dear little cripple boy, Arthur P——. Two very small thin hands and arms were the only visible limbs. His little chest was unnaturally rounded outwards, his head buried between his shoulders, his whole appearance sad and touching. Beside him were his two little steeds, regular East-end arabs, about eight or nine years old, quite a picture in themselves, hatless, shirtless, shoeless, their dear little faces (and they were really pretty) begrimed with mud and mire, their other garments remarkably scanty, their childish hands not yet spoiled by hard toil. I noticed how they closed their bright eyes at the prayer, and laid a little finger over each, as if they could not otherwise keep them shut: to them it all seemed a "living, bright reality," and I felt the better for being near them. Just picture these children driving their little friend through thunder, lightning, and rain on a week evening to hear words of life! They came also from a good distance, and had to pass through some very crowded and difficult streets to reach the hall; and they were not his brothers, only his little friends!

I first saw this little cripple boy on a bright Sunday evening in the midst of a Mile end throng, when four of these little prancing steeds were careering him along at full speed, taking him home from the Sunday-school. I stopped them, and asked him all about himself. He had such sweet manners and a sweet voice, and his eyes said more than words. I took his name and address, and called next day. I found him surrounded by squalor and misery, with a drunken father, and a mother who seemed a good, kind soul—a faithful wife even to a drunkard. There were several other children, and all lived upstairs in one room, while in the entrance apartment lived, or rather existed, a married daughter, her husband, and two children. They were "boot finishers," so everything and everybody looked black, and it seemed as if they always remained so.

My little friend was carried down from the top room by his mother and placed upon the foot of an uninviting couch; he always remains in the same stuck-up position, and cannot even lie down to sleep. After chatting to him for some time, I noticed how thoughtful his face was, and I said: "Tell me, dear, what you are thinking of?" He waited some seconds, and then whispered softly, "Jesus." Oh! how my heart thanked God for that precious answer, and for his knowledge of that name which is above every name. "And now tell me, dear, is there anything in particular that you would like to have?" No answer came. So I turned to a little sister and asked her what she thought he would like best. She answered, without hesitation, "To take a walk, lady." Oh! how sad, and, alas! those little folded legs could never unbend. "Nothing else, Arthur?" I inquired. "No, lady," he replied. He did not ask for clothes, or money, or even food, but his request was an impossible one, "to take a walk!"

And now my young readers, what do you think of this little sketch? not a fancy one, but a true and living picture of a living being, not very far off from any of you in this great city, a picture to which, alas! there are many similar. I should like to give him a nice new comfortable little carriage, I should like to procure for him many things which he sadly needs. I should like, finally, to get him into some nice "Home" for such sufferers, where he would have cleanliness and good food. But there are so many others to be helped, that it is difficult to do so much for one. Will any of you who may read this help me with ever so little?

13, Rose-street, E.C. R. B.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sunday, September 11, Matt. xxiii. 29—39; Monday, September 12, Matt. xxiv. 1—14; Tuesday, September 13, Matt. xxiv. 15—28; Wednesday, September 14, Matt. xxiv. 29—41; Thursday, September 15, Matt. xxiv. 42—51; Friday, September 16, Matt. xxv. 1—13; Saturday, September 17, Matt. xxv. 14—30.

SEASIDE SERVICES FOR CHILDREN.

North Berwick.—During August, services have been held here under the auspices of the Children's Special Service Mission, every Sabbath afternoon. The meetings were held on the Links at Point Garry, a beautifully situated spot at the west end of the town, and conducted by Mr. Robertson, of the Carrubbers Close Mission, and Mr. Copplestone, of the Scottish Evangelistic Association, Edinburgh. The average attendance has been about a thousand, half of these children.

Southsea.—A children's mission, held by Mr. Martin J. Hall, is just drawing to a close. God has abundantly blessed his Word, to the conversion of very many and the building up of others. The meetings all through have been quiet and well attended, when the weather permitted. There has been a real work going on amongst the children.

A CHINAMAN'S BELIEF.

The following is from a former worker in the Home of Industry:—Kwei Hwa Ch'en is on the frontier of the desert, and is the depôt for the Mongol trade, consequently there is a large single male population of a migratory kind, and the moral tone of the place is very low. Opium dens and gambling-houses abound. If addressed upon eternal things they are not affected as a person at home. A Chinaman says:—My soul, well, what is it? Who knows? Doubtless what possesses my body and causes me to act is the soul of some being of a former life; so that, if I sin, it is not I, but the soul of a former being, and why should I forego what I like when the opportunities are rare and uncertain? As regards eternity, some, but very few, attain eternal bliss—only those who have been very good or have lived as ascetics. They may ascend to heaven and be introduced to the immortals and become gods in due time; but us poor illiterate people, who do not know a character, and have no time or means to do good works, what will become of us? Perhaps, if we have taken great care of pieces of paper with characters, and have kept our kitchen clean, and have not destroyed life, the gods after punishing us lightly will send us to the wheel of life to be turned out as poor people, such as beggars, or as infants only to live a few days and then to return to receive the completion of punishment, and finally to be born again as animals...

The above is just an outline of a Chinaman's inner self. Their souls are dead; how much do we need the Holy Ghost to awaken them from their indifference! My work is open-air preaching, and the people as a rule, listen well.

G. Clarke.

SOUTHSEA.—The new mission hall now in course of erection will, it is expected, be ready for opening about the end of this month. Mr. Denning has already received upwards of £700 towards the £800 which the building is to cost, and it is hoped that the remainder may be provided before the day of opening. Mr. Denning's address is Ebenezer Cottage, Inglis-road, Southsea, Hants.

"WE WOULD SEE JESUS."

John xii. 21.

We would see Jesus—
Thus those Greeks of old
Breathed forth the longing of our souls to-day.
We would see Jesus,
Or the heart grows cold;
No other hope have we, nor strength, nor stay.

We would see Jesus—
Brother, thou must give
To hungry souls the one true, living bread;
We would have Jesus,
For we cannot live
On "stones" of man's own rhetoric instead.

Tell us of Jesus—
For we long to know
More of his love who suffered, bled, and died:
Show us his righteousness,
His beauty show,
Hold to our gaze the Lord, the Crucified.

Tell us of Jesus—
Ye who minister
Within his courts, tell us of his free grace
Tell us of Jesus,
Not some sinister
Distorted Gospel where He hath no place.

We would know Jesus—
Living, real, and near,
We would behold in all who bear his name
His lovely image,
Shining bright and clear!
His approbation all they seek of fame.

Shining for Jesus,
Thus thy light shall glow
Strong in his light; nor flicker and grow dim.
Living for Jesus,
Thus the world shall know,
His mighty power, and souls be won for Him.

Living for Jesus—
He shall live in thee,
His beauty shine in all thy words and ways;
Thus, only thus,
This earth reclaimed shall be,
And every heart shall hymn the Saviour's praise.

India. S. G. M.

BRITISH HONDURAS.

Rev. Edward J. Walkom, of the Wesleyan Missionary Society, Belize, British Honduras, writes: "It may encourage some fellow-toilers to know that in this remote and comparatively unknown colony a gracious work is going on among the native peoples. Our own Church, among others, has been blessed by an increase of seventy-one members on this quarter's number of members. This, with a roll of 800 members before, in a town of some 5000 inhabitants and one church, is only one among many. Our Gospel Temperance Mission is doing real and effective service, over a hundred having taken the blue since the last anniversary. My Band of Hope reports over 200 members, with an average weekly attendance of 160.

"Only a few months ago a new mission was begun in Spanish Honduras. To-day we have over 100 regular pupils in the day-schools, and on Sundays many an interested Spaniard, nominally Roman Catholic, may be seen standing at the open windows—"like doves to their Master's windows"—listening with reverence to the preaching of the old, old story by our missionary. A great work opens before us in these Central American States. Pray for us."

Mr. Walkom would be glad of some tracts for distribution in the hospital, gaol, and asylum, which are generally crowded.

MR. J. B. WOOKEY starts on Thursday, September 15, for an evangelistic mission in Malta, Gibraltar, &c. He will be present at the Noon Prayer-meeting, 186, Aldersgate-street, on Monday, September, 12, to be specially commended to the Lord's care.

TEMPERANCE RESTAURANTS.

We alluded last week to the conditions under which the assistants live at some of the City restaurants where intoxicants are sold. But those engaged in temperance and vegetarian dining-rooms are little, if any, better off. Twelve hours' work a day, with one less on Saturday (an additional one or two hours being required for reaching home and business night and morning), are given for 9s. a week (in some houses only 8s.), with relics of the previous day's provisions for dinner. Then, when the rooms are let for club-meetings or concerts, they are detained two hours longer still, for which they receive no extra payment; but, to make up for the privilege of leaving late, they have to come earlier than usual the next morning to get the place straight for the day!

But the lack of consideration often shown them by the ladies and gentlemen upon whom they wait is, perhaps, quite as painful to bear as are these hardships. A large proportion of these assistants have been well educated and well brought up. Daughters of clergymen and ministers many of them are, and others have had parents with comfortable incomes; but by adverse circumstances they find themselves obliged to contribute to the family purse. Their sensitiveness is, therefore, not to be ridden over roughshod, as if they were automatic waiting machines.

There are some who say that "they must conquer their sensitiveness, and adapt themselves to present circumstances." But, alas! such conquest would mean a disregard of womanly feeling, which might prove most disastrous. While, therefore, it is perhaps hopeless in the present state of competition to expect employers to pay more wage than they are obliged, we do appeal to Christian people, who so largely frequent these restaurants, to exercise a measure of courtesy and consideration, and, perhaps, by an occasional word of cheer, to alleviate the monotony of their life. When it is remembered that many of them, coming from the country, are deprived of the kindly and saving influences of the home, while others have lost one parent, or both, there is ample scope for Christian ladies to make themselves their friends, and thus, perchance, save some from becoming—first, lonely, then, by successive stages, downhearted, despondent, despairing, careless, and lost.

We cannot speak too highly of the work done on their behalf by Miss Gough, who, with noble devotion, has given up her life to this cause. But there are hundreds of ladies who are unable thus to give their time to it who might, nevertheless, incidentally and privately, follow the example of their Lord; whose mission it was "to give the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."

A MISSION VOLUNTEER.—The National Bible Society of Scotland has appointed two new agents for colportage work in China. One of these, Mr. James Murray, has offered to go out entirely at his own charges. Mr. Murray, though still a young man, has been successful in the publishing business, and proposes to devote his means and his business experience to the furtherance of Bible work in China, where two sisters are already engaged as members of the China Inland Mission.

SYDNEY CITY MISSION.—The twenty-fifth annual report of this Mission states that the meetings have grown in attendance and influence. There are now ten missionaries employed, and week after week souls are led to Christ, and individual lives as well as homes and families are made happy. During the year upwards of 2500 temperance pledges were taken, and more than sixty converts became church members. Much as is being done, it is felt that an extension of the work of this agency is necessary to keep pace with the growth of the city. Rev. J. Blanksby is the general secretary.

THE WIDE WORLD-FIELD.

The Master's call has reached not a few devoted hearts, and many are coming forward ready to proclaim Christ's boundless love and sovereign grace to every creature. Unoccupied fields abound on every side. Let me indicate some spots where the need seems to me the greatest.

For Spanish-speaking evangelists what vast openings are presented in South America, where there are fifty millions of Spanish-speaking people. The language is easily acquired. The growing Argentine Republic, with its provinces of Rio de la Plata, affords a fine field for emigration and evangelisation. It is ten times as large as Great Britain, though it has only three millions of population. It has a healthy climate, fertile soil, no forests to clear, land to be had cheap, nearly 2500 miles of railway completed and making, and civil and religious liberty. There are also the neighbouring small republics of Uruguay on the coast, with a climate like the South of France, and Paraguay in the interior, each with about half a million of people. The command of the language gives one access to multitudes on the northern part of Africa, as well as to Spain itself. There are ten millions in Mexico who speak Spanish.

For French-speaking evangelists there is a great cry, from many towns and villages in various departments of France, for evangelical teaching. They say, "We have done with the priests, but do not want to drift into la libre pensée; but this, their earnest cry, cannot be responded to. The small body of French Protestant Christians are doing their utmost, but cannot overtake the need. How many Christians in England, knowing the French language, would find a pleasant and economical residence and a warm welcome in towns and villages in these unoccupied districts.

There is another unoccupied field which no one is caring for—the boat people and their families plying on the river and canal "chalands," or barges, on the 4575 miles of rivers and the 2900 miles of canals throughout France. When they have been met with, they evince much accessibility and desire for instruction in the things of God. How pleasant it would be for two young men to make excursions on these boats, often passing through lovely parts of the country, instructing not only the boat people and their families, but the residents in the towns and villages on the river side. The boat people, too, might be met with at the dépôts where they congregate, such as Dunkirk, and numerous places in the interior.

For those who only know their own English tongue vast regions are open to them. An English evangelist, Mr. J. Law, of Orillia, Lake Ontario, writes:—"It has been repeatedly stated that 14,000 towns and villages west of the Mississippi never hear the Gospel preached, and that in many of these towns and villages there is not even a building with the name of a church, nor a preacher of any kind to tell the people of a Saviour, and to warn them to flee from the wrath to come." Western Canada likewise presents a wide field for evangelisation.

But the country in which we have been labouring for six years (Algeria) presents some encouraging recent facts, and invites labour for the Sahara. Whilst access to the Sahara from the East, through Tripoli, has been interrupted, it is not so in the West. The Asgar Touaregs have taken Rhat, and massacred half the Turkish garrison, which consisted of forty men, retaining the remaining half as prisoners. This was in consequence of some of their number being arrested for pillaging caravans. The Governor-General of Tripoli, Ahmed Rassim, has sent 500 Arab Goums to retake the town. It is a remarkable fact that the Belgian Consul was for many years a resident in Murzouk, but that is more distinctly in Fezzan, to the east of Rhat. The western route to the Sahara, through the Province of Oran, by the completion of the railway on August 1, from Arzen to Ain-Sefra, opens up the way to the Ksour villages, and is not far from the Oasis of Fignig. The region of the Ksours, running N.E. to S.W., is inhabited by a moral and gentle Berber-speaking race, who have been the serfs of the Hoggar Touaregs, who oppressed them, but now they will be under the protection of the French, and enfranchised from this yoke of ages. The railway will attract the caravans from the South, and form a new and speedy route to the North. Thus a fresh door is opened to the Sahara, and to these Ksourians for evangelisation.

Monsieur Vasseur, of the Dépôt Central, 4, Place du Théâtre-Français, Paris, would happy to give information respecting openings for Christian work in France, and the various consuls of the Spanish-speaking countries would give all needed information about South America.

G. P.

◆

WOMEN FOR WEST AFRICA.

West Africa has for many years been a point of no little interest. Since 1816 we have watched the rise and progress of our colonies, along the Gold Coast to beyond the Niger. In both Sierra Leone and Lagos the towns are laid out with well-built houses and streets planted with trees. Education is provided for every native child, in the form of national schools, high schools for girls, grammar schools for boys, and a college in each of these towns. English is spoken, and the Sabbath day is observed. There are many able native gentlemen, some of whom while under English supervision are holding responsible posts, proving that negroes possess capacity and talent, and that there is in them the nucleus of an African civilised nation. There is a desire among the people to maintain high and good principles, and there is a growing interest in the welfare of their country.

In these territories, including Sierra Leone, Gambia, Gold Coast, Lagos, and the Niger districts, commerce is increasing, and factories and farms are multiplying. Every week the harbours are visited by vessels from England and America, belonging to three or four steamship companies, for carrying passengers and cargo.

This country has had some disadvantages. Being out of the usual route of travellers, it loses much that would be gained, socially and commercially, by contact with Christianity. Another disadvantage lies in the extreme heat and damp of the climate. From these reasons intercourse has been greatly hindered, advance in some points is slow, and heathen ways are still, to a certain extent, practised.

Just now many minds are turned towards West Africa, not in regard to colonial rights, or trade, or education, but to the social interests of a people so long connected with ourselves.

We know that, in spite of the measure of English help and self-help, the people are wanting personal Christian influence. They are lacking the touch of social virtue. Their women need still to rise to fill their appointed place, and to be an influence within their homes of womanly grace and love.

Good and earnest men, both African and English, have done a chief part in being themselves examples to the people, and in preaching to them the truths of eternal life.

But the work among women only women can do, and this field now lies ready and open for Christian women to occupy. It is time to go to this field, from which so little fruit has yet been gathered. All forms of woman's work are wanted now in this dark country, and response will be found among the few African women who are already bringing forth fruit to God.

A ladies' meeting on this subject is convened by Mrs. Darwin Fox, Mrs. Meredith, and Miss E. Buxton, on Thursdays, at Morley Hall, 316, Regent-street, W., where letters may be addressed to "West Africa."

SEPTEMBER 9, 1887.

The Christian.

CONTENTS.

Mr. Henry Thorne 1
Symposium on the Second Advent 2
The Will of God 3
Bible Study 3
Elijah the Prophet.—17 4
"My Little Cripple." 5
A Chinaman's Belief 5
"We would see Jesus" 5
British Honduras 5
Temperance Restaurants 6
The Wide World-Field 6
Women for West Africa 6
Notes on Daily Readings 8
Mission to Zulu Kaffirs 9
Missionaries at Birmingham 9
The West London Mission 9
Working Men's Mission 9
Our Aged Poor 10
Adult Schools, Birmingham 10
Letters from Northfield.—3 11
Notes and Comments 12
Cabmen's Mission 14
The Gospel in India 15
St. Giles' Christian Mission 15

By HENRY THORNE,
Travelling Secretary of the English National Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association.

BIBLE READINGS ON THE GOSPEL OF MARK.

SUITABLE AS A HANDBOOK AND HELP FOR SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS, BIBLE CLASSES, EVANGELISTS, AND LAY PREACHERS.

With Introduction, List of Authorities, and a beautiful Coloured Map of Palestine.

TINTED COVERS .. .. EIGHTEENPENCE.
CLOTH BOARDS .. .. TWO SHILLINGS.

"Teachers and preachers will find Mr. Thorne's 'LESSONS ON MARK' very helpful. They cover the entire Gospel. and are arranged in fifty-two lessons, each of which has been prepared with conscientious care."—Lay Preacher.

"These READINGS have the merit of being instructive as well as popular. Taken all in all, they are amongst the best we have seen."—Christian Commonwealth.

"Such a work as this will be invaluable to those who have but a scanty reference library; and to all who are unable to devote much time to the very needful work of preparing their lessons."—The Publishers' Circular.

"An admirable series of outline lessons which cannot fail to prove of great service to SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS."—The Rock.

"It is an excellent book, and will prove instructive to all who read it, but especially helpful to SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS. The AUTHOR has bestowed much labour and care on his work."—Irish Baptist Magazine.

"We have been unusually pleased with this book. . . . The work is by one who is evidently a living STUDENT OF THE BIBLE, and a practical teacher to others—not a mere compiler; and while intending to aid teachers in the preparation of Sunday-School Lessons, Mr. THORNE has really added a very useful little hand-book on MARK to popular religious literature."—Liverpool Courier.

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE "GOLDEN TREASURY" BIRTHDAY BOOK.

VERY SUITABLE FOR A BIRTHDAY PRESENT.

BOGATZKY'S GOLDEN TREASURY has been translated into nearly all European languages, and has obtained an enormous circulation in Germany and Great Britain. In this country very few books, except the "Pilgrim's Progress," have been so largley circulated or so widely read. In addition to the issue of BOGATZKY in the ordinary form, the Publishers have also produced an Edition

ARRANGED AS A BIRTHDAY BOOK,

a form in which it is believed the volume will be welcomed by many. In this "Birthday" Edition, four additional pages are introduced at the close of each month's portions. These extra pages are arranged with thirty or thirty-one blank squares or spaces—one for every day of the month. Each of these squares is adapted for receiving four entries, consequently, the total number of names which can be inscribed in the special pages of the "Birthday" Edition amounts to OVER FIFTEEN HUNDRED.

With Beautifully Illuminated Frontispiece.
Elegantly Bound in Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges ... ... 2s. 6d.

PRESENTATION EDITIONS.
French Morocco, Gilt Edges ... ... 3s. 6d.
Rich Coloured Leather, Padded, Gilt Edges ... ... 4s. 6d.
Each of the Leather copies is sent out in a neat cardboard box, thereby securing safety in transit.

LONDON:
MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS. And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

SCRIPTURAL PROOFS

THAT GOD OFFERS US IN OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST PERFECT DELIVERANCE FROM ALL SIN, INWARD AS WELL AS OUTWARD, IF WE WILL BUT RECEIVE HIM AND BELIEVE ON HIS NAME FOR ALL THAT GOD HAS MADE HIM TO BE TO US. (John i. 12; 1 Cor. i. 30.)

BY
J. P. WILSON.

"Holiness by faith in Jesus,
Not by effort of thine own,
Sin's dominion crushed and broken
By the power of grace alone.
God's own holiness within thee,
His own beauty on thy brow;
This shall be thy pilgrim brightness,
This thy blessed portion now."
Miss HAVERGAL.

LONDON:
S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO., 9, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.
1887.

THE above is the title-page of a book of 408 pages, price in cloth two shillings, consisting of the contents of three little books, "First Sheets of Scriptural Proofs," "Further Sheets of Scriptural Proofs," and "Third Series of Scriptural Proofs," hitherto sent out separately, and only to applicants by letter for them, now put together for general publication. The object of the book is simply to direct attention to what God says in his Word on the extent of deliverance from sin given us in our Lord Jesus Christ. Many letters have been received from readers of the separate parts, showing that this object has been attained in their case. The following are extracts from a few of them:—

"Reading your books has driven me more to the precious truth; and our loving Father has opened more light to me—more than ever I expected to get. Praise his dear name!"

"I have read it carefully, and can find nothing of man in it, but all in it to be the revealed power of God. I have received great encouragement and strength from the reading of it."

"Thank you so much for your little book. It has helped me to realise more fully 'the glorious gospel of Christ.'"

"I have read the 'Proofs,' and they have opened my eyes greatly to what may be obtained by faith and prayer."

"I have read several parts of it many times over. It seems to me just the kind of book to put a solid scriptural foundation under the faith of those who are conscious of a real and godly change of heart, and of an eager desire to be wholly the Lord's."

"I rejoice greatly in it. It is well calculated to stimulate an earnest desire in the hearts of the Lord's dear people to search the Scriptures more diligently and prayerfully, like the Bereans, 'daily whether these things were so.'"

"I have read your little book, lent me by a friend, and I do desire heartily to thank my God that it was put into my hands.

"Though for years I have known my Saviour's love, and experienced the incoming of the Holy Ghost in power in my soul, yet since reading 'Scriptural Proofs' I have had a fresh revelation of what Jesus is to me in his capacity of Saviour; and I have been able to grasp Him in a fuller and more comprehensive faith as my deliverer from indwelling sin; and that on the truth of the living God as shown so clearly in your little book.

"My heart goes with every line of it. I do trust and believe it will be blessed wherever it is read: there is so little of man in it, and so much of God."

Notes on Daily Readings.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 11.—ISAIAH XVII.

1.—The burden of Damascus.—" The riches of Damascus (the capital of Syria) and the spoil of Samaria were carried away by Tiglath at about the close of the third year of Ahaz. He died perhaps a year before Ahaz, and all Philistia rejoiced because the rod that had so lately smitten them was broken (xiv. 29). Shalmeneser (King of Assyria) seems at the outset of his reign to have inflicted on Damascus a heavier and final blow. In the time of Ezekiel and Daniel the city had revived, and was again subdued by the Chaldeans. But it had received no threatening, like Babylon, of final desolation. It revived under the Persians, Greeks, and Romans, and not least under the Saracens, and became one of the chief cities of the East."—Birks.

4.—The glory of Jacob shall be made thin.—" 'Jacob' here refers chiefly to the Northern Kingdom, which was called the Kingdom of Israel. Their state would be like a man wasted away with pining sickness, like the few scanty ears left by the corn-reaper in a harvest-field, like gleaning grapes of the vine, or the shaking of the olive tree. All these are striking figures for a very scanty remnant. Very few Israelites, but still a few were left in the Northern Kingdom (2 Chron. xxxiv. 21)."—Ibid.

12.—Woe to the multitude of many people.—" The world power after it has done its work of punishment is itself broken."—S.C. Make a noise like the noise of the seas.—It is probable that it is to this verse our Lord refers in Luke xxi. 25, " The sea and the waves roaring," as he uses the same Greek verb as the LXX. here do in translating the phrase, " rushing of mighty waters." If so, it shows that these three concluding verses refer to the last great struggle (Rev. xix. 19).

14.—At eventide trouble; and before the morning he is not.—Or as R.V. " they are not," showing how the morning dawn—the coming of Christ —annihilates the power of the enemy.

MONDAY, SEPT. 12.—ISAIAH XVIII.

1.—Woe to the land shadowing with wings.—" This chapter, from the various interpretations which the whole prediction and its separate phrases have received, is a kind of sacred enigma. Besides many secondary variations, and proposed applications to Rome, England, or America, expositors have been chiefly divided on two main questions: whether the land of ver. 1 is Egypt or Ethiopia, and whether the same people or Israel are described in the 2nd and 7th verses. The result of a careful and repeated comparison of these various criticisms and expositions is that: (1) The power addressed is neither Egypt nor Ethiopia separately, but the conjoint Egypto-Ethiopian Empire. This was ruled by So and Tirhakah (xxxvii. 9) in the days of Isaiah. This Ethiopian dynasty in Egypt was a rare exception to its long series of native Pharaohs. It lasted about fifty years, and began seven or eight years only before the date of these burdens; (2) the first word is not a 'Woe,' but ('Ho') a Divine call to honour God and assist his people; (3) the people to whom the messengers are to go, the 'scattered and peeled,' are the Israelites, whether dwelling in Palestine, or exiled in Egypt; (4) the main drift of the whole is to form a contrast and joyful sequel to the three previous burdens, by predicting the honour to Zion and its temple under Hezekiah through the signal display of God's power for the protection of his chosen people."—Birks.

2.—A people terrible from their beginning hitherto.—"It is surprising that there should have been any controversy as to the nation meant. The last chapter set the nations before us as crowding together to spoil Israel. Here we have a people whose land is spoiled. The nations were there represented under the figure of rushing waters, as the Assyrian (viii. 5—8) was compared to 'the waters of the river.' Here we have a people 'whose land the rivers have spoiled,' whilst the description of 'a people terrible,' &c. (as above), scarcely belongs to any nation at all except Israel."—Kay.

7.—In that time shall the present be brought unto the Lord.—Fully admitting a primary fulfilment of this chapter in the days of Hezekiah, when Tirhakah, king of Ethiopia, appears as obeying the summons and coming to the help of Judah against Assyria (xxxvii. 9), it is not only possible, but probable, that a further fulfilment is yet in store.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 13.—ISAIAH XIX.

1.—The burden of Egypt.—" This 'burden' of Egypt contains, first, a warning of political downfall and decay, and, next, a promise of conversion to God's service in later times. Its date was before the expedition of Sargon (xx. 1), which thus forms its foreground. The priests in Herodotus (ii. 141) traced the old monarchy down to Sethos in the time of Sennacherib, and reported that a time of great division and anarchy followed. Such exactly is the picture in ver. 2." —Birks.

4.—A fierce king shall rule over them.—" A king, in predictions of wide range, often denotes a series or dynasty of rulers. Every feature in this verse answers to the Persian dynasty, which began with Cambyses, a stern and cruel king, and ended with Ochus, one of equal or greater cruelty."—Ibid.

5.—The waters will dry up from the sea.— " The Nile here is called the sea."—Delitzsch.

18.—In that day shall five cities in the land of Egypt, &c.—This " was fulfilled by the large influx of Jews under the Ptolemies. Philo reckons that there were nearly a million Jews in Egypt. A firm footing was gained by the people and faith of Israel, even in the land of the old Pharaohs."—Birks. The city of destruction refers to sun-worship destroyed. The word for destruction closely resembles, and so is a play upon, the Egyptian word for On, the Sun-god, and alludes to the coming overthrow of this old form of idolatry.

24.—In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria.—The fulfilment of this seems yet future, as nothing like it has yet occurred.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 14.—ISAIAH XX.

" Between the death of Ahaz and the fourteenth year of Hezekiah, the Jews, alarmed by the growing power of Assyria and faithless towards God, were eager in their desire to get help from Ethiopia and Egypt. This sin is sternly reproved in a later message (xxxi. 1—6)."—Birks.

3.—Isaiah hath walked naked and barefoot three years.—" With the great importance attached to the clothing in the East, a person was looked upon as naked if he had only taken off his upper garment. The strange and unseemly dress of the prophet whenever he appeared in his official capacity, for three whole years, was a prediction of the fall of the Egypto-Ethiopian kingdom at the end of these three years."—Delitzsch.

6.—The inhabitant of this isle shall say.— " The word 'isle' in Hebrew use is not limited to islands only, but includes all the borders of the sea. It is here applied to Palestine. When worldly helps are most needed their failure is most conspicuous. No sooner had Egypt ceased to wield the rod of an oppressor than it became a treacherous friend, the staff of a broken reed, to the Church and people of God."—Birks.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 15.—ISAIAH XXI.

"This chapter contains three burdens, on the Desert of the Sea, Dumah, and Arabia. The watchman of the first burden reappears in the second, and Dumah and Seir belong to Arabia." —Birks.

1.—The burden of the desert of the sea.— " Isaiah is fond of symbolical names (xxix. 1, xxx. 6), and 'desert of the sea' is a name of this kind applied to Babylon and the neighbourhood. The continent on which Babylon stood was a desert, and the Euphrates used to overflow the whole just like a sea. The true interpretation is found in Jer. li. 13, l. 38, who was acquainted with this oracle."—Delitzsch.

2.—A grievous vision.—" The vision represented in quick succession three scenes: (1) The lawless oppressor (Babylon) carrying on his ravages; (2) Media and Persia summoned to undertake a siege; (3) the groaning bondsmen delivered."—S.C.

5.—Prepare the table, watch in the watch-tower, eat, drink. — " This description of arrogant security is remarkably applicable to Babylon; which was full of festivity on the night of its capture by Cyrus."—Kay. Applicable also to that great world power (the mystical Babylon) (Rev. xvii., xviii.), whose sudden destruction is threatened by our Lord in almost similar language (Luke xvii. 26).

10.—O my threshing, and the corn of my floor. —In its last application to the final destruction of Babylon the great this is parallel to Matt. iii. 12. See also Rev. xiv. 8—14.

11.—The burden of Dumah.—" Another mystical name supposed to point to Edom. The word itself means silence, and is used in an allegorical way of the land of the dead " (Ps. xciv. 17, cxv. 17).—S.C.

12.—If ye will enquire, enquire ye: return, come.—A call to repentance and faith, even to Edom—type of the professing Church—though sunk in the sleep of death.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 16.—ISAIAH XXII.

1.—The burden of the valley of vision.— " Nearly all commentators, ancient and modern, understand the valley of vision to be Jerusalem. But the difficulties of this view are very great. Grotius and Birks have another hypothesis, which is not merely free from these difficulties, but the reasons for adopting it are numerous and strong. It is that the valley of vision is Samaria, the capital of the Ten Tribes."—Kay.

5.—For it is a day of trouble, and of treading down.—" The scene of these opening verses is the valley of Samaria, at the close of its three years siege by the Assyrians."—Birks.

8.—He hath also removed the covering of Judah. —" Ephraim in a military view was the covering or sheltering veil of Judah against northern invaders. By the fall of Samaria this shelter was removed."—Ibid.

15.—Shebna, which is over the house.—Shebna on account of his pride is threatened with removal from his office, and exile and subsequent death in a far country. His place is to be filled by Eliakim (whom we find in office, xxxvi. 2, associated with Shebna apparently in the inferior post of " scribe " and apparently not yet banished), but it is easy to see that the two men are but types, the one of Judaism, the other of Christ, who Himself appropriated the language of ver. 22 (Rev. iii. 7).

20.—My servant Eliakim.—" This is the first appearance of 'the servant of the Lord,' who occupies so prominent a place in Part ii. Eliakim means 'God will raise up.' "—S.C.

25.—In that day shall the nail that is fastened in the sure place be removed.—There seems a contrast intended between " the nail fastened," and " the nail " of which it is said (23) " I will fasten him." The one is Shebna's estimate of his own position (16—19). The other is the result of Jehovah's fastening. " This last verse repeats the warning to Shebna."—Birks.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 17.—ISAIAH XXIII.

10.—The burden of Tyre.—" The burdens are a series of which this of Tyre, the one great maritime power of those days, is the last. Tarshish is Tartessus in Spain, one chief emporium of Tyrian commerce. Ships of Tarshish thus became a title for all vessels used for long voyages. 'Chittim' is Cyprus and the sea-coasts of the east of Europe."—Birks.

15.—Tyre shall be forgotten seventy years.— " Jeremiah, who predicted that the Jewish captivity in Babylon would last seventy years (xxix. 10), also foretold that all the nations round about should serve the King of Babylon seventy years (xxv. 9—11). 'One king' means, in prophetic style, one dynasty, and included Nebuchadnezzar's son and son's son (Jer. xxvii. 6, 7)."—S. C. " The 'one king' is the first of the four kings of Dan. vii. 17, or the Chaldean sovereignty."—Birks.

18.—And her merchandise and hire shall be holiness to the Lord.—In the sense in which the Babylonish captivity is not yet over. nor will be till the cry " Babylon is fallen " (Rev. xviii. 2), it may be also said that the degradation of Tyre still continues, and that the promise of this verse is a millennial one, recalling a similar promise to Jerusalem (Zech. xiv. 20) to be fulfilled in millennial days.

INQUIRY MEETINGS in the OPEN AIR.

"Can after-meetings be held in the open air?" is a question sometimes asked. Mr. John McAuliffe, of Otley, Yorkshire, who travels a good deal with his "Wayside Bible Carriage," writes an interesting account in the affirmative. He says:—"Mr. Spencer Walton has been with me of late in the peaks of Derbyshire. In twenty days we have addressed at least 9000 people. At Tideswell we had from ten to twenty each night seeking the Lord in the open air, and we have also borrowed chapels to deal with them. At Whitby-by-Sea I was with dear Alfred Haley on the seashore, and in a crowd of 600 adults about 100 persons rose in solemn silence to confess Christ—very many, of course, experienced Christians. At Buxton we are now having wonderful meetings in the open Market-square, and after-meetings held with the greatest quiet, the anxious being dealt with and their names taken as at similar meetings indoors. I feel this is an important matter in connection with open-air preaching. I would say to my brethren: Hold your after-meeting, dealing with inquirers as if under a roof, and the results, as in our present work, will be amazing."

MISSION TO ZULU KAFFIRS.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbert S. Clarke propose leaving England on their return to South Africa in October. The annual sale of work in aid of the Mission will be held at Darlington early in November; contributions of work, or of useful and fancy articles, will be thankfully received by Mrs. Fothergill, Pierremont-crescent, Darlington.

The growing importance of the Mission, and its consequent increasing needs, make it desirable to invite the extended co-operation of Christian friends. As the old Mission waggon is worn out, it will be necessary to buy a new one for itinerating work. In addition to a dwelling-house at Entakamu, and a larger school house at Hope Vale, there are two places where there are converts with no place to meet in. At one of these the school children have to squat on the floor of a wretched hut, in which the only light is admitted by a doorway two feet high.

Mr. Clarke erected the buildings himself at the three stations—Rock Fountain, Hope Vale, and Entakamu—but the increasing claims upon his time for evangelistic and medical work make it desirable that he should be relieved of such labour.

Additional native teachers are required in several districts where the Gospel has only been preached during Mr. Clarke's itinerating journeys, and where the people would gladly welcome a native evangelist and schoolmaster.

THE BIBLE IN IRELAND.—A small Colportage Society in Ireland, with but limited means, has been very successful during the past twelve months, by means of its agents, in selling copies of the Scriptures to Roman Catholics, six colporteurs having sold 348 New Testaments, 558 portions of the New Testament, Douay Testaments, 380, and 529 religious books. Much may be hoped for from this circulation of the Scriptures in Ireland, and we wish the work were extended a hundredfold.

FISHERMEN ASHORE.—The Missions to Seamen has for six years been working amongst the fishermen of Lowestoft with much blessing. Of these hardy men there is a remarkable leaven strong in the faith. An old wooden shed has hitherto served as the base of operations, but it has now been resolved to erect a new Missions to Seamen Institute at a cost of £500. This will be open to fishermen and seamen, strangers, and natives of various nations who frequent Lowestoft. Fourteen fishing smacks now hoist the Missions to Seamen flag in the North Sea as duly authorised mission helpers, and it is believed the result of this new effort will be that large numbers of men will be reached, from whom, by God's blessing, many more living witnesses for Christ on board their vessels and volunteer helpers may be obtained. These helpers cost the Society nothing, and are doing a great work for God on the seas. Rev. T. C. Chapman, Vicar of St. John's, Lowestoft, is the honorary chaplain.

MISSIONARIES AT BIRMINGHAM.

An exceedingly interesting Conference on Home and Foreign Missions was held at the Y.M.C.A., Birmingham, last Friday. The first hour, which was devoted to prayer and Bible-reading, gave a good spiritual tone to the proceedings of the day, and Rev. F. B. Meyer's brief but well-worked-out résumé of the dispensation of the Holy Spirit was most helpful and stimulating.

At the next sitting stirring addresses were delivered by Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, Rev. Jos. Odell (Birmingham), and Miss Campbell, the key-note of each being embraced in the watchword, "All for Jesus."

The Conference was resumed in the afternoon, when the speakers were Rev. Henry Lewis (missionary in Newfoundland and Labrador), Miss Campbell, Rev. J. Gelson Gregson, and Rev. F. B. Meyer. There was a large attendance, and the audience listened with rapt attention to the heart-searching appeals.

This was followed at seven o'clock by a meeting for prayer and praise, conducted by Rev. G. Sherbrooke Walker (Birmingham), a meeting remarkable for its spiritual power and for the large number who took part in prayer.

The proceedings of the day closed with the annual meeting of the Young Men's Foreign Mission Society, in which Mr. Lewis, Miss Campbell, Mr. Gregson, and Mr. Radcliffe took part. The thought of personal consecration ran through the meeting from beginning to end, and a solemn feeling of individual responsibility was aroused that will long be remembered. At the end a good number signified their intention of going to the mission field, or as being ready to go when the Lord should call them.

This Conference was the first of its kind that has been held in Birmingham, but the hope is expressed by many that it may not be the last.

N. E. LONDON GOSPEL MISSIONS.

A meeting for prayer and praise was held on Tuesday week in Earlham Hall, Balls Pond-road, Islington, to inaugurate the opening of this building in connection with the North-East London Gospel Missions. For a long while it has been known as Maberly Chapel, where Dr. Leask and others ministered; and has been secured by Mr. Chorley for a term of years. Having been neatly "done up" it presented a cheerful appearance to the guests, many of whom entered it for the first time. It was in Tottenham-square, at the rear of this building, where Mrs. Weitbrecht commenced the work, and which Mr. Chorley undertook about eighteen years ago. Since then branches have been opened in six other localities, and a country Holiday Home near Enfield. So the work grows, and the blessing of God rests upon it.

Mr. Albert A. Head, of Richmond, presided after tea, and the body of the Hall was by that time comfortably filled. Mr. Wm. Chorley, the director of the Mission, read the Scriptures, and gave a brief account of how the building was secured, and then Mr. Head delivered a concise address on Christ as the Door. He was followed by Mr. Gawin Kirkham, who, after a retrospect of the past eighteen years, dwelt upon the purposes for which the building would be used. Mr. Humphreys, Mr. Charles Hart, and others, also delivered addresses, between which there was a good deal of lively singing.

AN INFIDEL RECLAIMED.—On a recent Sunday a very gratifying incident occurred at Clerkenwell-green, one of the open-air spaces frequented by working men, where the representatives of the National Secular Society, the Christian Evidence Society, the London City Mission, and others, hold open-air meetings every Sunday during the summer. It was there, from the platform of the Christian Evidence Society, that Mr. George Cottee, (to use his own expression) "on the very spot where he formerly blasphemed, with all the earnestness of which he was capable, testified to the saving power of the Lord Jesus Christ." He then gave a sketch of his career, and told how he had been brought out of darkness into light.

THE WEST LONDON MISSION.

The arrangements for this Mission are now almost complete. There will be three services in St. James's Hall each Sunday, commencing on October 23. The services in the morning will be conducted by Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, and those in the afternoon and evening by Rev. Hugh Price Hughes. Mr. Pearse will also conduct a prayer-meeting every Monday evening in Wardour Hall, and preach in St. James's Hall every Friday at noon. Some appropriate service or meeting will be held in Wardour Hall every week evening. This hall, which is in Wardour-street, about one minute's walk from Oxford-street, is surrounded by densely populated artisan quarters, and as many of these artisans are foreigners, the problem of how best to reach them is somewhat complicated.

Music, both vocal and instrumental, will play an important part in the work of this Mission. Mr. R. Heath Mills has been appointed director of the musical arrangements, and there are to be three bands. For evangelistic services in St. James's Hall and for Saturday evening concerts, the orchestral band will be used, and the brass and drum and fife bands for outdoor work. Mr. Hughes earnestly appeals to those who can play any musical instrument to offer their services. "We want volunteers, earnest Christian men," he says, "who will help us to employ the mighty attraction of music to bring the people within sound of the Gospel."

WORKING MEN'S MISSION.

The six weeks' tent services recently conducted by the Working Men's Mission, Collingwood-street, on a piece of vacant ground in the New-cut, have been productive of most beneficial results. Testimony thereof daily reaches the Mission superintendents (Messrs. T. and J. Young), whose labours are unceasing. With regard to one branch of the work of the Mission not generally so well known as others—that of rescue—the following incident, related recently by Mr. T. Young, will give an idea of the good work performed by this institution:—

Some three years ago, when returning from an open-air service and proceeding to the mission hall, they were informed that a young girl who had been induced to run away from home had been drugged at a coffee-house in the New Cut. On her recovery she made her way to the Mission, through the efforts of whose officers she was got into the Servants' Home in Blackfriars-road. The poor girl's mother, having been communicated with, came and took her daughter home. During those three years nothing further was heard of her by the conductors of the Mission until, some days ago, she, accompanied by both her parents and two brothers, appeared at Divine service at the hall, the whereabouts of which she had been for long endeavouring to find out. The parents' gratitude for the interest taken in the girl was very great, and at the close of the service the whole family made a profession of faith and conversion. The young woman has become a member of a Y.W.C.A., and is now in a respectable situation.

REV. DAVID McKEE, of the Congregational Church, Agnes-street, Belfast, recently gave some account of the work of the Lord through his instrumentality in that city at the Noon Prayer-meeting, Aldersgate-street. His ministry has been blessed to the salvation of many notorious sinners, and during an evangelistic mission held in the early part of the year about fifty persons gave their hearts to God. He is visiting this country in the hope of clearing off the debt which rests upon the church, and which is felt to be a great hindrance to aggressive work for the Master.

OUR AGED POOR.

Visitors to the pretty little village of Brookleigh may have often met, on "The Suffield-road," a venerable-looking man, wearing an old-fashioned high-crowned hat, and leaning rather heavily on a stout walking-stick. This has been my old friend, Isaac Hipkiss, whose thatched cottage, with its lower window all gay with geraniums, stands endwise to the main road, as one enters the hamlet from the neighbouring market-town.

Few would think the old man had lived out his eighty-fourth year; but if God shall spare him a few more months, he will have completed his eighty-fifth. Losing his wife about ten years ago, he has lived ever since in a widower's loneliness; for, driven by stern necessity to seek a livelihood elsewhere, his children had all left him ere the mother died, and seldom have their father's eyes been gladdened with the sight of any of them since they left home.

But he always seems, more or less, cheerful. His next-door neighbours are very kind to him, and he most gratefully acknowledges their attention. He daily waters the favourite window flowers that his wife, when she left him, bequeathed to his care; he reads his well-used Bible; and, when the weather permits, takes a walk along the same old road that his boyish feet trod eighty years ago.

Isaac worked on a farm till within a month of completing his eighty-first year, his old employer retaining his services till leaving the neighbourhood himself. Then he was forced to fall on the parish, which was only allowed by "Poor Law" restrictions to give him three shillings and sixpence a week, a part of this, I believe, being furnished by his own children. This, when other of life's necessaries had been paid for, left the old patriarch just twopence per day to live upon.

Isaac is a Christian, an old-fashioned Methodist. More than forty years ago, he fancied when in the field at plough, he heard a voice that bade him pray. Looking round and seeing no one, he thought he must have been deceived; but when he had turned his horses, and come back to the same place, again the same voice, in like manner delivered the same command. He was alarmed, and had nearly sunk down on his knees when the thought that his master might find him kneeling sent him on with his team once more. Yet a third time, at the same place was the sound of that same voice, and unable to resist the impulse any longer, he dropped to the ground between the plough handles, and Isaac Hipkiss had called on the name of the Lord. "Ah, sir," I have heard him say when I have sat by his fire on a winter's evening, and listened to his life story, "never mortal man, I think, heard the music I heard then; the heavens were all full of it, and sometimes, even since then, I have caught the same sweet strains." At such a time, I have watched his face, and said in an undertone to myself, "It will not be very long, Isaac, ere you hear that music again."

But after seventy-four years of toil, and after being a member of the Church for nearly fifty years—twopence a day to live upon!!

May be he had saved a little money; it could only have been a very little, when he reluctantly bade farewell to the farm on which he had laboured so long; but the aged poor will endure almost anything rather than touch the few pounds, or, more often, shillings, that have been hidden away in some corner of the cottage. "We never know what may happen," they say. Poor souls, they mean that the little hoard may be needed for life's last hours, and to gain for them decent interment at death. But I feel such a case as Isaac's is a reproach both to the country and the Church. I do not blame individuals; I am thinking rather of systems, for Isaac is but one of tens of thousands of worn-out, honest labourers, many of whom are less favoured by the parish, and less cared for by the Church than he. If the parish could allow him more, I know this would be secured to him by the parochial guardian of the poor; but this gentleman is left quite helpless in the matter. I have no political creed, but would to God we might have some common-sense legislation on behalf of the aged, the widow, and the orphan.

Care is taken, and rightly, too, that the beasts of the field are protected from cruelty and neglect, but the old and helpless poor are left comparatively unheeded. As one, however, looks in vain to Parliament, since both its "Houses" have degenerated into mere debating societies, one must seek, with God's help, to rouse the Church to a sense of its privileges and duty in the matter. It is far from a healthy symptom to me, that her Christian conventions are multiplying so fast, and that at few, if any, of these such practical subjects as this in question are ever brought to the front. We never get a new idea that will stand the test of God's Word from any "prophetical conference"; and when good men and women meet for "the deepening of spiritual life," it must be confessed that we only hear the same thing over and over again.

Let us have a Conference at Mildmay or elsewhere on "Practical Christianity," and great shall be the blessing that shall follow it. History repeats itself. Israel of old would often fast while seeking special favour from God. But, said the Lord, on a certain occasion, "Ye fast not this day so as to make your voice to be heard on high…Is not this the fast that I have chosen?…Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out, to thy house? When thou seest the naked that thou cover him, and that thou hide not thyself from thy own flesh?…If thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul, then shall thy light rise in darkness," &c. We often have special meetings to seek special blessings from God, and often have to wonder that we get no answer to our prayers. Might not Isa. lviii. be studied with advantage by ourselves? Some of the old Puritans would reply, "Yea, verily."

One word in conclusion. A good lady wrote to me a short time since, and offered me the sum of £500 towards the restoration of a church. I prayed God's richest blessing upon her. Such piety was practical, indeed; but at the same time I advised her never to put her money into bricks and mortar, except to erect some very plain building in a neighbourhood where this might become quite necessary for God's people to be enabled to meet in peace. Numbers of kindly hearted Christians are now being induced by ecclesiastics to give their money to the so-called "restoration" and "beautification" of ancient churches, where the Gospel has, possibly, never been preached, and, probably, never will be. Thus Papal, or semi-Papal architects and artists ultimately obtain the money given, and all the pleasure to be gathered from their handiwork is to be found in the blended effect of sculpture and stained windows.

For my own part I have never found "fretted roof and columned aisle" render any aid to devotion, while the stone faces of mitred bishops, and monks, with the sensual expression that the French sculptor has mockingly left upon their features, have often sent my thoughts in another direction than towards heaven. Nay, none of these things, for—

Jesus, where'er thy people meet,
There they behold thy mercy seat;
Where'er they seek Thee, Thou art found,
And every place is hallowed ground.

But often has my heart been thrilled with delight when I have found myself walking through some well-arranged almshouses, and have discovered some aged brother or sister in Jesus rejoicing to share with others the provision made for the poor, through the foresight of some practical philanthropist. And does not the eye of the old speaker brighten when he, or she, utters the words, "I am provided for, you see, for life"? Ah, more so than if such a one were left, in poverty and need, to gaze on the beauty of a stained glass window. A hint to some who may take it if they will. John E. Linnell.

Pavenham Vicarage, Bedford.

ADULT SCHOOLS, BIRMINGHAM.

Many of our readers have heard something of the wonderful work done by the Sunday Morning Adult Schools in Birmingham and elsewhere. Those who have will want to know more, for it is one of the most remarkable and promising movements of our time. It seems to supply the best answer yet discovered to the tremendous questions, How shall we keep our elder scholars? and how shall we reach the working-class?

Mr. B. Clarke tells us, in The Sunday Magazine, how they accomplish these ends in Birmingham by means of Sunday Morning Schools. He first visited a class of men taught by Alderman White. At 7.30 a.m. he found 250 men present. A chapter was read, a short prayer offered, the visitor introduced, and then the school session began. About one-half sat down for a writing lesson, while the rest gathered round their several teachers, reading in turn, in free, unstilted fashion, everyone being at liberty to add his quota. The writing lesson is popular, partly because it gives the teachers a good opportunity for a little talk with the men one by one, and so has a social value. There were other large classes in this Severn-street school, the total number of men being nearly 3000. One large class of upwards of 200 constituted the junior division, and consisted of lads from sixteen to twenty years of age.

A savings fund has been instituted. By this means, some £16,000 of the men's savings have been invested in the savings bank, and £18,000 in building societies. "This recognition of the social and material interests of the scholars has had much to do with the success of these classes; and when churches and religious societies show more practical sympathy with the working classes in the life they now lead, they will have more influence over them in ministering to the life that is to come…Mr. White, from an intimate knowledge of at least 200 homes of the members of his class, is able to speak of the improved appearance and increased comfort which have resulted from attendance at the school. "Happy, indeed," exclaims Mr. Clarke, "must be that town where those enjoying social advantages and position meet Sunday by Sunday in brotherly intercourse with their humbler brethren!"

Some 15,000 of these adult scholars are now to be found within ten or twelve miles of Birmingham. When Alderman White was asked what were the qualifications necessary to the establishment of a successful school, he replied: "Sanctified common sense, that is the only ingredient……There is no occasion to have fun, or nonsense, or tomfoolery, on Sundays or week days, in order to interest the working-man in the truths of the Gospel, and it is delightful to find how the efforts of teachers have been abundantly blessed by the Great Husbandman; and how large a harvest of souls has been gathered. I do not think there is a church in Birmingham that is not the richer in numbers for the work of the Adult Sunday-schools."

From the fortieth annual report of the "Friends" Firstday School Association, we learn that Birmingham schools have an average attendance of about 3000 scholars, and that the "Christian Society" associated therewith numbers 800 members, meeting at 11 places, with an evening attendance of 1500. At Ackworth, Bradford, Croydon, Doncaster, and Sunderland, schools for women have been opened, while one at Leicester has been given up. New premises have been opened at Dewsbury, with a tea-meeting of nearly 700 persons. Bristol has an afternoon attendance of 550, and last summer, at Norwich, a united demonstration was held in the grounds of J. J. Colman, Esq., M.P., Norwich, 1700 were present. Surely the blessing resulting from such work cannot be estimated.

FISHERMEN'S BETHEL AT FOLKESTONE.—A new Bethel and reading-room for the sailors of this port was recently opened. On different days a large number of fishermen, their wives, and about four hundred fisher boys and girls were entertained at tea. Gospel addresses, with singing, which was heartily joined in, followed each meeting. On the next Lord's day, three Gospel services were held on board the Herald of Mercy, from Gosport, which had come over for the opening. The evening service, when Mr. Holmes and other evangelists gave addresses, was especially impressive, and many of the hardy men present were much moved. Mr. Cook, the missionary connected with this vessel, requests us to say that the bags for which he asked in a previous number, to be supplied to the troops going out to India, must be 8 in. by 7 in. Cuffs, comforters, Bibles, &c., are also needed, and should be sent to Mr. H. Cook, Belle Vue-place, Stoke-road, Gosport, Hants.

LETTERS FROM NORTHFIELD—3.

Let me frankly confess that I like America. It is a great country. There is plenty of room to move, and whatever possibilities are latent in a man here find possibilities of development. Character and capacity find their level, and though a man may, like Jabez, have been born in sorrow, here he can rise above it; and though at home he may have been a Benoni, here he will be a Benjamin—a man of the right hand; for he is not handicapped by the contemptible influence of caste. He may be "a poor fellow with no past," but here "a man's a man for a' that," and if he be honest and industrious and ordinarily intelligent, he will find remunerative scope for his activities.

But there is no place in America where I feel so much at home as in the Convention at Northfield, and similar gatherings of warm-hearted Christian people, who value a man because he is a Christian brother, and receive him all the more kindly because he comes from the motherland across the sea.

Having remarked upon the purveying for the Aurania on our outward voyage, I must say that on our return we found it, with some inconsiderable exception, all that could be expected.

Continuing my brief notes, I must mention the graphic and effective expositions of Mr. H. L. Hastings, the proprietor and editor of an American monthly which bears the same title as our own—The Christian. His recent visit to England and his racy and pungent lectures on Infidelity have done good service, and have sensibly weakened the atheistic propaganda, for which we owe him a debt of lively gratitude. I am sorry that it was accomplished at considerable cost to himself, which he was little able to afford, and, having contributed my own modicum of help, it would give me pleasure to receive and remit the like from anyone else who feels under obligation to him.

From my rough and scanty notes the following outlines of two of his expository addresses are compiled; they may afford interest to general readers, and suggest points which teachers and preachers may find worthy of extension.

THE DRAUGHT OF FISHES.

"We discuss anxiously the question, 'How to reach the masses'; the trouble in the days of Jesus was how the masses could reach Him. They pressed upon Him to hear the word of God. Often the masses hear somebody else's word, which is by no means so good. He saw two ships, out of which the fishermen had gone, and were washing their nets. They had fished all night for nothing, and thought something was the matter with the nets—they were foul with weeds, and sand, and bits of stick. The net itself was enough to frighten the fish away. There are lots of old nets that never catch anything. There are other nets that want mending, and will not succeed in catching men until they are made sound.

"He entered into Simon's boat and sat down—a very sensible thing: not stand and tire Himself as we do. He taught the multitudes. I presume there were people then (as there are now) who thought it was all foolishness of Simon to lend his boat to one whom they thought an ecclesiastical tramp, who had to go about from place to place, and had no pulpit to preach in. But Simon thought otherwise; he suspended his business to have a meeting on the shore. He was repaid very promptly; no man ever lost by what he lent to the Lord. 'Put out into the deep.' It is necessary to go to fish where the fish are; it will not do to build a fish-house on the top of a hill, and ask the fish to come and be caught, you never saw a fish come ashore for that purpose. We want to learn a lesson about deep-sea fishing.

"They enclosed a great multitude of fishes, and the net brake. It would have lasted ten years without catching anything; there are lots of old nets and old methods that are good enough as long as you don't catch anything. Now the nets were breaking, and they would have lost all, but they beckoned to their partners in the other boat to come and help them. They didn't have to hold a consultation first; there was no old quarrel to settle; they just beckoned, that was enough. They filled the boats; there was fish enough for both. Oh, there are plenty of fish in the sea, only you've got to go into the deep to catch them!

"When Peter saw it he did not hunt up a reporter of The Galilee Gazette to describe the wonderful draught they had caught. There was not a man there so surprised as Peter; he fell down at Jesus' knees and said, 'Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord!' For they were all astonished. It is a greater thing to catch a man than a whale; but you must learn how. 'Follow Me, and I will make you to become fishers of men.' And they left all and followed Him. They learned of Him, the meek and lowly of heart, as the boy learns of his father how to prepare his bait and his tackle, and to keep himself out of sight, and to be quiet, like Him who caused not his voice to be heard in the street; and gentle, not breaking the bruised reed."

THE SYRO-PHŒNICIAN MOTHER.

"The Saviour found many people whom He never would have met with if He had stayed in one place, and preached from one pulpit. The demon-possessed girl (Matt. xv.), whose mother encountered Him in these outskirts of the Lord's land, was what we should call a spiritualistic medium. The woman acknowledged the Messiahship of Jesus, and asked his help, though she was outside of the favoured nation. The disciples begged the Lord to 'send her away, for she crieth after us.' Have you been crying after any of his disciples, and been told that they are not sent to any such people? Forty years ago a school-mistress, who was interested in an unfrequented place very difficult of access, went from time to time to one minister after another to beg them to go and preach there. They each declined, and then she would cry. But at last one said he would go; and, climbing mountains and swimming rivers, he reached the spot, and a hundred souls were converted in that lonely place.

"It used to be 'to the Jew first,' but for ages it was to the Gentile first and last, and to the Jews not at all. If the Master had said to you He was not sent to any such people as you, very likely you would have gone away in dudgeon; but the Canaanite woman came and worshipped Him. Some of you haven't got a gift of prayer! You can never pray above a whisper. You know what the 'gift' is. The man who has it begins by telling God of his omnipotence, and his omniscience, and his omnipresence; then goes on from everlasting to everlasting. Then prays for the missionary cause all over the world, and for his ancient people the Jews; then for their beloved pastor and the church officers; and for the church and congregation—and so on, and so on. You can't do it. You haven't the gift; you get aground before you are out to sea. But he that has the gift can do it, and people say, 'What a beautiful prayer he makes!' Yes; he's been making that prayer for many years, and his father before him; but it don't mean anything. It's a long prayer, because it was the prayer of his father before him, and his grandfather, and his great grandfather, and the minister and the deacons. But you can't make it; you don't know how.

"Now you people that haven't 'a gift in prayer' can learn this one that the woman prayed—'Lord, help me.' Three words: one for heaven—Lord; one for earth—me; and a golden link to unite them—help. It's a good prayer. It wouldn't hurt the minister going into his pulpit; a good prayer for the business man, who wants to go straight, when others want him to go crooked; good for the housewife, when the kettle won't boil, and the dinner is behind, and everything seems to go the wrong way; good for the father and mother who want to guide the household in the fear of God. I think you can learn that prayer, though you have no gift; there is no meeting where it would be out of order, no circumstances in which it would be out of place.

"What does the Lord say? 'It is not meet to take the children's bread and to cast it to the dogs.' Then I may as well go home. I didn't come here to be insulted. I heard you say, 'Come unto Me, weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest'; but if that's the case, I may as well go home again. No, she didn't go home. She had no particular business at home at that time. You must get down to some point where you can agree with the Lord on something. If He says you are a sinner, and you bring a certificate of good conduct, you cannot come to a good understanding with Him. If He says you're a fool, and you produce your diploma as Doctor of Laws and Logic, you are likely to get nothing. If He says you are poor and blind and naked, and you say you are rich and increased with goods, you will repeat the old experience, that while He filleth the poor with good things, the rich He sends empty away.

"He called her a dog, and she took the dog's place. 'It isn't just right to take the children's bread, and give it to the dogs.' 'Truth, Lord, yet the dogs (literally the puppies, the little dogs) snap up the crumbs that fall from the table; the master will never mind that.' And Jesus answered, 'O woman, great is thy faith; have your own way.' And she went home, and found her daughter gently and restfully asleep once more; the devil had gone out of her.

"I've heard about people in Beulah Land, whose 'life flowed on in endless song, above earth's lamentation,' and they thought they had great faith; but this woman of Sidon had nothing but cloud; she had never learnt to pray, never been to the Temple, was surrounded by idolaters, had devils in her own house; yet Jesus said, 'O woman, great is thy faith.' She wouldn't go when she was told; wouldn't take hints, accepted rebuffs, was content with the dog's place, and to pick up the dog's crumbs; and she did not testify of herself, but the Lord testified of her that her faith was great.

"We don't know what she had seen or heard of Jesus on which her faith was based; but the instinct of need led her to the flowing fount of every blessing. I remember a German woman who had a faithless husband, and they were in great need. She told the Lord she was willing to be the second who should be sent empty away, but she wouldn't be the first. They had three letters all at once demanding payment of money. She spent the night in prayer, and in the morning came forth with 'the light that never shone on land or sea' beaming on her face. And help came, and the unbelieving husband was bowed down at the feet of Jesus.

"There may have been something in the look of the Saviour's eye, or a tone in his voice, that told the woman to go on praying. My little daughter once came, and asked me for a five-cent piece to go and buy something. I began to give her a little lecture in domestic economy; but I caught her whispering out of the corner of her mouth to her little companion who was standing by, 'He's a-going to give it me.' I thought I had better draw my remarks to a close; though she was willing to listen, for she knew how it was going to come out. So this woman: 'He calls me a dog, but, oh! He's going to give it me.' 'O woman, great is thy faith. Be it unto thee even as thou wilt. The devil is gone out of thy daughter.'

"Dear friends, if you talk and listen to the Saviour as she talked and listened, you will receive the same kind of answer that sent her home rejoicing."

I have given these addresses at some length, not because they were the most significant or weighty utterances at the Convention, but because nothing is to me, and I think to others, more interesting and profitable than to read new-world experiences and lessons out of these inspired old-world narratives.

R. C. Morgan.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we hope to give portrait and sketch of Principal Brown, D.D., of the Free Church College, Aberdeen.

All hopes that France may use her influence at Monaco, that the gambling hell there might be suppressed, have disappeared for the present. France herself has gone into the same business. That is to say, for the paltry sum of 423,000 francs, the right to open gaming tables in Tonquin has been granted.

We greatly regret to see that the recent gales have not only done immense damage to crops and property in general, but have unfortunately impeded evangelistic work in several districts. Many Gospel tents have been torn to atoms, and internal fittings greatly damaged. Mr. Russell Hurditch's "Evangelistic Mission," amongst others, has suffered heavily in this respect, to the extent of about £300, many largely attended services having to be temporarily suspended to substitute other tents for those damaged, as the work will probably be carried on for a month longer. The large tent on Southsea Common has similarly suffered.

It is confidently expected that the excavations being made at Sidon will yield remarkable testimony to the truth of Holy Writ. A number of sarcophagi have been found, one containing a Phœnician mummy in a singular state of preservation, and a large quantity of valuable jewellery; the case also contained an inscription of seven and a half lines in Phœnician characters, and another in Egyptian hieroglyphics, the supposed date being between 1500 and 800 B.C. It is thought that the body may prove to be that of Ethbaal, father of Jezebel.

An interesting discovery has recently been made on the shores of the Lake of Tiberias, where Herr Schumacher has succeeded in discovering the whole of the wall of Herod's city of Tiberias, which is three miles in length. Within the wall ruins were found, probably of Herod's palace, on the hill at the south-western corner of the Lake. The discovery has shown that in the time of our Lord Tiberias must have been a great and stately city, dominated by Herod's stronghold upon an elevation five hundred feet high. Day by day explorers, English and foreign, are throwing light upon the truth of the Word of God.

In the face of the recent numerous and bold attempts to bring home to John Wesley a keen sympathy with, and belief in, the doctrines and practices which have usually been looked upon as originating with the Oxford Tractarians, it is interesting to note that Lilly, the Romanist critic and historian, apparently fails to find in the great founder of Methodism any such sympathies or tendencies, but he readily gives Wesley all the credit which Lecky has yielded somewhat grudgingly. This testimony is all the more remarkable, coming as it does from a Roman Catholic philosophical writer, who surely would have found elsewhere, if he could, the most striking figure in the religious life of the eighteenth century. The passage appears in the author's "Chapters in European History."

An essayist who in a recent volume, sent out under the name of Obiter Dicta, thoughtfully deals with some widely different topics, says, in reference to the "rotten foundations" of much of our modern commercial and domestic life, that "the verdict to be striven for is not 'Well guessed' but 'Well done,'" and the remark is not without its application to the spiritual life of to-day. In the midst of interesting though profitless speculation, there is a great temptation, only too widely yielded to, to neglect the more practical duties of the Christian, and to substitute dogma for obedience to the teachings of the Master, severing the inner and outer lives, instead of endeavourlng to balance them so that each may act and re-act upon the other. Wherever this due balance is not preserved, the life is not complete in the fulness of Christ, and no effort should be spared to restore the equipoise, so that neither the utterances nor the example of Jesus may be treated with neglect.

The disgraceful position our country occupies with regard to the production of opium in India and its use in China forces upon our notice all public reference to the demoralising results of our unrighteous policy. In a recent number of The North China Herald a description is given of the greatest opium den in China. It is in Shanghai, and it is said to form an attraction which is spoken of throughout the length and breadth of the Chinese Empire. It is visited by throngs in all stations in life. There is said to be a horrible wistfulness observant upon visitors as they enter, which is changed to a peculiar, dazed expression which comes after the smoker's craving has been satisfied with the transient sensation which they call pleasure. Buddhist and Taoist priests and women jostle each other as they wait their turn from morning to midnight.

The Lancet has done yeoman service in condemning the mischievous system of licensing grocers' shops. The evils of this lamentable custom are of more alarming magnitude than might be imagined. The multitude of persons who are induced to give way to the pernicious habit of drinking by the facilities thus extended to them is enormous. It is so easy to pander to the vice in secret by ordering in private supplies of drink with the groceries and household stores, and the publicity of the wineshop or tavern is thus entirely obviated. The importance of this particular flaw in our very imperfect licensing laws has been overshadowed by their other hideous deformities, but the extent and importance of the evil make it deserve well of the attention of the legislature.

Amid the clamour and dust of the political fray it is refreshing to hear such a peaceful note as that which was struck at Baltimore, co. Cork, the other day, when the Baroness Burdett Coutts opened an Industrial Fishing School for the instruction of Irish boys in all pertaining to that pursuit. The success which has attended the Baroness' judicious encouragement of this native industry may well stimulate others, especially absentee landlords, to follow her example. One such well-managed enterprise, which teaches the people to help themselves, is worth a dozen Acts of Parliament. If Irish seafaring men only made good use of the natural advantages of their country, much of the present destitution and discontent would disappear.

It is a matter of soul-searching regret to consider how bitter and remote from the brotherly fellowship that is of Christ, the prejudices of race and colour are still in the United States of America. The telegraphic intelligence informs us that the "Foresters'" Friendly Society in Chicago has refused to admit negroes to the benefits of the institution. It becomes a mere farce to speak about the brotherhood of man, and his inalienable right of freedom and equality, if the commonest privileges of citizenship are confined to one race. The negroes have shown great patience and forbearance under much tribulation, and they have proved by practical religion and faith what a firm hold the truths of the Gospel have taken upon them; it is most cruel and wrong that their patient virtues should be rewarded by this and such-like ostracism, as if they were lepers or outcasts. Their white masters might with advantage learn a lesson in Christian humanity and charity from the "niggers" they so contemptuously despise.

A shaking of dry bones—and more than that; for the missionary spirit is reviving among the natives of Syria. It is in only a small extent indeed, but when we read that two native Syrian students in the mission college at Beyrout have offered their services for missionary work in East Africa and Uganda, we cannot but feel thankful for this sign of blessing upon Syria. When a country, like an individual, begins to carry the Gospel to others, blessing in that country is not far off. "He that watereth others shall be watered also himself."

The British public has a short memory, and Professor Max Müller has done well to remind it, in a letter to The Times, of the case of the Indian lady who refuses to recognise as her husband the man to whom she was married when both were children. He also proposes that an asylum or institution should be opened at Bombay or Calcutta for the poor persecuted child-widows of India, of whom there are seventy-nine thousand under nine years old! The suggestion is a good one, and furnishes a practical opening for the sympathies and energies of that happily increasing number of ladies, both here and in our Eastern Empire, who are interested in Zenana work.

There is a general feeling of apprehension in Italy in reference to the question of the proposed reconciliation between Church and State in that country. Negotiations with this object have been commenced by the Vatican, and many politicians, and those who once altogether repudiated the Papal assumptions, are, it would seem, now ready to welcome the proposition on the ground of the advantages that would thereby accrue to the State. On the other hand, those engaged in the work of evangelisation in Italy are naturally anxious. One speaks of the proposition as a black cloud hanging over the horizon. Already, it is said, the priestly hierarchy are lifting up their heads and speaking great things, and the imprisonment of a colporteur in Sardinia for selling Bibles at a public fair is cited as evidence of the spirit of persecution already abroad. It is inconceivable how any nation which has once thrown off the shackles of Rome can deliberately put them on again; and all true lovers of freedom, as well as all Christians, will join in the earnest wish that the machinations of the Papal power may yet be frustrated.

The recent shocking revelations with regard to the horrible traffic in children in Newcastle-on-Tyne may well cause Christians in other large centres of labour to look around them, and to endeavour, in the Master's name, to unearth and put an end to similar conditions in their midst. We fear there are few large towns in which there is not a band of these child martyrs to vice; and the idea propounded by the Chairman of the Newcastle Board of Guardians, that there are difficulties in the way of dealing with immorality of the kind, should only spur Christians on in their resolve to lessen the amount of suffering which has to be borne by the little ones.

Drunken parents may be, as was asserted at the Newcastle meeting, responsible to a great extent for the disgraceful condition of things; but vicious men are more so, and it will say but little for our English Christianity if a great effort is not made to deal with both. The cry of the children reaches heaven, surely it should be heard by Christian men and women.

The death of Judge Lawson, one of the ornaments of the Irish Bench, of whom it has been said that he was "a humble believer in the Saviour," reminds us that he was for many years of his life a Sunday-school teacher. Because "not many wise, not many noble, are called," it is the more interesting to note the names of those who, distinguished in science or literature, or in other ways, are happy in walking after the Master, and in doing lowly work for Him.

It is said that when cholera attacks an Indian village it carries off many of the adults, but leaves the children comparatively untouched. The result is that there are in proportion many more orphans in India than at home. If this be true, have our missionary societies yet fully realised it? To us who look on from a distance it seems that to gather these poor children into orphanages, and train them up under thoroughly Christian influences, would go a long way towards gaining India for Christ.

The National Vigilance Association has been prosecuting vigorous investigations in reference to the employment of English girls in Continental "cafés chantants." It is ascertained that girls are enticed to these places ostensibly to pursue their calling as artistes, but they soon find out what is really required of them. One case is cited in which such demands were made, but the young woman having her husband with her was providentially delivered. Another, however, under seventeen years of age, was not so fortunate; she was drugged, and found herself alone in a foreign hotel, with the result that she had to remain in hospital for a long time.

Their employers take care that these poor girls owe them money for dresses, &c., which they compel them to wear, so that if they escape they are either arrested for debt, or if they apply for civil proceedings they must deposit a large sum of money according to the Strangers' Law, and engage an advocate, before their case will be listened to. This is impossible, and if they succeed in applying to the British Consul his only course is to send them home at the expense of the Consulate. Thus, even if they finally escape from the snare, they can obtain no compensation for the loss of their belongings, and, worse than all, have lost what they can never regain. Nothing but repeatedly aroused public indignation will stir our legislators to act on behalf of these poor women, but we trust that the National Vigilance Association will receive hearty support to carry on its noble work. At the same time, we warn young women not to accept such situations at any price.

The case of "Captain" Harris, who has been discharged from the Salvation Army on what appear to be most unjust grounds, is exciting considerable interest in Luton and Retford, where the Captain and his wife are much esteemed for their works' sake. Mr. Harris, in a private letter to a friend, spoke of eight of the "soldiers" under his charge as living inconsistently, one of them having endeavoured to address an open-air service while intoxicated, and others being "wife-beaters, drunkards, and lazy men who would not work." Two officers were sent to investigate, but they only called upon the secretary of the corps, who entirely supported the allegations.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris seem to have served the cause literally "in weariness and painfulness, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often." They have received testimonials of the warmest character from their corps, and from a local clergyman, the Congregational minister, the Free Church minister, a landowner in Luton, and the secretary of the corps above referred to, all of whom speak of their consistent and earnest Christian life with the greatest confidence. A full statement of the case appeared in The Luton Reporter on Saturday last, two columns being devoted to the subject. It is very desirable that a statement should be made from head-quarters, if the facts are not as stated!

MR. ALBERT R. FENN, of Madrid, expects to be in England about September 12, and writes that his address will then be The Limes, Bath-street, Southport. He will be glad to avail himself of any opportunities for pleading the cause of the Gospel in Spain.

THE AGED PILGRIMS' FRIEND SOCIETY has just published as an envelope tract the address delivered at one of its meetings by the late Rev. Dr. Stanford. It is a thing to thank God for, said he, that this Society has "since its commencement assisted by pension 4800 aged pilgrims, and that it has 1152 now in the reception of similar assistance."

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on a mission to be held at Bethesda, near Saundersfoot.——For blessing on services at Glastonbury, by Rev. Walter Bradbury.——For blessing on a mission at Belfast, from Sept. 11 to 18, to be conducted by Rev. J. F. T. Hallowes.——For blessing on a special mission, to be conducted by Mr. James Dykes, at Miss Papillon's Soldiers' Institute, Sandgate, from Sept. 4 to 16.——For blessing on the means of grace in Raphoe and neighbourhood, Co. Donegal.——For blessing on a prayer-meeting recently established in Galway, Ireland.——For the spread of the Gospel in Ireland, and that the eyes of its Roman Catholic inhabitants may be opened to receive and love the truth.——For blessing on a mission, to be conducted by Mr. J. B. Bain, at Lewes, Sussex, from Sept. 18.

MISSIONS IN CHINA.—The American Presbyterian Mission at Shanghai have published a "Directory of Protestant missionaries in China, Siam, and the Straits Settlements," compiled by Rev. I. M. W. Farnham, D.D. The oldest missionaries now in China are, it seems, Rev. William Muirhead, of the London Missionary Society, Shanghai, and Rev. J. V. N. Talmage, D.D., of the American Reformed Mission, Amoy, whose services date back as far as 1847. A list of missionaries who have entered China since 1799 is given. In the last-named year Marsham, the pioneer of Chinese Protestant Missions, arrived from England. Morrison, of the London Missionary Society, followed in 1807. The American Board was first represented in 1830, the Church Missionary Society in 1844, the English Presbyterian Mission in 1847, and the Wesleyan Mission in 1850.

A WORD OF WARNING.

Mr. Spurgeon's statements, made in last month's Sword and Trowel, with regard to the spiritual condition of many Nonconformist churches, are more than confirmed in the present number. His first words were words of warning, at which, in accordance with the spirit of the times, many a jibe was levelled, even Mr. Spurgeon's ailments being made use of to give point to these sneers. Now he brings forward the evidence on which his averments are founded, and we are bound to say that what he advances is very much in accord with our own observation. One well-known Congregational minister, who is preparing a book on this painful subject, says, "Alas! it seems to me that many [ministers] have no kind of Gospel to preach;" and again, "Some of our colleges are poisoning the churches at the fountains. I very much fear that an unconverted ministry is multiplying." Mr. Spurgeon's conclusion, supported by the testimony of many ministers and others, is that "a heterodox party exists in many congregations," and he adds these striking words:—

> A chasm is opening between the men who believe their Bibles and the men who are prepared for an advance upon Scripture. Inspiration and speculation cannot long abide in peace. Compromise there can be none. We cannot hold the inspiration of the Word, and yet reject it; we cannot believe in the atonement and deny it; we cannot hold the doctrine of the Fall and yet talk of the evolution of spiritual life from human nature; we cannot recognise the punishment of the impenitent and yet indulge the "larger hope."

These solemn words should arouse the faithful to a sense of the danger, and to a more earnest stand for the truths of the Scripture, as indeed for Scripture itself. As our readers are aware, not only are portions of the New Testament called in question, and this by professing Christians, but the authenticity and inspiration of the Old Testament are distinctly denied by others; while so assiduously has the enemy worked in sowing doubts in men's minds, that multitudes regard as fable those Scriptures upon which the ancient Jewish Church fed, which Christ Himself endorsed and quoted from, which the first Apostles made the basis of their appeals as telling of and revealing the Messiah, and to which the Holy Spirit again put his seal by the conversion of multitudes. Mr. Spurgeon deserves the thanks of the Church for calling attention to such a serious state of things, which, indeed, for a long time has been a heavy burden on many minds.

BRAZIL.—Rev. E. H. Soper, Baptist Mission, Rio de Janeiro, writes:—"Since I last wrote to you our mission here in Rio de Janeiro has been reinforced by the arrival of Rev. W. B. Bagby, wife, and family, and Miss Rice, from America. We feel encourged in our work by the signs of God's favour and blessing resting upon us, and are led to look for grand results in the near future. All the evangelical churches of Rio have united in the effort to build a hospital for Christians in this city. We ask prayer that God may bless the efforts put forth here for the advancement of the cause of Christ Jesus."

"ONCE BETTER OFF."—A little paper with this significant heading draws attention to a Society, the United Kingdom Beneficent Association, which is doing a truly great work amongst those of the upper and middle classes who from reduced circumstances are in distress. Many poor and infirm ladies are in this way helped, annuities of from £20 to £25 being granted. Since the foundation of the Society upwards of £116,000 have been thus paid in annuities, besides £9000 in temporary relief to candidates in distress. At the present time there are between forty and fifty annuitants. Miss Bullar, Basset Wood, near Southampton, will give all necessary information.

CABMEN'S MISSION.

A correspondent writes:—In the short sketch of the late Miss Jessie Veitch, given in your last week's issue, reference was made to Peter Jackson. He is an indefatigable worker for God. For many years he has reached a class of men too often neglected by mission organisations. He was a cabman, and so could touch his brethren of the whip at points inaccessible to one outside the fraternity. His quaint earnestness, loving importunity, and Christlike zeal have been largely blessed. Over and over again he has been privileged to see his labours crowned with the highest success. Persecution, bitter and prolonged, has followed him in some quarters; but he was too brave and true to flinch from his duty, or to lower his colours. His coach-house used to be covered with Gospel cards. He called it "a recruiting station for the King." On the door of his cab he got painted a fine crest, which he termed the "royal arms of heaven," composed of a garter bearing the motto, "Thy Word is truth." In the centre was a hand holding an open Bible; on one page was inscribed John iii. 16, and on the other side Heb. ii. 3.

Often would he drive through the streets with a large text on each side of the cab, and one on his breast. At markets, race-courses, and public demonstrations he used to be a prominent figure. Wherever he went he showed or preached the Word of God. Some laughed at him: many passed heedlessly by; but not a few trace their first spiritual impressions to his unconventional method of proclaiming the Gospel. He is now old and feeble. The cab is given up, but still he finds delight in speaking a quiet word for his Master, or in going to the meadows to preach in the open-air. His quaint but forcible way of presenting truth produces an effect where more elaborate sermons fall to the ground. The long and arduous service of Peter Jackson entitles him to an honourable place among Christian heroes in humble life.

SMITHFIELD MARKET. — A correspondent strongly urges that efforts, similar to those put forth by Miss Weston and Miss Robinson amongst sailors and soldiers, and by Lady Hope amongst railway-men, should be set on foot for the large number of men engaged in Smithfield Market. Any friends willing to help in the matter should take counsel with Mr. J. Sayers, Central Market, Smithfield, E.C.

THE CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY will hold a valedictory dismissal of missionaries going to India and China on Tuesday, October 11. There will be a large number, both returning after furlough and going for the first time. The C.E. Zenana Society will hold a farewell meeting to lady missionaries at the Mildmay Conference Hall, on September 30, at 3 p.m. The party of missioners going to India to conduct special mission services for the native Christians are to sail on October 20. The party consists of Rev. Filmer Sulivan and Mr. E. Clifford, for North India; Rev. Henry E. Fox and Mr. Swann Hurrell for the Telugu country and Madras; Revs. Gilbert Karney and B. Baring Gould for Tinnevelly and Travancore; and Revs. George C. Grubb and Francis W. Dodd for Ceylon. Much prayer is desired for a blessing on the mission.

THE CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY.—The 115th annual report brings again before us the important and comprehensive character of the work of this missionary agency. This, as is well known, is of various kinds, and conducted from several centres; but the regular visitation of the workhouses by members of the Community, and the Sunday morning breakfasts to those who during the night have been gathered into the hall as to a blessed place of refuge from the streets, are features of peculiar interest. Such work amongst the very poorest in the haunts to which poverty has driven them, and in the Unions, which are the last resource of the destitute, is blessed indeed. In one of these workhouses there are 200 deaths in a year, and a guardian affirms that many have died happy as a result of the labours of members of the Christian Community. Mr. J. Atkinson, 28, Enfield-road, Kingsland, N., is the secretary.

THE STRANGERS' REST.

The monthly meeting of the workers at the Strangers' Rest, Ratcliff-highway, which was held on the evening of Friday last, and over which Mr. Green, of Highgate, presided, was of a most refreshing character. The secretary, Mr. Isaac, made an earnest appeal for more helpers. At this season of the year many of the regular workers are away on holidays, and it is found exceedingly difficult to supply their places. There is a grand field, said Mr. Isaac, for doing work for the blessed Master in this locality. The attention of the people at the open-air services has been very marked. It is a usual thing to see the poor unfortunate women and girls who walk the Highway standing with tears in their eyes listening to the story of the Cross. Mr. Isaac intimated that the institution is now free of debt, but about £30 is required to effect much needed repairs on the outside of the Rest, which presents a somewhat dilapidated appearance.

Mr. Henry Varley's address on "The Irrationality of Unbelief" was a stimulating and impressive one. Mr. Varley treated his subject in a calm and temperate manner, keeping in view throughout the fact that Christ's is such a beautiful cause to maintain that it should always be defended with moderation.

Rev. C. G. Moore then introduced to the meeting Mr. and Mrs. Tomkinson, and Misses Hook, Waldie, Ferriman, Cutt, Holme, and Bastone, who are to sail next week for China to labour in connection with the Inland Mission. One after the other they told how they had been led to dedicate themselves to the work of the Master in heathen China, and asked all Christian friends at home to remember them in prayer.

CARRUBBERS' CLOSE MISSION.—This centre of Christian influence in Edinburgh, writes a correspondent, has had a noble history, and promises to have a still greater future. It has taken a new start since the handsome hall was opened. Night by night meetings are held in it. Many men and women who would never otherwise hear the Gospel gather to listen to the glad tidings of salvation. A special feature in its work is the Saturday evening Gospel temperance demonstration, at which lively and telling speeches are made, sweet songs sung, and readings full of the best teaching rendered with elocutionary effect. Visitors to Edinburgh often find their way to this meeting, and they come away feeling grateful for such a powerful factor in the raising of the lapsed masses.

VICTORIA DOCKS.—Little more than twelve months ago the People's Mission was started in the neighbourhood of these docks, with the object of taking the Gospel to the poorest and most abandoned classes of the district. With Bible and tracts in hand, the visitors have gone from house to house speaking to the people, and open-air meetings have been held in the streets, and many, both Protestants and Catholics, have gladly listened. Many free teas have also been given. At all such meetings the Gospel has been faithfully preached. The result of this effort is that some of the worst characters in the neighbourhood have been converted, and much good has been done. The mission-hall was formerly a stable. Communications should be addressed to Mr. John Waite, hon. sec., 22, Woodstock-street, Canning-town, E.

HOLIDAYS FOR THE HALT AND MAIMED.—Amongst the happy parties of children and mothers sent recently to village homes on the permanent establishment at Brigadier-hill or the North-east London Gospel Mission there have been many cripples. In one case, that of a boy of twelve, a crutch and stick had to be provided before he could leave the back streets for the first time in his sorrowful life. Another was that of a widowed mother who for forty-nine weeks had not left her bed. During the summer months about forty at a time have been sharing these country holidays, and it is a privilege to listen to their unstudied but hearty expressions of thankfulness for such blessing. The gracious work will be continued as long as funds permit. The superintendent, Mr. W. Chorley, 2, Marquess-grove, Canonbury, will supply all information.

OBITUARY.

EMMA JANE WORBOISE.

This well-known and popular writer passed quietly away at Clevedon last week. She had for twelve months been out of health and unable to follow her literary labours. She was a most felicitous writer, and as the author of a large number of poems and numerous tales of a strongly evangelistic character, had attained a high repute.

MR. S. R. BRIGGS, TORONTO.

This earnest philanthropist, whose name is well known in connection with the Willard Tract Repository, and whose loss will be greatly felt in the religious world, was called home on Sunday. Commencing life in the lumber trade, he devoted his leisure to the publication and distribution of sound and religious literature, and thus prepared the way for the larger scheme with which in later years his name was so intimately associated.

He was the compiler, in conjunction with Rev. John H. Elliott, of a useful volume of "Notes for Bible Readings." He was ever active in all evangelistic work, and will be greatly missed, especially in Canada.

REV. W. SYKES, SOUTH AFRICA.

Intelligence has been received by telegram from Barkly, dated August 27, of the death of Rev. William Sykes, of the London Missionary Society, Inyati, Matebeleland, South Africa. Mr. Sykes left this country in 1858, and before a year had elapsed he had to mourn the death of his wife, which took place at Kuruman. In August, 1859, Mr. Sykes set out with the late Dr. Robert Moffat for Matebeleland. After some delay the missionary party settled in the valley of Inyati, which had been granted to them by the chief, Moselekatse, for their occupation. At this station Mr. Sykes has toiled on with brave heart and unconquerable faith ever since, and with but very little sign of spiritual awakening amongst the natives. During a visit to Cape Town Mr. Sykes made the acquaintance of his second wife, a sister of Mr. Kolbe, a Rhenish missionary, who has proved a most helpful companion to him in his missionary work. Mr. and Mrs. Sykes were in England for two years in 1873—5, and in 1884 had to withdraw from the mission for a few months owing to failing health, which, however, was sufficiently restored to allow of their return, in June of that year, to their labours at Inyati.

In a letter written a few months ago, Mr. Sykes said:—"Pray ask your friends—everybody that loves the Master—to join in pleading for the long-looked-for outpouring upon this poor Mission. I have long held to the plough-tail, and had many a tossing and shaking in trying to make a garden for the Lord in the very heart of a dense thicket, and have been often weary and sore both in body and heart; but, through grace, I never dropped my hold of the plough-tail yet, and do not mean to do so, unless compelled by physical exhaustion; and if the time come (as I thought it had come some year and a half ago) that I am silenced through weakness of the flesh, I trust that the willing spirit will still be found crying, 'Behold! behold the Lamb!'"

HOP-PICKERS AT ALTON.—Six tents are up and at work. Large congregations have been gathered, consisting of tramps, gipsies, pickpockets, ticket-of-leave men, and nearly every grade in society. The Lord is pleased to let us see that our effort has not been in vain in rescuing the perishing. Many can bear testimony of the power of the truth in their own souls, and seen in the formation of their characters. The terrific storm of Friday has hindered our tent work much. These have been blown down, and much damaged. We hope some of the Lord's people will remember us in prayer. S. Chinn.

BISHOP TAYLOR'S STEAMER.—The steamer company is now in the midst of hard work in the endeavour to haul the steamer to its destination by means of a road engine. Roads have to be improved, bridges built over, and numerous other obstacles overcome, in consequence of the explorer, Mr. H. M Stanley, having exhausted all the manual labour of the country. Bishop Taylor, however, is, as ever, "full of faith and confidence," and sends healthy accounts of his party and work. Some fifteen or twenty missionaries are expected to start for Liberia next month as pioneers for some of the stations founded by the Bishop during the past spring.

THE GOSPEL IN INDIA.

Mr. W. A. Redwood writes from Malvalli, in the Mysore territory :—

A year ago with my family I began work in this dark neighbourhood. We have one native Christian helper who was converted here, but there are scores of thousands of heathen to work amongst, most of whom are as dark and ignorant as the cattle they graze. It must be "line upon line," before they understand even the simplest truths.

They live in villages scattered over a tract of country as large as Devon and Cornwall, with no roads to most of them. The moral condition of the people is too terrible to describe, and, in addition, many of the villages are situated in jungles whose atmosphere is charged with malaria, and where, humanly speaking, it would be dangerous to go. Tens of thousands of poor heathen in this great Empire live and die in such places without once hearing the name of Christ. We endeavour to reach them with the Gospel; we treat them freely with medicines for all kinds of diseases, and thus gain their confidence.

We have opened a mission school which is well attended, where many heathen boys are learning the Word of God and listening to the Gospel daily. We are now opening a reading-room in this town for high-caste Brahmins and others, to read the Word of God and useful books and papers. We want, also, to open a similar room in Kollegal, a large native town, where a good few of the natives can read English. For that, useful English books are needed.

Our native helper is in charge of the school, so I am left alone to reach the people. The two principal towns in this district, Malvalli (8000 souls) and Kollegal (10,000 souls), are more than I can attend to alone, without the hundreds of villages. We are, therefore, greatly in need of helpers. A brother to travel with me, and a sister to visit the women with my dear wife, would be a help and comfort to us. We also ask the prayers and sympathy of your Christian readers. The field is large, and we are few and weak. There are many things we would gladly do to further the work if we could.

We would establish schools in many towns and villages. The heathen are asking for them. They would be lights where only gross darkness reigns at present; we would build a mission hospital, which would be a boon to the natives, and a power for good. A medical man would have a grand sphere to labour in the Gospel with his professional skill. We would also, if we could, build a school-room for our school, and a dwelling-house. There is no house room in the neighbourhood to welcome European helpers to as yet. The natives live in low mud-built houses; Europeans cannot.

But, however much these things are needed, they are not the chief object in view. Our greatest concern is for the salvation of souls. Many are beginning to understand the truth, and some seem ready to forsake all for Christ's sake.

MISSION TO ARABIA.—At the last meeting of the Foreign Missions Committee of the Free Church of Scotland, Mr. Alexander Paterson, M.B., C.M., Edinburgh, son of the committee's first medical missionary to Madras, and grandson of Dr. Chalmers's, "Missionary of Kilmany," was appointed a medical missionary to South Arabia. This Mission, it will be remembered, was founded by the late Hon. Ion Keith-Falconer. At the request of his widow, a memoir of Mr. Keith-Falconer's life and varied career as student, home evangelist, foreign missionary, and scholar, is being written by his friend and tutor, Rev. Robert Sinker, B.D., librarian of Trinity College, Cambridge. Mr. Sinker has trained many missionaries and scholars, and his intimate knowledge of the whole life of the pioneer missionary to Arabia, justifies us in expecting a volume worthy of Ion Keith-Falconer, and certain to stimulate the Church, and attract many to similar self-sacrifice.

PROTESTANTS AT MARÉ.

The persecutions to which the native Protestant Christians on the island of Maré have been so long subjected seem likely to come to an end. When the annual report of the London Missionary Society was printed the banished pastors and deacons were still in exile in New Caledonia where they had been imprisoned for two years. The report says: "Those who dissent from the Established Protestant Church have not yet obtained liberty of worship, and are not allowed to have pastors."

We now learn that Rev. John Jones, the London Society's missionary at Maré, has had a successful interview with the Governor of New Caledonia, and the exiled teachers have been allowed to return to their homes, and religious liberty is to be granted to the Protestants of Maré. Writing, on May 12, to the friend who sends him a copy of The Christian weekly, Mr. Jones says: "I am happy to say that the Protestants of France are now stirring on our behalf, and the exiles have been restored this week to their homes." Two of the teachers died in captivity, several are in feeble health after their protracted confinement, and one deacon, who during the whole time has been kept separate from the others on a small lonely islet, is still a prisoner.

◆

ST. GILES' CHRISTIAN MISSION.

This Mission, with which the names of Mr. George Hatton and Mr. William Wheatley are so intimately associated, has just issued its annual report. The Mission deals especially with three classes—the adult poor of the parish, the children, and with discharged prisoners. This latter branch reaches an ever-widening circle of those who have been "in trouble," as they themselves phrase it, and remarkable testimonies have recently been forthcoming as to the manner in which God has blessed this rescue service. The men are met at the gates of the prison on the morning of discharge, their wants kindly attended to, and work found for them, with the result that hundreds thus looked after are now leading steady, honest, sober, industrious lives, and very many of them genuine Christian lives. Connected with this branch is the preventive work amongst the lads, and it is a usual thing now for the magistrates in the City when a lad is brought before them to communicate direct with the Mission. In this way many have been saved from a life of crime. Adjoining the Brooke-street Home there is now a Lads' Institute, where about fifty lads can be accommodated while work is being found for them, and this new branch will doubtless prove a valuable adjunct in this preventive service.

Of the Sunday-schools at the various branches —Neal-street, Vere-street, Brooke-street, Mount Pleasant, and Brewer's-court—the superintendents give satisfactory accounts. The total attendances at the different services in the five schools average about 1300, and when the auxiliary work of bands of hope and other agencies is considered, it is obvious that a vast amount of good must be done in the poor districts in which the schools are situated.

Each of these stations is again the centre of mission effort, of regular house-to-house visitation, and of many beneficent agencies for alleviating human suffering and woe. Not the least of these are the visiting of common lodging-houses, and the dispensary, at which medical advice and medicine are given at nominal charges. The address of Mr. George Hatton, the superintendent, is 4, Ampton-street, Regent-square, W.C.

UNION HALL MISSION.—Mr. Robert Bilke, the superintendent of this Mission, has removed from 18, Greenhill Park-villas, to Abergeldie, Greenhill-road, Harlesden, N.W., where all communications for the Mission should be addressed.

THE GOSPEL IN AFRICA.

Rev. E. A. Shoreland writes from Kimpoko, Stanley Pool, Congo :—

We are extremely grateful for the manner in which you supported the efforts of our beloved Bishop to raise funds for our steamer. By the time you receive this the steamer will probably have arrived at the mouth of the Congo.

You may understand the longing I and the three friends appointed with me to a station on the Kasai river have for its arrival and construction, for we have been anxiously waiting to reach that destination for a year. We have been doing what we could by way of preparation, but that is very little, as the language of that country is unwritten, and altogether dissimilar to that spoken here at Kimpoko. With the steamer we are expecting ten or twelve recruits from America.

Many are the qualifications for this work. We need Christian mechanics of good common school education, who, besides knowing their craft, can tell plainly the story of the Cross. Christians of scholastic attainments, able to grapple readily with the mysteries of unwritten languages, that so we may speedily have a Gospel literature; Christians of the medical profession will find here only too large a field for practice, as centuries of ignorance and vice have left their impressions on both the souls and the bodies of the people.

◆

FRIENDS OF ISRAEL.

The annual meeting of the society which bears this name was held recently at Basle, on the occasion of the missionary festival in that city. Some missionaries working amongst the Jews and other friends of the work were present, and engaged in earnest prayer for Israel. The president, Professor von Orelli, pointed out that what was especially needed in this work was an out-pouring of the Spirit of God.

Rev. P. E. Gottheil, from Stuttgart, gave it as the result of his long experience, that the Jews as a people do not know the law as a holy one, and need a mighty power to bring them to the fear of God and to a sound repentance. They need to be led to Jesus just as John the Baptist was taught to do it. The opinion was generally expressed that in Germany there is an entirely changed feeling on the part of Jews towards Christianity, and many instances were mentioned where Jewish populations had received witnesses for Christ in a very friendly and benevolent manner.

Mention was also made of a deeply interesting movement amongst Jews in Siberia, brought about in a manner which again shows how true it is that "God moves in a mysterious way." Some twenty years ago a Polish Jew having confessed Jesus as the Messiah, a conspiracy was formed against him, and on a false charge he was condemned to Siberia. While there he heard from Rabbi Rabinowitz, and having received further instruction, he has been enabled to gather around him a number of his brethren, who now are believers in the Lord Jesus. This society of Christian Jews, which will, it is hoped, be the nucleus of a much larger body, seems to be in a flourishing condition.

A friend from Sweden also gave a satisfactory picture of activity amongst the Jews in that country. In the minds of all present at this interesting gathering there was the joyful assurance that the time for the salvation of Israel draweth nigh.

THE KAFFIR BIBLE.—The task of revising the Kaffir Bible has recently been completed, and it has been placed before the British and Foreign Bible Society to be printed and published. The revision has occupied nearly twenty years, and in the number of revisers was the late eminent Kaffir missionary, Rev. Tiyo Soga, whose son, Rev. Dr. W. A. Soga, is following his father in the ministry and missionary service of the United Presbyterian Church. One of the revisers, Rev. A. Kropf, who has been associated with the work from the commencement, has come to London to see the work through the Press.

NO PRAYER IS LOST.

"Whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive."—Matt. xxi. 22.

No prayer is lost! Each silent-breathed petition
Ascends to heaven, and there by all is heard;
In Jesus' name each one obtains admission,
And angels bend to catch that magic word.

No prayer is lost! Once passing heaven's portal,
And reaching God th' Almighty Father's ear,
It doth become thenceforth a thing immortal,
Its issues stretching far beyond Time's sphere.

We may not guess how man God's plans can altar,
But yet we know no prayer can be in vain,
And though ofttimes our trembling faith may falter;
No prayer of ours but brings eternal gain.

No prayer is lost! We pray ofttimes scarce daring
To hope our prayer has reached the Father's ear,
Forgetting He his children's wants is sharing,
And sympathising with their every fear.

As helpless mariners whose water failing
Behold a ship afar, and cry for aid,
Scarce thinking that their cry will be availing,
So often have we to our Father prayed.

No prayer is lost! Then let not patience weary,
Although the answer may be long delayed,
Pray on! The skies to-day so dark and dreary,
To-morrow in bright hues may be arrayed.

All power, all might is his, the King of heaven,
And thou hast therefore but to ask and have;
For unto those who ask all things are given,
Can He withhold from those He came to save?

Fairelie Thornton.

◆

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh has had a very novel experience at Brighton, having been evicted from one of "King Solomon's" meetings, on the assertion of a "prophetess" that he was "full of the devil."

Barnet Fair.—Tent services have been conducted during the fair by Col. Puget and other friends. It is most important thus to bring under the sound of the Gospel many whose ordinary manner of life excludes them to a great extent from its influences.

Mr. J. M. Scroggie will commence a six months' special mission in the East-end of Glasgow on Sunday, September 11. The meetings will commence in the Free Church, Charlotte-street, and be continued in succession in thirteen other Free Churches. Much prayer is requested for blessing on his effort.

Aldershot.—A tea-supper was recently given to about 250 men and their wives at Miss Daniell's mission, all, the men being representatives from nine stations in the neighbourhood. The gathering was in every way a success. Major Owen Hay gave a searching and interesting address, which evidently made a deep impression.

Ipswich.—Mrs. Dorin and Mr. Gilbert, both of Clapham, have been giving Gospel addresses each Sunday evening in Brook's Hall Mission Room, which has been well filled with eager and earnest listeners. The Saturday night gathering for prayer, which has been carried on now for about two years, has largely increased in numbers, and is much valued.

The Great Assembly Hall, Mile End-road, was crowded to excess on Sunday morning, when the Wild West Indians were present, and when Mr. James B. Wookey preached. Many were attracted to the service out of mere curiosity to see the Indians, but judging from the rapt attention of the whole congregation, there is good ground for hope that the powerful, yet simple, earnest, and impressive words which fell from the lips of the zealous preacher, comforted many weary sinners, and caused anxiety of soul within them.

GIFFORD HALL MISSION, ISLINGTON.—At the annual flower show held recently, 240 exhibitors were represented, and eighteen prizes awarded. An exhibition of pets and competitions in singing and reciting added to the interest, and there were about 500 visitors.

The Book World.

Common Praise: A handbook of Nonconformist Church Music. By F. G. Edwards. 3s. 6d. Curwen & Sons. This book would be of little interest to general readers, but it contains some useful hints to organists, choirmasters, and those in charge of the service of praise. The author addressed a number of questions to the organists and choirmasters of churches of every denomination. A judicious summary of the replies to these questions, followed by the author's summing up, would have been interesting and useful. It is a pity that the author has swelled out his volume with giving many answers in detail, some of which are both frivolous and unworthy of publication.

William Carey, the Shoemaker who became "The Father and Founder of Modern Missions," by Rev. J. B. Myers, Association Secretary of the Baptist Missionary Society; and Robert Moffat, the Missionary Hero of Kuruman, by David J. Deane. 1s. 6d. each. S. W. Partridge & Co. These volumes commence a series of "Missionary Biographies," and if those which follow are equal in interest, style, and general get-up, they will deserve a wide circulation. We concur with the opinion expressed in the preface of the first-named book that there is "nothing more likely to promote missionary enterprise than acquaintance with the labours and spirit of the men, who, in the high places of the field, have been the messengers of the churches and the glory of Christ."

"A 1" is the title of a new weekly illustrated paper to appear early in November. Mrs. Stephen Menzies is the editor, and the paper will be similar in size, style, and tone to Our Own Gazette, but of a more general character, to a great extent devoted to the interests of young men.

Father, Come Home, and A Fatal Fall, are among the new issues of Horner's Penny Stories for the People. These stories, written in a style to reach the hearts of the people, and each containing the Gospel message, are well adapted for distribution by those who are visiting amongst the poor. W. B. Horner & Son, 27, Paternoster-square.

SEPTEMBER MAGAZINES.

On and Off Duty (1d. Marshall Bros.), as the journal for policemen, does excellent service.

The Sentinel (1d. Dyer Bros.), as the organ of the Social Purity Movement, is doing a noble work.

Our Boys' Magazine (1d. 13, Warwick-lane) contains, amongst other good matter, a short sketch of Robert Moffat.

After Work (Marshall Bros.), and The Home Visitor (Wm. Hunt & Co.) are both welcome visitors to many households.

The Gospel Magazine (6d. Collingridge) contains in every page much that will help to sustain and comfort God's children.

The Life of Faith, in a double number (price 4d. Marshall Bros.), contains a general report of the Keswick Convention, and several of the addresses in full.

The Children's Friend. 1d. Seeley & Co., Essex-street. The literary contents and illustrations of this monthly are alike delightful to mind and eye, and constitute a good claim to the title.

Our Own Magazine is looked for with increasing eagerness by thousands of members of the Children's Special Service Mission. And well it may be; the current number is a charming one.

Bright Words (½d. Marshall Bros.), The Lantern (1d. Mizpah Hall, High-street, Poplar), and The London City Mission Magazine (1d. 3, Bridewell-place, E.C.), are each in their respective spheres doing much good.

Y.W.C.A. Monthly Journal. 2d. 316, Regent-street. The evils of the Scottish Feeing Markets, and the advantages of the "Travellers' Aid" Society at the London railway stations are both put before us in this admirable journal.

China's Millions (1d. Morgan & Scott) holds a prominent place amongst missionary journals, and this month, besides news from the different provinces, gives accounts of progress in Cheh-kiang and of glad tidings from Shan-si.

The Railway Signal (1d. 186, Aldersgate-street) is one of the best companions for the working man's home that is published. It is full of interesting articles that will at once inform and elevate the mind. To railwaymen it has of course a special interest.

The Young Men's Magazine (1d. Elliot Stock) has an article descriptive of the work of Rev. W. H. Murray in reducing the Chinese language to a system of dots and dashes, by which, in a very short time, blind people are enabled to read, and, being taught the Scriptures, are now doing valuable service amongst their countrymen.

The Christian Treasury (6d. Marshall Brothers) continues its valuable series of articles on "Standard Bearers, or Heroes of the Scottish Faith." Mr. Charles Fowler's contribution, "The Necessity of a Creed," is also well deserving of notice, as setting forth definitely and clearly the authenticity of the Old Testament, and the fact that its authority rests on no less sure a foundation than that of having been received in its integrity by Christ Himself, as well as the Apostles.

The Family Physician (7d. Cassell & Co.) has some extremely good hints on the making of tea and coffee, of which every housekeeper should possess herself.

The second volume of Bishop Ellicott's excellent Commentary on the Old Testament (Cassell & Co.) is now completed, taking the reader as far as the Kings.

The Illustrated Missionary News (2d.) and The Jewish Herald (1d.), both published by Partridge & Co., also give interesting glimpses of other lands and of missionary effort therein.

The Expositor has, amongst other good things, a very excellent paper by Dr. Chadwick, on "Asking in Christ's Name," and a continuation of Dr. Maclaren's exposition on Philemon. But the chief article of the month is one in which Principal David Brown, of Aberdeen, gives some "Personal Reminiscences of Edward Irving." Dr. Brown was assistant to Irving during more than two years of the most important period of his life. This gives a remarkable interest to his testimony.

The Fireside.—This monthly, high-toned, interesting and healthy as it is, deserves a wide popularity. We congratulate Rev. Charles Bullock, its editor, on the present number. There is a poem by Mrs. Charles, some charming lines (anonymous) entitled "The Chicken's Grace," and four little verses by Clara Thwaites, on "The English Boy." The editor contributes a very well-written sketch of the late Rev. W. Poole Balfern, entitled "A Poet of the Sanctuary."

The Sword and Trowel.—The notices of books, for which this little magazine is famous, are unusually bright and interesting this month. We strongly recommend every preacher of the Gospel to buy this number. The trumpet tones of warning given in the editorial call for our most serious attention. But even more valuable is a really remarkable treatise entitled, "The Preacher and his Work." This latter should be separately printed, and sent to every preacher in the land, lay and cleric.

The Quiver.—From a number of very useful and interesting papers we select two for special notice. The first, a short study from Nehemiah's life, by Dr. Chadwick, Dean of Armagh, is a noble little paper. It contrasts Nehemiah the courtier, when, confessing his timidity, he says, "Then was I very sore afraid" (Neh. ii. 2), with Nehemiah, the patriot-leader, as he exclaims, "Should such a man as I flee?" &c. (Neh. vi. 11). The other paper we would notice is headed, "John Gossner's Work for Christ." It is long since we have read so noble a tale of Christian mission work as the one that is here sketched.

◆

Appeals.

The Thames Church Mission is in urgent need of books, magazines, tracts, &c. Any parcel will be doubly valuable now, as the stock is almost exhausted. Communications to the secretary (Rev. H. Bloomer), 31, New Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, E.C.

Seaside Change for Poor Children.—Mr. J. W. Weston, of the Grove Mission, Great Guildford-street, appeals for help in sending poor and weakly children to the seaside. Since June he has been able to send parties of seven or eight girls for a fortnight's change to Southend, and last month made arrangements for sending a similar number of boys. Further help is now urgently needed.

Foreign Books.—Will friends kindly spare us a few French or Italian books for the International and Continental Division of the Y.W.C.A.? We desire to have such as will attract and interest our girls, but, above all, those that will help them on in their Christian life. We have only very few French, and none in the other languages, and are very anxious, seeing how much they are appreciated, to form a small lending library.—The Secretary, Int. & Cont. Division, 316, Regent-street, W.

Costermongers' Cottage Mission.—This Mission, situate in a very neglected neighbourhood, recently opened a new hall, much required for a largely increased work and overcrowded attendance. The workers are sadly distressed and harassed for want of help to enable them to combat with the evil surroundings, and they ask for the prompt sympathy of Christian friends. Mr. Walter Penrose, the superintendent, has now laboured and lived here for fifteen years. His address is Vinegar Ground, City-road, E.C.

NEW ORLEANS.—Out-door preaching in various places has been a feature for several months past in this city. The congregations have been large, and generally very attentive to hear the Word. As an evidence that good has been done, five new Sunday-schools have been started by the mission, to be conducted by the churches nearest to them. These schools are the nuclei of future congregations, while young preachers are receiving good training in these out-door meetings.

NEW HEBRIDES.—A fresh outburst of feeling on the New Hebrides question has been caused in Victoria on the receipt of news that trespasses have been committed by the French against the Presbyterian missions in the islands. The monthly organ of the Free Church o Scotland says:—We have still cause for much anxiety about the future of the New Hebrides. The French continue to send settlers to the islands, and to act as i they had some claim to them. Treaties exist which clearly exclude such a title; but their Government i said to be taking up this childish position—that as we in their opinion, have no right to remain in Egypt, the will remain in the New Hebrides until we leave tha country. The situation is very unsatisfactory, if no critical, and the Australian colonies are become ver impatient under it.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The amount promised for the Church House scheme now amounts to £45,000.

The Bishop of Bedford was prevented from preaching at Whittington, Salop, of which parish he was formerly the rector, by the sudden death of his wife at Barmouth.

September 17 has been fixed for the opening of the new English Episcopalian Church at Copenhagen, which the Royal and Imperial families now in Denmark will attend.

Rev. Robert Catterall, rector of St. Philip's, Bradford-road, Manchester, an earnest mission preacher, has been appointed by the Bishop of Manchester as diocesan missioner.

A branch of the Church Army has been opened at St. Saviour's, Southwark, and good work has already been done in the narrow streets and small courts which abound in the neighbourhood.

St. Helen's, Bishopsgate, which the late Bishop Blomfield always spoke of as the Westminster Abbey of the City, is, under its new rector, Rev. J. L. Airey, to be opened daily for two hours each in the middle of each day.

The Church Army has recently held many successful meetings, and had much blessing at Esclusham. At one meeting six young men, and at another five came forward to confess Christ, and resolved to live to his glory. Five other men signed the pledge at the close of a temperance meeting.

Rev. T. A. Nash, rector of Lowestoft, speaking at a Church Army Conference held in that town, said, after four years' experience of its working, many in the parish had become good Bible-reading and good Bible-living Christians through its efforts. He believed it would be a powerful agent in bringing the masses from degradation and alienation.

Bishop Ryle says Rome will never rest till mass is said in St. Paul's, and Lambeth Palace is once more an appanage of the Vatican. Is it hazarding too much to add that therefore Rome never can have rest? Surely not, unless it be admitted that the faith and fervour of our fathers, who broke the yoke of the Romish Church, are dying out amongst us!

The Bishop of Bangor, in the course of his charge to the clergy of the diocese, after pointing out signs of progress for which all should be thankful, speaking of temperance and other work, said, after all, Christianity was the only true temperance and purity society, and was the true mode of meeting every evil to which corrupt nature is liable. Temperance and purity are the inseparable fruits of godliness, and can only be attained by prayer through Christ, although much is and may be done by societies.

Among the speakers at the approaching Diocesan Conference at Wrexham will be Canon Blackley and Canon Basil Wilberforce, on Thrift and Temperance; Mr. Stanley Leighton, M.P., on the best means of promoting social intercourse among Churchmen; Mr. P. P. Pennant, on the extension of Church work; and Mr. Trevor Parkins on the Church Patronage Bill; besides, of course, many of the clergy of the diocese. The Bishop of Exeter is to preach, and Sir Watkin Wynn will preside over a public meeting.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. George Wilson, of St. Michael's, Edinburgh, has been giving on Sunday mornings an able and interesting series of addresses on "The Writers of the New Testament."

About twelve thousand members have been added to the Canadian Church during the past twelve months, and nearly four hundred stations have been established in Manitoba in the same period.

The young men's guild is breaking fresh ground in many places. A guild choir has been formed in Edinburgh; a field club at Aberdeen, and special mission districts have been undertaken by the Edinburgh and Greenock councils.

Many admirers in India of the genius of Dr. Horatius Bonar are subscribing to the testimonial which is being raised in honour of his jubilee. The contributors include members of all the evangelical churches.

METHODIST.

About four hundred persons attended the circuit camp meeting at West Park, Sunderland, and the spiritual influences of the services were very fruitful and encouraging.

Rev. T. Champness recently announced that he and his wife had resolved to sell the little property they had, and to devote the amount to the support of two lay missionaries in Africa.

The "Tent Mission" is doing excellent service amongst Methodists in Ireland. The Methodist Recorder says:—"We are quite sure that work by tents and travelling caravans might be done all over England, which would turn the summer into months of spiritual harvest."

Six young men from the Missionary College at Richmond are about to leave for the mission field. Two go to India, one of these to the Santali tribe in the North-west of Bengal, another to Montserrat in the West Indies, a fourth to Burmah, and two others to the West Coast of Africa.

At the second anniversary of the Mission at St. George's Chapel, Cable-street, East-end, it was stated that every branch of the work has been attended by great success. Upwards of 500 men and women, many of whom had been formerly living in ignorance, have been won for Christ, and are now living a pure and holy life. Hundreds of pledges have been taken. About 800 children are regularly attending the Sunday-schools and Band of Hope.

SALVATION ARMY.

The Army work in Ceylon is progressing rapidly. In one district many high-class Buddhists have joined, and two stations have been formed.

Upwards of three thousand persons attended the all-day camp meetings held at Ipswich. During the last five months this corps has been greatly blessed, and scores of persons have confessed Christ.

At Stratford-on-Avon, upwards of one hundred and fifty persons have come forward for salvation in the past two months. The town is divided into districts, every house being visited by two of the lasses.

The Stamford Watch Committee have, at a special meeting, adopted a resolution empowering the chief constable to abstain at his discretion from taking actual proceedings against any further persons for preaching until the appeal is heard and decided.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

George Wood, of Luton, who has been labouring in Manchester for a time, is going to Painswick, Gloucester, where work is much needed.

Isabella Young, of York, joined by Agnes Thompson, of Barnard Castle, has held an eight days' mission at Stockton-on-Tees. The attendance was fair, and the results enbouraging.

Jehu and Sarah Newlin, after varied and acceptable service in London and Dublin yearly meetings, and in Syria and elsewhere, left Queenstown on the 21st ult. for their home in America.

The deputation of Irish Friends to the American Conference left home in time to attend Ohio yearly meeting, and had a good passage out, while the English deputation sailed for America on Saturday, the 3rd instant.

A very touching epistle has been addressed by Thomas Kimber, of Long Island, N.Y., to "Friends, young and old, west and east." He is on his death-bed, and earnestly pleads for the "old theology" of "the all-sufficiency of a personal and living Saviour, not only by his atoning death to reconcile us to God, but that being reconciled we are saved by his life."

BAPTIST.

The Baptist Magazine has this month a portrait and sketch of Rev. J. T. Wigner.

Rev. D. P. Macpherson, B.D., of Glasgow, entered on the pastorate of Myrtle-street Chapel, Liverpool, in succession to the late Rev. Hugh Stowell Brown, on Sunday last.

The current number of The General Baptist Magazine contains an article upon Samuel Medley, the Baptist hymn-writer, author of "Awake, my soul, in joyful lays," and many other hymns.

Last Sunday Rev. Dr. Duncan, late of Huddersfield, entered upon the pastorate of Hornsey-rise Chapel, vacated by Rev. Frank Smith. The Chapel morning and evening was quite full, and a very hearty welcome was given to the new minster. One of his first innovations is a "Question Box," in which any who are in spiritual difficulties may deposit written queries, which will be answered from the pulpit. This excellent plan might be universally adopted with advantage. Dr. Duncan is also announced to give a course of popular lectures on the successive Thursdays of this month.

CONGREGATIONAL.

The Evangelical Magazine for September contains a capital photograph of Rev. J. Morgan Gibbon, the popular minister of the church at Highgate.

Rev. James Craig, of Dublin, for several years connected with the Irish Church missions in that city, has taken up the work in Galway as missionary pastor.

Dr. Hiles Hitchens will commence, on Sunday next, a series of sermons to young men at Eccleston-square Church, to be delivered on the second Sunday evening in each month.

Dr. George Macdonald, the eminent novelist, has recently been preaching in various Congregational churches near London. Amongst others, in Lewisham-road Church and Brixton Independent Chapel.

At the sixteenth anniversary of the church at Clifton-road, Brighton (pastor, Rev. W. Crosbie), the congregations were unusually large. The various institutions of the church are in a healthy condition. There are 550 members, of whom fifty were added during the first six months of this year.

The Croft Church, Hastings, has been taken over by the Robertson-street Church, and will be converted into a mission station. This makes the ninth station now connected with this church, all of which are in a healthy condition, as shown by the fact that there are over fifty candidates from them waiting admission to the church.

Mrs. G. S. Reaney recommences her Sunday afternoon Services for the People at Stepney Meeting-house on Sunday next. For five years her Sunday afternoon hearers have contributed over £570 in pence to her Convalescent Home at Folkestone, where over fifteen hundred patients, chiefly from the East-end, have been received in a little more than four years.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Rev. Charles Inwood, Methodist Conference evangelist, has just concluded a month's tent mission at Harold's-cross, Dublin. The meetings were well attended, and a goodly number professed conversion. They were not molested in any way.

It has been decided to form a Local Preachers' Association in Dublin, similar to one already existing in Belfast, with the view of promoting a deepening of the spiritual life in the hearts of the members, and preparing them generally for their work.

It has been arranged to hold a convention for the promotion of practical holiness at Belfast during the first week of October. The convention will be on the lines of that held annually at Keswick, and several of the speakers who have taken part in the latter have signified their intention of being present.

During the past fortnight Rev. Gilbert Mineden, Rev. Charles Garrett's colleague in Liverpool, has been conducting a series of mission services in the Methodist Church, Agnes-street, Belfast. Although many people were out of town owing to the holiday season, the services have been well attended, and several are believed to have been led to decision for Christ.

"FALLEN ON SLEEP."

Rev. J. Young, for some time Methodist minister at Castletown, Isle of Man.—Mr. Joseph Foster, who for nearly half a century took an active part in Methodist work at Bebside Colliery, near Bedlington.—Rev. J. Austin, of Luton, for many years a Methodist minister.—Mr. Richard Sands, the father of the temperance movement in West Cumberland.—Mr. George Andrews, senior deacon of New Cross-street Baptist Chapel.—Mr. John Broom, for many years associated with the Baptist Church at Cheltenham.—Mr. John M'Innes, an elder in Blackfriars, Glasgow.—Mr. James Wilson, for many years an office-bearer in St. John's, Glasgow.—Mr. John Thomas, a prominent member of the Methodist Church, Pocklington.—Rev. Neil Forsythe, Presbyterian minister of Carlow, Ireland.—Mr. J. Howell, one of the oldest members of Zion-hill Church, Tisbury.—Mr. Thomas Knowles, for sixty years an active and earnest member of the Congregational Church at Gomersal.—Rev. Hunting Jollye, of Knodishall.—Rev. F. B. Jobling, rector of Great Comberton, Pershore.—Rev. A. S. Grenfell, formerly assistant-master of Repton School.—Rev. John Tyrwhitt-Drake, rector of Cottesbrook.—Rev. H. Ross-Lewin, curate of Benfieldside.—Rev. J. Haviland, formerly rector of Hartlebury.—Rev. S. Armstrong, of Corton, near Lowestoft.—Rev. George Sarvent, one of the senior ministers of the Methodist body.—Mr. George Minto, member and class-leader of the Methodist Church at Haswell for fifty years.—Rev. H. B. Britten, Methodist minister at Churchill, in the sixty-second year of his ministry.—Mr. W. C. Tyack, an active member of the Methodist Church at Camborne.—Mr. R. Garnett, a devoted labourer in the Methodist Church at Ulverston.—Rev. James Williamson, M.A., pastor of the Withington Congregational Church.—Rev. James Hildyard, rector of Ingoldsby, near Grantham.—Mr. William Iles, member for nearly fifty years, and senior deacon of the Congregational Church at Chedworth, Gloucester.—Rev. James Nicoll, minister of St. Stephen's, Glasgow.—Mr. W. Bell, for more than thirty years a prominent member of the Methodist Church at Hull.—Rev. Canon Westby, one of the oldest ministers in the Dublin diocese.—Mr. William Saul, for more than fifty years an active member of the Methodist Church at Holt, Norfolk.

THE EARL OF ABERDEEN has accepted the presidency of the King Edward-street Ragged Schools and Mission, Spitalfields, of which the Seventh Earl of Shaftesbury was president from 1846 until his death in October 1885.

THE POWER OF THE GOSPEL.—A Christian missionary, on entering upon work in a new district in China, was very kindly received by the mandarin, who promised to do all in his power to help on the work. "I have not heard your doctrine," he said, "but I have seen it. I have a servant who was formerly a perfect devil, but since he received your doctrine he is another man, and I can now rust him."

GIFFORD HALL, NEAR DUBLIN.—Open-air services, in which ministers and laymen of various denominations have united, have been held outside this hall during the summer. The Gospel has been faithfully preached, and large numbers have listened, while many have received blessing. A special mission, to be conducted by Pastor F. J. Ryan, Baptist minister, will also be held shortly, for which special prayer is asked. Communications should be sent to Mrs. Kershaw, hon. sec., Blackrock, Dublin.

FINSBURY PARK HALL, Y.M.C.A.—On Sunday, August 28, a series of meetings were conducted in this hall by members of the China Inland Mission who are about to sail to that million-peopled land. The series really commenced with a prayer-meeting the previous evening, when the power of God's presence was felt by all there. The 9.30 meeting for prayer on Sabbath morning was addressed by some of the young ladies who have given themselves up to this work of the Lord. The children's service at eleven was taken by others who are going out. The Bible-class conducted by Mrs. French at 9, Colings-road, had a very blessed time of refreshing under similar auspices, whilst Mr. Holme's large Bible-class for young men had the privilege of having some of the veteran missionaries who are about to return to China. These meetings culminated in the large and memorable meeting at 7 p.m. Every available seat was filled, whilst numbers were unable to get in. Five of the young ladies, who are to sail on September 9, told in a simple, clear, and pathetic way the story of their call, and asked for the prayers of all for their future work. The intense interest manifested by the packed audience was very marked. A special feature of this meeting was the large number of young men and women present.

The Religious Tract Society's List.

THE LAND OF THE PHARAOHS. Including a Sketch of Sinai. Illustrated by Pen and Pencil. By the late Rev. SAMUEL MANNING, LL.D., author of "Those Holy Fields,' "Swiss Pictures," &c. NEW EDITION, revised and partly rewritten by RICHARD LOVETT, author of "Norwegian Pictures," &c. With many new Engravings. Imperial 8vo. 8s. Handsome cloth, gilt.

This book has been carefully revised throughout, and in parts re-written. Section IV. is entirely new, giving a necessarily brief sketch of recent discoveries in Egypt, including the marvellous find of mummies at Deir-el-Bahari, and the interesting work of the Egypt Exploration Fund. Many of the old engravings have been omitted and replaced by 54 illustrations of the best class, including engravings of the mummied face of the "king who knew not Joseph" and his father, Setil.

LIFE ON THE CONGO. By W. HOLMAN BENTLEY, of the Baptist Missionary Society. With an introduction by Rev. GEORGE GRENFELL, Explorer of the Upper Congo. With Portrait of Stanley and eleven Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 1s. 6d. cloth boards.

A sketch by a well-known worker in this recent and great mission field of the conditions of life there, of what has already been done, and of the openings for further labour.

THE HISTORY OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH from the Decline of the Two Kingdoms to the Assyrian and Babylonian Captivity. Being the Seventh and concluding Volume of the Bible History, containing full Scripture Reference and Subject Indexes to the whole series. By ALFRED EDERSHEIM, M.A. (Oxon.), D.D., PH.D., Grinfield Lecturer on the Septuagint, Oxford, author of "The Temple: its Ministry and Services," &c. Crown 8vo. 3s. cloth boards.

The complete work can now be obtained in four volumes, uniformly bound in neat cloth boards, 16s. the set.

This work is now complete, and forms a very valuable help to the study of Old Testament History. For those who wish to have it in compact form an Edition has been prepared in four volumes at a slightly reduced price. This Edition will be found very suitable for Teachers and Sunday-school Libraries.

THE CHATEAU DE LOUARD; or, The Friends and Foes of Isaac Homel. A Story of France at the period of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes. By H. C. COAPE, author of "The Mountain Mill," &c. Illustrated by E. WHYMPER. Crown 8vo. 5s. cloth boards.

An elaborate story of Huguenot times, introducing many true incidents from the life of Homel, the famous preacher, and full of the dangerous, exciting, and cruel incidents of that period.

MISS NETTIE'S GIRLS. By CONSTANCE EVELYN. Illustrated by E. WHYMPER. Imperial 16mo., 3s. 6d. cloth boards.

A story of work among factory girls. It is full of East End incident and beautifully illustrates the different petitions of the Lord's Prayer.

AMONG THORNS. By Mrs. C. M. CLARKE, author of "Polly's Petition," &c. Illustrated. Crown 8vo. 2s. cloth boards.

A brightly written tale for girls, showing how easily bad habits are formed, and how difficult it is to break them.

56, PATERNOSTER-ROW, LONDON.

7/6 1000 CARPETS AND HEARTHRUGS. 7/6

THE BRITISH CARPET WEAVING COMPANY will forward direct from their looms to any address on receipt of Postal Order for 7s. 6d., one of their Genuine Woven Reversible Triumph Carpets. Sizes ranging from 9 ft. by 9 ft., to 12 ft. by 12 ft., and Hearthrug to match, as an Advertisement for their goods, and thus saving the purchasers any middle profits. These Carpets are bordered and woven in eight different colours and patterns, and will suit any furniture. Carpets and four Hearthrugs for 24s.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

This extraordinary offer will not be repeated.

The words "Union Bank" should be written across all Postal Orders. Address—

The British Carpet Weaving Company,
76, St. John Street, Clerkenwell,
London, E.C.

Notes for Bible Readings.

A Collection of over Six Hundred Subjects, carefully compiled and arranged by

S. R. BRIGGS and JOHN H. ELLIOTT.

WITH INTRODUCTION BY D. L. MOODY.

SUITABLE FOR BIBLE READINGS, COTTAGE LECTURES, SERMONS, ADDRESSES, SABBATH SCHOOL LESSONS.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 2s. 6d.

"This is a book which every Bible student should possess. It will be of special value to the class teacher, and an assistance also to the preacher. It brings together an immense number of subjects, with groupings of Scripture texts on each. It supplies valuable matter for private meditation; and those who conduct Bible Readings will find it most suggestive."
Christian Progress.

SUPERIOR EDITION—Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

The Bible Remembrancer.

A Complete Handbook to the Old and New Testaments.

By means of this Handbook any Biblical incident or event may be readily referred to.

WITH TWELVE BEAUTIFULLY COLOURED MAPS.

Special Cheap Edition.
Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"A more helpful book for Sabbath-school Teachers and others we can scarcely think of."—Presbyterian.

SUPERIOR EDITION—Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, 2s.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

HOWARD ST. GOSPEL MISSION

AND SUNDAY SCHOOL,
NEW ROAD, WANDSWORTH ROAD, S.W.
Established 1873.

Help Wanted at Once.—Who will help to raise

£200

To Enlarge the present Hall, to Build Class-Rooms for Young Men and Women, and Infants' Room, also a Public Soup Kitchen for the Poor of the neighbourhood, which is greatly needed, and would prove a great boon?

The present premises being too small to accommodate the numbers attending the Meetings, &c., the work is difficult, and hindered for want of more room.

Our Need is Urgent.

The smallest contributions will be thankfully received and acknowledged by HENRY NORTHCROFT, Esq., 57, Charing Cross, S.W.; and Mr. JOHN SOAMES, Superintendent, at the Mission.

ISSUE at PAR of £362,326 MORTGAGE DEBENTURES for seven or ten years, at 5 per cent.

THE CAPITOL FREEHOLD LAND AND INVESTMENT COMPANY (Limited).

Trustees for Debenture Holders.
The Right Hon. the EARL of ABERDEEN.
Sir WM. M'ARTHUR, K.C.M.G. | Q. HOGG, Esq.

Chairman—The Most Hon. the MARQUIS of TWEEDDALE.

This Company is now prepared to receive applications for the balance for its Mortgage Debentures, for seven or ten years, at 5 per cent. interest.

These Debentures can only be issued at the rate of 4s. per acre upon land actually conveyed, and are secured upon all the freehold lands and other properties of the Company, which are vested in the trustees for the debenture holders.

Forms of application and all information can be obtained at the Company's Office, No. 139, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

By order, HENRY BOWMAN, Secretary.

Fry's Cocoa

·Pure·
·Concentrated·
·Cocoa·

33 PRIZE MEDALS
awarded to the Firm

FRY'S
PURE
COCOA

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR A SAMPLE & TESTIMONIALS

J. S. FRY & SONS, BRISTOL, LONDON, and SYDNEY, N.S.W.,
Makers to the Queen and Prince of Wales.

CONSUMPTION CURABLE!

"MR. G. T. CONGREVE on

CONSUMPTION

AND ITS SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT.

Showing that direful disease to be curable in all its stages; with observations on

ASTHMA, CHRONIC BRONCHITIS, ETC."

SIXPENCE (Post Free), or Large Edition (cloth), 1s. 3d., from the Author, Coombe Lodge, Peckham, S.E., and Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.

The Twenty-second Series of Weekly Cases is now publishing, from August to October.

NOTICE TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN," WHO MAY BE PERSONALLY OR RELATIVELY INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED in this journal BEFORE, EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

RECENT LETTER FROM AN OLD CORRESPONDENT.

MR. C. CLARKE, STEAM PRINTING WORKS, HAYWARD'S HEATH, SUSSEX.

(In a former letter Mr. Clarke says:—"You remember I wrote you on behalf of Miss L. M. Her own doctor gave her no relief, nor did she meet with any at the Brighton Hospital. With your treatment I am happy to say it was altogether different. She felt relieved from the first dose, and kept mending until well.")

The particulars of the case to which Mr. Clarke refers are as follows, and are taken from the statement-sheet now before me:—"Consumption in the family. First symptoms extreme weakness, with fainting fits, followed by diarrhœa and copious yellow expectoration, and spitting of blood. Breathing short, hot flushes, palpitations, and gradual loss of flesh. Had been to the Sussex County Hospital at Brighton. Blistering and other treatment had proved of no avail. Evidently getting worse day by day."

The patient recovered, and Mr. Clarke describes it as A MARVELLOUS CURE.

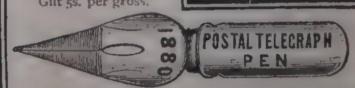
"In the same letter Mr. C. speaks of the case of MRS. SMITH, of SOUTH-ROAD, HAYWARD'S HEATH:—Mrs. Smith was also given up by her doctor after long treatment as an incurable case of Consumption, but she has quite recovered under you."

In the LAST LETTER above referred to, dated May 14, 1887, Mr. Clarke says:—"As to the two cases of Consumption I reported to you, the subjects are well. The case of Mrs. Smith was a most wonderful cure. She was given up by clever doctors, and told there was no hope for her. There seemed only a step between her and the grave. She was so weak and wasted, and could not walk. But she rapidly recovered under your treatment, has since had a child, and is now as hearty a person as one would wish to see."

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

John Heath's PENS

1880, Turned-up Point
Grey 2s.6d. Nickel 3s.6d.
Gilt 5s. per gross.



Smooth and Easy. All Stationers. Sample Box (24 kinds) 7 stamps. BIRMINGHAM.

J. CURWEN & SONS'

HARVEST THANKSGIVING MUSIC.

PRAISE FOR HARVEST.—Service of Song by A. J. FOXWELL. 4d.
HARVEST THANKSGIVING.—Service of Song by J. S. CURWEN. 3d.
THE HAYMAKERS.—Cantata for Choral Societies by G. F. ROOT. 3s. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.
AUTUMN'S QUEEN.—Entertainment for children. 4d.
HARVEST ANTHEMS AND HYMNS IN LEAFLETS. 1s. and 1s. 6d. per 100.

London: 8 and 9, WARWICK LANE, E.C.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

HOME.

A Temperance Volunteer Fire Brigade has been formed at Hounslow.

Great Britain has 13,000 Bands of Hope and juvenile temperance societies, with an aggregate membership of 1,600,000.

A temperance mission for soldiers was held lately at the Soldiers' Home, Conyngham-road, Dublin, and with good results.

The League Journal states the Scotch "distillers are in a bad way," and that "the Scottish banks are less or more involved"

At Georgie. Edinburgh, a new distillery, capable of producing 1,000,000 gallons per annum, has just commenced operations.

Nonconformist temperance workers generally are requested to remember Temperance Sunday is to be the last Sunday in November.

According to the Revenue Returns, the national consumption of alcohol in 1852 was about one and two-thirds of a gallon, and in 1886 one and four-fifths.

Clause 6 in the new Truck Bill provides that farm servants and labourers may be given food and other items as part of their pay, but no intoxicating drink.

The jubilee anniversary of the Western Temperance League is to held at Street, Somerset, in October. Rev. Charles Garrett is to preach the official sermon.

The Medical Press and Circular thinks Governments of both parties have shown themselves unduly generous in conferring honours on wealthy liquor makers and dealers.

The time for securing signatures to the Women's Jubilee Temperance Memorial has been extended, and it is hoped all women over sixteen who have not signed will do so.

The test ballot on the liquor traffic, taken at Burnley, shows a large majority in favour of the Local Veto, against any increase and in favour of restriction in the number of licences.

Mr. W. E. A. Axon puts the drink bill of the city of Manchester, in 1886. at £1,275,161 8s. 4d., and states it is the lowest since 1877. Yet it amounts to more than the State and local taxes combined.

A clever seizure of an illicit still was made recently in the crofter township of Alligan, on the Torridon estate, in the parish of Applecross. One of the smugglers is described as a Free Church elder.

Mr. John Dillon, M.P., states that landlords in Ireland, for the sake of increased rents, had given undue facilities for the increase of public-houses in many of the towns. One with 1200 inhabitants had 56 public-houses.

Mr. Richard T. Booth has continued his mission at the Great Assembly Hall during another week. On Sunday evening he addressed a vast auditory, taking for his motto the Pauline declaration, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation." On Monday evening he repeated his lecture, "Personal Experiences of the American War." About five thousand persons were present.

The Hon. John P. St. John lately had a public discussion with a liquor dealer. The latter for peroration said, "We have the drunken men on our side; we have the foreign element on our side; and we have the money on our side; money is a power, and don't you forget it." Mr. St. John closed his speech in reply thus:—"We have the sober men on our side; we have the women on our side; we have God on our side, and God is a power, and don't you forget it."

FOREIGN.

Pennsylvania reports 998 Women's Christian Temperance Unions.

Forty-four of the seventy-five counties of Arkansas have no saloons.

In Manitoba a local option campaign is being organised for the entire province.

The Chinese Imperial Navy is to be supplied with beer. The first order amounts to 216,000 bottles.

A Japanese Professor of Chemistry has been sent to Europe by his Government to study the art of brewing.

There is a Good Templar Lodge at Chili, South America, and its constitution has been translated into Spanish.

A comprehensive return of drink licences issued in Upper Burmah since its annexation has been requested by Parliament.

A floating bar-room has been started opposite a suburb of Missouri, Kansas. On several occasions the local courts have held it outside their jurisdiction.

The Times' Berlin correspondent states that Prince Bismarck, who is a large distiller, is in favour of the proposed company for a monopoly of the spirit trade.

M. Catusse, Director-General of Indirect Taxes, France, is visiting the chief European capitals to study the laws on alcohol, and report thereon to the French Parliament.

The Mayor of Toronto, a prominent temperance worker, and General Neal Dow, are expected in England shortly to assist in the agitation in favour of the direct Veto.

Dr. J. B. Johnson, of Washington, says a dram drinker's heart beats thirteen times oftener than that of an abstainer, and this is the ultimate cause of "a drunken nose."

Recent experiments by Professor Hare, M.D., University of Pennsylvania, and Professor Duggan, Baltimore, proved that alcohol hinders digestion.

The Royal Niger Company is anxious to check the excessive importation of spirits by the West Coast routes. The French and German traders refuse to join in any such attempt.

Forthcoming Meetings.

The Evangelisation Society will send evangelists to any part of England, Scotland, and Wales on due notice. Hon. Sec., 21, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.

The Irish Evangelisation Society will send evangelists to any part of Ireland on due notice. Apply to Mr. J. Barton, Hon. Sec., Dundalk, Ireland.

The Church Army will send evangelists (working-men) to any clergyman on due notice, for short or long missions. Hon. Sec., 128 and 130, Edgware-road, W.

The Metropolitan Tabernacle Evangelists' Association will send lay preachers and evangelists to any chapel or hall of any evangelical denomination in London. Hon. Sec., 121, Camberwell New-road, S.E.

Y.M.C.A., New Metal Exchange, Whittington-avenue, E.C.—Gospel services at Y.M.C.A. Mission Hall, Bermondsey, Sundays, 7 p.m., and Thursdays, 8 p.m. Mission work at Whitechapel, Limehouse, Bermondsey, Canning Town, &c.

Conference Hall and Y.M.C.A., Stratford, E.—Sunday, September 11, 3 p.m., Rev. J. Knaggs; 7 p.m., Mr. Finlay Gibson. Bible-readings, Sunday, 3 p.m., young men; Tuesday, 8.15 p.m., young men; Wednesday, 8.15 p.m., public Bible study.

Y.M.C.A., The Priory, 198, Upper-street, Islington, N.—Sunday, Sept. 11, 3.15, Bible-class, subject, Eph. i. 1—14, Mr. S. Pewtress; 8 p.m., open-air meeting; 8.30 p.m., evangelistic meeting; Wednesday, 6 to 10, welcome to strangers and anxious inquirers.

Bible Readings for German governesses and others, Thursdays, 8 p.m. French Bible-readings for governesses, Saturdays, 3.30, except last of the month. French Bible-classes for maids and others, Sundays, 3.30, Y.W.C.A., Morley Halls, 316, Regent-street, W.

Zenana Medical College.—The Saturday Bible-reading and Prayer-meeting will be resumed on Sept. 24.

Mr. Ned Wright will preach on Sundays during September at Earlham Hall (formerly Maberly Chapel), Balls Pond-road, at 7 p.m.

Edinburgh Castle, Limehouse, E.—Sunday, Sept. 11, 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., Mr. Henry Varley; 3 p.m., Rev. Henry Bright.

Great Assembly Hall, Mile-end-road, E.—Sunday, September 11, 11 a.m., and 6 30 p.m., and week nights at 8, Mr. Joseph Clarke.

Clapton Hall, Cazenove-road, Upper Clapton, E.—Sundays, 6.30 p.m., Fridays, 7.30 p.m., Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, during September.

Children's Special Service Mission.—Mr. J. H. Greene at St. Leonard's and Hastings from Sept. 9.

Dr. Thain Davidson's monthly sermon to young men, Presbyterian Church, Colebrooke-row, Islington, on Sunday, Sept. 11, 6.30 p.m.

Mrs. Reaney's Sunday afternoon service will be resumed on Sunday, Sept. 11.

Rev. John Wilkinson, of Mildmay, will preach at the Powis Hall, Bayswater, on Sunday next, at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Coming Conferences.—Perth, September 13—15. Wakefield, September 20—22. Dundee (Kinnaird Hall), September 20—22. Evangelical Alliance, Aberdeen, September 20—22. Salisbury, September 26 to October 2—Subjects: The Source of Faith, Life in Christ; the Life of Faith, Life for Christ; the Fruition of Faith, Life with Christ. Mission subjects: God's work amongst the Sailors of the Royal Navy, by Miss Weston; George-yard Mission, by Mr George Holland; Medical Mission at Dera Ghazi Khan, by Dr. Andrew Jukes. Glasgow (Queen's Rooms), September 27—30. Dublin Y.W.C.A., September 30. Clifton, Bristol (Victoria Rooms), October 4—6. Leamington, October 18—20.

Y.M.C.A., BRIDGWATER.—The ninth annual report of this Association states that fifty-nine new members have joined during the past year, and that interest in the Association has been well maintained. The Sunday afternoon and week evening Bible-classes, and devotional meetings have been regularly held. The open-air mission has continued its labours on Sunday morning and evening in the courts and alleys of the town, and occasional services are also held in the lodging-houses. By these means many have been brought to decision for Christ. Mr. J. Nash Rees is the secretary.

MAISON DE DIEU, BEXHILL.—In the beginning of the present year this "Home of Rest" was opened by two or three ladies connected with the Hastings Evangelistic Mission for the benefit of Christians engaged in active work in London and other cities and towns when needing rest. Though the expense of furnishing and the responsibility of carrying it on rests upon Miss Fullagar, Mrs. Thorn, and Mrs. Charrington, it is hoped that ere long it will become self-supporting. It is also intended as a centre for aggressive and other work for the Master amongst the visitors and residents. On Friday afternoons a holiness meeting is conducted by Miss Fullagar, and a Bible-reading every Sunday afternoon by Madame Ravennes, the hon. lady superintendent, and the services already have been owned of God in the saving of souls and restoring the backslider. These meetings are open to all.

Notices.

Communications Received with Thanks.—J.P. W.H.R. I.R. T.J.Y. J.H.S. H.N.M. E.M.F. J.S.C. H.H. W.A.C. J.D. H.C. G.K. J.W. H.H. K.Y.W. G.S. W.C.B. C.A.S. M.B. G.H. E.J.W. I.R. A.H. J.H. J.A.J. L.M.S. S.S.M. H.C. J.S.D. J.E.C. C.R.H. D.S.S. W.H. J.P.M. W.H.S. F.T. A.L.W. L.F. T.M.C. G.L.N. P.W. A.M.S. A.B. H.W. S.C. J.P.H. J.J.B. E F. M.S. A.B. T.S.J.C. C.E.C. W.H.H. H.C. J.E.L. E.H. W.T. J.J.M. E.B. W.H.

Applicants for Tracts.—H. Haigh, 5, Park-place, Selby; Miss Nellie Scott, 24, Albert-road, Morley; W. H. Doggett, Cherryhinton, Cambridge; A. Webster, 16, Mayola-road, Clapton, E.; A. B. Hodgkinson, 31, St. Woollos-road, Newport, Monmouthshire; G. T. Binstead, 75, High-street, Peckham; E. Ramsay, 74, Ferry-road, Dundee; G. Bancroft, The Manse, Saundersfoot; J. Smith, 2, Gordon-villas, Waverly Estate, Farnham, Surrey; W. E. Jones, 5, Lewis-road, Coldharbour-lane, Camberwell, S.E.; J. Poate, Sherbourne-road, Farnborough, Hants; J. Taylor, 28, Cressy-place, Stepney-green, E.; W. A. H. Robinson, Drumshambo, Ireland; J. Robert, 35, Lawrence-street, Dundee; Miss Sims, Oak Lodge, Upminster, near Romford, Essex; E. E. Tresidder, 53, Redman's-road, Stepney, E.; W. Dell, 7, Serjeant's-inn, Fleet-street, E.C.; J. J. Browne, Meadfield, South Norwood, S.E.; W. Lippett, 1, Walken's-buildings, Lich-street, Worcester; G. E. Archer, 4, Fitzroy-terrace, Broomsleigh-street, West Hempstead.

Will F.A.V. send name and address to Rev. G. W. Sawday (of Tumkur Orphanage), Strathblane, Laton-road, Hastings.

◆

Subscriptions Received by Messrs. Morgan & Scott to Monday, September 5, 1887.

⁂ We would respectfully urge all our friends, when remitting to us, to make Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders payable to Morgan & Scott, and to cross them "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss of same.

⁂ Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

⁂ Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders, not by stamps.

	£	s.	d.
W. & A.F. Aberdeen (Aug. 2), please send full address.
Miss Sharman's Orphans' Home—A.E.C. 2s. 6d.; C.B. 5s.	0	7	6
Day in the Country Fund—E.F. 2s. 6d.; G.B. £3 3s.; M.E.O. 2s. 6d.; A.M.B. 10s.	3	18	0
Children's Country Holiday Fund—F.H.	0	10	0
Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children—Mothers' Meeting	0	5	0
Bible Flower Mission—M.E.O.	0	2	6
Manuel Matamoro's House—D H...	0	10	0
China Inland Mission—E.W.O.	0	5	0
Dr. Barnardo's Homes—F.C. 5s.; C.B. 5s.; H.I.M. £2; (Emigration Fund) P.G. £5; "Inasmuch," £100; H.I.M. £16; (Free Dinners) H.I.M. £2	125	10	0
Castle-yard Mission—My Sunday Class	0	3	6
Free Distribution of the Scriptures—W.C.L. ..	1	0	0
Church Missionary Society—P.S...	1	0	0
George-yard Ragged Schools—T.B.W...	0	5	0
Mrs. Meredith's Prison Mission—M.N.	0	5	0
Mildmay Mission to Jews—Miss S.	0	2	0
Missionary Training Home—Friend	0	1	0
McAll Mission—In Loving Memory	10	0	0
Grat. Circ. of The Christian—"A Tried One"	5	0	0
Suppression of Opium Traffic with China (Travelling Agent)—C.M.	1	0	0
Mr. J. Wooldridge's Tent Work, Willesden—R.C.	1	0	0
	£151	4	6

[Advertisements.]

Dock Labourers' Mission—Clitheroe, 4000 text cards; S.S. £5.

Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen—M.K. 10s.

Evangelistic Mission—P.O. 5s. (Walworth-road).

SUNDAY POSTAL LABOUR.—The Select Committee appointed to consider the question of Sunday labour in connection with the Post office outside the Metropolitan district have recommended that the collection and delivery of circulars on that day be discontinued and that in any town where a vote of two-thirds of the members of the town council or local board pronounces in favour of the same, and in any village by a vote of two-thirds of the ratepayers, the collection and delivery of newspapers and letters be also discontinued. A window delivery is recommended in all cases of discontinuance of house-to-house delivery. A further recommendation is to the effect that the indoor duties of the Post-office service be so arranged as to relieve all sorting clerks and indoor officials, so far as possible, on alternate Sundays, and that the rural messengers should, by the employment of substitutes, at the expense of the department, be wholly relieved from work on every alternate Sunday.

GEORGE YARD RAGGED SCHOOLS, &c., Whitechapel, E.

GEORGE HOLLAND thankfully acknowledges receiving—In memory of Percy Everard, 3s. 6d.; E. L. M., 5s.; Anonymous, a Parcel.

The Infant Day Nursery. Free Day Ragged Schools. Band of Hope. Children's Services. Mutual Industrial Classes for Lads. Meetings and Classes for Elder Girls and Young Women. Bible Classes for Men. Mission to Inebriate Women. Mothers' Meeting. Bible Classes for Women. Temperance Meeting. Evangelistic Services. Room to Room Visitation, and other missionary agencies in operation.

Friends are invited to visit the Institution any day but Saturday.

Post-office Orders should be made payable at 66, High-street, Whitechapel, E. Letters and Parcels should be addressed to GEORGE HOLLAND, The Ragged Schools, George Yard, High-street, Whitechapel, London, E.

THE BENEVOLENT OR STRANGERS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

Treasurer, Ald. Sir R. N. Fowler, Bart., M.P.
J. H. Anderson, Esq., Chairman.
Clarence Smith, Esq., J.P., Hon. Secretary.

For 101 years this Institution has visited and relieved the destitute sick, by an entirely unpaid agency, consisting of over 240 Christian men and women.

Funds are urgently needed.

The Committee will be thankful for the Society being remembered in the testamentary arrangements of the benevolent.—Office of the Society, 52, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

ANXIETY OF SOUL. — Any to whom the way of salvation is not clear, are invited to communicate, either personally or by letter, to W. S., care of Evangelistic Secretary, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

CONVALESCENT HOMES, at Bournemouth and Sandgate.—For particulars apply to Mr. JOHN JAMES JONES, Director of the London Samaritan Society, 98, High-street, Homerton, London, E.

THE TYNDALE MEMORIAL CHURCH will be "a witness for the Reformation." It will stand between the Homerton Roman Catholic Church at one end of the Brookfield-road, and the St. Augustine's Ritualistic Church at the other end. Nearly five hundred pounds is already subscribed. The total cost of the entire premises will be £1000. Donations should be sent immediately. "The King's business requires haste."—Rev. JOHN FLETCHER PORTER, 59, Driffield-road, North Bow, London, E.

THE LONDON SAMARITAN SOCIETY for Convalescent Homes at Sandgate and Bournemouth. Miss S., 5s.; Miss C. L., £2 2s.; Mr. W. T., 2s.; Anon, 2s.

PERTH CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.—The Annual Conference will (D.V.) be held in the City Hall, Perth, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, September 13, 14, and 15. Forenoon Meeting at 11. Afternoon 2, and Evening at 7 o'clock. Information regarding lodging, &c., will be furnished by Mr. CHRISTIE, Bookseller, St. John-street.

URGENT APPEAL.—CLOTHING.—Help earnestly solicited for the many necessitous and invalid gentlewomen and children known to Miss FAITHFULL, The Institute, 136, Regent-street. The need is great. See Report.

ZENANA MEDICAL COLLEGE, 58, St. George's-road, S.W.—The Committee will receive a Lady as Student, who can pay 50 guineas towards her two years' training (including board, residence, and instruction), the remainder being contributed by friends.—Address The HON. SEC.

THE BETHSHAN, Leeds.—Meetings for Holiness and Divine Healing, Sundays and Tuesdays, 2.30 p.m.; Thursdays, 7.30 p.m. Christians wishing for teaching on Divine Healing, can be received into the house.—Miss GIBBS, 10, St. John's-terrace, Bible Vue-road, Leeds.

DIVINE HEALING and Power for Service.—Meetings conducted by the Rev. JOHN ALLEN or his workers. Bishopsgate (32, Spital-square), Tuesdays, 7.30 p.m. Camberwell Gate (The Hall, Horsley-street). Tuesdays, 7 p.m. Hackney (Trinity Church, Triangle, Mare-street), Sundays, 3 p.m.; Mondays, 7 p.m.; on Fridays, Baptism of the Spirit, 7 p.m.

Postal address, Balclutha Lodge, Southgate, N.

Educational.

SEASIDE EDUCATION.—An Officer can highly recommend a Christian Home School at Southsea for a few Girls of good position. Pupils have successfully passed R.A.M. and R.C.P. Examinations. Terms very moderate. Terms 40 guineas to fill a vacancy.—INSPECTOR-GENERAL GORDON, R.N., View Bank, Brechin, Forfarshire, N.B.

HOME SCHOOL for Girls. Limited number of Boarders. Good education, based on Bible teaching, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness." Pupils prepared for the various Exams. Kindergarten for Juniors. Terms inclusive. Recommended by R. C. Morgan and parents of pupils.—Mrs. SILVESTER, Clarence House, Pellatt-grove, Wood Green.

SUPERIOR EDUCATION for young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. WATKINS, F.S.Sc., Dyreham College, North Finchley.—Pupils prepared for public examinations. Fees, including music, French, and drawing, 14 and 16 guineas per term, prepaid.

"I have the greatest pleasure in recommending Mrs. Watkins' School to parents seeking a good Christian home and a high-class education for their daughters. The School is situated in a fine healthy neighbourhood."—Josiah Spiers, Children's Special Service Mission.

New Hall College, SUTTON COLDFIELD, WARWICKSHIRE.

Second, Head Master, Mr. W. P. HUTTON, B.A.; Mr. S. H. ALLISON, B.A., with other efficient Resident and Visiting Tutors. Twenty acres of grounds and woods. Special classes in Chemistry, Carpentering Engineering, Shorthand, and Drawing. Distinguished successes in London Matric., Oxford Local, College of Preceptors', and Science and Art Department Exams. And above all, sound Christian training.

Principal, FREDK. W. W. HOWELL.

MORAVIAN LADIES' SCHOOL, St. Peter's, Bedford.—Accommodation for a limited number of Boarders and Day Pupils. Pupils prepared for Cambridge Local Examinations. For terms and all particulars, apply to

Miss SEIFFERTH, Principal.

BELLE VUE, AMBLESIDE.—Good School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. FLEMING. Healthy and beautiful situation; large rooms, garden, tennis. Careful Christian training, and thorough teaching. Cambridge Examinations. Resident foreign and English governesses. Masters. 50 to 60 guineas. Reduced terms for children under 12.

HIGH-CLASS CHRISTIAN SCHOOL for the Daughters of Gentlemen. — Miss PENN receives a limited number of pupils. Efficient resident governesses and visiting masters. Individual Christian influence. Home comforts. Large house and garden. Entire charge taken of pupils from abroad. Languages and music specialities. Young Ladies are also received to pursue certain studies only, or to take lessons in dressmaking, cooking, &c.

St. John's de Ocklynge, Eastbourne.

BRIGHTON.—High-class School for Girls. Healthy situation. Home comforts. Every educational advantage. Terms moderate. Good references to clergymen and parents of pupils.—The Misses NORTON, Farndon House, Stanford-road, Brighton.

ILFRACOMBE, 2, Oxford-park.—Home School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. RICHARD WARE. Careful Christian training and thorough teaching. Motherly care taken of delicate children. Good references.

SOUND EDUCATION FOR GIRLS.—Ascham School, Oxford.—University masters. Special advantages for science, languages, music, and art. Arrangement for Anglo-Indian children. Terms moderate. Vacancy for governess-student. Reference kindly permitted to Rev. Canon Christopher, Oxford.—Address, PRINCIPAL.

EDUCATION.—Germany.—Count and Countess Korff highly recommend Fräulein HERMANNI'S School in Wiesbaden (formerly Hermanni and Brügelmann). Fräulein HERMANNI receives a limited number of pupils. There is a resident French governess, and best professors attend. Excellent Christian influence. Great advantages for languages, music, singing, and painting.—Fräulein HERMANNI, Dotzheimer Strasse 10.

FRENCH EVANGELICAL HIGH SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Terms moderate and strictly inclusive.—Applications to be made to the HON. SECRETARY, Springfield, Reigate.

KEMPLEY HOUSE, Bristol.—Mrs. PRESCOTT, Principal. — Prospectus sent. The education of Her Majesty the Queen was conducted on the principles of moral education; and Her Majesty has been pleased to accept a copy of Moral Education by Rev. P. Prescott, and Sir Henry Ponsonby has received the Queen's commands to thank him for the book. A GOVERNESS-PUPIL wanted.

SUPERIOR PRIVATE SCHOOL (Girls'). Home life. Resident governess. Masters attend. Good bracing air, high ground. Small number only received. References to parents.—Misses MAW, Lime Bank, Upper Oldfield-park, Bath.

BEDFORD. — Melrose House. — Principals, the Misses RAY, daughters of the late Rev. R. Ray. Pupils received for high-class education and board. Personal supervision, with Christian training and home comforts. Preparation for Cambridge and other Local Examinations when desired. The next term will begin (D.V.) on Friday, September 16.

COOMBE LODGE SOUTH, Hamilton-road, Reading. — Miss PUGH receives into her parents' home a few Girls for instruction. Domestic arrangements those of a comfortable home. Situation healthy. Large play garden.

EDUCATIONAL HOME for the Daughters of Gentlemen, Hanworth House, Weston-super-Mare.—Mrs. CHARLES NASH receives a limited number of Pupils, and endeavours to combine the highest educational advantages with maternal care and Christian training. Evangelical ministry. Resident English and foreign governesses and the best visiting professors in regular attendance. References kindly permitted to the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Exeter; the Rev. W. Hunt, M.A., Vicar of Holy Trinity, Weston-super-Mare, &c. Also to many parents of pupils at home and abroad. —Prospectus on application.

BRIGHTON.—2, Sussex-square.—Miss GOULTY'S Educational Home for Young Ladies. Terms vary according to the individual requirements, and the accomplishments needed. The Rev. J. B. Figgis, of Brighton, is kindly willing to bear his testimony to the School. Pupils can prepare for the Cambridge Examinations.

SPA, BELGIUM.—A few young gentlemen would find a comfortable Home, with the advantage of learning French and German, in a Protestant family.—Apply to Monsieur REUTER, Professeur, Charmilles, Spa. References kindly permitted to Monsieur le Pasteur, Nicolet, Spa.

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, Warminster, Wilts.—Healthy neighbourhood, house detached, tennis lawn, &c. Masters from Clifton, Bath, Salisbury. The usual Public exams. Resident French governess. A few vacancies.—For prospectus, &c., address the Misses CRUSE, Cambridge House.

SUPERIOR EDUCATIONAL advantages for young Ladies, combined with Christian training and home comforts. Little boys also received, with entirely separate supervision. House beautifully situated in its own grounds. Lovely scenery. Health resort for delicate children. Inclusive terms, 15 to 21 guineas per annum.

PRINCIPAL, Broomfield Villa, Henfield, Sussex.

EASTBOURNE. — Ladies' College (for the daughters of Gentlemen). Established 1871. A few Boarders received. The College is examined by the University of Cambridge. Referees, Rev. W. Bathurst, vicar of Holy Trinity Church, parents of pupils and others.—For prospectus, &c., apply to the PRINCIPALS, the Misses Deacon, Grassington-road, Eastbourne.

HAMMERSMITH HIGH SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.—Pupils successful at Cambridge, St. Andrews, and Royal Academy Local Examinations, and London Matriculation. Boarders received in the house of the Head Mistress at moderate terms.—Full particulars on application to

Miss MARY E. PAGE.

BOURNEMOUTH.—MOIRA COLLEGE for Ladies.—Principals: Miss CONNAH and Miss INGHAM. Children requiring care receive especial attention. References to well-known gentlemen, and to the parents of past and present pupils. Prospectuses on application.

THE PRINCIPAL of well-established Ladies' School, in the country, has vacancies for Boarders. A good education and home comforts offered, on moderate terms. An hour from London.

M. E., 95, Talfourd-road, Peckham-road, S.E.

SELECT GIRLS' SCHOOL,

Cambridge House, 113, Green-lanes, London, N.

Christian training. Motherly care. Home comforts Healthful situation. Preparation for Public Examinations, at which all the Pupils entered last Christmas passed. Reference to Rev. Gordon Calthrop, 3, Highbury-grange, N.; Doctor Pittock, Margate; and to other parents of present pupils.—Further particulars on application to the Principal,

Mrs. BRODIE.

FRAULEIN EIBACH, Villa Schönblick, Wiesbaden, Germany, receives a limited number of pupils. Professors attend, and there is a resident French governess. Great advantages for languages, music, singing, and painting. References and prospectus on application.

EDUCATION.—High-class School for Young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. HALE, A.C.P., 1, Carlton-mansions, Clapham-rise, London, S.W.—Visiting masters, certificated governesses, and careful personal supervision with home comforts. Pupils prepared for any examination. Instruction made pleasant, and no overworking countenanced. French, German, Latin, drawing, class-singing, and drilling are included in the school fees, which are moderate. Highly recommended by parents of pupils, and Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. Prospectus and testimonials on application to Principal.

"Balham, May 29, 1880.

"I am very reluctant to recommend schools, because I am not always able to judge of the interior arrangements; but in this case I have the utmost pleasure in standing as reference. I can highly commend Mrs. Hale, and have the greatest confidence in her capacity, management, and character, having known her for several years."

C. H. SPURGEON.

LOWESTOFT. — CLAREMONT HOUSE.—The Misses BIGNOLD receive a limited number of gentlemen's daughters as Resident Pupils. Careful Christian training, with thorough education and home comforts. References kindly permitted to the Bishop of Exeter; the Rev. J. B. Pelham, Norwich; J. C. Worthington, Esq., Lowestoft; E. Courthorpe Todd, Esq., Macready House, Covent-garden; and other friends and parents of pupils.

YOUR BOYS will have a happy Home and sound Education with Mr. and Mrs. DIXON, Middle-class School, Kingston-on-Thames. Christian influence; unlimited diet; beautiful neighbourhood. 20 to 25 guineas.

MORAVIAN BOYS' SCHOOL, Ockbrook, near Derby.—Pupils prepared for London Matriculation and other examinations. Ockbrook presents the advantages of central position, and beautiful rural neighbourhood.—For prospectus apply to Rev. J. M. MALLALIEU.

HIGHBURY HOUSE SCHOOL, St. Leonard's-on-Sea.—Boys prepared for commerce, public schools, or the universities. Upper, middle, and preparatory departments. Seven resident masters. The junior division taught by ladies. Delicate boys, requiring a mild climate, receive every kindness and constant care. The autumn term will commence on September 17.—For prospectus apply to Mrs. DUFF, the Lady Principal.

HARRINGAY SCHOOL, Green-lanes, N.—Sound Christian education, for professional or commercial pursuits. Careful supervision, plentiful dietary, healthy locality, easy of access. Terms moderate from entry. Principal, J. S. COOMBES.

HEALTH AND EDUCATION among the Surrey hills. Christian home-life with carefully superintended studies.—Misses SHRIMPTON & GERDS, Chertsey House, Redhill.

MOUNT RADFORD SCHOOL, Exeter.—Boys are prepared for business or professional life. Many matriculate at the various universities. During the last twelve years pupils have obtained more than two hundred certificates (many passing in honours) in the Oxford, Cambridge, College of Preceptors', and London University Examinations. Special attention paid to juniors, who are taught by a lady. The Word of God is made the sole basis of a careful moral and spiritual training, and none but Christian teachers are employed. Cricket, athletics, &c.

Head Master, E. H. VINE, M.C.P.

HOME AND EDUCATION for the Sons of Gentlemen under twelve years of age, 74, Broadhurst-gardens, South Hampstead. Principals, the Misses DOUGLAS MCMILLAN, assisted by three certificated lady teachers. Pupils prepared for the public schools. The children of Anglo-Indians received for education and entire management during absence of parents. Referees: The Venerable Archdeacon Philpot, Surbiton; the Recorder of London; and James Ewen Mathieson, Esq., Mildmay.

CHIPPENHAM. — An excellent School for Boys. Healthy and beautiful country. First-class gymnasium. Tennis ground. A bathing place near. Greatest attention paid to character and Bible teaching. Terms very moderate.

H. B. BARDWELL, Orwell House.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL.

WELLINGTON, SHROPSHIRE.

Principal: DR. CRANAGE, M.A.

FOLKESTONE. — Grove House School.—Thorough commercial training. Careful preparation for all public examinations. Good ground for cricket and football. Prospectus and references on application to PRINCIPAL.

PREPARATORY SCHOOL (near Brighton).—Home comforts. Christian training. Special attention to delicate, backward boys. Visiting masters. Preparation for public schools. Twenty guineas. Indian children received.—LADY PRINCIPAL, Hamilton Lodge, Hurstpierpoint, Sussex.

WINCHESTER HOUSE, Kingston-hill, Surrey.—Mr. LUSCOMBE, M.R.C.P., receives Gentlemen's Sons, and to the advantage of a thorough education (modern and classical), careful training, and individual attention, adds the comforts of a very healthy, well-ordered home. Terms moderate. Autumn term, September 19.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED ON HIGH GROUND, WITH VIEWS OF THE SEA, on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and a first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this school that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS, together with the papers of Examinations passed and Honours gained, should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. THORN, Paddington, London.

CLIFTON, BRISTOL.—A few Resident Pupils desired. Locality celebrated for healthfulness and beauty. Instruction, training, companionship, personal, not delegated to others. Evangelical (Open Brethren).

Mr. HOWELL, Aberdeen-road.

NEW COLLEGE, Cliftonville, Margate.—Principal: Rev. G. H. JONES, F.A.S. High-class education, with individual attention. Prep. for exams., and commerce. Christian training. Splendid premises, loftily situated, close to sea. Moderate fees.

BRIGHTON.— EDUCATION.— Mr. ALFRED CLARK, B.A. (Lond.), receives about twenty Sons of Gentlemen, from seven to fourteen years of age. Terms from 45 guineas. Pupils are thoroughly grounded in English subjects, Latin, Greek, French, German, and mathematics, and have been successful at Cambridge Local and other Examinations. Personal care, Christian influence, and a healthy, happy home.—85, Buckingham-road, Brighton.—Referees: Rev. W. Poole Balfern, Brighton; Rev. F. Cruse, Christ Church Vicarage, Worthing; Rev. J. B. Figgis, Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, Harley House, Bow-road, London; Rev. W. Haslam, 66, Marina, St. Leonard's. Term commences on Friday, Sept. 9.

The COLLEGE, HERNE BAY.

Established 1866. A Christian home and a good School. Remarkable health. Notable success in public exams. Reasonable and strictly inclusive fees. Inquiry and inspection invited.—Prospectus, views, references from J. B. TURNER, Principal.

CHRISTIAN TRAINING and Modern System of Education for Boys of all ages. Comfortable home. Warrington College, Warrington-crescent, Maida-vale, London, W. Principal, WILLIAM P. BONWICK; well known to Rev. Charles Graham, Shepherd's-bush, and Rev. E. Payson Hammond, America. Term begins September 9.

EDUCATION IN HIGHGATE.—The Rev. G. D. BARTLET, M.A., receives ten Pupils (from 10 years) to board and educate for Commercial or Professional life, or for Public Schools. Individual attention, thorough grounding, careful Christian training, with the comforts of a superior home, are afforded. Fees from 70 guineas per term. Highgate is strongly recommended by the medical profession.

LITTLE BOYS, Brighton.—Inkerman House, Lansdowne-road. The Misses ASHBY prepare young gentlemen for senior schools. The pupils are governed by kindness, and cheerfulness is encouraged. Careful instruction. Constant supervision. Home comforts. The situation is very healthy, near the sea.

THORNCLIFFE, BOURNEMOUTH.—Principal, Mrs. DEW. Thorough education, with Christian training and home comforts. Situation most bracing. Terms moderate. Ministers' daughters from 20 guineas. Autumn term commences September 14.

JUNIOR MASTERSHIP or Tutorship required by a Christian Young Man. London University Matriculation. Excellent reference as to character and ability.
A. B., 7, Henrietta-street, Bath.

GOVERNESS-PUPIL required to assist with juniors and music. Accomplishments. Certificated governesses and professors. Premium £12.—PRINCIPAL, Clifton House School, Bracknell, Berks.

MARRIED GRADUATE prepares Backward Boys for different examinations. Home comforts.—M. A., 14, Regent-street, Cambridge.

TUTOR, disengaged.—A Gentleman of considerable experience, who has been long accustomed to the mental and moral oversight of a large School, desires a re-engagement. Conducted upon Christian principles.
W. E. BARKER, 34, Burney-street, Greenwich.

A YOUNG LADY, holding Cambridge certificate, desires an engagement in a School as Junior English Governess. Could also undertake French and arithmetic if required.
O. E., Post Office, Sherborne, Dorset.

YOUNG LADY (accustomed to teach) seeks engagement as Governess to children under twelve; or as Companion to a Lady. Excellent references.
Miss F. ROOKE, West Amesbury, Salisbury.

UNE JEUNE DEMOISELLE Hollandaise désire trouver une place de Gouvernante dans une famille Chretienne, de préférence dans une famille Hollandaise. Lettres affranchies sous les initais C. P., au Libraire F. W. Egeling, à Amsterdam, Hollande.

GOVERNESS.—Wanted by young Lady (20), engagement in school or family, school preferred. English, French, music, drawing (freehand and models with shading).—E. COLLINGS, Somerset House, Clevedon, Somerset.

A GOVERNESS wanted for two children, 6, 7. Low salary. Comfortable home. Evangelical. Rev. Edward Moore's ministry. Age about 26. Good disciplinarian. Apply personally, Mrs. WARREN, 22, Spencer-hill, Wimbledon.

YOUNG CHRISTIAN LADY (18) is seeking daily engagement as Governess to young children. Has no objection to assist as Mother's Help (superior). — COSMO, Dennett's Library, Hill-street, Upper Clapton.

GOVERNESS WANTED, Clergyman's family, three Girls, 14, 13, 8. Good music, drawing, and painting. Thorough English, French, needlework, calisthenics. Comfortable home. Moderate salary. North German not objected to.
Mrs. BRIGHT, Wimbledon House, Clifton, Bristol.

A YOUNG LADY, of some years' experience, desires re-engagement as Governess to young children. Subjects, English, arithmetic, music, French, and elementary drawing. Salary £25.—H., 2, Lockhart-place, St. Andrews, Fife.

CHRISTIAN NURSERY GOVERNESS, French or English. Must have had experience. Entire charge. English, French, music, drawing (rudimentary). Testimonials and lowest salary.—Y., care of Mr. T. H. Lewis, High-street, Bangor, N. Wales.

FOREIGN OR ENGLISH Protestant Nursery Governess wanted. Fluent French required.—Apply by letter, stating age, salary, and experience, to Mrs. WILLIAMS, 23, South Hill-park-gardens, N.W.

A CHRISTIAN NURSERY GOVERNESS wanted, to take charge of two little girls. French and music required. None need apply who have not been out before.—State terms to Mrs. TISSINGTON TATLOW, St. Thomas, Rathfarnham, co. Dublin.

REQUIRED IN LADIES' SCHOOL, someone to undertake personal care, &c. Must be capable and refined, and willing to throw warm interest into the various duties.
S., at Horncastle's, 61, Cheapside, London.

RESIDENT GOVERNESS.—A young Lady, late Student of Queen's College, London, desires a re-engagement after the holidays. Acquirements, thorough English, music, drawing, painting, French, and the rudiments of Latin. Good testimonials.
A. B., Bockleton, Tweedy-road, Bromley, Kent.

GOVERNESS-STUDENT required, in select finishing school, near London. English, French, music, German, and drawing under first-class masters. Premium 18 guineas. Light duties. Home comforts.—MATERNAL, care of Mr. Pond, Stationer, St. Peter's-road, Holloway, London, N.

HOME, WITH THOROUGH TEACHING, offered to a well-connected Girl, for 38 guineas per annum, in a small finishing school, South Coast, to fill an unexpected vacancy. References to clergymen and officers of high rank, whose daughters are pupils.—LADY PRINCIPAL, 46, Medora-road, Elm-park, Brixton-rise, S.W.

ARTICLED PUPIL required (not under 14), in a small first-class school, South Coast, to assist one hour daily. Happy home with superior advantages offered. Preference to officer or clergyman's daughter. Premium 25 guineas.—LADY PRINCIPAL, 46, Medora-road, Elm-park, Brixton-rise, S.W.

A CHRISTIAN YOUNG LADY (aged 20) desires situation, middle of September, as Resident Governess to young children. English, music, French, elementary Latin, and drawing.
N., 3, Victoria-road, Cotham, Bristol.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Wanted.

AN EVANGELIST (unsectarian) is anxious to hear of an opening for Evangelistic work. Twelve years' experience. Age 35. Married. Full particulars on application.—M., Chateau Beaufort, Hengist-road, Bournemouth, Hants.

YOUNG MAN seeks employment as Missionary, Secretary, Collector, Clerk, &c. Country town or village (any needy place). Remuneration, moderate.—EBENEZER, Box 10,042, Smith's Advertising Agency, 132, Fleet-street London.

SECRETARIAL.—Having resigned the Secretaryship of the Bournemouth Young Men's Christian Association, the advertiser will be glad to fill another situation. — CHARLES F. HAINES, 35, Saxon-road, Selhurst, London.

AS SECRETARY or otherwise, by an energetic Christian Gentleman, in connection with some charity or mission. Salary no object. References exchanged.
C., 67, Oswald-road, Dover.

GROOM - GARDENER. — A Lady highly recommends her young Servant. Understands all departments of gardening, also cows, &c. Is an earnest Christian and abstainer.
Mrs. GRAVES, Slangham Common, Hayward Heath.

GROOM AND COACHMAN.—Christian man, married, desires situation as above. Single or pair. Town or country. Willing to be useful. Good references.
J. BENNETT, 2, Albion-terrace, Leytonstone, Essex.

AS GROOM, under a coachman, or to look after cob and trap. Age 17. Two years good character. Abstainer.
S. WOODROFFE, Ewell, Epsom.

GARDENER (Head).—The Hon. Miss ONSLOW, Upton, Alresford, Hants, highly recommends her head gardener (Thomas Oldham). Thoroughly competent to manage any place. Age 36, married. Leaving through reduction in establishment.

AS FOOTMAN, under a butler, or otherwise. Age 21. Height 5 ft. 9 in. Twelve months' good character; 3½ years' previous. Disengaged September 8.
J. K., 10, Westend-terrace, Winchester, Hants.

MRS. HENRY FORD BARCLAY is anxious to find a Butler's situation for a respectable, experienced married man with three children, ages varying from 18 months to 10 years. Is willing to go out as a single man if desired. Age 38.
Woodford, Essex.

ANY PLACE OF TRUST wanted by advertiser. Christian, abstainer. 30 years one situation. Good penman. Used to tea warehouse, docks. Any gentleman would find him a very handy man. Good reference.
F. W. H., 35, Sidney-street, Commercial-road, E.

COMPANION-ATTENDANT TO LADY.—Re-engagement required, by experienced, thoroughly reliable, middle-aged person. Nervous cases not objected to. Good references.—ALPHA, care of Mr. Ingham, Chemist, Upper Tooting, Surrey.

A GENTLEWOMAN of experience, accustomed to the care of invalids, the duties of an amanuensis, and the control of a household, including men servants, desires a position in which her services will be valued.
DOROTHY, Court Hill House, Lewisham.

AN ENGAGEMENT wanted, by a certificated Nurse, as Attendant to a Gentleman or Lady. No objection to go abroad. Highest references.—S. R., 2, Alconbury-road, Upper Clapton.

A LADY highly recommends an intelligent, practical, refined Woman, possessing tact, to control or assist in home. Competent manager, economical and reliable. Good needlewoman. Salary required.
ALMA, Rose Lea, Castle Bar, Ealing.

A LADY IS ANXIOUS to obtain a situation as Amanuensis or Companion to an Elderly or Invalid Lady, for a young lady aged 27. Can be well recommended.—Miss M. GREEN, Sibton Abbey, Yoxford, Suffolk.

A CHRISTIAN LADY, middle-aged, desires engagement as Companion or Housekeeper to elderly or invalid lady or gentleman, care of motherless children, or other Christian work.
ALPHA, 5, Cornwallis-gardens, Hastings.

A RE-ENGAGEMENT wanted as Companion to an elderly Lady. Good reader. Very cheerful.—X. N., Shelley & Co., Advertising Offices, 5, Leadenhall-street, E.C.

COMPANION TO A LADY. — A young Lady who has the highest recommendation, desires to find a situation as above.
The Rev. PREBENDARY WILSON, Tottenham.

A KIND CHRISTIAN HOME required for a Girl of 18 as Mother's Help. No salary, but godly training and kindness desired.
Miss A. GREEN, Malvernbury, Great Malvern.

CLERGYMAN'S WIFE can strongly recommend conscientious young woman. Tall, good manners. Personal character. Suitable for very light parlourmaid's place; wait on lady or child above six. Plain sewing, no dressmaking.—Mrs. DENING, 112, Upper Richmond-road, Putney, S.W.

A LADY WISHES to recommend, as Housekeeper or Companion, or for a position of trust, a middle-aged, superior Christian person, who has had much experience in domestic management, and who would be a cheerful and an intelligent companion to an invalid or elderly Lady. She would be willing to accept moderate remuneration.—For address and further information, apply to Mrs. SEAMAN, Tower House, Putney.

VOYAGE TO INDIA.—Young Lady seeks engagement as Companion to Elderly Lady, or to assist in care of children, in return for half passage money. Conversant with English, German, French, and Hindustani. Musical. References.
BANDI, 125, Brockley-road, London, S.E.

A LADY WISHES to recommend her Governess as Companion or Lady Housekeeper. Will be happy to answer any inquiries. Engagement wanted September 13.
Mrs. BATEMAN, 1, Elms-road, Clapham-common.

EXPERIENCED CHRISTIAN LADY (German), speaking English and French, desires a situation as Companion to a Lady requiring kind, conscientious care, or as assistant in any work for the Lord. References to the Rev. Dr. Malbaum, Chaplain of the German Chapel Royal, St. James.
M. A., 3, Lawn-villas, Wood-green, N.

A GENTLEMAN can strongly recommend his Housekeeper, middle-aged, as a trustworthy, economical, and thoroughly efficient person, where another servant is kept, to a gentleman or invalid lady. Salary not so much an object as a quiet Christian home.—Mr. FAWKES, Sunnyside, Queen Adelaide-road, Penge.

AS HOUSEKEEPER to a Gentleman, by a superior middle-aged person. Thoroughly trustworthy. Good plain cook. No objection to work. Moderate salary. Christian and abstainer. Highly recommended.
HOUSEKEEPER, 13, Fairfield, Beckenham.

AS SEWING MAID, or Mother's Help. Age 17. Good needlewoman and machinist. Small salary. Good home, or would go to dressmaker and take lessons as part of salary. Country preferred.
SECRETARY, Conference Hall, Clapham.

THE MATRON of the Female Orphan Asylum, Brighton, desires to hear of a similar post in Institution or Convalescent Home. Four years' excellent testimonials. Disengaged in October.
Mr. CORMACK, Female Orphan Asylum, Brighton.

A DOMESTICATED YOUNG LADY desires an engagement as Mother's Help. Has a knowledge of drapery, millinery, and would undertake children's wardrobes, and entire supervision. Highest references.—35, High-street Uxbridge.

A YOUNG LADY, in her twentieth year, desires engagement as Mother's Help, Nursery Governess, or Lady's Companion.
A. O. H., 2, Lockhart-place, St. Andrews, Fife.

A LADY WISHES to recommend a young person suitable as Nurse to one or two children. Useful with needle.—Further particulars apply to Miss COOKSON, 30, Oxford-road, Kilburn.

A LADY is anxious to find a good situation as Under-Servant for highly respectable, trustworthy young woman, aged 20. Good needlewoman. Aberdeenshire preferred.
Miss DUNCAN, Aboyne, N. B.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Vacant.

HUSBAND AND WIFE wanted. Earnest Christians. No family. Ages between 30 and 40. Wife as Lady Housekeeper. Gentleman Good Correspondent. If musical so much the better.—Apply by letter to C. A. M., 13, Cathcart-hill, Highgate, London.

AS FARM BAILIFF and Head Gardener. — Experienced and trustworthy Man wanted. Must understand tillage and stock. 127 acres of arable. Wife must undertake dairy and poultry.—Miss ONSLOW, Alresford, Hants.

VOLUNTARY ORGANIST wanted, October 1, for a Liverpool church. Member of Church of England, communicant, and Christian. Address, with qualifications and references, Rev. SIDNEY PIKE, Sefton-park, Liverpool.

AN EARNEST CHRISTIAN LADY WORKER wanted for a country parish. Mission service in small room. Bible-classes, &c. Must be an Episcopalian.—Address, stating particulars, Mrs. H., Wightwick House, near Wolverhampton.

FEMALE REFUGE HOME, DUBLIN.—Matron wanted, an earnest Christian worker (Irish considered most suitable), to take chief control for at least six months.
RICHARD SCOTT, 16, Kenilworth-terrace, Rathgar

COACHMAN WANTED. — Single man. Total abstainer. Must be willing to make himself generally useful. Age under 35. References and application to be sent in at once to H. GRATTAN GUINNESS, Jun., Harley House, Bow, London, E.

HAIRDRESSER'S ASSISTANT.—Decided Christian, for Ladies' and Gentlemen's hair-cutting, and board work.
W. PURKISS, High-street, Rotherham.

LADY HELP (experienced) wanted immediately in Ladies' School. Christian desired.
Miss L., Manadon Villa, Plymouth.

A STRONG, EXPERIENCED, and earnest person wanted, age about 25, as Biblewoman. £35 to £40.
VICAR, 45, Grange-road, Bermondsey.

YOUTH about 16 wanted, for the China and Glass Trade. Abstainer and Christian preferred.—MANNERS, Walton-on-Thames.

PARISH NURSE. — Wanted, hospital trained Nurse. Christian person who would seek the spiritual as well as physical welfare of the sick. Salary £60.—Apply, with references, The VICAR, St. Stephen's Vicarage, Tunbridge.

INDIA.—Wanted, by October 1st, for Simla (good climate), experienced, Protestant Head Nurse. Good tempered, fond of children, abstainer, healthy, obliging. 30 to 40. Unexceptionable references. State wages. Only suitable applications answered.
Mrs. H., 18, Ness-bank, Inverness, Scotland.

A LAUNDRY MATRON wanted for Rescue Home, to teach inmates.
Mrs. SHETTLE, London-street, Reading.

AS MOTHER'S HELP. — Wanted, in clergyman's family, a conscientious, ladylike Young Girl. Three children, youngest 20 months. One servant.
Mrs. HUDSON, 53, St. George's-terrace, Swansea

CAN ANY LADY recommend, as Second Nurse (where three are kept), a thoroughly nice, high-principled Girl, of about 22, who has been well trained as Nursery Maid, under a head nurse? Good needlework essential. Town and country.—ALPHA, Pilgrim's Hatch, Brentwood.

AN ELDERLY LADY requires a Widow to share her house free, and she work for remuneration. Age over fifty. Evangelical. Abstainer preferred.
BROWN, Stationer, Eltham, S.E.

USEFUL MAID ATTENDANT.—Wanted for an elderly invalid lady, suffering from rheumatism and nervousness, living alone in drawing-room apartments in Brighton, a strong, active, good-tempered, and thoroughly trustworthy person, age about 36, able to read aloud, write well, and do plain needlework. Must be a Protestant. Good wages, and a comfortable home.—Address, 404—Library, 4, Waterloo-street, Brighton.

A PARLOURMAID wanted. Abstainer. Must have good references and experience. Christian preferred. Age under 30.—Apply at once to Mrs. H. GRATTAN GUINNESS, Jun., Harley House, Bow, E.

HOUSE-PARLOURMAID wanted, in private family of two. Good character essential. Quiet comfortable home. Good wages.—Apply first by letter to
S. L., 13, Lancaster-road, South Hampstead, N. W.

HOUSE - PARLOURMAID wanted. Aged about 24. Tall, and of neat appearance. Two in family. Good personal character indispensable.
13, Warwick-road, Maida Vale.

GOOD PLAIN COOK wanted in private family of two. Good character essential. Quiet comfortable home.—Apply first by letter to
S. S., 13, Lancaster-road, South Hampstead.

GOOD PLAIN COOK wanted in October. Age about 30. Understand dairy. Kitchenmaid kept.—Address, by letter only,
R. M. J., Lowood, Shooter's-hill, Kent.

A GOOD PLAIN COOK wanted. Church of England. Wages £20.—Apply by letter to DINGLEFIELD, Bournemouth.

A SUPERIOR HOUSEMAID wanted. Age under 35. Total abstainer. Good references. Able to do needlework. Wages according to ability.—Apply at once to Mrs. H. GRATTAN GUINNESS, Jun., Harley House, Bow, E.

AS HOUSEMAID, and to wait at table, in a quiet private family, a respectable Young Woman wanted. Wages £18 to £20. Good personal character indispensable. Dissenter preferred.—Address, stating age, length of character, and full particulars,
M. S., Post-office, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

AS HOUSEMAID. — Wanted, a Christian Girl, about 18. With reference.
A. B., 11, De Montfort-square, Leicester.

GOOD GENERAL SERVANT wanted where another is kept, by a widow lady. A quiet, comfortable home. A good character indispensable. An abstainer. Age not under 23.—Apply first by letter to A. B., 2, Clarence-terrace, New Hampton, Middlesex.

A RESPECTABLE GIRL wanted, about 15, to help a mother in her home. Must be obliging, trustworthy, and fond of children (two only). Small remuneration given ROUGHTON, Chemist, Sheepshed, Loughboro'.

CAN ANY LADY recommend strong, active Girl as General Servant in clergyman's family? Work systematically arranged. Boots cleaned by nurse. Abstainer.
WINCHILSEA, Sidcup, Kent

RESPECTABLE YOUNG GIRL wanted, in Clergyman's family, near country town, for Housework, and to attend to three children, youngest three years.
MATER, Bowlish, Shepton-Mallet, Somerset.

A LADY WOULD be willing to train and clothe a poor but respectable Girl. She would have a happy Christian home.
5[illegible], Chichester-road, Kilburn, N.W.

GOOD PLAIN COOKS wanted (town and country), House-Parlourmaids, Nurses, good General Servants.—Miss MAULDEN'S (late missionary) Registry and Home, Church-street, Paddington-green. Please send stamped envelope for reply.

To Let, Apartments, &c.

PERCY'S HOTEL, LONDON.
40, Bedford-place, Bloomsbury-sq., W.C.

This First-class Private Hotel is highly recommended by the Bishop of Algoma; Rev. M. E. Thorold, M.A., Leicester; Dr. Georgens, Ouchy, Lausanne; J. Bevan and Mrs. Braithwaite, 312, Camden-road. and many others. Beds from 1s. 6d. Tea, 1s. 3d. Tariff on application.
Mrs. LLOYD HARRIS, Proprietor.

LONDON.
WEST CENTRAL HOTEL.

(First-class Temperance), 97, 99, 101, 103, Southampton-row, Russell-square.—Highly commended by Sir William Fox, K.C.M.G.; Rev. Charles Williams; Rev. John Cairns, D.D.; Rev. A. B. Grosart, D.D.; Rev. H. S. Paterson, M.D.; Rev. Forbes E. Winslow, M.A.; T. W. Russell, Esq., M.P.; Dr. Norman Kerr: Frederick Sherlock, Esq.; Dr. Ziemann; Miss Haslam, C.E.T.S.; Mrs. Lucas Shadwell, &c., &c. Plain Breakfast or Tea 1s. 3d. Beds, 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. Printed Tariff on application to FREDERIC SMITH, Proprietor.

LONDON.—First-class Private Hotel, 20, Bedford-place, Russell-square, W.C.—Patronised and highly recommended by Bishop and Mrs. Newman, Leamington; the Rev. J. R. O. West, M.A., Manchester; Tudor Trevor, Esq., Leeds; George Ward, Esq., Manchester; Thomas B. Dale, Esq., J.P., Warwick; James Baly, Esq., and many other friends. Tariff on application.—GRACE PERCY, Proprietress, late Librarian to the Warwick Library, and Grand-daughter of the late Rev. J. W. Percy, Warwick.

HUTCHINSON'S PRIVATE HOTEL, 24, Guildford-street, Russell-square, the most central position for all parts of London; and at 24, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C. Extensively patronised and strongly recommended. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Weekly boarders taken.

W. TAVERNER, Temperance Hotel, 41 and 43, Judd-street, Euston-road, London, W.C. Five minutes from G.N., Mid., and N.W. Railways. Beds from 1s. 6d. Plain breakfast or tea, 1s. Tariff and testimonials on application. Patronised by ministers of all denominations.

LONDON.—97, EUSTON-ROAD (opposite G.N. and Midland Railways).—Furnished Parlour-floor. Bed-rooms nightly or weekly. Sitting-room and Board as required, in a Christian family. Terms moderate.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—A limited number of Ministers and their wives, and other Christians, are received at a comfortable private residence.—For terms address,
H., Fern Lea, Pevensey-road.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—Boarding Establishment, Meliora House, 20 and 21, Carisbrooke-road. Conducted by the Widow of the late Rev. F. WAGSTAFFE, and Mrs. LOCKE. Good table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Near sea, gardens, and rail.

INTEMPERANCE.—A private Home at the seaside for limited number of the upper and higher middle classes in a cheerful little spot where Dipsomania, Choralism, Nervous Debility, &c., has been long and successfully treated. Christian influence; home comforts and amusements; highest references.—MEDICUS, Messrs. Pascoe, 28, Stokes Croft, Bristol.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Clergyman's Widow, who has had great experience in nursing, would gladly receive two or three Ladies, invalid or otherwise, in her comfortable home. Terms from 25s. South aspect.
Mrs. H., Estens, Surrey-road South, Bournemouth.

ILFRACOMBE.—Foster's Boarding House. Close to sea. Home comforts. Highly recommended by Clergy and Ministers. Conducted on Christian and Temperance principles. Terms, 42s. per week. No extras.

BRIGHTON.—Sussex House Boarding Establishment, pleasantly situated in the Old Steine, having a sea view, and the beautiful Steine Gardens in front. Near to Pavilion, Aquarium, and piers. Liberal table, with every home comfort.
Mr. & Mrs. BOX, 58, Old Steine.

MRS. PARSONS returns sincere thanks for all kindness from Christian friends, and begs to say she has removed to larger premises.—(Private) Convalescent Home, Shaftesbury House, Seaside-road, Eastbourne.

ROTHESAY, N.B.—House of Rest. A Health Resort and Hydropathic Establishment for Christians. Summer terms, board, lodging, and baths, from 30s. per week.—Send for prospectus to COLIN CAMPBELL, Argyle Lodge.

WORTHING HOME OF REST for Christians. Close to sea, with good garden. Every comfort. Services on the ground. Terms 25s. to 2 guineas.—LADY SUPERINTENDENT, Rutherford Lodge, Worthing.

INTEMPERANCE.—Private Home for six Ladies. Terms from 1½ to 3 guineas weekly. Highest professional references given, for which, with other particulars, apply to
Miss PUDNEY, Buxton House, Earls Colne, Essex.

BROADSTAIRS.—Seafield Boarding Establishment.—Best situation in town. Close to sea. Liberal table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Highly recommended by all who have visited. Special terms for permanent boarders.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Large and airy suites of Apartments. Close to principal churches, and near pier and gardens. Hot and cold baths. Terms moderate.—Mrs. MOON, St. Peter's-road.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Mancetter, West Cliff.—Superior Boarding House. Best position. Close to the sea. Very comfortable house. Moderate terms.—PROPRIETRESS.

BUXTON, Derbyshire.—Alpine Boarding House, pleasantly situated near baths and gardens. One or two Ladies would be received on very low terms permanently, or for winter months.
Proprietress, Miss PALMER.

BANKS OF THE WYE.—Hoarwithy. —Harp Temperance Hotel. Comfortable boarding house for a quiet family. Terms very moderate.—Apply to the Manageress, Mrs. Shaw, Hoarwithy, Ross.

HULME CLIFF COLLEGE, CURBAR, in the Peak of Derbyshire.—This beautiful and healthful summer resort for Christian families will be open from the middle of July till the middle of September. Climate bracing. Scenery lovely. Excursions of great interest. Close to Chatsworth and Monsal Dale, Matlock, Buxton, and Eyam. Comfortable accommodation; large grounds (through which the river Derwent flows), with farm attached. The house will be open for visitors until September 28. Inclusive terms from £2 2s. a week.
SECRETARY, Harley House, Bow, E.

BEXHILL.—Residential and temporary Home of Rest, for Christians, Station-road. Bracing air. Sea views. Pretty scenery. Including board 1 to 2 guineas per week. Reduction in exceptional cases.

COMFORTABLE CHRISTIAN HOME, at a superior farm residence, for Lady or Gentleman, in healthy neighbourhood in North Hants. Bath-room, phaeton, shooting, fishing.
M. G., 20, Trafalgar-road, Old Kent-road, London.

Y.W.C.A. SEASIDE HOME for Governesses, Christian Workers, young Ladies in businesses. Liberal board. Four meals daily. Terms 14s. weekly. Few vacancies for September.
MATRON, Y.W.C.A., 8, Clarendon-road, Southsea.

TO BE LET.—Furnished Apartments on Richmond-hill, close to the Park and Terrace Gardens. Every home comfort. Good cooking and attendance. Or full board at inclusive moderate terms can be arranged.
HOME, Herald Office, Richmond, Surrey.

HYDROPATHIC HEALTH RESORT FOR CHRISTIANS.—Charming scenery. Moorland air among the Cotswold hills. Highly recommended.—For prospectus and terms, apply to S. PYALL DIPROSE, Pitchcombe View, Stroud, Gloucester.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Superior high-class Apartments. Healthy situation. South aspect. Close to pines, sea and town. Bed and sitting-room from 25s. Good attendance.—Linden House, St. John's Wood-road, Bournemouth.

BOURNEMOUTH.—To let for the Winter. Good sitting-room and four bed-rooms. Sheltered. South and west aspect. No other lodgers except one lady. Terms 3½ guineas.
Shelbourne House, Lorne-park.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Unfurnished.— Wanted, a Lady to share home; or experienced Christian person with furniture, accustomed to let lodgings. Highest references required.
L., Mr. Amoore, Lansdowne, Bournemouth.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Aylwin Tower. —First-class Boarding-house. Beautifully situated on West Cliff. South aspect. Close to churches, town, and pier. Liberal table, and every home comfort for a winter residence.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—Furnished House.—A lady is desirious of letting the whole or principal part of her house, for six months or longer. Three reception and six bedrooms. Close to sea, church, and rail. Three and a half to four guineas per week.
C. PUTLAND, 7, London-road, St. Leonards.

HASTINGS.—HOME OF REST.— For Workers, Governesses, and others needing rest, or for Ladies or Children requiring change. Vacancies middle of September.—Miss A. RODWELL, 3, Holmesdale-gardens, Hastings.

BRIGHTON.—A few Boarders received in a lady's private house close to West Pier. Liberal table. Terms 25s. to £2 2s. References to clergymen and others.—13, Montpelier-road.

BRIGHTON.—A Widow Lady, having a larger house than she requires, wishes to meet with one or two ladies who would lodge with her permanently. References given and required.
Mrs. C., 18, New Steine, Brighton.

ONE GUINEA PER WEEK.—Furnished Cottage to be Let at Prestow-villa, Brighton. Close to church. Suitable for lady and servant. References.—CYPRUS, Mrs. Davies, 51, Dyke-road.

DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED COUNTRY HOME, Woodside. One mile from Godstone station, Surrey, one hour from London. To Let, unfurnished (95 guineas), or furnished (135 guineas), with or without land (four or eleven acres), lake and woods.—For full particulars apply to owner, Mr. HIND SMITH, or to Mr. HOOPER, Exeter Hall, Strand, where photograph may be seen.

PADDINGTON.—Plainly furnished bed-room; also one unfurnished, together or separate. Quiet house. Suitable for lady of small means, or two young girls. No attendance.
W., 105, Harrow-road, Edgware-road, W.

BRIGHTON.—Well-furnished comfortable House to Let for three months or longer. Pleasantly situated, five minutes from station. Containing three reception, five bed-rooms, conservatory, good kitchen, and offices. Linen left. Terms, 2½ guineas; reduction for longer period.—Mrs. L., Mrs. Homewood, Stationer, Dyke-road, Brighton.

"A HOME FROM HOME FOR YOUNG MEN."
THE "JOHN FOWLER HOUSE," 66, Mount Pleasant, Liverpool.—This House has been specially furnished and prepared as a Home for Youths and Young Men occupying situations in Liverpool, but whose homes are at a distance from the city. "Home from Home" for Young Men, governed on Christian principles, strictly unsectarian. Young Men desirous of securing accommodation should apply at once for terms.

BOARD AND RESIDENCE in a quiet Christian family, for an elderly married Gentleman and Lady, or two friends, to share the same large airy bed-room, in healthy part of Wimbledon. References exchanged.—A. B., Mr. Vergo, Stationer, Broadway, Wimbledon.

BOARD AND RESIDENCE.—Comfortable Country Home, in pretty village near Oxford. Winter terms, 17s. weekly. Reduction for two friends sharing same bedroom.
S. E., Roman Cottage, Northleigh, Witney.

BOARD AND RESIDENCE, neighbourhood of Chislehurst.—A lady wishes to receive one or two boarders. Large, private detached house, excellent bath-room, or, if desired, one sitting and two bed-rooms, unfurnished.
A. B., Plant, Newsagent, Sidcup, Kent.

ALGIERS.—A Lady desires to find lodgers for the coming winter season, in her delightful luxurious healthy villa, standing in its own grounds of three acres, on the extreme heights of Mustapha Superieur. Replete with every English comfort.
Hon. LADY SEBRIGHT, Fakenham, Norfolk.

APARTMENTS.—Christian lady or gentleman or two friends. Good rooms, south aspect, open healthy situation. Near station; excellent train service. No children.—X., 2, Robina-villas, Farnley-road, South Norwood.

A YOUNG LADY, OR TWO SISTERS, may find happy Christian Home with Lady and Gentleman, residing alone in pleasant villa in the attractive Western suburb of Ealing. Christian workers preferred. Terms moderate.—LEAH, Williams' Library, Hereford-road, Bayswater, London.

ADVERTISER will be glad to communicate with Christian Lady wishing for comfortable home in the country, on moderate terms. Easy reach of Brighton.
L. B., The Elms, Chailey, near Lewes.

REFINED HOME for a Christian Lady, with real comforts and superior surroundings, offered by a Christian gentlewoman. Twelve miles from town. Beautiful locality. Easy rail access. Moderately liberal terms required.
H., Messrs. Cooper & Walker, 7, Birchin-lane, E.C.

PLEASANT HOME in a country town for two or three Ladies. Close to church, station, postal telegraph offices. Pony carriage. Terms 15s. weekly.
HOME, Sutton, Warminster, Wilts.

TO LET.—Bed and sitting-room combined. Very pleasantly situated. Rent 7s. 6d. per week. Suitable for single gentleman. Close to rail, tram, and 'bus.
17, King Edward-road, Hackney, London.

A COMFORTABLE HOME in a small private family, for two gentlemen, engaged through the day. Highest references changed.
M. B., Close's Library, Goldhawk-road, W.

Miscellaneous.

ANXIOUS INQUIRERS.—Numbers have received blessing through writing. All anxious ones are invited to write.—2 Cor. i. 3, 4.
EVANGELIST, Clapham, S.W.

ASTHMA.—Persons suffering from Asthma, Difficulty of Breathing, &c., are invited to try (free of charge) a remedy for affording immediate relief.—C., Mr. G. A. KEYWORTH, Hastings.

TO BOOKBUYERS and Librarians of Free Libraries.—The September Catalogue of valuable new and second-hand works, offered at prices greatly reduced, is now ready, and will be sent post free upon application to W. H. SMITH & SON, Library Department, 186, Strand, London, W.C.

INFANTS' FIRST SHIRTS.—Beautifully hand-made. Fine linen cambric, trimmed lace, 1s.; six, 5s., free. A very poor lady will be glad of orders. Approval.—M. McKAY, 27, Margaret-street, Cavendish-square, London.

ONE OF THE OLD VIOLINS belonging to distressed Irish ladies is still unsold (Duke). Price twelve guineas. Very sweet tone.—Can be seen at Mercy House, 48, Grosvenor-road, S.W.

TO AUTHORS, Traders, and others. —Manuscripts and every description of copying undertaken. Books and accounts kept by the hour, day, or month.
ALFRED SMITH, 7, Phillip-road, Peckham Rye.

SERVANTS' AGENCY, Soho Bazaar. Unexceptionable references required. Testimonials of religious character fully appreciated. Male and female servants are in daily attendance from 11 to 2. On Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays the number is very large. Entrances: Soho-square, and 77, Oxford-street, London, W.

HOW TO MAINTAIN HEALTH.— Those who wear "Magneticon" Appliances are clad in treasures that relieve pain, and resist cold, disease, and debility.
Messrs. WELTON & Co., 136, Regent-street, W.

LADIES INTERESTED IN FANCY WORK, especially those wishing to make money thereby, should send for Dorinda's book, "Needlework for Ladies, for Pleasure and Profit." New Edition, 194 pages, price 1s. 8d., post free. Contains an enormous amount of information, ample instructions for every variety of work, innumerable recipes and directions, novel ideas, and practical suggestions.—Ringrose, Malvern Link.

A BICYCLIST who intends spending his fortnight's holiday, commencing September 24, in a tract distributing tour on his machine, would be glad to hear of another Christian Cyclist willing to join him.
D. D., 228, Bethnal Green-road, E.

OPEN DOORS.—Voluntary workers greatly needed for simple Gospel Addresses in workrooms in the City, and classes.—Hon. Sec., Welcome, Y.W.C. Institute, Little Britain, E.C., full particulars there.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—Ladies, by sending their Loose and Waste Hair to W. FURKISS, Rotherham, can have the same made into good plaits, and returned, post paid, for 1s. per ounce.

UMBRELLAS RE-COVERED FROM
2s. EACH.
IF YOUR UMBRELLA WANTS RE-COVERING send it by Parcels Post (with Postal Order enclosed) to STRONG BROS., Umbrella Makers, Redhill, Surrey, who will re-cover it and return it as good as new by next post, carriage paid. Good strong twill, ladies', 2s., gents', 2s. 6d.; good alpaca, ladies', 3s., gents', 3s. 6d.; strong durable silk, ladies', 4s. 6d., gents', 5s. Patterns post free. Reference kindly permitted to the Rev. W. J. Fowell, Redhill.

BYWATER, TANQUERAY & CO., 79, Queen Victoria-street, London (late BYWATER, PERRY & Co.), are Agents for Residents abroad Missionaries, Chaplains, &c., in every part of the world. Goods and Outfits supplied at Wholesale prices. Shipping and passages arranged. Banking in all its branches. Full descriptive Catalogue post free. Specially appointed Agents to seven of the leading English and American Missionary Societies. 2000 References.

COLONIES.—Openings for Pupils on good stock and grain farms, and larger estates in Canada, the United States, and Tasmania. Pamphlet free.—FORD, RATHBONE & Co., 21, Finsbury-pavement, London.

A MARVELLOUS TEA.—Our "Combination" Blend at 2s. per lb. is not only economical, but is peculiarly adapted to the London and Suburban water. No householder should be without it. Our 1s. 8d. also strongly recommended. Teas suitable for Ireland at 1s. 6d., 1s. 8d., 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s. Any of above Teas can be had in 5-lb., 10-lb. tins, &c. (tins free), post or carriage paid anywhere in United Kingdom on receipt of cash. Agents wanted.—THE BELFAST ANGLO TEA COMPANY, 6, George-yard, Fenchurch-street, London.

TO LADIES WITH LIMITED MEANS. —The Advertiser's son, a tea planter, seeks well recommended Agents for the sale of his Teas. Liberal commission.
Colonel MORTON, 2, Priory-parade, Cheltenham.

IRON MISSION ROOMS, &c., erected on the most reasonable terms, by R. SAUNDERS, 127, Hungerford-road, London, N. Estimates and designs free. 25 years' practical experience. Also Churches and Schools, &c. Best workmanship.

FOUR LECTURES.—A Voice from the Wilderness. The Experience of Israel, a Comfort and Warning to God's People.—Further particulars, G. REYNOLDS GILL, Lady Margaret-road, London, N.W.

NEW SHIRTS FOR OLD ONES.
Old Shirts Refitted with Irish Linen Fronts and Cuffs.
Good quality, 2/6 each. Specially fine Linen, 3/- each.
Shirts made to Pattern or Order
GEORGE O'BRIEN & CO.,
MANUFACTURERS, BELFAST.

Tonga

"Tonga maintains its reputation in the treatment of Neuralgia." Lancet.

"Invaluable in facial Neuralgia. Has proved effective in all those cases in which we have prescribed it." Medical Press.

2/9, 4/6, & 11/- Of all Chemists.

Death.

WOODSIDE.—On the 1st instant, at No. 12, Woodchurch-road, West Hampstead, MARGARET, the beloved wife of the Rev. J. S. WOODSIDE, for 39 years a missionary in Northern India, aged 61 years.

THE LORD'S SECOND COMING.

The Blessed Hope Union. For Prayer and Watching. Founded A.D. 1880. For rules and other information please address the Hon. Sec., Rev. W. J. CHRISTIE, Rectory, Newtownstewart, Ireland.

NEAVE'S

FOR INFANTS,
INVALIDS,
GROWING CHILDREN,
AND THE AGED.

FOOD.

NEW COPYRIGHT TREATISE.

BY A PRACTISING PHYSICIAN.

DYSPEPSIA:

WHY SUFFERED.

Also, reliable and fully detailed Dietary and Medicinal Treatment of Indigestion and associated disorders, affording an absolute remedy and cure.

64 pp. 8vo., 1s.; smaller size, 2d. post free from Publishers,

HAMILTON & CO., Oxford-street, Southampton.

Terms for Advertisements

IN

"The Christian"

(PREPAID)

Miscellaneous Advertisements in small type are charged at the following rates:—

Not exceeding 30 Words	3	0
" 39 "	3	9
" 48 "	4	6

And 9d. for every additional line of nine words or under, the address being in all cases charged for.

To prevent disappointment, it is necessary to say that in no case must Letters be addressed to a Post-office, unless permission be previously obtained at such Post-office.

The Publishers cannot undertake to receive and forward Replies to Advertisements.

Publications.

17th Thousand. Price 1d.

THE NEAR RETURN OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST. By CHEYNE BRADY.
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO.

MRS. GRIMKE'S TEXT CARDS.—To be had from Mrs. GRIMKÈ, Prestwich, Manchester, who likes orders sent to her direct, or from E. KAUFMANN, 129, Cheapside; or booksellers.

THE TIME OF THE END.—A clear and simple pamphlet on the Second Advent. Has been much approved. Price 4d. post free.—Rev. W. J. CHRISTIE, Rectory, Newtownstewart, Ireland. Also from above, BEHOLD, THE BRIDEGROOM COMETH! Two illustrations. One Penny; or 9d. per dozen, post free.

CARDS,

PRINTED IN BLUE AND GOLD,

2s. 6d. per 100, or 18 for Sixpence.

1. Six Short Rules for Young Christians. By BROWNLOW NORTH.
2. Rules for Daily Life.
3. Oh! for a Perfect Trust.
4. The Christian's Entrance into Glory.
5. Which?
6. My Prayer.
7. Pray, Always Pray.
8. Wishing You a Happy New Year.
9. Our Warrant for Coming to Christ.
10. Eight Loving Hints.
11. To Know Thee More.
12. Make Sure of Christ.
13. Looking unto Jesus.
14. Grace for the Graceless.
15. Peace, Perfect Peace.
16. My Heart's Desire.
17. "Who Loved Me."
18. Jesus is Near.

Packet of 18, assorted, 6d.

DRUMMOND'S TRACT DEPOT, Stirling
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO.

DAILY LIGHT ON THE DAILY PATH.

IN THE VERY WORDS OF SCRIPTURE.

Two Volumes. Morning Hour, and Evening Hour. Sold separately or in sets.

"These are very precious little books, and few more suitable gifts could be found."
Christian.

Small Edition, each volume, cloth, 1s.; French morocco, gilt edges, 2s.
Large Type Edition, each volume, cloth extra, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.
Various Styles in calf, morocco, and German calf.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, 15, Paternoster-row.

DAINTREE & CO., DYERS, LONDON.

The LARGEST WORKS IN LONDON for Dyeing and Cleaning in every Branch.
98, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.; 365, Southwark-park-road, S.E.; 44, Leicester-square, W.C.

Carts Collect and Deliver to all parts.—PRICE LISTS BY POST.

HYMNS for OPEN-AIR MEETINGS.

A large Variety of Sheet Hymns for OPEN-AIR and other MEETINGS kept in stock. FIFTY-ONE different sorts. Prices—6d. per 100; 9d. per 100; 1s. 6d. per 100. From Six Hymns to Twenty Hymns on Sheet.

Complete Lists and Specimens sent free on application.

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

TRACT DISTRIBUTION.

Tracts at 4d. per 100; 6d. per 100; 8d. per 100; 1s. per 100; 2s. per 100. Over Three Hundred different sorts.

Specimen Tracts of either price sent free on application to MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.

SACRED SONGS AND SOLOS.

COMPILED AND SUNG BY

IRA D. SANKEY.

Nos. 1 and 2 Combined, containing 441 Pieces.

MUSIC AND WORDS.

OLD NOTATION.

Large 8vo. Size 8¾×5⅝.

1 F.	Tinted Covers ...	2	6
2 F.	Limp Cloth	3	6
3 F.	Cloth Boards	4	6
4 F.	Cloth Boards, gilt edges	5	0
5 F.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	8	6
6 F.	Morocco, flexible, kid-lined, gilt edges ...	12	6
7 F.	Seal yapped, kid-lined, silk sewn	21	0

This is the original Musical Edition, which has been so much used, both for singing and playing from.

OLD NOTATION: CHEAP EDITION.

Small 8vo. Size 7⅜×4¾.

1 H.	Tinted Covers ...	1	6
2 H.	Limp Cloth	2	0
3 H.	Cloth Boards... ...	2	6
4 H.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	5	6
5 H.	Morocco, flexible, kid-lined, gilt edges ...	8	6

This "Small Octavo" Musical Edition is very convenient for singing from. It has the advantage of being both cheap and portable.

TONIC SOL-FA.

Large 8vo. Size 8⅝×5⅝.

1 G.	Tinted Covers ...	2	6
2 G.	Limp Cloth	3	6
3 G.	Cloth Boards	4	6
4 G.	Cloth Boards, gilt edges	5	0
5 G.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	8	6

This is the original Sol-fa Edition, which has been largely used both for singing and playing from.

TONIC SOL-FA: CHEAP EDITION.

Small 8vo. Size 7⅜×4¾.

1 R.	Tinted Covers ...	1	6
2 R.	Limp Cloth	2	0
3 R.	Cloth Boards	2	6

This small Sol-fa Edition has recently been issued, and will be found very convenient for singing from. It is portable and cheap.

LARGE QUARTO (Old Notation).

Size 11×8½. Thickness 1½ inch.

Handsomely Bound in Cloth Extra, bevelled boards, gilt edges	16	6
Morocco, gilt edges	30	0

This is a very handsome Edition. Both Words and Music are printed in large type, and all the pages have rules round them. The Volume is specially intended for use at the Organ, Harmonium, or Piano. Being attractively got up, this Edition forms a very acceptable present.

SMALL QUARTO (Old Notation).

A NEW AND CHEAP EDITION.

Size 9½×7½. Thickness ¾ inch.

Cloth Back, paper sides ...	5	0
Cloth Boards	6	0

This is a new and cheap Edition in QUARTO size. It is very convenient for playing from, and has been much approved.

SCHOOL EDITION. In Old Notation, or Tonic Sol-fa.

Size 6×8½.

Tinted Covers...	0	4
Printed Cloth	0	6
Cloth Limp	0	9
Cloth Boards	1	0

This Edition contains all the Words, also the Complete Air of each piece. It is specially adapted for use in Schools.

WORDS ONLY.

CHEAPEST EDITION (A).

Size 4⅜×3¼.

1 A.	Sewed	0	1
1½ A.	Paste-down Covers ...	0	1½
2 A.	Printed Cloth ...	0	2
3 A.	Cloth Boards	0	4

In this Edition the complete Book of 441 Hymns is to be had for ONE PENNY. The type, though small, is very clear and legible. In cases in which large quantities are required—as, for example, Sunday Schools or Missions—this is the most suitable Edition.

NONPAREIL EDITION (B).

Size 5⅜×4¼.

1 B.	Tinted Covers ...	0	3
2 B.	Printed Cloth ...	0	4

The type in this Edition is a size larger than that in Edition A.; and consequently this book is in many instances preferred.

POCKET EDITION (C).

Size 4⅝×3.

1 C.	Limp Cloth	0	6
2 C.	Cloth Boards	1	0
3 C.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	2	6
4 C.	Morocco, flexible, kid-lined	4	6

This Edition, as its name implies, is very handy and portable: it affords a clear type in a small-sized Book.

SMALL 8vo. EDITION (D).

Size 6¾×4.

1 D.	Tinted Covers ...	1	0
2 D.	Cloth Limp	1	6
3 D.	Cloth Boards... ...	2	0
4 D.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	4	6

The Four Books above-named have rules round every page.

SPECIAL CHEAP EDITION (Reduced Size).

Size 5⅜×3⅝.

7 D.	Blocked Cloth ...	0	9

This Book is printed in the same Type as the four D. Editions mentioned above; but, being printed without rules to the pages, the book is of course of smaller size.

EXTRA LARGE TYPE (E).

Size 6⅝×5.

1 E.	Tinted Covers ...	1	6
2 E.	Limp Cloth	2	0
3 E.	Cloth Boards	2	6
4 E.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	5	6
5 E.	Morocco, flexible, kid-lined...	8	6

These five sorts have rules round every page.

SPECIAL CHEAP EDITION (Reduced Size).

Size 6×4½.

7 E.	Tinted Covers ...	1	0
8 E.	Blocked Cloth ...	1	6
9 E.	Morocco, gilt edges ...	4	6
10 E.	Morocco, flexible, kid-lined...	6	6

All these ten sorts are in good large print, and are very suitable for the aged and for any whose sight is not good.

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller or Musicseller in the Kingdom.

MANUFACTURERS to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN.

Wm. Polson's CORN FLOUR.

The Original and First Manufactured in Great Britain.

UNRIVALLED FOOD OF HEALTH, for Children and Invalids; THE BEST KNOWN MATERIAL for PUDDINGS, CUSTARDS, CAKES, BLANCMANGE, and a variety of delicious Preparations for the Table.

Every Packet is Warranted Pure, and its genuine qualities are certified by the highest medical authorities in the kingdom.

The Lancet affirms:—"It is preferable to most descriptions of Arrowroot, on account of its sweeter flavour." Dr. Lankester, Superintendent of Government Food Collection at Kensington, in a note to the Manufacturers said:—". . . I am so well satisfied with your Corn Flour that I have given directions for its use in my own family."

Wm. Polson & Co., Paisley and London.

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITIES!!

JUDSON'S GOLD PAINT

JUDSON'S DYES

JUDSON'S MARKING-INK

JUDSON'S FILTERS

BY SPECIAL ROYAL AND IMPERIAL WARRANT!

FASHIONABLE DRESS MATERIALS

For Ladies', Children's, and Gentlemen's Dress. Unsurpassed for Beauty, Novelty, and Sterling Value. The Immense Variety of Patterns comprise Specialities to suit all Classes, all Climates, all Fashions, and all Purses, from 10½d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.

PATTERNS FREE.

REGISTERED.

Egerton Burnett's Royal Serges

REGISTERED.

NEW PATTERNS FOR AUTUMN, 1887.

Any Length of Material Sold.

Carriage Paid on Orders of £1 in value to any Railway Station in the United Kingdom.

Goods Packed for Exportation.

Address: EGERTON BURNETT, Serge Warehouse, WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.

CAUTION.—Egerton Burnett has no Agents. All orders are executed direct.

FOR PUDDINGS, BLANC-MANGE, CUSTARDS, CHILDREN'S AND INVALIDS' DIET, AND ALL THE USES OF ARROWROOT,

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR

HAS A WORLD-WIDE REPUTATION, AND IS DISTINGUISHED FOR UNIFORMLY SUPERIOR QUALITY.

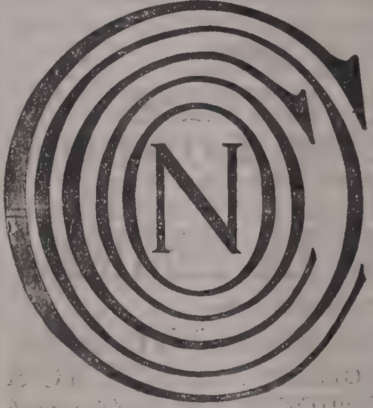
NOTE. Purchasers should insist on being supplied with BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR.

Inferior kinds, asserting fictitious claims, are being offered.

CAN YOU READ THIS?



"COCOON" KNITTING WOOL.

Numerous complaints having been made that inferior wool balled in the same style is sold as Genuine COCOON Wool, please note that none is genuine unless bearing the word COCOON, which is our registered Trade Mark, on the band.

Directions for knitting a number of useful articles free of charge, on receipt of Stamped and Addressed Envelope, mentioning name of this paper.

The fastest possible dyes are used for Cocoon Wool.

WOOD & BURTT,
SPINNERS, HOLMFIRTH.

SODDY'S
BAKING POWDER IS THE BEST
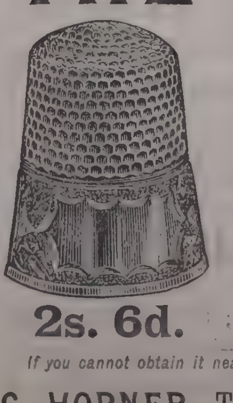
TO PROVE IT
A SAMPLE PACKET
WITH NEW RECIPE FOR A CAKE
WILL BE SENT GRATIS & POST FREE.
BY B. SODDY, WALWORTH RD, LONDON.

THE "DORCAS" THIMBLE.

(Horner's Patent.)

STERLING SILVER.



2s. 6d.

The Queen, May 8th, says:—"The 'Dorcas' Thimble is more durable than the generality of these indispensable work-table implements; it is made in three parts, the inner and the outer being Silver, and the intermediate Steel; forming a resisting power not obtained in silver only. What is more uncomfortable than sewing with a thimble that has seen service to such an extent that it has holes in its sides? With the 'Dorcas' Thimble this annoyance vanishes."

FROM ALL JEWELLERS.

If you cannot obtain it near you, send a wax impression of the open end of old Thimble to show the size, to

C. HORNER, Thimble Manufacturer, HALIFAX.

The Christian:

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED "THE REVIVAL."

A Weekly Record of Christian Life, Christian Testimony, Christian Work and Missionary Enterprise.

No. 920.] LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS, E.C. FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1887.] REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. AS A NEWSPAPER. [ONE PENNY. POST FREE, 1½d.

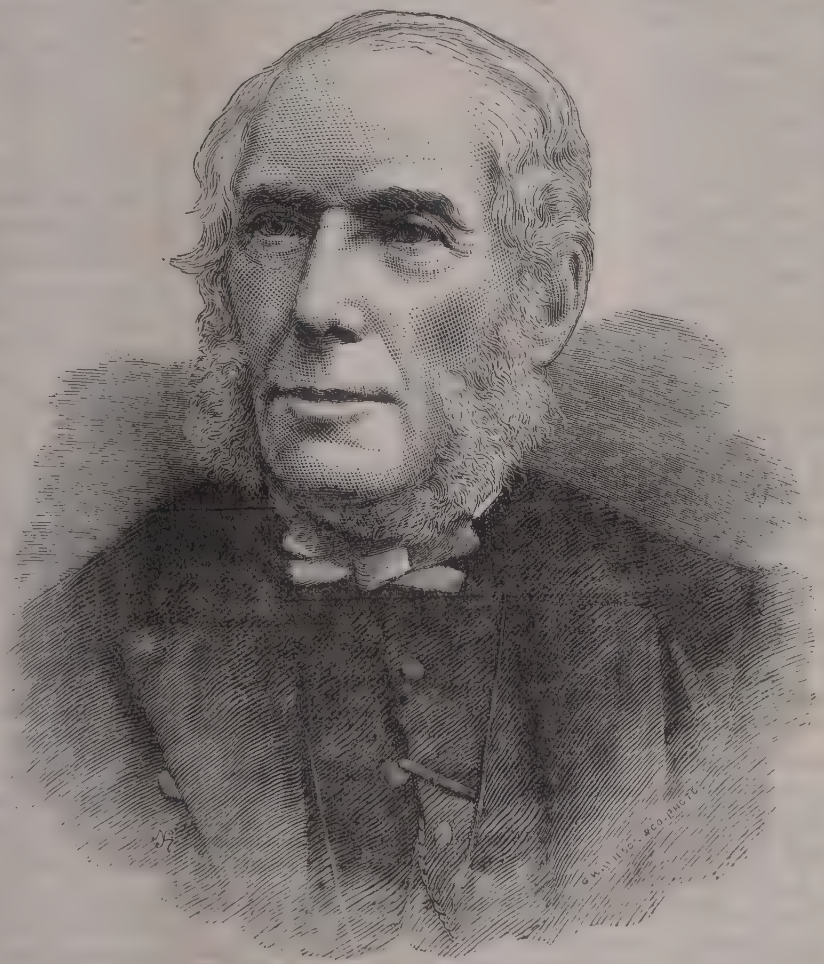
REV. PRINCIPAL BROWN, D.D.

DR. DAVID BROWN is well known in England and America as the writer of the important volume on the Second Advent which bears his name, and still more, perhaps, from his Commentary on the Gospels, the circulation of which in Great Britain, the United States, and the Colonies has been very large.

Born in 1803, in Aberdeen, where his father was twice Chief Magistrate, he went through the usual curriculum of literary study at the Grammar School and University, taking his M.A. degree in 1821. During his Divinity course, through the study of German theology and too close association with a learned friend, his Biblical views became so perverted that he contemplated abandoning all thought of the Christian ministry. A six months visit to Edinburgh, however, was blessed to his recovery from rationalistic tendencies, and on his return to Aberdeen he was the means of a complete change upon his learned friend. This prepared him for an intercourse the following day with Rev. Dr. Malan, of Geneva, which issued in the remarkable conversion of "Rabbi Duncan" (as he was called), afterwards Rev. Dr. Duncan, Professor of Oriental Languages, New College, Edinburgh, the memoir of whose life Dr. Brown subsequently wrote.

Becoming a licentiate of the Church of Scotland in 1826, Dr. Brown remained at home in close study till 1830. He then became assistant to Rev. Edward Irving for above two years, when on discovering the character of the "gift of tongues" which were supposed to be revived in the church, he was obliged to break the connexion. Returning to Scotland, he became assistant to the parish minister of Dumbarton, where he left some cheering fruits of his teaching.

In 1835, he accepted a call to a small rural charge in Banffshire, over which he was ordained the following year. There his ministry was remarkably blessed, especially among the young, who, with their children, now grown to manhood, erected a hall in his jubilee year (1886), which was opened by himself and at which an address was presented to him, making touching allusions to the value of his ministry.



(From Photograph by Messrs. Wilson & Co., Aberdeen.)

At the Disruption of the Church of Scotland, in 1843, he joined the Free Church of Scotland. A few months later he removed to Glasgow as minister of Free St. James's. It was during this ministry that his book on the Second Advent was written.

In 1857, he was appointed Professor of Divinity in the Free Church College, Aberdeen, in the autumn of which year the beginnings of one of the most remarkable religious awakenings which that part of the country had ever seen took place.

Dr. Brown recognised in this movement a work of God, and threw himself into it with all his heart, standing, with one exception, alone among his brethren. He was asked to take charge of the Sunday morning service at 9.30, which had been established. This he did for twelve years, during which time the numbers hardly ever diminished, until it became evident that the need for it no longer existed.

In 1870, Dr. Brown was appointed a member of the New Testament Revision Company. In 1876 he succeeded to the Principalship of his College. But scarcely had this taken place, when the case of Professor Robertson Smith obliged him to take a stand in opposition to that gentleman, whose views of the Old Testament, in his judgment, shook the foundation on which Christianity itself rests. Dr. Brown's early experience, and the difficulties through which he had himself passed, made him keenly alive from the very first to what would prove the fatal result of these views in the Church, if not checked.

In 1885 Dr. Brown was unanimously elected Moderator of the General Assembly and in the following yea he retired from his Professorial office, after thirty years' service; still, however, retaining the office of Principal.

Dr. Brown has always had strong convictions of his own, but he associates freely with those who differ from him. Last September, at the desire of the Council of the Evangelical Alliance, he delivered a powerful address at its Annual Conference at Ryde, on "The Scepticism of the Day, and how to meet it," which has been published. At the Conference of the Alliance next week at Aberdeen, the address of welcome is to be delivered by him.

SYMPOSIUM on the SECOND ADVENT.

Second Notice.

In again commenting on the above symposium, as recently held in the pages of The British Weekly, we cannot but regret that more care has not been taken, on the part of some of the contributors, to distinguish between things that differ. By both Professor Beet and Principal Brown 2 Cor. v. 10 is assumed to have an indubitably post-millennial meaning. But the Apostle there is writing, not of the whole world, but of Christendom, the professing Church of God. "We shall all be made manifest at the judgment-seat of Christ." Unquestionably Christ's coming will have a judicial bearing in respect of the professing Christian community. He "comes to reckon with his servants." "Judgment begins at the house of God." To some who say "Lord, Lord," He will say, "I never knew you." But this truth, so far from substantiating post-millennial ideas, does the very opposite. The faithful servant receives authority answering to his fidelity over five or ten cities. And "to him that overcometh" is given power over the nations.

A similar line of criticism is called for in view of Mr. Beet's assumption respecting the Parable of the Tares. It is extraordinary that a parable which points so strongly in a pre-millennial direction should be assumed, without a tittle of proof, to be of an opposite complexion. If the harvest in this parable be, as Mr. Beet takes for granted, the general judgment, where amid the continuous intermingling and general confusion of the tares and the wheat is there room for the Millennium? To take the harvest there as meaning the general judgment is really to leave the Millennium out altogether.

But leaving these matters of detail, special attention is called to the significance of 1 Cor. xv. "The whole passage," as Professor Beet justly observes, "refers to the dead in Christ;" and the order of events as therein certified to us is: (1) Christ the firstfruits, (2) they that are Christ's at his Parousia, (3) the end. Professor Beet's contention, however, is that the word rendered then in ver. 24—"then cometh the end"—while it "certainly denotes order of time, by no means implies a long interval." Therefore, we may hold that the whole passage is in consistence with the post-millennial belief. But, in our judgment, there is a preliminary point which demands notice.

It is this:—How, on the assumption that Christ's Second Coming is post-millennial, should the circle of limitation be drawn in connection with that event around Christ's people? Why say, "afterward they that are Christ's at his coming"? The post-millennial hypothesis denudes such a specification as this of all significance; for it is an essential feature of that hypothesis to relate the Second Advent with the general resurrection and judgment. Indeed, Professor Beet distinctly alleges that the return of Christ is "followed at once by the resurrection of the dead, by the final judgment of good and bad, and by the eternal glory." But that certainly is not in accordance with the express teaching of 1 Cor. xv. There Christ's return is by the Holy Ghost distinctly confined to Christ's people. When the last trumpet shall sound we are told that "the dead shall be raised incorruptible." But Mr. Beet admits that these and suchlike references only concern the dead in the Lord. It is only such that rise in glory, in incorruption, and so on. But, if so, what becomes of Mr. Beet's allegation that Christ's return is "followed at once by the resurrection of the dead and by the final judgment of good and bad"? Such an assertion is made without the slightest ground of justification, so far as 1 Cor. xv. is concerned. We are bound to maintain on the authority of that passage, as well as 1 Thess. iv., that coincident with Christ's return and the sounding of the last trumpet the sleeping saints shall arise, and those who are awake shall be changed; but to go beyond this is to act irrespective of any warrant which these Scriptures supply.

Mr. Beet in his summing up says:—

> It is quite true that the dead without Christ are not mentioned. But it is quite easy to believe that they will be raised either at the same time as, or immediately following, the dead servants of Christ.

But there is not the least ground for this. What it may be found easy or otherwise to believe is of no moment at all. The prime consideration is, do we, in what we hold, tread the solid rock of Divine testimony? Have we Scriptural authority for our faith? Or is it constituted of imports from other sources? In making our appeal to 1 Cor. xv. we cannot doubt that the saints are raised when Christ comes. Scriptural testimony bears one out in that. But if we go farther, and say that we find it easy to believe that the dead out of Christ rise at the same time as the dead servants of Christ, or immediately after, then we may quote, in so doing, the opinion of Professor Beet; but we cannot quote, in support of our notion, the inspired authority of 1 Cor. xv.

Practically the witness of 1 Cor. xv., considered per se, amounts to this. It assures us of a certain order, and that order tallies with the premillennial belief. We cannot fix the interval of time intervening between any of the events of which that order is composed. It is no argument to say that 1 Cor. xv. 23, 24, "does not suggest a long interval between the rising of the servants of Christ and the end," for, as Canon Fausset pertinently observes in reply, "neither does it suggest a long interval between Christ's resurrection as 'the first-fruits,' and that of 'them that are Christ's at his coming!' Yet already more than eighteen centuries have intervened."

The facts of history, therefore, in connection with this very order, furnish their own refutation of the position which Mr. Beet finds it so easy to take up. Reasoning from analogy in this matter, God puts no hard strain "on our faith by requiring us to believe (Rev. xx.) that an interval of a thousand years will intervene between the first resurrection (that of his saints), and that of the rest of the dead."

While constrained to differ from very much that Professor Beet has written, we quite agree with him in his contention, as opposed to Dr. Godet (Affirmative III.), that the original means "when He delivers up," or "shall deliver up the kingdom" (see 1 Cor. xv. 24). Professor Godet has certainly made a slip in urging that the original reads, "Then cometh the end, when He shall have delivered up the kingdom." Mr. Beet is doubtless supported by the Greek when he says:—

> St. Paul does not say that the end is to be preceded by Christ's surrender of the kingdom of God, but rather suggests that the surrender is itself the end.

Our difficulty, however, is to see wherein Mr. Beet is able to make any capital out of this technical advantage. It is true the surrender of the kingdom to God is the end. But it is to be noted that when Paul writes, "Then cometh the end, when He shall deliver up the kingdom to God," he immediately adds these significant words, "when He shall have put down [or brought to nought] all rule and all authority and power." The testimony then of Scripture, as our readers we think will perceive, is this, that when Christ comes with a view to the consummation indicated, the surrender of the kingdom of God, there is a certain work to be done, the putting down or bringing to nought of all rule and authority and power. And is it not in connection with this very process that the Millennium begins to be? He destroys Antichristian powers, He binds Satan, He causes wars to cease unto the ends of the earth, He places the whole civil polity of the world on a theocratic basis—Christ's dominion ultimating in the utter overthrow of the final insurrection (Rev. xx.), and in the destruction of death itself—for "the last enemy shall be destroyed—death." Then when all rule and authority and power are brought to nought, the end is reached, and the kingdom delivered up to God, even the Father.

In connection with the battle-ground of this controversy we have next to cite the conflagration of 2 Peter iii. From this Scripture, Principal Brown, who is by far the ablest exponent of the negative view, reasons with marked ability, and we heartily wish Canon Fausset in his summing up had given more attention to what he had to say on that point. The issue, it seems to us, very largely depends upon the extension of meaning to be assigned to the Day of the Lord. All agree with Principal Brown that "the Day of the Lord is the day of the Second Advent;" the expression being one which must be ranked among the key-words of this subject—Parousia, Epiphany, and Apocalypse. But words are never exactly synonymous, and there is this feature which characterises the Day of the Lord, namely, that it conveys some idea of extension in time which the other key-terms do not. By the use of the word day the Advent is spread out in time. The question is, How far? It is argued that it is a begging of the question to say that the Day of the Lord means a thousand years. But is it less a begging of the question to reduce it to twenty-four hours? Certainly it cannot be denied that if "one day is with the Lord as a thousand ears," the Day of the Lord may scriptur- ly cover the whole Millennial period. esides, it must not be forgotten that the erm the Day of the Lord is of Old Testa- ent origination, and that in Old Testa- ent prophecy it marks decisively the illennial era. Zechariah xiv. demonstrates e point, "Behold the Day of the Lord ometh...and his feet shall stand in that ay upon the Mount of Olives...And the ord shall be King over all the earth; in hat day there shall be one Lord, and his ame one...In that day shall there be upon he bells of the horses HOLINESS UNTO THE ORD." It is evident that the description iven by Zechariah of the Day of the Lord s that of an era. Tremendous judgments ntroduce it, but prolonged peace and righ- eousness follow; yet, as ver. 16, 17 indicate, here shall be the existence of the leaven f evil, for all things are not, even in the illennium, made new. Mr. Brown thinks t absurd to place the general conflagration t the end of the Millennium, because such thing would make the warning "to the scoffers pointless." We cannot agree with im there. The Day of the Lord bristles with horrors for the scoffers at both its ermini. It is not a silken-footed thing, ut comes with feet of burning brass. "When they are saying 'peace and safety,' then sudden destruction cometh upon them." Can we wonder that Peter, speaking to scoffers, should by the Holy Ghost be led to describe the scoffer's doom in the lurid light of that general conflagration in which the race of scoffers shall finally perish from off the earth? As flax before the presence of fire, so shall the enemies of our King perish at his appearing and his kingdom.

We need not dwell on Principal Brown's further argument, that the premillennial theory of the first resurrection "collapses," since the saints raised at the opening of the Millennium are not all "that are Christ's," but martyrs only. For, as Canon Fausset points out, "Rev. xx. 4 disproves the objection, since it designates THREE CLASSES to 'live and reign with Christ a thousand years': (1) The saints transfigured at Christ's coming 'who sit on thrones;' (2) the martyrs beheaded in the great tribulation; (3) such as worshipped not the beast."

It cannot be denied that there are some Scriptures where the subject of the resurrection is treated in its general bearings, and where the temporal distinction between the first and second resurrections is altogether sunk. John v. 28, 29, is the leading instance. But if, like binary stars, the two resurrections sometimes appear as one, we ought not the less to value and receive those Scriptural teachings which reveal the distinction in order and time that subsists between them. It is with this as with many Old Testament prophecies of the Messiah, wherein his birth and Messianic glory stand out on the prophetic chart without even a suggestion of Calvary and the Cross (Isa. ix. 6, and xi. 1—6).

In bringing our remarks to a close, we much regret that Principal Brown does not essay to meet the affirmative argument as grounded on 2 Thess. ii. 8. He admits it to be a strong passage on the affirmative side, "the only strong passage," in his judgment; nevertheless, he allows the affirmative argument, as based thereon, to stand intact, doing no more than to suggest that Dr. Godet's remarks evince that the pre-Millennial school are not at one in their interpretation of it. Howbeit, the affirmative argument entirely coheres. Both Dr. Godet and Mr. Guinness contend that it is in the present economy the mystery of iniquity works, culminating in the Man of Sin, who is destroyed by the visible parousia of Jesus. "How, then, can we place such a condition as the Millennium before the Parousia?" exclaims Dr. Godet. "It is the Millennium of Satan, the reign of the Man of Sin which, according to St. Paul, will precede the Millennium;" and with this statement the other affirmatives concur. Hence, were there no other strong passage on the premillennial side than 2 Thess. ii., it is of itself sufficient to establish the main contention of the premillenarian.

J. D.

CARLISLE CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

THE extent to which the subject of Scriptural holiness is entering into the Christian life of the present day is shown by the multiplication of conferences for its promotion throughout the country, where thousands are eagerly seeking to know the fulness of the blessing of the Gospel of peace. The Keswick Convention has been the parent of many similar gatherings, which themselves are winning their way and producing each year wider circles of blessing.

This may be said of the Carlisle Convention, held again last week, and which bears testimony to the interest aroused, not only in that city but in the north generally.

On Tuesday, Mr. WILLIAM SLOAN, of Glasgow, spoke from Luke xix. 1—10, showing that Jesus will always come where there is a seeking soul, and we may go further back, and say that Jesus had given the very desire which he now sought to satisfy. How many of us, like Zaccheus, seek blessing in our own way, but our plans all come to nothing, and He says, "Come down." It is when in personal contact with the Lord that we find what He would have us to do. Naaman said "I thought." So many think that the Christian life is something to be reached after, and striven after, and ultimately attained. But God says "Come down" from these thoughts.

But we are called not merely to "come down," but to "receive" Jesus. Zaccheus thought to get a passing look, but Jesus said, "To-day I must abide at thy house." The true life is to have Him abiding with us, and entering into all the circle of our life. Many Christians go with their troubles to Christ, but how good to have Him in the heart, ready when trouble comes! Let us make haste, and come down, and receive Jesus to the joy of our hearts.

Mr. HUDSON TAYLOR followed, on Rom. viii. 1. When Adam fell, he became ex centric towards God, and self became the centre. The Fall put self where God should be, but God wants to be Himself where He ought to be, and if He thus takes his right place in our life, the law of the spirit of life in Christ will make us free from the law of sin and death. And then, if this is so, all the circumstances of our daily life will be seen in their proper light; nay, God Himself will become our great Circumstance. Because God is God, He always surrounds us with absolutely perfect circumstances, and if they are not having their due effect on us, the fault is not in God but in us. God will always supply all our need.

If He brings us into trying circumstances, it is that He may bless us there. Job's circumstances were very trying, but God, like a glad father, knew that his son could bear the trial. And Job's testimony at the end was:—"I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth Thee," and Job repented in dust and ashes, as everyone does who sees God. Some of us may be tempted to wish that we had other circumstances than those God has in perfect love provided. But grasp this truth, and you will see nothing to regret, and you will just be brought to this point—that in these circumstances you will be able to glorify his great name. If we will but let God in, and let Him have our whole life, we shall get a wonderful revelation of his love! I may be thirsty, and there may be water in the glass, but it is no use there; I must use it. And so, if we will only appropriate his life, we shall find what a blessed life it is.

After a few words on Heb. xiii. 20, 21, Rev. E. W. Moore closed with prayer.

The afternoon address was given by Rev. F. B. MEYER on "The Acts of the Apostles," which he thought might be more appropriately called "The Acts of the Living Saviour."

In the evening, before an overflowing audience, Rev. W. HASLAM spoke happily from the three H's in Ps. cxlvi. 5. Very early in the meeting there was a consciousness of the power of God present, and as Rev. C. A. Fox followed with a brief prayer many re-echoed his words:—O convince us that it is impossible to go on half-heartedly. Let us be wholly thine and Thou wholly ours. Enter even closed doors, as on the resurrection morn, and fill hearts not yet wholly thine. Mr. Fox then gave an address on Luke v. The empty vessels, the launching out into the deep, and the breaking nets were all made to tell their story of redeeming love, and disappointed ones were shown that whereas all had been failure and sorrow, with Jesus in the boat, all will henceforth be well.

Mr. MEYER here told how three years ago he had received blessing through the visit of Mr. C. T. Studd to Leicester. He went one morning into the room where he had slept. There he stood in all the beauty of his early athletic manhood. He had put on his cricketing suit over his ordinary clothes to keep out the cold. He had been up since four, and the guttering candle told the story of his long morning watch with Christ. He said, "I've got nothing you may not have." "Well, how did you get it?" asked Mr. Meyer. "I let go all, and gave myself to Christ." "But, I think, I must have done that." "Well," said he, "go and face it out between yourself and God." As Mr. Meyer continued to tell how that giving up of everything to God was accomplished, the vast audience was deeply moved at the recital, and it seemed that many must have passed the Rubicon marking off the old selfish walk from a joyous newness of life as they entered into the liberty wherewith Christ makes free.

Next day Mr. Meyer took the petitions, and Mr. Sloan spoke from Gen. xlv. 1—15. At 11 a.m. Mr. Meyer, who was leaving, gave his final word from Jude 21, and a very helpful word it was. Mr. Sloan followed on Ps. xxxvii., trust, delight, commit, rest. Mr. Fox closed with the prayer that God would keep our hands on the plough, and our eyes on Himself.

In the afternoon Mr. Moore discoursed on 1 Cor. iii. 16, and the interest culminated in the evening meeting, which was crowded to excess. Mr. Haslam opened on "Behold I stand at the door and knock," Mr. Fox closing with an address on "The five-ranked army of the Lord"—the foolish things, the weak things, the base things, the despised things, and the things that are not. At the close a large proportion of the audience stood up to testify of blessing received.

Carlisle. J. W. BRAITHWAITE.

THE FAMINE IN CENTRAL TURKEY.—Rev. T. W. Brown, secretary of the Turkish Missions' Aid Society, 7, Adam-street, Strand, W.C., writing in reference to this subject, says, on the authority of Rev. G. F. Montgomery, one of the missionaries of the American Board, "This famine business is growing serious." The poor people are eating leaves and grass brought from a distance, and many have committed suicide. The relief fund, started some time ago, has amounted to £300, of which nearly the whole has been already sent forward, and the missionaries are doling out wheat to the poor families on their list to keep them from starvation. The destruction by fire of the town of Zaytoon, by which 8000 persons were rendered homeless and destitute, has added to the prevailing misery in this district, and but for the help of the missionaries, who immediately sent on a ton and a half of dried biscuits, the poor people would indeed be in a bad case. Mr. Brown appeals earnestly for help to meet the painful necessities of the position, and adds that every penny goes to meet the distress, the expense incurred in raising the fund being defrayed by the society.

ELIJAH THE PROPHET.—18.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Leicester.

A DOUBLE PORTION OF ELIJAH'S SPIRIT.

2 Kings ii.

There is one incident for ever associated with the translation of Elijah; which, though it largely concerns his friend and successor, is so characteristic of the great prophet himself that we must not pass it over without some notice. It is deeply significant. We are told that, after they had passed the Jordan, the two friends went on and talked. What sublime themes must have engaged them, standing as they did on the very confines of heaven, and in the vestibule of eternity! The apostasy of Israel and its approaching doom; the ministry just closing, with its solemn warnings; the outlook towards the work upon which Elisha was preparing to enter; these and cognate subjects must have occupied them.

It was in the course of this conversation that "Elijah said unto Elisha, Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee." It was a very wide door flung open by the elder to his younger friend. And, at first, we are surprised to think that Elijah could offer to supply anything for which Elisha asked. Is not this rather the prerogative of God? Surely God alone can do whatsoever we desire when we pray; and even He is limited by the fulfilment, on our part, of certain essential conditions. But we must remember that Elijah was intimately familiar with the mind and heart of his brother. It was not in vain that they had spent those years of ministry together. It was with the object of testing the spirit of his friend that the departing seer had urged him again and again to leave him. And it was only when Elisha had stood the test with such unwavering resolution that Elijah was able to give him this carte blanche. He knew that that faithful soul would ask nothing for which he could not exercise his mighty faith, or which God could not, and would not bestow. He was only a man of like passions with ourselves; cast in the ordinary mould of human nature; but, by close and intimate communion with God, he had reached such a pitch of holy boldness that the very keys of spiritual blessing seemed put into his hand, so that he might dispense to kindred spirits the priceless gifts of God. Why should not we strive after and attain "like precious faith"?

I. Elisha's large request.—Elijah's confidence was not misplaced. Elisha's reply wrought along those lines which he had anticipated. He sought neither wealth, nor position, nor worldly power, nor a share in those advantages on which he had turned his back for ever when he said farewell to home, and friends, and worldly prospects. "And Elisha said, I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me."

What did Elisha mean by this request? I do not interpret his request to mean that he should have twice as much of the faith and spiritual force as characterised his master. What he intended was to ask that he might be considered as Elijah's eldest son, the heir to his spirit, the successor to his work. There is a passage in the law of Moses which clearly proves that "the double portion" was the right of the firstborn and heir (Deut. xxi. 17). This the prophet sought, and this he certainly obtained.

It was a noble request! He was evidently called to succeed to Elijah's work, but he felt that he dare not undertake its responsibilities, or face its inevitable perils, unless he were specially equipped with spiritual power. It is not often that we can count an Elijah among our friends, but when we may, we shall do well to invoke his intercessions on our behalf; that we may be endowed with a similar spirit. And there is at least One to whom we can all go with this sublime request, sure that He is more eager to give us his Holy Spirit than the tenderest earthly father to satisfy his children's hunger with bread. Oh, for this spiritual hunger, insatiable for the best gifts! Men of the world hunger for name, and rank, and wealth, and they get what they seek because they will take no Nay. Blessed should we be if we were as eager after the Spirit of God, and if, instead of giving up opportunities of usefulness, because we did not feel qualified to fill them, we rather sought and received a new baptism of power, a fresh endowment of the Holy Ghost. Who need shrink from attempting Elijah's work, if first he has received Elijah's spirit? Instead of relinquishing a work for which you do not feel naturally qualified, wait in the fervency of entreaty, and in the expectancy of faith, until you are endued with power from on high. There is no work to which God calls you for which He is not prepared to qualify you. Let it never be forgotten that Elijah himself did what he did, not by inherent qualities, but because through faith he had received such copious bestowments of the Spirit of God; and what he did we may do again, the weakest and humblest may do, if only we are prepared to wait, and watch, and pray until our Pentecost breaks upon us with or without its sound of rushing wind, and its tongues of flaming fire.

II. Let us clearly understand the two conditions imposed on Elisha.—(1) Tenacity of purpose.—Elijah tested it severely at every step of that farewell journey. Repeatedly he said, Tarry here. But he might as well have tried to uproot a cedar of Lebanon, or to stir Carmel from its base. Neither Gilgal, with its panoramic scenery, nor Bethel with its memories of the angel-haunted dream, nor Jericho, the border-town, were able to attract or retain him. And though their course lay through the Jordan-flood of death it sufficed not to deter that eager spirit. Elisha knew what he sought; he read the meaning of the discipline to which he was being exposed; and his heroic resolution grew with the ordeal, as the waters of a stream grow against an arresting dam, until they overleap it and rush merrily on their way. It was thus that the Syrophœnician woman prevailed with Christ. It was thus that the Apostles waited for the promise of the Father, undaunted by ten days' delay.

Before giving us the Holy Ghost, our Father will certainly try us, to see if we can live without Him. If we can, we may. And it is only when we give signs of a resolution, which will take no denial, but detains the angel with its imperative importunity, and vows its unalterable determination to be blessed—it is only then that God, who had never been really reluctant, and had only been testing us, turns to us with a smile, and says, "Oh, child, great is thy importunity, be it unto thee, even as thou wilt." "The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force."

How often we persuade ourselves that we can acquire the greatest spiritual blessings, without paying the equivalent price. Thus James and John thought that they could obtain a seat each on the throne for the asking. They did not realise that the cross preceded the crown, and that the bitter cup of Gethsemane lay between them and the coronation-anthem. We must pass through the Jordan: daily must we take up the cross and follow Jesus; we must be conformed to Him in the likeness of his death, and in the fellowship of his sufferings. The old nature must be crucified. The Divine will must be lovingly accepted, though it cost tears of blood and bitter sorrow. Then, having evinced the steadfastness of our purpose, we shall approve ourselves worthy to be the recipients of God's supreme gift.

(2) Spiritual insight.—"If thou see me, when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee; but if not, it shall not be so." There was nothing arbitrary in this demand. And it would have been hardly possible to have devised a completer criterion of the spiritual condition of this eager aspirant. To see the transactions of the spirit world requires a spirit of no ordinary purity, and of no ordinary faith. No mere mortal eye could have beheld that fiery cortège. To senses dulled with passion, or blinded by materialism, the space occupied by the flaming seraphim would have seemed devoid of any special interest, and bare as the rest of the surrounding scenery. Perhaps there was not another individual in all Israel, with heart pure enough, or spiritual nature keen enough, to have been sensible of that glorious visitation. Had we been there, we should probably have been unconscious of anything, save the sudden disappearance of the prophet. But since Elisha saw it all, it is clear that his passions were under control; his temper refined; his spiritual life in healthy exercise; and his whole being of such an order, as to admit him into the foremost rank of the spiritual world, without risk. Such must we be, by the grace of God, ere we can aspire to possess or wield similar powers. Our reception of the Spirit will be in exact proportion to the subjection of the flesh, and the consequent vigour of our inner life.

III. The answer.—"He took up also the mantle of Elijah that fell from him." Ah, that falling mantle! How much it meant! It is said that the bestowal of the mantle has always been considered by Eastern people an indispensable part of consecration to a sacred office. When, therefore, Elijah's mantle fluttered to Elisha's feet, he knew at once that Heaven itself had ratified his request. He knew that he had Elijah's post. He believed that he was anointed with Elijah's power. I do not for a moment think that there was any emotional or sensible indication of the mighty change which had been wrought upon him. His spirit was still. There was no tremor in his pulse; no thrill of consciously added power in his frame. The torrent of spiritual force had entered him as quietly as light enters the world and as the forces of spring thrill through the woods.

If, in patience and faith, we claim of our Father the filling of the Holy Ghost, we must never ask ourselves if we feel full. We must believe that God has kept his word with us, and that we are filled, though no celestial sign accompanies the entering glory of that power "which works effectually in them that believe." But others will become aware of the presence of something that we never had before, as they see us stand by some tameless Jordan, and behold the turbulent waters part hither and thither before our stroke.

Directly we receive some great spiritual endowment we may expect to have it tested. It was so with Elisha. "He went back, and stood by the bank of Jordan." Did he hesitate? If so, it was but for a moment. He had seen Elijah go, and he believed, though probably he did not feel, that, therefore, the double portion of his spirit had fallen to his lot. He, therefore, acted upon the assurance of his faith. "He took the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and smote the waters, and said, Where is the Lord God of Elijah? and when he also had smitten the waters, they parted hither and thither: and Elisha went over. And when the sons of the prophets which were to view at Jericho saw him, they said, The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha."

As soon as Jesus had been anointed with the Holy Ghost, He was led into the wilderness to be tempted. The title "Son of God," uttered over the waters of baptism, was made the subject of Satan's wildest attacks; "If Thou be the Son of God . . ." So must it be ever. But difficulty, temptation, and trial avail to bring into greater prominence, both for ourselves and others, the reality and glory of the blessing we have received. The parted Jordan proves the presence of the Spirit.

"Where is the Lord God of Elijah?" That cry has often been raised when the Church, bereft of its leaders, has stood face to face with some great and apparently insuperable difficulty. And sometimes there has been more of despair than hope in the cry. But though Elijah goes, Elijah's God remains. He takes his weary workers home, but He is careful to supply their place, and to anoint others to carry on their work. It is his work, not ours. On Him is the responsibility, as to Him shall be the glory. If you ask where He is, an answer close behind you whispers, "I am here." Catch up the mantle of the departed. Emulate their lives. Seek their spirit. Smite the bitter waters of difficulty in unwavering faith, and you shall find that the Lord God of Elijah will do as much for you as for the saints who have been swept to their reward, and are now mingling with the great cloud of witnesses that are watching your conflicts, your triumphs, and your joys.

OPIUM SMOKING IN LONDON.

By Rev. GOODEVE MABBS.

AT opium is smoked in certain "dens" in the st of London has long been generally known. om time to time notices of visits paid to them some of them evidently imaginary—have ap- ared in the public prints. But because opium oking is mainly a Chinese vice, and the bitués at these places have been understood to Chinamen, the public has looked upon the atter with mild curiosity rather than with elings of reprobation or alarm. So long as the basing habit only cursed the people of China, e British public regarded the matter as too mote for serious concern.

But to-day the conditions of the problem are anging. The exclusiveness of the Chinese is ving way. China begins to open her arms to estern civilisation and to send forth her people trade with other countries. Already there is Chinese question in America, in which our ustralian colonies may soon find their own are. Here, in London, the Chinese are en- ring into trade; and increased facilities for mmunication with their country are likely to ing them over in greater numbers. Hence the il habits and vices which we have fostered nong them, and which they are beginning to aturalise in our midst, can remain a matter of lfish unconcern to us no longer. What if the pium curse should come home to roost upon our wn roof-tree?

Dr. Kane, of New York, who has given much tention to the subject, in the preface to a book ntitled "Opium Smoking," published in 1881, akes the following alarming statement:—

"That opium-smoking is a vice that impera- vely demands careful study at the hands of mericans is made manifest by the fact that ne practice, comparatively unknown amongst us x years ago, is now indulged in by some six housand of our countrymen, male and female, hose ranks are being daily recruited from the ver-curious, foolish, indolent, or wilfully vicious; nat large and small towns in the West, and rge cities in the East, abound in places where nis drug is sold and smoked; and that in some f our States it has been found necessary to enact ws imposing a heavy money penalty and im- risonment upon the seller and the smoker."

Dr. Kane shows how this disastrous vice has een propagated in America, by means of the pium dens which in the first instance were stablished by Chinese immigrants, in California nd elsewhere. And if this has been the sad esult of our opium policy in America, may not similiar result follow in England?

In East London and near the docks there are no ss than seven different opium dens. In one street, here five years ago there were only two, there re now four within a few yards, and there is a fifth ear by in a side street. Some of these "dens" re in private houses, which make no outward ign to the public of the uses to which they are ut. Others are only entered through small eneral shops, kept by Chinamen, which serve s blinds to the unwary. Of course every Chinese shop does not conceal an opium den; nd, even where this is the case, strangers might ind it difficult to ascertain the fact. In the case of house which I once visited, and where I knew that pium smoking was carried on, the practice was ehemently denied, and I was refused admittance eyond the shop. Yet a few weeks later, taking vith me two Chinese missionaries, I obtained ull access to all the smoking-rooms.

The opium dens are houses of call for the loating Chinese population, who come over as tokers and cooks in the steamers. Here, late n the evening, smokers and non-smokers con- regate, to solace themselves with the poisonous umes, and to talk over the news of the day. Besides the ponderous opium pipe, the tiny Chinese tobacco pipe is in constant use; and ome are smoking cigarettes. In this mixed ssembly the unwary are brought under tempta- ion, and novices are led for the first time to moke opium. In varying quantities, the pro- rietor of the house sells the smoking extract, black and treacle like; and the smoker consumes it on the premises, at his leisure, in repeated inhalations. If many are present, dense white smoke, having a sickening odour, rises from where, upon low benches and couches, recumbent forms inhale the poisonous fumes, through pipes whose inverted bowls are held over the opium lamps. No loud sounds of revelry, such as greet you in public-houses, are heard here; a general air of quiet pervades the place. Not with repulsive turbulence does the opium-fiend work. Vampire-like, he lulls his victims into a state of quiet and submissive unwariness, whilst he fastens upon them, and gradually drains the springs of their very life. In various stages of the habit men lie there. Upon some the vice has not yet made any marked impression. Others are hollow-cheeked and glassy-eyed. Whilst the emaciated forms, and the yellow, parchment-like skin upon the wrinkled faces of others, proclaim them far gone in the baneful practice. The latter are chiefly the keepers of the dens, and a few permanent residents, for smokers whose appearance thus proclaimed their addiction to the habit would not find employment in the ships. The Chinese manager of a large commercial concern stated publicly at Liverpool that although his company had in their employ men who sometimes gave way to drink, yet they never knowingly employed an opium-smoker, regarding him useless.

On one occasion a man, who appeared to be far advanced in the habit, told me that he had no occasion to work, and that for two years he had done little else but smoke opium, upon which he had spent a large sum of money. On my remarking to him that if opium smoking was good for Chinamen it must also be good for Englishmen, he replied with an energetic "No." A repetition of my opinion drew from him the significant ejaculation, "No! poison!" "Then," said I, "why do you smoke?" He told me that he had gone to such a length with the habit that, without recourse to his pipe, he should be utterly weak, and unable even to walk across the street. He would willingly give up the practice if a doctor would take him in hand and cure him of the remorseless craving; but without medical aid and supervision it would be impossible for him to do so, since not only would the abandonment of the pipe bring on intense sickness and pain, but also it would probably cause his death. These are grim terrors to face with a weakened will; the more so because they are very real. But such is the tyranny of the opium habit!

It has been said that in China opium takes the place of alcohol. My observations, however, have convinced me that advanced opium smokers are not content with their pipe, but often use spirits also. On one occasion, among half a dozen smokers in a single room, I found two in different parts of the room each with a bottle of gin by the side of his opium lamp. In another case which came under my notice, the keeper of one of these dens, after having on the previous day voluntarily smoked forty pipes of opium, under medical observation, asked for spirits with his breakfast, and not being able to obtain them, he remarked, "No gin, no breakfast." On two or three occasions after an opium debauch, this man lost his reason for several weeks.

But these opium dens are objectionable, not only because of the evils which follow directly from indulging the habit of opium smoking, but also because of their vicious accessories. Especially in the earlier stages of the habit it fosters the indulgence of the ruling propensities; hence gambling, and other forms of immorality, are carried on in these places. In almost every house used for opium smoking a gaming table may be found, and on two occasions I have surprised a number of Chinamen at play, the evidences of which were hastily removed on my appearance. In several cases the dens are reputed to be more or less houses of ill-fame, under disguise, or to be associated with such. Dr. Kane states that in America many young girls have been enticed to smoke opium, in order that their ruin might thereby be the more easily accomplished.

It is noteworthy and not re-assuring that no less than three European women are associated in keeping these opium dens. The English wife of one Chinaman uses her influence to keep the house clear of vicious associations, a course which does not add to her husband's profits. This, however, is more than can be said for the Irish wife of another. Another woman, Italian by birth, herself keeps a house which is resorted to chiefly by Lascars. Although but middle aged, she has smoked opium for years, and she wears the evidences of the practice upon her visage. During the last two years the change which it has wrought in her appearance is very marked.

Suppose that it should become generally known to the hard-worked and sorely tried men and women of the East of London that, in the practice of opium smoking, without subjecting themselves to the outwardly repulsive accompaniments of alcoholic intoxication, they could for a time lose their cares and their burdens in a sense of rest. Suppose that, in ignorance of the real consequences of the habit, they should be beguiled into smoking opium in these dens, with their accessories for the practice of other vices also. Who can tell how the plague might thus be spread in our very midst, and with what dire results to our social life?

Dr. Kane avers that in the United States, Americans, both men and women, of all ranks and conditions, resort to these dens of infamy. "Men and women, young girls—virtuous or just commencing a downward career — hardened prostitutes, representatives of the 'Woodburn' element, young clerks and errand boys who could ill afford the waste of time and money, and young men who had no work to do, were to be found smoking together in the back rooms of laundries, in the low, pestilential dens of Chinatown, reeking with filth and overrun with vermin, in the cellars of drinking saloons and in houses of prostitution. No one can question the fascination of a vice, the strength of a habit that will lead people into such degradation for the gratification of an abnormal appetite. No one can question the certainty of moral ruin, the charring and obliteration of every honest impulse and honourable sentiment, the sweeping away of every vestige of modesty, by such associations and such surroundings. It needs no signboard to mark the terminus of this road."

If moved by no higher impulse, then even from a selfish point of view, surely it is time for British Christians to rise up in earnest against our detestable opium trade with China! Again, I say, what if the opium curse should come home to roost upon our own roof tree?

[Rev. Goodeve Mabbs will be happy to correspond with any who desire to promote the delivery of lectures or addresses on the Opium Question in their neighbourhood during the ensuing winter season. His address is 73, Godolphin-road, Shepherd's-bush, W.]

OBITUARY.—Many will hear with regret that Miss Coles of the Mount Hermon Girls' Orphan Homes at Kilburn and Margate, fell asleep in Jesus on Saturday last, after a few weeks' illness, resulting from the rupture of a blood-vessel. Prayer is earnestly asked that the relatives and orphans (about one hundred and twenty in number) may be comforted in this sad bereavement, and that the trustees may be guided in the consideration of the wishes of the deceased as to the future of the work.

MR. WOOKEY'S MISSION TO GIBRALTAR.—There was a large attendance at the Noon Prayer-meeting, Aldersgate-street, on Monday last, to commend in prayer Mr. Wookey, prior to his leaving for Gibraltar yesterday (Thursday), to conduct a Gospel mission amongst the troops there stationed. In a brief address Mr. Wookey pleaded for prayer on behalf of the fallen women and girls on the Rock, amongst whom, he fears, absolutely nothing is being done. He expressed the hope that, by God's blessing, he will be enabled to unite Christians together for the starting of some rescue work in their interest. Mr. Wookey had intended to have gone on to Malta, but as the quarantine regulations consequent on the outbreak of cholera on that island would have prevented his returning in time for important engagements in November, this part of his mission has been reluctantly given up. Letters sent to Mr. Wooke at 90, Almack-road, Clapton, E., will be forward to him.

For the Young.

MAKING FRIENDS WITH CANNIBALS.

BY REV. E. B. SAVAGE, NEW GUINEA.

No doubt most of your readers know that there are tribes in New Guinea which have never yet come under the influence of civilisation, and to whom the white man is unknown. The first meeting with one of these tribes is a most interesting and thrilling experience. Such an experience has just fallen to my lot, and it may interest some to hear a few details respecting it.

A little to the south-west of the Fly River, and just outside the Papuan Gulf, are three islands—Saibai, Dauan (or Tauan), and Boigu. Opposite to Boigu on the mainland is the Maicassa River. Somewhere about this district there exists a tribe of New Guineans known as the Tugeri men, whose precise locality is as yet a mystery. Even the natives of these near islands know nothing of their whereabouts; whether they have any fixed habitation, or are simply wanderers from place to place. The latter is perhaps the more probable.

How, then, you ask, are they known at all? Only from one fact, viz., that they make periodic and predatory attacks upon these islands, and even upon villages on the mainland. They are essentially New Guinea warriors, and their name is a terror wherever it is known. Not long ago they came down upon the people of Boigu, killing all who had not escaped into the bush or to some other island, and carrying off all they could lay hands on, both food and household effects. Only last year, I believe, they made a raid upon Saibai, but for the first time were defeated, owing to the Saibaians having firearms. Directly the north-west season sets in, the natives of these islands, especially those of Boigu, begin to live in mortal fear. It is only during this season, from November to March of the next year, that the Tugeri men venture outside the bush. This year I have been fortunate enough to meet them, and, what is better, to make friends with them.

We were on our way to the Fly River, and called at Saibai, where we have a prosperous mission station. At Boigu is another mission station which I was desirous of visiting. I went in the Government cutter, accompanied by the two Saibaian chiefs and the native crew of the cutter. The day before, news had come from Dauan that fires were seen on the mainland, by which all knew at once that the Tugeri men were there, doubtless making their way to Saibai. On Friday, as we proceeded to Boigu. we observed the fire nearer than on the previous day, and forthwith concluded they were come for the purpose of attacking the Saibaians and paying off the old score. So we turned our cutter round, making again for Saibai. I wished to go near to find out, if possible, if their intentions were friendly or otherwise, but could not prevail upon the Saibaians to accede to this request. They were afraid, because we were only a small party with one boat; they said, "if they come upon us, what shall we do?"

We reached Saibai shortly after sunset. It was decided that some should watch during the night, and that all should prepare to go on the morrow to meet their foes, to come to terms of peace, if possible, otherwise to prevent them from landing at Saibai. Nothing was seen of them that night. Next morning a number of canoes went to spy out their encampment, and to see if they had come any nearer during the night. We waited anxiously for their return, and it was not till between ten and eleven at night that we heard the shouts of the returning party. The news was far better than we expected. They had seen some of the Tugeri men, had made signs of peace, and, to their surprise, were received with a show of friendship. The little band had gone ashore amidst this fierce force of cannibals who had a short time before declared that they would be revenged for their past misadventure by taking the heads of the two Saibaian chiefs with that of their teacher.

This threat was, however, not carried out, for they came away without a mishap. Presents were given on both sides. The Saibai men gave what they possessed, whilst they received in return the various adornments of these savage people. I had told them to hoist the banner of peace, and by no means to show signs of war. They came back rejoicing, many of them praising God for preserving their lives and putting kindness into the hearts of their former and much-dreaded foes. I was quite as thankful as they were for God's loving-kindness, and for the prospect there seemed of the door being opened to those hearts where spiritual darkness and death had reigned so long—a door through which the blessed Light of Life might enter.

We had a long talk till nearly midnight, and I suggested we should take advantage of this friendly feeling by going next day (Sunday) to pay them another visit, and to worship God in their presence. They were rejoiced at this proposal, and expressed the greatest willingness to spend the Sunday in this way. The Tugeri men had asked them to come again on the morrow. Some of the Saibaians thought they wanted to allure them into the bush and then kill them; nor would they venture forth without all the guns and tomahawks they could muster.

When we reached their rendezvous, we could see nothing of the Tugeri men. Some of our men went cautiously ashore, and shouted, as only these natives can shout. Presently an answering shout was heard which told us they were near. The men came back to the canoes, and we all waited close to shore to receive them. They came rushing out of the bush to the water's edge, in all, I should think, about five hundred. A fiercer looking lot of men I have never seen, even in New Guinea. As they came. they shouted as with one voice, "Kaia, Kaia," although what "Kaia" meant was not at all clear to us. Soon, however, we discovered it to be a word expressive of friendship, which was followed by a slapping of the stomach and sides. They had left their bows and arrows in the canoes at a distance, and came without a single weapon—always a sign of amity.

For over ten minutes not a man of them would come near, when they saw the guns, &c., of the Saibaians. They showed the greatest signs of fear, and it was not till I told every man to leave these weapons in the canoes that their fears subsided. Then they came near, most cautiously at first, but afterwards with less trepidation, and soon we were completely surrounded by them, shaking hands, exchanging presents, and endeavouring to show them that our mission was one of peace, and the bringing of glad tidings to the needy and sinful.

It was amusing to watch them as they first caught sight of me, a white man, probably the first they had ever seen. They were as much afraid of me as of the guns, hatchets, &c., of the Saibaians. It was in vain that I held out something calculated to tempt them near. They stood at a safe distance, not daring to come into close proximity, whilst the greatest alarm was depicted upon their faces. After more than a quarter of an hour's coaxing, one plucked up courage enough to try the experiment of taking a piece of calico. He would come a little way, then stand perfectly still and look, as if to say, "Shall I, or shall I not?" At last he came near enough to snatch the piece of calico which I offered, and retreated as fast as his legs would carry him. This gave courage to others, and one after another came, till they no longer thought of running away, but were delighted to shake hands and receive presents, the like of which they had never seen before. We remained with them till nearly sunset, when I bade them return to their own district, and give up the bad practice of fighting. They drew up their many canoes in a line, and, standing in the water, they struck up their war song, giving us to understand that that was how they sang when their foes were slain, but that we were now their friends. Then away they went, continually pointing in the direction of the Maicassa River, as much as to say, "We are going home."

Who will venture to say that this was not good day's work? If measured by appearance or by the depth of good impression visibly mad upon their hearts, then the work of that da was infinitesimally small. But does Go measure in that way? Are spiritual impressior to be calculated by appearances or by mathematical rule? Simply to have made friends any such tribe in New Guinea is something fo which to bless God with all our heart and soul.

The beginnings of good in such lives must nece sarily be small, but are none the less importa on that account. The huge mountain is n levelled at one blast; whole forests are not cleare in a day; the tiniest flowers that scent our ga dens, and please the eye of man, need many day of heaven's sunshine and rain before coming perfection. So must it be in the kingdom
God, especially in the case of those whose eye have never been turned to the light. The firs struggle towards the new dawn, the first breat of the new life, may be known to none but Goo and heard nowhere but in heaven. Let me as everyone who reads this simple story of missio ary work in New Guinea to pray that God ma send out his light and his truth that shall le these benighted souls into life and liberty.
L. M. S. Chronicle.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The followi are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sunday, Se
tember 18, Matt. xxv. 31—46; Monday, September 1
Matt. xxvi. 1—13; Tuesday September 20, Matt. xx
14—30; Wednesday, September 21, Matt. xxvi. 31—4
Thursday, September 22, Matt. xxvi. 47—58; Frida
September 23, Matt. xxvi. 59—75; Saturday, Septemb
24, Matt. xxvii. 1—14.

◆

GOSPEL WORK IN CEYLON.

Rev. H. R. Pigott, Baptist Mission, Colomb
Ceylon, sends us an interesting account of t way in which the Lord is blessing evangelist effort there. He first gives an account of week's mission services conducted by Messr Mateer and Parker, two of Mr. Spurgeon's eva gelists, whose visit to India we recently notice
All the meetings were well attended, and those the close were so crowded that hundreds we obliged to stand. Many persons came forwa at the close of the various services to confes
Christ, and altogether at the English servic alone, between sixty and seventy persons pr
fessed to have found peace and joy in believin
At several of the outlying stations mission se vices were also held, at which numbers accept Christ, and at the close a number of the peop assembled under the cocoanut trees, when, led
Mr. Parker, the Doxology was sung.

Mr. Pigott continues:—We have also gl tidings to report nearer home. During the la seven days eleven of our boarding-school gi have accepted the "gift of God." Only o now, of thirty-one in the school, remains u converted! At Nandella at the after-meeti a number of Christians came forward and quested us to pray for them, that they might made more useful in Christ's service. In t evening a man came to the house where I w staying, and informed me that my sermon h been the means of leading him to Christ th
day. A letter from Mr. Samuel Perera, Grand Pass, informs me that he had just turned from Makadita, where he had be assisting Benjamin and D. Saram in a "tou in that district. He says:—"Several meetin have been held, and the result was the abunda blessing of God. About twelve persons—Bu dhists and Roman Catholics—being led by t
Holy Spirit, came forward to accept the f salvation of our Lord." Thus during the l eighteen days 186 persons—116 of them S
ghalese—profess to have come to Christ. "T
Lord hath done great things for us, whereof are glad."

THE WEST CENTRAL MISSION.—It is n authoritatively announced that this Mission will opened on Friday morning, October 21, on wh day Rev. C. H. Spurgeon will preach in St. Jame
Hall at noon. In the evening of that day th will be a public meeting in the same hall, o which Mr. Robert D. Perks will preside.

The Christian.

SEPTEMBER 16, 1887.

CONTENTS.

ev. Principal Brown, D.D. 1
ymposium on the Second Advent 2 arlisle Christian Convention 3
lijah the Prophet.—18 4
pium Smoking in London 5
laking Friends with Cannibals .. 6
Gospel Work in Ceylon 6
Notes on Daily Readings 8
Ladies and Foreign Missions 9
Christian Work in Barcelona 9
The Church Army 9
Lady Visitors in Workhouses 10
China Advancing 10
Shut Out, and Shut In 10
The Gospel in India 11
Y.M.C.A. Conference at Dundee ..11
Notes and Comments 12
Letters from Northfield.—4 13
How to Evangelise the Villages ..13
Pakefield Conference 14
The Sailors' Welcome Home 14
Among the Churches 16
Temperance Notes 16
Federation of Abolitionists 17

UST PUBLISHED.

THE
"GOLDEN TREASURY"
BIRTHDAY BOOK.

VERY SUITABLE FOR A BIRTHDAY PRESENT.

BOGATZKY'S GOLDEN TREASURY has been translated into nearly all European languages, and has obtained an enormous circulation in Germany and Great Britain. In this country very few books, except the "Pilgrim's Progress," have been so largley circulated or so widely read. In addition to the issue of BOGATZKY in the ordinary form, the Publishers have also produced an Edition

ARRANGED AS A BIRTHDAY BOOK,

a form in which it is believed the volume will be welcomed by many. In this "Birthday" Edition, four additional pages are introduced at the close of each month's portions. These extra pages are arranged with thirty or thirty-one blank squares or spaces—one for every day of the month. Each of these squares is adapted for receiving four entries, consequently, the total number of names which can be inscribed in the special pages of the "Birthday" Edition amounts to OVER FIFTEEN HUNDRED.

With Beautifully Illuminated Frontispiece.

Elegantly Bound in Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges ... ... 2s. 6d.

PRESENTATION EDITIONS.

French Morocco, Gilt Edges ... ... 3s. 6d.
Rich Coloured Leather, Padded, Gilt Edges ... ... 4s. 6d.

Each of the Leather copies is sent out in a neat cardboard box, thereby securing safety in transit.

LONDON:
MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS. And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

By HENRY THORNE,
ravelling Secretary of the English National Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association.

BIBLE READINGS ON THE GOSPEL OF MARK.

SUITABLE AS A HANDBOOK AND HELP FOR SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS, BIBLE CLASSES, EVANGELISTS, AND LAY PREACHERS.

With Introduction, List of Authorities, and a beautiful Coloured Map of Palestine.

TINTED COVERS .. .. EIGHTEENPENCE.
CLOTH BOARDS .. .. TWO SHILLINGS.

"Teachers and preachers will find Mr. Thorne's 'LESSONS ON MARK' very helpful. They cover the entire Gospel. and are arranged in fifty-two lessons, each of which has been prepared with conscientious care."—Lay Preacher.

"These READINGS have the merit of being instructive as well as popular. Taken all in all, they are amongst the best we have seen."—Christian Commonwealth.

"Such a work as this will be invaluable to those who have but a scanty reference library; and to all who are unable to devote much time to the very needful work of preparing their lessons."—The Publishers' Circular.

"An admirable series of outline lessons which cannot fail to prove of great service to SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS."—The Rock.

"It is an excellent book, and will prove instructive to all who read it, but especially helpful to SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS. The AUTHOR has bestowed much labour and care on his work."—Irish Baptist Magazine.

"We have been unusually pleased with this book. . . . The work is by one who is evidently a living STUDENT OF THE BIBLE, and a practical teacher to others—not a mere compiler; and while intending to aid teachers in the preparation of Sunday-School Lessons, Mr. THORNE has really added a very useful little hand-book on MARK to popular religious literature."—Liverpool Courier.

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

SCRIPTURAL PROOFS

THAT GOD OFFERS US IN OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST PERFECT DELIVERANCE FROM ALL SIN, INWARD AS WELL AS OUTWARD, IF WE WILL BUT RECEIVE HIM AND BELIEVE ON HIS NAME FOR ALL THAT GOD HAS MADE HIM TO BE TO US. (John i. 12; 1 Cor. i. 30.)

BY
J. P. WILSON.

"Holiness by faith in Jesus,
Not by effort of thine own,
Sin's dominion crushed and broken
By the power of grace alone.
God's own holiness within thee,
His own beauty on thy brow;
This shall be thy pilgrim brightness,
This thy blessed portion now."
Miss HAVERGAL.

LONDON:
S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO., 9, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.
1887.

THE above is the title-page of a book of 408 pages, price in cloth two shillings, consisting of the contents of three little books, "First Sheets of Scriptural Proofs," "Further Sheets of Scriptural Proofs," and "Third Series of Scriptural Proofs," hitherto sent out separately, and only to applicants by letter for them, now put together for general publication. The object of the book is simply to direct attention to what God says in his Word on the extent of deliverance from sin given us in our Lord Jesus Christ. Many letters have been received from readers of the separate parts, showing that this object has been attained in their case. The following are extracts from a few of them:—

"Reading your books has driven me more to the precious truth; and our loving Father has opened more light to me—more than ever I expected to get. Praise his dear name!"

"I have read it carefully, and can find nothing of man in it, but all in it to be the revealed power of God. I have received great encouragement and strength from the reading of it."

"Thank you so much for your little book. It has helped me to realise more fully 'the glorious gospel of Christ.'"

"I have read the 'Proofs,' and they have opened my eyes greatly to what may be obtained by faith and prayer."

"I have read several parts of it many times over. It seems to me just the kind of book to put a solid scriptural foundation under the faith of those who are conscious of a real and godly change of heart, and of an eager desire to be wholly the Lord's."

"I rejoice greatly in it. It is well calculated to stimulate an earnest desire in the hearts of the Lord's dear people to search the Scriptures more diligently and prayerfully, like the Bereans, 'daily whether these things were so.'"

"I have read your little book, lent me by a friend, and I do desire heartily to thank my God that it was put into my hands.

"Though for years I have known my Saviour's love, and experienced the incoming of the Holy Ghost in power in my soul, yet since reading 'Scriptural Proofs' I have had a fresh revelation of what Jesus is to me in his capacity of Saviour; and I have been able to grasp Him in a fuller and more comprehensive faith as my deliverer from indwelling sin; and that on the truth of the living God as shown so clearly in your little book.

"My heart goes with every line of it. I do trust and believe it will be blessed wherever it is read: there is so little of man in it, and so much of God."

Notes on Daily Readings.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 18.—ISAIAH XXIV.

"Chaps. xxiv.—xxvii. We now emerge out of the prophecies relating to the typical forms of national life, into others of a broader character, which concern the world at large. The deluge of Divine justice has come forth over the world. The central people Israel first, and then all the surrounding nations, have been brought low. The silence of death reigns. Yet songs arise from the uttermost part of the earth (xxiv. 16); and 'after many days' the King of Glory returns to reign in Zion (xxiv. 23), to 'destroy the vail that was spread over all nations,' and 'swallow up death for ever' (xxv. 8), so that they who dwelt in the dust awake, arise, and live (xxvi. 19). Israel is recovered, and her restoration is as life from the dead to the nations. She 'blossoms and buds, and fills the face of the world with fruit' (xxvii. 6)."—Kay.

1.—The Lord maketh the earth empty.—The word "earth" is rendered in R.V. (margin) 'land." The reference seems local. The very ambiguity of the word is, however, perhaps intentional, as what took place in God's judgment of the land for Israel's sins is a premonitory warning of what will take place on a larger scale when Christ returns to judge the earth. To us, at all events, the final fulfilment is the most important.

15.—Glorify ye God in the fires.—"The word has been variously explained, but Isaiah's own use of the word seems the safest guide (xxxi. 9, xliv. 17, xlvii. 14, l. 11). It means in these places fire or fire-light alone. The two phrases will thus answer to the twofold description, 'in the midst of the land, among the nations.' The faithful remnant, both in the land itself, in the fires of affliction, and as exiles even in the farthest isles of the sea, will glorify Jehovah."—Birks.

16.—Glory to the righteous.—Or "to the Righteous One," as it is singular. There is little doubt that Christ is the subject. When the glory of Christ is seen, the leanness of self is discovered (Luke v. 3).

22.—As prisoners are gathered in the pit.—See Rev. xix. 20, xx. 3.

MONDAY SEPT. 19.—ISAIAH XXV.

2.—Thou hast made of a city an heap.—"The cause of rejoicing appears to be the downfall of the city of confusion (xxiv. 10)."—Kay. See as parallel Rev. xviii., xix.

6.—A feast of fat things.—"The blessings of the Gospel are described under the figure of an ample feast (Isa. lv. 1—6; Matt. xxii. 1—4; Luke xiv. 15—20). This feast is expounded in the Gospel, and is the full provision of mercy in the atoning sacrifice and resurrection of the Son of God."—Birks.

7.—The face of the covering cast over all people.—"The day of God's visitation will sweep away all unrealities, and awake mankind out of their slumber to the perception of eternal truth."—Kay.

8.—He will swallow up death in victory.—This we learn in 1 Cor. xv. 54 refers to the first resurrection, or the full salvation of those "who are Christ's at his coming."

9.—Lo, this is our God; we have waited for Him.—The Second Advent is often described as a revelation of Christ's Godhead. See Ps. l. 3, "Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence." Titus ii. 13, "Looking for that blessed hope, and the appearing of the glory of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ" (R.V.)

9.—We will be glad and rejoice in his salvation.—These words are referred to in 1 Pet. i. 8.

11.—As he that swimmeth, &c.—The outstretched arms seem best explained as being Divine power put forth for the destruction of his enemies. He will "overcome their resistance as easily as the swimmer parts the yielding waves with his hands."—Birks. Compare John xxi. 18, 19, and Heb. ii. 14.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 20.—ISAIAH XXVI.

1.—We have a strong city, &c.—This is one of the passages on which Heb. xi. 10—16 rest. "This city is thought of as still empty; for like paradise it is first of all a creation of God: those who open the gates must be angels. The righteous nation must be the church of the righteous."—Delitzsch. The condition of entrance is "keeping the truth."

4.—Trust ye in the Lord for ever.—There is considerable controversy as to whether saving faith is belief of testimony merely, or trust in a person. This verse is strong evidence for the latter view.

8.—In the way of thy judgments, O Lord, have we waited for Thee.—God is a God of judgment, and sinners as such are exposed to his wrath, but the Cross of Christ is God's provision for judgment against sin being borne by the Substitute, so that to those who trust in Him there is no condemnation. Those who look to the Cross wait for Him and find Him "in the way of his judgments."

12.—Thou also hast wrought all our works in us.—"In us" should be "for us," as the Hebrew preposition is not "in" but "for." R.V. renders it rightly. "Peace" does not depend upon what God works "in us," but what He has wrought "for us."

18.—We have not wrought any deliverance in the earth.—Suitable language for the Church of Christ when contemplating how very little she has done for the world. This leads on to the next verse, where the resurrection is contemplated as that which must first take place before (xxvii. 6) "Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit."

20.—Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers.—1 Thess. iv. 17.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 21.—ISAIAH XXVII.

1.—Shall punish Leviathan the piercing serpent.—The two names here given to Leviathan, "serpent" and "dragon," are found together in Rev. xx. 2, which seems to be the fulfilment of this prophecy: "He laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent," &c.

2.—A vineyard of red wine, I the Lord do keep it.—The failure of Israel under their own keeping is set forth in Isa. v. 1—7. Restored and converted, Israel will know the blessing of "the Lord is thy keeper" (Ps. cxxi. 5).

4.—Who would set the briers and thorns against me in battle.—"Thorns and thistles are a figurative representation of the enemies of the Church (2 Sam. xxiii. 6, 7)."—Delitzsch. Or, strictly speaking, of Israel, as this chapter is a millennial scene. The "briers and thorns" congregate at last under Satan's influence, and attack "the camp of the saints, and the beloved city" (Rev. xx. 9). But (as here described, "I would burn them together") "fire came down from God out of heaven and devoured them."

7.—Hath he smitten him, as he smote those that smote him?—"A contrast is here drawn between the trials of Israel and the severe judgments on their adversaries. Their afflictions have been meted out in thoughtful wisdom and love, as medicine to cure their sins. Their suffering has been great, who fell on the stumbling-stone, and were broken; but those on whom it falls it will grind to powder (Matt. xxi. 44)."—Birks.

9.—This is all the fruit to take away his sin.—The word "take away" is not the ordinary sacrificial word for bearing sin, but one meaning to remove, so that the sanctification of Israel, rather than the justification, is here meant.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 22.—ISAIAH XXVIII.

A section now commences which goes on to the end of chap. xxxv. It contains six woes (as chap. v. contains six woes), xxviii. 1, xxix. 1—15, xxx. 1, xxxi. 1, xxxiii. 1.

1.—Woe to the crown of pride of the drunkards of Ephraim.—"This expression means 'Samaria, the metropolis of the kingdom.' It stood on a hill in the midst of a rich and fruitful valley. 'It would be difficult to find (says Dr. Robinson) in all Palestine a situation of equal strength, fertility, and beauty combined.' Some take 'drunkards' literally; others, for those drunk with worldly pride. Both ideas may well be included in the warning."—Birks. Chap. xxix. 9 and li. 81 illustrate the metaphorical meaning.

5.—A diadem of beauty unto the residue of his people.—The word for "residue" is the already well-defined "Shear" (remnant, x. 21), the people who turn to God in the midst of nationa apostasy.

9.—Whom shall He teach knowledge?—Th weaned ones are the spiritual babes, the littl children, of whom our Lord says, "of such is th kingdom of heaven."

11.—With stammering lips, &c.—The Apostl Paul, by connecting this verse with the las clause of ver. 12, "yet they would not hear," argues (1 Cor. xiv. 22) that tongues are a sig to them that believe not; but most expositor think that he uses it as an accommodation rathe than as an explanation of this passage.

16.—Behold I lay in Zion for a foundation stone.—Distinctly explained of Christ in Rom ix. 33, x. 11, Eph. ii. 20, 1 Pet. ii. 6—8.

24.—Will the plowman plow all day to sow?—"Will he always continue in that one stage c ploughing, of which the sole use is to prepar for the seed-time that follows? The severes dealings of God with Israel were meant in lik manner to prepare the entrance of his heavenl message into the hearts of his people."—Birks.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 23.—ISAIAH XXIX.

"The sure foundation has been laid in Zio (xxviii. 16). Therefore, all who fight agains Zion, be they Jew or Gentile, shall be overthrown. The analysis of the chapter is as follows:—(1) In 1—6 the prophet paints th humiliation of literal Zion in the presence of he enemies; and then, in ver. 7, passes suddenly t the overthrow of those enemies. (2) In 9—1 he tells the worldly Jews that they must b punished as God's enemies. (3) In 18—24 h shows what the effect of this punishment woul be. The chaff would be scattered away, and th true Israel come forth to view."—Kay.

1.—Woe to Ariel.—"It is agreed that this is symbolic name for Jerusalem, though the exa meaning of the word is doubtful. It is rendere by the old Greek translators Aquila and Symmachus, followed by Gesenius and Ewald, "Lio of God." The Targum, followed by Delitzsch an Jewish authorities generally, take it to refer t the altar, the word being similar to one use (Ezek. xliii. 15, 16) of the altar."—S. C. Birk combines both, as, in fact, the chief city of Juda would be suggested by "the lion" (Gen. xlix. and "the altar" (1 Chron. xxii. 1).

14.—A marvellous work and a wonder.—Fro the quotation of the words which follow, "th wisdom of their wise shall perish," in 1 Cor. 19, it would seem that the great work of redemption is here referred to: ver. 22 ("the Lord wh redeemed Abraham") confirms this.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 24.—ISAIAH XXX.

1.—Woe to the rebellious children.—The goi down to Egypt spoken of in ver. 2 seems to poi to the northern kingdom of Israel being he referred to. They "concluded an alliance wit So, King of Egypt, which was the occasion Samaria's downfall."—S. C.

15.—In returning and rest shall ye be saved.—The Hebrew for "returning" (Shubah) reca the latter part of the mystic name "Shea jashub" (x. 21). In New Testament langua "returning and rest" mean "repentance a faith." See Acts xx. 21. In quietness and in con dence shall be your strength.—These two wor are found together in xxxii. 17, and compari the two passages together, it would seem th in this verse, when applied in their deepest Ne Testament meaning, the first clause refers justification, the second to sanctification.

18.—The Lord is a God of judgment: bless are all they that wait for Him.—It is in the Cro of Christ that this character of God is most fu displayed. From this to the end of ver. follows a beautiful description of the walk a ways and work of the real people of God.

24.—The oxen likewise.—"The words 1 Cor. ix. 9, apply to this no less than to the la and prove that it includes a higher reference the preachers of the Gospel.—Birks.

27.—Behold, the name of the Lord cometh fr far.—"The fall of the Assyrian is here foreto in words most impressive and sublime. T issue of their fierce hostility serves here as t type of an event still more awful (Rev. xix. xx. 10, the overthrow and fiery judgment Anti-christian ungodliness in the last days." Birks. "Tophet" means "place of burning."

LADIES AND FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Many ladies attend missionary meetings, and year fter year listen to urgent entreaties for them to elp forward the great cause of the evangelisation f the world. Some of them might go out, if they new exactly what to do, and where their services ould be most needed. Missionary societies are ot always helpful in this matter, and it is in the ope that a few suggestions may be useful that his letter is written.

With Miss Cavendish and another lady I have ately visited Egypt, Palestine, and Syria, and he opening for women's work in these countries much impressed us; and what is the case in hese places will probably be so in other Mohammedan lands. Women only can gain access to women in them.

A few Kaiserwerth, or Mildmay, deaconesses, a mall company of American ladies planted anywhere effect great things. They attract to their dispensaries, hospitals, and schools, men as well as women and children. Deeds of love and offices of kindness win their way far and wide, especially in the East.

Why cannot a greater number of English ladies combine to do good works? Union is strength. We do not so much require this power of combination in England, and we are, therefore, inclined to underrate its value. Individual work hrives with us, and in the hands of Christian adies it has been specially blessed and owned of God. But in foreign lands it is different. Individual efforts are poor and faint in comparison with work in association. Women are now pressingly needed in every mission field, and hey cannot accomplish much in an untrained tate. This training is better secured in households formed for the purpose in the countries where the work is to be done, or in countries with tolerably good climates, as near to them as s possible, than in England. For instance, for missions to be done by women where the Arabic anguage is spoken, centres could be formed for Palestine, at Carmel or Jerusalem; and for Egypt and North Africa, in Alexandria or Cairo. Suez would make a good starting-point for the Soudan. Medical missions and schools for girls are the great need in these countries.

Funds for these mission stations ought not to be difficult to find. Many stewards of the Lord's gold and silver are women of education and mental power and gifts. A few of these "honourable women" could equip many of their poorer sisters, whose wealth may be of another kind, but whose contribution to the missionary households would be not less useful than that of those who possess wealth. The world may say, and even the Church will possibly say, "To what purpose is this waste?" but He who sits "over against the treasury" has need of it.

A three days' prayer-meeting for the heathen and Mohammedan women is being held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday this week (Sept. 15—17), at the Conference Hall, Clapham-road, to which all ladies interested in foreign missions are cordially invited. Methods of work will be discussed, and the subject of West African women will be specially considered.

M. A. Lloyd.

Women's Missionary Institute, Clapham-rd., S.W.

P.S.—Some ladies in the Bible lands visited by us much need help in their mission work, and have asked us to mention this to any sisters at home, willing to help them in bearing the burden and heat of the day abroad. I shall be glad to reply to any letters on this subject addressed to me. Stamps to be enclosed for answers.

TEMPERANCE WORK IN SWITZERLAND.—A "Café Tempérance" has recently been opened in Montreux, close to the "Débarcadère," the resort of boatmen, coachmen, and others, especially on market days. Temperance work is making progress in Switzerland, and it is hoped that those who owe so much to the beautiful scenery and climate will help forward this undertaking. Communications may be addressed to Mrs. P. W. Stephens, Tyringham, Beckenham; or to Mrs. Bayley, Clarens, Switzerland.

CHRISTIAN WORK IN BARCELONA.

The story of last year's missionary work in this Spanish city should encourage all who are imbued with the missionary spirit. "Protestant missions, properly conducted, are no sham in Spain, and primitive Gospel preaching is no dead letter in the land of Torquemada." So says a writer in the Wesleyan Missionary Notices, and goes on to speak of "grand Christians in our midst." A visit to the classes or fellowship meetings would show that there are about one hundred and thirty brethren able to testify hat God in Christ has become their salvation, while the muster rolls contain the names of ome thirty lamented Spanish saints, who, after living consistent lives, passed by triumphant deaths into the glory beyond. The story of the conversion and death of one of these appended at the close is a truly blessed one. In the last twelve months about thirty young converts have been added to the Church, having been converted not merely from Romanism to Protestantism, but also from sin and unbelief to holiness and saving faith in the Crucified. Though this ingathering is not so large as in some previous years, yet there is abundant reason for thankfulness and for joyfully going forward. The attendance at the Tuesday night class meeting is so large than an adjournment from the vestry to the chapel has more than once been necessary.

In answer to the question, "What has Jesus done for you?" put at one of these class meetings, a young Spaniard said, "Four years ago I was invited to attend the services; I went, heard the Gospel preached, and on leaving the chapel was presented with a copy of St. Mark's Gospel. I read it that very night, and as I read I wept, for it revealed to me my sin; but it did more, it revealed Christ to me. I accepted Him, and believe that Christ entered my soul that very night."

The quarterly society meeting is especially interesting. On these occasions, after special prayer, praise, and exposition of Scripture, information is given concerning the work done and the funds contributed by the members, and then all those who have been duly tried and approved are received into fellowship, the meeting closing with the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The first meeting this year, when about ninety members were present, proved a very hallowed season.

In the day-schools, which are not carried on without much difficulty, on account of Romish opposition, there are over four hundred children, only a few, however, attending the Sunday-school. The examinations have been of the most satisfactory character, and it is satisfactory also to note that the contributions of the scholars have amounted to so large a sum as £192.

The cottage hospital has, it is needless to add, proved a great blessing, and a "Joyful News" evangelist has been doing very effective work in the villages.

This work is carried on by Revs. R. Simpson and F. G. Smith, 10, Calle Abaixadors, Barcelona.

A WORK OF MERCY.—In the Homes of Hope, 4, 5 and 6, Regent square, W.C., established for the purpose of rescuing from ruin domestic servants who had either fallen or were exposed to special temptation, 2769 cases have been dealt with during twenty-seven years' work. Of this number 964 belonged to the class of young mothers, who were thus saved from falling into deeper and continued sin; and more than 300 were rescued from surroundings of great temptation unfallen. Nearly all these cases turned out well, and about seventy per cent. of the others. This is good testimony to the loving Christian training and judicious influence which the inmates enjoy, and which forms a special feature of the work in these Homes. The committee are also anxious, as far as possible, to do something for the multitude of young girls to be found in the streets at night, and whose conduct and surroundings leave no doubt that they are on the high road to ruin. Mr. Wm. Hornibrook, 17, Bloomsbury-street, W.C., is the secretary.

YOUNG WORKWOMEN IN THE CITY.

Mrs. Fisher, of The Welcome (Cross Key-square, Little Britain, E.C.), writing concerning this work, says there has been cause for great encouragement during the last few months, not only in seeing souls brought to Christ, but in the Gospel services and in the workrooms. There has been evidenced in many an increased hunger and thirst for the deeper things of God. The great depression in trade has caused much trial amongst these young people, which it is painful to the visitors to be unable to relieve. Most cheering has it been, through the kindness of friends in the country, to send away for change and rest some delicate, overworked girls. A lady who had taken a house at Weston for a month, having a spare room, gladly received one girl who was in delicate health, paying her travelling expenses, and taking the greatest interest in her comfort and well-being. On two Saturday afternoons recently about 250 of the girls have been entertained at tea by a friend in a garden at Blackheath, and great blessing resulted from the services subsequently held. These facts may stimulate others to do likewise, and thus to have a part in such good work. Mrs. Fisher will heartily welcome any who can help with personal or other service.

◆

THE CHURCH ARMY.

The new report of the Church Army will be welcomed by evangelical Christians as showing that there is in the Church a vigorous spirit, earnestly seeking, by going amongst the people, the salvation of souls.

The Church Army has now been some time in existence, and, like many similar organisations which have trodden in new paths, was received with scant favour at first. We are glad to see now that not only do several of the bishops speak highly of a movement which marks a fresh departure in the aggressive effort of the Church of England; but that, in more than fifty testimonies from clergymen, the results of some years' experience of the Church Army system in their parishes are spoken of in the highest terms. Hundreds sunken in vice have been raised from their degradation, and are now actively serving God and praising Him for the change wrought in them.

During the year there has been an increase of forty officers, the number standing now at 105. Around London especially the work has steadily increased, new openings having been made at Paddington, Notting Hill, Hornsey, New Southgate, Kensal Green, College Park, Croydon, Hackney, and Peckham. Nor have the claims of the missionary field been neglected, for India, Canada, and Nova Scotia have absorbed several of the officers.

Ten thousand regular communicant members, all humble speakers in the cause of Christ, make up the rank and file of the Army, many of whom were drunkards and blasphemers. The attendance at the 70,000 meetings held annually (30,000 of these in the open-air), numbers about five millions, and some five thousand converts formed the crown of blessing to last year's labours.

The report, price 3d., may be obtained at the Church Army Publishing Office, 3, Amen-corner, E.C., or at the headquarters, 128 and 130 Edgware-road, W.

THE BAND OF HOPE UNION.—A further increase in the number of Bands of Hope, and of the members associated with them, is a healthful sign of progress given in this year's report. The total number of societies in the United Kingdom at present is 13,450, and there are 1,652,463 associated members. During last year one hundred lectures were given to children of the upper standards in Board schools. This is an important feature of the work, the attention of children being thereby stimulated, as shown by the fact that 8000 papers were written by them on the subject thus brought before them. The report gives much interesting information relative to the development and expansion of the movement.

LADY VISITORS IN WORKHOUSES.

There can be hardly a second opinion as to the immense amount of good that lady visitors have done in many of our workhouses, especially in ministering sympathy to the inmates, and in bringing the light of the Gospel to those who are too old or too ill to have any hope of leaving. This being the case, what can be the reason that of late years there has been a very decided attempt on the part of the guardians of some of the workhouses to prevent these ladies from visiting the wards? The most recent is that of the Bromley workhouse, where two charges were made against the visitors, the first being that "four ladies visited the male ward, and sang a quartette hymn, and that the old men had to wait for their dinner until the ladies left." The second was that a lady visited the lying-in ward and said that the inmates "were all doomed."

With regard to the first charge I may say, as a visitor of more than ten years to another workhouse, that I have never known anyone to be admitted to the wards at meal times, much less that the dinner should be detained until the ladies left; so that if this was the case the fault must have been more with the master than the visitors. And as to the second, perhaps the inmates may have understood the Gospel message in a different light to the intelligent guardian who recorded the lady's words.

No one except those who visit workhouses can have any idea of the way in which the inmates look forward to visitors, whether male or female; in their dull, monotonous life anyone from the outside world who sympathises with them is received with joy; and many are the cases of those who have been placed in convalescent homes, businesses, and service through the instrumentality of these ladies.

My experience shows that in many cases the guardians have no objection to theatrical entertainments or concerts being held in the wards; but when it comes to personal dealing with the inmates, that is quite a different thing. The brightest Christians I have ever met with have been some of the sick ones in the infirmary, many of whom are missionaries in their own ward, and by their good example in every-day life show forth the truth of the Gospel, that "Ye shall know them by their works." It seems strange that when ladies are willing and anxious to visit these places they should be denied admittance by guardians who, perhaps, do not visit the wards themselves more than once a year, at Christmas, and if they did at any other time it would be only a formal visit.

In the infirmary I now visit, all the lady visitors and the City missionary were turned out some five years ago on a similar charge to that now made use of at the Bromley Workhouse, only in that instance the principal charge was that the Roman Catholics objected to the Protestant visitors. I, however, was permitted, at the inmates' request, to continue my visits, and after a time others were again admitted, with certain restrictions. But the missionary never got back, though he was looked upon as the true friend of the inmates. A Lady Visitor.

WORKING MEN'S MISSION.—A branch of this mission is about to be commenced at York-street, Walworth. The opening services will be held on Sunday next.

METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE.—The annual report of the Blue-ribbon Total Abstinence Society in connection with the Tabernacle states that during the year forty-nine meetings have been held on Wednesday evenings, at which 277 persons have signed the pledge. The meetings have been of a varied character, and large audiences have been gathered. The Sunday-night meetings in the open air have also been kept up, and thirty-five pledges have been taken. The special event of the year was the seven days' mission, when 317 persons signed the pledge. The following is a summary of the work accomplished:—Number of meetings held during the year, 89; number of pledges taken, 654; bringing up the total figures since the starting of the Society (five years ago) to—number of meetings held, 432; number ot pledges taken, 19,975.

CHINA ADVANCING.

At a recent celebration of the Emperor's birthday, held in Shanghai, one speaker, Mr. Wong, in most fluent English, remarked:—"Fifty years ago China was almost a hermit nation, but she had trade forced upon her, and her ports were opened by strength of arms. The way may have been harsh, but she now sees the advantage of it, and she is glad that she has encouraged the interchange of trade. . . . In the fifty years that have passed, China has advanced wonderfully, though not so fast as Japan. That country has gone too fast, and saddled herself with a debt too heavy to bear. China is advancing slowly but surely. . . I am in favour of admitting foreigners to all parts of China, and ask that my countrymen be admitted to other countries. We are all human, and should all have human rights."

The civilisation of China is little understood in the West. With an imperial Government above, there is very remarkable local freedom. In general, law and order reign, though in some regions robbery and murder are frequent; not more so, perhaps, than in Chicago and San Francisco. Family life is the basis of everything. Marriage is respected, and property descends securely from father to son. In no country is learning more highly honoured. America might take a lesson from China in competitive Civil Service examinations. Various forms of religion, some of them richly endowed in lands and buildings, sway the minds if not the hearts and consciences of the people.

Win China to Christ, and the most powerful stronghold of Satan upon earth will have fallen. Contrast it with Africa. Outside of the Mohammedan kingdoms, which are powerful and aggressive, Africa is split up into numberless petty kingdoms and tribes, uncivilised, non-homogeneous, brutal in manners, and corrupt in morals. In Oceania we have the same prospect —a low civilisation, and no political or moral force. In Turkish lands the "sick man," to adopt the language of European politics, has long been "on his last legs." Persia is not a strong kingdom. Close to China, plucky little Japan is going on with immense strides in the adoption of Western civilisation.

China is the grand field to which the attention of the Christian world should be directed. China influences, politically or otherwise, more than one-fourth of the population of the earth. Win China to Christ, and the prophetic voices heard in the sublime vision on Patmos may be quoted, in ringing tones of triumph, as fulfilled:—"The kingdom of the world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ."—Foreign Mission Journal.

GOSPEL PURITY ASSOCIATION.—A summary of the second year's work at home and abroad of this Association has just been issued. Its lecturers addressed 263 gatherings in the United Kingdom, and in this way a large amount of public interest was attracted to the subject, branches being formed in various places. Already, as our readers know, the efforts of the Association have contributed largely to the repeal of the C.D. Acts in several of the Crown colonies, and in America and other countries its influence has been very powerfully felt. Mr. A. S. Dyer, 31, Paternoster-square, E.C., is the hon. secretary.

NOVEL MEETING IN TRAFALGAR-SQUARE.—At four o'clock on Tuesday morning last week Rev. Thomas Jackson, of Clapton, and Rev. W. Sawyer, Primitive Methodist ministers, in company with Mr. W. Green, of Highgate, held a Gospel Temperance meeting in Trafalgar-square, taking their stand between the fountains and the side of the square next the National Gallery. The meeting was orderly throughout, and each speaker was listened to attentively by an audience of from three to four hundred persons. At the close 450 persons were supplied with tickets for a threepenny breakfast, and a few minutes after the distribution the square was practically deserted. Many of the recipients of the tickets, upon leaving the square, called out, "Thank you, gentlemen." "It is kind o' you, this is." "God bless you!"—Daily News.

SHUT OUT, AND SHUT IN.

Shut out from life's fair joys,
From spring's bright flowers:
From summer's smiling scenes—
With weakened powers,
I lie a prisoner in my little place,
And sing God's grace.

The busy world goes on,
My hands are still;
My feet no longer haste
To do my will;
But I have learned to yield, and idle lie
While others ply.

It was not ever so,
For I have yearned
Some toilsome place to fill;
My heart hath burned
With dreams of mighty deeds, wherewith to bring
Praise to my King!

Shut out from home's dear cares,
When I would fain
Labour for those I love
With hand and brain;
Shut out from paths my feet erewhile have trod —
Shut in with God!

Shut in with God! ah, this
The secret is,
The spring of all my peace,
My source of bliss;
No sting hath suffering, and no place hath fear,
For God is here!

Shut out from life's sweet toil,
Shut in with pain;
Yet Thou hast changed each loss
To brightest gain;
And Thou hast taught me, though to learn so
This truth to know. [slow,

Whether by fervent toil,
Or lying still,
He only truly serves
Who does thy will;
Then where, and how Thou wilt, thy servant use:
I would not choose.

India. S. M. G.

MISS WHATELY'S CAIRO MISSION.

Miss E. J. Whately, writing from Switzerlan concerning her sister's mission work at Cairo says:—"Help is peculiarly needed just now, especially for the medical mission, as the autum is always the time for operations on the eyes, &c. and after the unusually hot summer they hav had at Cairo, there will be almost certainly great increase of patients. These poor sufferers unable to pay the smallest sum for medical help come daily in crowds to the doctor, and day b day those who await their turn hear the Word Life read and explained. Many of them sho that they really value it. Lately, when m sister, after reading and talking for some tim rose to go, a young woman laid hold of he dress, saying, 'Do stay and talk some more t us.' A poor Moslem, ill of an incurable com plaint, listened to the first chapter of St. John' Gospel and then said most earnestly, 'Have yo an old copy of the Gospel you could let m have? Indeed I would gladly pay for it!' H brought away two new Gospels with him withou price, and though the poor suffering body ma not long survive, we trust he has found the tr healing of the soul. It is a great time for see sowing, but means are urgently needed." Mi Whately's address is 21, Belmont-park, Le S.E.

A SAFE CHALLENGE.—It is related of the la Rev. G. M. Murphy, that when challenged to di cuss with Secularists, he proposed to let the deba take the form of an exhibition, on their part, of dozen men who had been reformed from vicio habits by the adoption of Secularist principl while, on his part, he would produce an equ number of persons thus reclaimed by religion. is needless to say that the terms were not accept

THE GOSPEL IN INDIA.

Rev. F. Auvache, late of the Home of Industry, ow in charge of an English-speaking church n Cocanada, India, sends the following particulars concerning the work in which he is ngaged :—

I have charge of an English-speaking church, ith a membership numbering nearly fifty Eurasians, most of them being very poor. The Lord has blessed the message to one soul, and he signs are most encouraging. There is a arge Eurasian population in Cocanada, all of whom speak English, as do also many of the atives. We have a temperance band in connection with our church, with meetings every month. Evangelistic meetings for the natives re held regularly in the Gospel hall, which ften is quite crowded. There is also a fairly ood Sunday-school, and we hope soon to have large boarding-school for the poor Eurasian hildren.

The darkness is very dense—such ignorance, uch superstition, and such cruelty, and all nder the name of religion. It is counted nlucky to allow any person to die in your house, it matters not who that person may be, father, mother, husband, wife, or child—all are the same. If a person becomes sick he is then subjected to all kinds of hurtful devices, uch as branding with a hot iron to keep way evil spirits, or painting the whole body ver with mud. If he improves, well; if not, ut continues to grow worse, he is placed outide, and allowed to die. Only the other day we heard of a sad case of a little child, who, being aken with spasms, was simply thrown out of the house, and the poor little creature remained ut in the rain for two whole days, until death eleased it from its sufferings. Such conduct makes one's blood curdle, yet what can we do? The same parents are so superstitiously religious hat they would feel compelled, were we but to touch them in passing, to abstain from eating any ood for many hours, besides taking sundry baths o cleanse them from the defilement of our touch. Nothing but God's grace is any use here; and, hank God, many of these poor deluded people are coming into the light as it is in Jesus.

Rev. James Smith, Principal of Ahmednagar College, writes :—

We have a Y.M.C.A. in connection with the college and high school here, which has at present about twenty members in all. We are doing what we can for the heathen in this city; t is, as elsewhere, up-hill work, and a knowledge of what is going on elsewhere is no little comfort and encouragement to our band of Christian workers. We have under our care about 300 Hindoos and Mohammedans, and are building to accommodate still more.

I am a lay reader, having been brought to Christ five years ago, through the instrumentality of a converted Buddhist. Since then I have worked for the Lord, and it has been my happy task to conduct most of the services in Gampola, with an occasional visit of a minister. We number about 150 Christian souls in Gampola, ncluding natives, who form the larger portion, and are most sincere. We have the Blue Ribbon movement. There are two Church Missionary Society schools, for boys and girls, in which Christ is taught, by one who was converted from idolatry to Christianity, and who confesses Him as his Saviour. Then there is the work of spreading the Gospel among the villages which surround us on all sides: many heathens have been led to Christ, and have remained firm.

J. H. Guyon.

88, Byrde-street, Gampola, Ceylon.

LONDON CITY MISSION.—On Monday, last week, about fifty members of the London City Mission, Webber-street, Blackfriars, had their excursion to New Malden. A very pleasant day was spent, and after tea several addresses were given, interspersed by vocal and instrumental music of an excellent character.

Y.M.C.A. CONFERENCE AT DUNDEE.

The recent gathering, which assembled on the 6th and dispersed on the 9th September, was the largest and most enthusiastic in the history of the Association. It was also characterised by a marked spirit of devotion. Notwithstanding the distance of the trysting-place, many delegates came from the furthest points of England, from Ireland, and from Wales, until the aggregate considerably exceeded 400. The proverbial charm of Scottish scenery was on this occasion added to the attraction of the Conference. To such an extent was the opportunity of seeing the Highlands availed of, that Oban on the preceding Sunday contained enough delegates to form of themselves a good sized conference.

Kinnaird Hall was well filled on Tuesday evening at the delegates' reception, under the able presidency of ex-Provost Moncur. The heartiness manifested by speakers and hearers was all that could be desired. Local ministers spoke words of welcome to the delegates of each of the three nationalities. Mr. George Williams, who was warmly received by the audience, responded for England with all his wonted geniality. Rev. Henry Montgomery spoke for Ireland, and told a story of a Christian gentleman who, in writing to John Wesley, concluded with the text "Trust in the Lord and do good, so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed," and slipped in two five-pound notes. The good man in writing back thanked him heartily for the kind words, for the text of Scripture, especially for the expository notes!

Each morning between three and four hundred delegates attended at the half-past nine o'clock prayer-meeting. Mr. Williams took the chair for the first session of the Conference. Amongst other visitors introduced during the sittings were Mr. Gillies, chairman of the Melbourne Association, and the Hon. John Harris, president of the Association at New London, Connecticut. A kind congratulatory telegram was received from the Earl of Aberdeen.

Mr. Williams spoke a few hearty words concerning the believer's complete acceptance and comeliness in Christ Jesus; and urged the importance of humility, remarking, "It is good for a man to be nothing. The devil can hit something, but he can't hit nothing."

The Chairman gave Scotland the place of honour in the proceedings, and first called upon Mr. Kennedy, Scotch National Secretary, to give a report on Scottish work. He said that in Scotland the 251 Associations numbered 24,423 members. During the year a young men's evangelist had been appointed. He had wrought with good success and much acceptance. The travelling secretary had devoted much time during the year to the Shetland and other northern islands, and his visit had been attended with much blessing.

The Irish report was given by Mr. McCann, travelling secretary. He said that although the times had been unfavourable for the work there had been much blessing. Eight new associations had been established during the year, making a total of fifty-three. Great good had resulted from a visit paid by Mr. Hind Smith. In closing Mr. McCann said that Irish Association men knew that they had the sympathy and prayers of their English brethren. They also wanted the cheer of an occasional visit.

On behalf of the English National Council Mr. H. W. Mills had a most cheering report to present. England had been slow to organise her Association work; America and Scotland had long anticipated her. But during the last five years all leeway had been well made up. Twenty-one districts had been organised; and the District Union was now the chief factor in the work of extension and consolidation. In 1883 there were 192 Associations in England; in 1884, 227; in 1885, 270; and in 1886, 364, showing an increase of 172 Associations in four years. There are now 60 secretaries set apart for the work. The total for Great Britain and Ireland in 1883 was 388 Associations; in 1887 it is 615. In the world at large there were in 1883, 2548 Associations; in 1887 there are 3561, showing a net increase in four years of 1013. The report proceeded to point out that good organisation, invaluable in its sphere, could never take the place of spiritual power, the vital necessity of the work.

The remainder of the time was occupied by brief reports from a few of the district secretaries, Mr. Williams himself giving a cheering report of the work in the city of London.

At the noon meeting which followed, Mr. W. A. Campbell, of Glasgow, gave an earnest, practical address on "Personal Consecration," and after dinner, on the re-assembling of the Conference, two brief sessions were occupied in considering, first, the place of prayer in relation to Association work; and, secondly, how to make the work of the district unions more effective.

In the evening Mr. George Chambers, of Dublin, presided. Mr. W. T. Paton introduced a very useful and interesting paper, on "The Protection and Social Entertainment of Young Men entering upon City Life." The burden of the paper was to urge upon association workers, while fully maintaining the spiritual work amongst young men, to give increased attention to render attractive the social side.

On Thursday morning Mr. R. Anderson, of Belfast, presided, and called at once upon Mr MacPhail, of Greenock, who addressed himself to the important subject of the qualifications for soul-winning. He was followed by Dr. H. Grattan Guinness, who urged as amongst the highest qualifications the power of sympathy, the possession of sound common sense, and "the three g's," grace, grit, and gumption. He drew a lively parallel between medical and spiritual diagnosis. Theoretical and practical study of the soul and its difficulties must be blended in order that workers may be properly trained and developed. A most earnest discussion followed.

In the afternoon the Chairman, Mr. Macfarlane, gave a long account of the work and organisation of the Glasgow Association. Mr. Parsons, of Bristol, then described his successful Bible-class work in that city. He was followed by Rev. William Robertson, of the Established Church of Scotland, whose well thought-out remarks and suggestions were very acceptable. In the course of the conversation that followed, Mr. W. T. Paton gave a lively anecdote in illustration of the many unrevealed mysteries in the Word of God. He said, on one occasion a lad, carrying home the family dinner from the baker's, was met by an acquaintance, who inquisitively wanted to know what was under the cover. The lad replied, "If father had wished you to know he would not have put the cover on."

At the final session of the Conference proper, an invitation to the Association to hold the next British Conference in Dublin, was warmly extended and heartily accepted.

A public meeting was held in the evening in the Kinnaird Hall. Lord Kinnaird presided. Interesting addresses were given by three of the travelling secretaries.

On Friday a large company visited the beautiful grounds of Earl Camperdown and afterwards proceeded to Rome Priory, where they were most heartily received by Lord and Lady Kinnaird. Photographic groups were taken. Dinner was served to four hundred guests in the marquee, and a few speeches made.

The Conference next year is an international one, and will be held, if the Lord will, in Stockholm.

SEAMEN AT BILBAO.—The sixth report of the Reading-rooms for British Seamen, established at Luchana, Bilbao, Spain, affords interesting evidence, if such indeed were needed, of their value. Nearly 34,000 visits were made to the rooms; one hundred services and Bible-classes were held, and as results 500 seamen signed the pledge and much spiritual blessing was imparted. Many letters received from seamen afloat testify to the benefits received, and the sailors' hearty appreciation of the kindness of those who thus interest themselves on their behalf. Rev. A. Burnell, of the Missions to Seamen, and Mrs. Burnell, aided by occasional visitors, now carry on the work.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we hope to give portrait and sketch of Mr. F. N. Charrington, of the Great Assembly Hall, Mile End-road, E.

Mr. George Müller has been heard from, passing through Port Said on his way to New Zealand.

We deeply regret to learn that Miss Marsh is dangerously ill with congestion of the lungs. Her family ask the prayers of God's children that her life may be spared to them, and to the Church of Christ at large. We are also requested to ask that no inquiries should be made, as they cannot conveniently be replied to.

Mr. George Smith, of Coalville, has been only too true a prophet. The Temporary Dwellings Bill, which would have secured for the 30,000 gipsy, van, and other travelling children the same protective regulations and advantages as other working-class children have, has been swamped by the Parliamentary flood of useless talk and unseemly wrangling. That such an Act is necessary has been proved again and again. Only a week or two ago Mr. Smith told the Select Committee that there is scarcely a gipsy camp without its idiot or imbecile. It is a national disgrace that a Christian people should merrily spend millions per annum on ironclads and big guns, and yet grudge the few hundreds required to rescue these neglected ones from the mire of ignorance and depravity.

The Economist has an interesting letter from a German correspondent upon the position of the Sunday Labour question in that country. It appears that whilst there is a large amount of Sunday work, especially in Saxony, the general opinion is in favour of either total or partial prohibition. The employers, however, are not disposed to be content with six days' labour, and very many of the working-class associations advocate only partial prohibition. It cannot be too strongly urged upon both employers and employed that this Sunday labour is an injurious and short-sighted policy, alike from an economic, moral, and religious standpoint, and it is hoped that the German Government will be strong and bold enough to sweep away the objectionable system altogether.

It would be well if ladies, who imagine that fine feathers are necessary for their transformation into fine birds, could know what horrible cruelties are sometimes perpetrated to procure their adornments. A contemporary gives details of the procural and preparation of the so-called "osprey" plumes, now in so much vogue, which would lead a tender heart to hesitate about ever wearing them again. These feathers are taken from the egrets and smaller herons, who only possess them during the breeding season. To procure them the heronries in Florida are subjected to a wholesale massacre at the very time when the little birds are most dependent on their parents' care. An eye-witness describes the scene of the butchered herons and their starving nestlings as heartrending. There is a French proverb which says that to be beautiful woman must suffer (il faut souffrir pour étre belle), but it is sad to think that the suffering should be transmitted to innocent and lovely birds.

It is to be regretted that all three sermons preached before the British Association at Manchester, by the Bishops of Carlisle, Bedford, and Manchester, eloquent though they were, and containing much that was good, should in more or less direct terms have commended the unscriptural scientific theory of Evolution. This boasted Darwinian structure is founded on hypothesis, and buttressed by assertion. Until it has been proved that man was not always man, but gradually developed from the very lowest form of life, we are old-fashioned enough to be content with the Bible account of the creation. The Bishop of Bedford suggested that we may hitherto have read our Bibles wrongly; but "In the beginning" is, surely, plain enough. Why should pseudo-science be ever trying to get behind it these inspired words?

For some years back Miss Whately has been actively engaged in the work of endeavouring to Christianise the people of Cairo, there being at the present time no fewer than six hundred children being taught the Scriptures in her mission schools. Unfortunately, however, the work is hampered for want of funds, and the number of teachers has had to be decreased, whereas the Jesuits, who are building large schools in the locality in which Miss Whately's work is centred, are stated to have unlimited money at their command. A contemporary states that Miss Whately, who is working on similar lines in Palestine, has asserted that "English influence has obtained for the Jesuits a Government grant three times as large as that which her sister receives for a considerably greater number of scholars." We should be glad if one of our Protestant members of Parliament would make some inquiries with respect to the matter.

"Prevention is better than cure." If any further testimony be needed to the immense value of such agencies as Boys' Refuges and Prison-gate Missions, it is furnished by an article in the current number of Murray's Magazine, by the Surveyor-General of Prisons. From it we learn that whereas fifty years ago, with only half of our present population, there were 50,000 convicts in those "sinks of iniquity and nurseries of crime," the hulks, there are now in England only 7414 convicts, and 2000 persons under police supervision and at that time the yearly average of executions was forty-six, now it is only fourteen. Education, temperance, Christian activity, may all justly claim to share the credit of this vast improvement, but the real secret is one of principle: our forefathers looked upon the criminal as a beast to be got rid of, by hanging or otherwise, as soon as possible; we nowadays choose the better part, by saving lads before they drift into vice and crime, and treating even the felon as capable of better things.

We note from the thirtieth report of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue that during the half-year ending in March last, while the amount of drink consumed in England was decreased by 626,527 gallons, the consumption in Ireland had been augmented by 210,616 gallons. It is painful to find that an increase in "circulating wealth" is being accompanied by increased intemperance. A French writer, who is now travelling through Ireland, has given the name of one district in which the rental is £14,000 per annum, and the expenditure upon intoxicating liquors £20,000. As our Presbyterian contemporary, The Witness, has remarked, "Ireland will not have her prosperity materially added to by merely transferring money from the pocket of the landlord to that of the publican."

There is a lesson for English Christians in the pleasing fact that the native converts in Japan have, during the past year, contributed no less an amount than £5377 to mission work, the average wages of many of them not exceeding 10d. per day. Such generosity is a practical way of showing what the Lord has done for them.

Last week we referred to the recent dismissal of "Captain" and Mrs. Harris from the Salvation Army. We have received a private letter from a friend not connected with the Army who appears to be conversant with the facts of the case; his judgment is that the dismissal was, under all the circumstances, quite warranted. The authorities at headquarters also assure us that they have acted towards Mr. Harris with great forbearance.

It is stated in the report of the Inspectors of the London School Board, on the year's examinations in Scriptural knowledge, that "there is no evading the conclusion that in the past the subject has not, at all schools, received the attention which is due to it." There is a tendency to curtail the length of the lesson by overlapping with ordinary work, and if necessity compels that a child must lose a lesson it is the Bible lesson which suffers." This is a matter which concerns others beside the parents of the children.

The address of the Secretary of the Girls' Friendly Society calls attention to a much neglected duty. How often do well-intentioned mistresses imagine that when they have cared for the physical well-being of their dependents they have done all that can be required of them. What a field of opportunities lies open, to care a little for their souls. Some ladies devote an hour a week to reading aloud some wholesome and improving story to their domestics. Much, too, may be done by the judicious selection and loan of elevating books suited to the requirements of each, to counteract the "penny dreadfuls" and sensational novels.

The fruits of French irreligion and de pravity were instanced in the recent scandal of the prize distribution at Saint Ouen. The municipal authorities selected atheistical and immoral books for distribution as prizes to the children of the public elementary schools. This shameful attempt to corrupt and pervert the minds o the young naturally aroused considerabl indignation, and many of the parents are said to have destroyed the books then and there. It is satisfactory to learn that the central authorities have discountenanced such proceedings, and that the offenders have been punished. The objectionable books have all been returned, but the poo children who have been bereft of the prize they had earned, must have been cruelly disappointed.

Christians must rejoice at the news whicl comes from India, of the decline in idol worship. The great Juggernaut car, whicl used to afford terror and admiration t thousands, is now almost deserted. N many years since it was not only considered an honour to be permitted to assist in rolling the Juggernaut car, but it was believed that to be crushed beneath its wheels would gain an entrance to heaven! So many deaths occurred that the English Government had to put a stop to this form of suicide. The fact that labourers have to be hired to draw the car shows how public opinion, enlightened by Christian influence, is gradually changing for the better. Similarly the shrines of other idols are fast losing their hold upon the people. Such proofs of the efficacy of Gospel missions in reclaiming fellow-creatures from the mists of degraded superstition should be a conclusive answer to any who are disposed to question the advantages and blessings which spring from their labours.

There is plenty of noble heroism away from the tented field, and many a humble follower of Jesus going about in imitation of the Master. Day by day evinces a truer and higher courage than that which finds its outlet in war. Three ladies who have distinguished themselves in this labour of love, and who have served not only in hospitals, but also in the field in the late Zulu war, recently received from the Queen the decoration of the Royal Red Cross, and the honour was richly deserved. But the many who cannot expect such recognition of their work on earth will have the commendation of the Master Himself: "Inasmuch as ye did it to the least of these ye did it unto Me."

A writer in The Morning Post draws a terribly dark, but we fear only too true, picture of the attitude of the working classes towards religion. He says:—

> The social conditions which have developed during the past fifty years are unfavourable to the existence of even the lower forms of religion. The increasing severity of the struggle for existence in England tends to coarsen and materialise the minds of those who have to engage in it. It is notorious, for instance, that the great body of London working-men do not attend any place of worship, and probably the same might be observed in any great city. It is declared to be impossible to serve God and mammon, and when men have to choose between serving mammon and starvation, most will accept the former alternative.

But the question naturally arises, If the "lower classes" do not attend places of worship, whose fault is it? The Gospel has not lost its power, and the fields are white unto the harvest. Only the other day we heard of a district, in one of our eastern cathedral cities, which was thoroughly evangelised by one earnest minister of Christ, who, when he went to the place two years ago, found it sunk in darkness, vice, and neglect. There are to-day large congregations of anxious hearers, a Sunday-school with 400 children, a men's Bible-class of 80 working men, and a large band of working men helpers. Religion yet has a deep-rooted hold upon men, though many do not admit it until brought face to face with the solemn realities of eternity, but when the Gospel is simply and lovingly brought to them, and not preached at them, its power to save is undiminished.

MISS VON FINKELSTEIN has returned to this country, after her visit to the United States, where she delivered her Palestine lectures at the various "Chatauqua" assemblies. Early next month she enters on a fresh lecturing campaign in England and Scotland in connection with the Sunday-school Union.

LETTERS FROM NORTHFIELD.—4.

New England is in many respects older than Old England. English habits and modes of speech which were brought over by the Pilgrim Fathers, but which have become obsolete in England, still survive in these Eastern States. Examples of the home life of our forefathers of the Pilgrim era are more readily found here than at home. We spent no more delightful day in America than at Hillside, six miles from Worcester, the residence for more than twenty years of John B. Gough, and still of his widow and their three nieces. It did not seem as though "Uncle John," as he was and still is lovingly called, had really passed away. To the great world he was the eloquent orator, the impassioned advocate of total abstinence; but no mere oratory could ever have touched and moved and swayed those who heard him, as did his burning speeches. The secret of his power cannot be known until one has been to Hillside, and there we learn at once that however great and good he was on the platform, he was greater and better at home. None but a good man could leave behind him the fragrance of reverence toward God and of kindness toward man which are the atmosphere of Hillside. None but a man of very exceptional individuality could have lived as he does, not only in the memory but in the very life of the dear ones whom he has left, and to whom his presence is still a reality, not by any spiritistic delusion, but by the force of his intense and affectionate personality. Especially is this true of Mrs. Gough, an old-time Puritan Christian matron, who seems the very model of the diligent, thrifty, and capable "virtuous woman" sketched in the last chapter of Proverbs. I did not know Mr. Gough until his last visit to England, but that one day at the home where his life was spent, though he himself is there no more, has given me a better acquaintance with the man than hearing his finest speeches, or than such acquaintance as was possible in London could have done.

We spent a few days with our friends Mr. and Mrs. George Needham, at Manchester-by-the-Sea, a very pretty and varied seaside resort. They are doing good work in connection with Conferences for the study of the Word, during the summer months, in addition to evangelistic work among the churches during the rest of the year.

It was a great pleasure to spend a Sunday with our dear friends Mr. and Mrs. Hammond, at Vernon, Conn. His work among the children I regard as one of the greatest blessings which God has bestowed on this generation. He has a pressing invitation to Australia, which one cannot but hope he may be able to accept. The chief difficulty is the way Mrs. Hammond suffers at sea. Pray that they be rightly guided.

The subject of Prohibition is a very lively one just now in America. The Women's Christian Temperance Union, which comprises some of the ablest and most earnest women on that continent, are advocating it with all their might, and a third party is being formed with this for their platform. They take the ground that the liquor traffic is a crime, and that it is immoral to license it at any price.

The Republican party, which has done far more for temperance than the Democrats, will be most weakened by the formation of this third party, and it is to be feared that more immediate harm than good will be done by it. Legislation cannot go beyond the public conscience, and many even very advanced Christians are not prepared to say that to sell or buy or use alcoholic drinks of any strength or weakness is essentially immoral. On the other hand, if it be put on the ground of expediency, there is no hope of so drastic a remedy as Prohibition being carried until the people have been educated up to it; and in the mean time the possible would be lost in endeavouring after the impossible. The majority of level-headed and all-round men are not, I think, with this movement on either side of the Atlantic, and it seems suicidal of our warm-hearted sisters, who did so much and so nobly in the Whisky War, to risk the practically doing nothing by attempting to do more than is within the range of present possibility.

I was speaking only this week to one of the most ardent teetotallers I know, a business man, and often a public advocate of total abstinence, and one who has suffered severely but joyfully for the cause. He said if he could shut up all the public-houses in the country at a stroke he would far rather close a fourth of them, for in the former case a reaction would come which would do more mischief than the drastic remedy had accomplished good. R. C. Morgan.

HOW to EVANGELISE the VILLAGES.

A correspondent of The British Weekly writes as follows:—The village chapel at West Ilsley, on the Berkshire Downs, the foundation-stone of which was laid last week by Mr. George Palmer, of Reading, is the last outcome of a very remarkable work carried on for more than forty years by Mr. Henry Fuller, a grocer, who lived in Ashampstead. This good man, noting the spiritual destitution around him, held meetings in cottages, barns, on the hillsides, wherever he could get the people together, and simply and earnestly preached the Gospel to them. A deep impression was produced, and a number of persons were brought to Christ. Drawn by a request from Compton, a village three miles away, he next carried the Gospel there, and then turned his eyes in the opposite direction, to the beautiful village of Streatley-on-Thames, where he assembled the people in a barn and preached Christ.

His work next reached out as far as East Ilsley, on the Downs, where the great fortnightly sheep-fair is held, and to West Ilsley, which lies beyond it. In all these places, except the last, this earnest tradesman built small chapels, giving and collecting the needful money to the extent of about £1200. He gathered round him a band of plain earnest preachers and allotted them their places on each Sunday, himself constantly travelling fifteen or twenty miles in all weathers to preach three and sometimes four sermons. For more than forty years he acted as pastor of these churches, without any fee or reward except the inward joy and anxiety of his own heart. Frequently he left business for an hour at mid-day for the purpose of prayer, and was often overheard at three in the morning in earnest prayer for the salvation of souls. His name is fragrant in all that district of Berkshire. Upon his death in 1876, his work was taken up by the church at King's-road, Reading, of which he was a member, and is being carried on with a good measure of success. This church has five other village churches and mission stations under its care, and a band of preachers who preach the Gospel every Sunday over an extensive circuit.

Here lies the practical answer to the much-debated question of maintaining Christ's work in the villages. Organisation is needed, but the organism must have the energy of a powerful spiritual life in it. Systems will not evangelise the villages, but men like Mr. Fuller will do it.

MISS LEIGH'S RETURN TO PARIS.—The friends of Miss Leigh will be glad to know that she has returned safely to her work in Paris, after a sojourn of some months in the United States and Canada. She received a warm welcome at Havre at a reception kindly given by Mrs. John Currie, which was attended by about sixty English and American residents. Rev. H. Chesshire, British chaplain, conveyed the good wishes of those present to Miss Leigh, and on reaching Paris a praise-meeting was held with her fellow-workers. Her address is 77, Avenue Wagram, Paris.

IRISH CHURCH MISSIONS.—Interesting conferences of the missionaries of the Society for Irish Church Missions have recently been held at various centres in the West of Ireland. The conference in Errismore on Friday last was followed by a deeply interesting service in Irish, conducted by mission clergymen, and was attended by a large and most attentive congregation, who appeared to take a deep interest in every part of the proceedings. A considerable number of visitors were present, and a most earnest address was delivered in Irish by Rev. T. Clesham, of Ashleagh, who selected as his text Matt. xi. 28. The hymns used were Irish versions of well-known hymns set to familiar airs.

PAKEFIELD CONFERENCE.

The tenth Conference for the promotion of growth in grace has just been held at Pakefield, Lowestoft. This year's Conference has been a time of much blessing, and regarded by many as the most successful that has been held. Much prayer was offered for the presence, power, and blessing of the Holy Ghost, and much expectation of blessing was entertained, which was not disappointed. The attendance has gradually increased, and this year has been the largest of any. A considerable number of clergymen attended, many of whom took part in the meetings.

The first subject, "Our Union with Christ in His Person and Work," was opened by Rev. C. Graham.

The centre of Christianity, he said, is Christ. Not merely a creed about Him, or a church of his name, or ordinances of his own appointing, but Himself. Unlike other great and good men whom God has sent into the world to testify to the truth, Jesus Christ invariably called attention to Himself, made Himself prominent—"Come unto Me." Further, He made Himself to be the essence of all He promised to give—He is the Bread of Life, the Water of Life, the Light of the World, the Resurrection, the Way, the Truth, and the Life, &c. Whatever Christianity is, it is in Christ. Beware of a religion which interposes anything or anyone between your soul and Christ. Romanism does this systematically. Ritualism is to the same effect. All benefit from Christ is by personal union with Him. St. Paul's frequent expression "in Christ," must not be explained away. If it be true that it means no more than to be a Christian, it is equally true that to be a Christian means no less than to be in Christ. All our privileges are in Him, not apart from Him, to be gotten from Him, and not enjoyed without Him. We are partakers of every blessing as we are partakers of Christ. We are accepted in the Beloved. In the words of Hooker, "Such are we in the sight of God the Father as is the very Son of God Himself." So in Him is our sanctification. Separate from Him we can do nothing. The whole secret of holiness is abiding in Him, and so receiving out of his fulness grace for grace, as the branch receiving the vital sap from the parent stem brings forth its fruit.

In dealing with the second subject, "The Guidance of the Spirit by the Word alone," Rev. John J. Luce quoted many passages showing that the Holy Spirit does vouchsafe direct guidance to the people of God, and that in ordinary matters of life. But we are to "try the spirits whether they be of God," and this by the written Word of God, which contains the whole of God's revealed will, which is abundantly sufficient. This is the final court of appeal, to which the Lord Jesus ever submitted.

The third subject, "The Redemption of our Humanity—Spirit, Soul, and Body—by our Lord Jesus Christ," was opened by Rev. L. Price. He said, we must understand the fall to understand redemption. The knowledge of God and ourselves are the two great branches of Divine truth. To redeem us from ruin was the great object of Christ in coming into this world. As yet we see through a glass darkly, but God's purpose is, we should know even as we are known. St. Paul pressed forward that he might apprehend, even as he is apprehended of Christ Jesus. Faith in Christ and his redeeming work results in the salvation of humanity, and a remarkable change in spirit, soul, and body—a new creation. It is our privilege to live and grow in the knowledge of the redemption of our humanity in Jesus Christ, in spiritual communion, spiritual understanding, and spiritual yielding of the members of our bodies as instruments of righteousness unto God. It is the purpose of God in redemption that all the powers and capacities of our nature, and every natural relationship He has appointed, should be converted and used by his Spirit, for his service and glory, and to promote the present and eternal welfare of one another. St. Paul teaches that Christian life is to flow very much in the channel of natural relationships. Husbands are to love their wives as Christ loved the Church, and gave Himself for it. Wives are to submit themselves unto their husbands as unto the Lord. Parents are to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Children are to honour and obey their parents according to God's commandments. Servants are to obey and be faithful to their masters; and masters to be kind and forbearing, knowing that their Master also is in heaven. Thus in consequence of the redemption of every part of our nature, every duty of life is to be converted for the service and glory of God, and to promote the true happiness of man. Let us know our humanity as united to Christ by his incarnation, as redeemed by his obedience, death, and resurrection, as the temple wherein He dwells by his Spirit, and thereby put off the old man and put on the new. In conclusion, he showed that grace received by Christians is to be lived out towards others, giving illustrations from Scripture of the riches of that grace which comes to us through Christ Jesus, that it permeates every fibre of the being, and is sufficient for the exercise of every power with which God has endowed us, as well as for every condition of life.

Other addresses were given, setting forth very forcibly the great truths of the Gospel, the importance of strict adherence to the Word of God and loyalty to Christ our King.

THE SAILORS' WELCOME HOME.

The Christian Lifeboat Crew held their monthly meeting at the Sailors' Welcome Home, Ratcliff-highway, on Tuesday evening last week. Miss Child, in the course of a few words with reference to the work, observed that, being largely composed of sailors, the Lifeboat Crew go all over the world, and the influence of its members was felt wherever they were. At Smyrna, where a branch has recently been started, the work is progressing satisfactorily, the membership gradually increasing. Miss Child also mentioned that she had received a letter from a friend in Anglesea, North Wales, stating that a Sailors' Rest had been opened there on June 21, that God had already shown his power and blessing in connection with the undertaking, and asking Christians in London to remember the new institution in prayer.

A practical and stirring address was given by Dr. McKilliam. After emphasising the importance of doing individual work, the speaker complained of the half-heartedness, coldness, and want of zeal on the part of many Christian workers. He laid considerable stress on the point that no one should undertake the terrible responsibility of doing a single thing for Christ unless they felt convinced that they were truly saved, that they were washed in the blood of Jesus. We must have life from God, remarked the Doctor, before we can do any real and fruitful work for Him.

Some eight or nine men, principally sailors, afterwards gave their "testimonies." It is cheering and comforting to listen to these weather-beaten toilers of the deep as they fearlessly stand up and proclaim Christ as their Captain, and as the only safe haven of refuge in the hour of peril. One aged mariner made an earnest and characteristic appeal to his unsaved brothers. "Come to-night," said he, "and sign articles, step on board the vessel of Salvation, and drop your anchor in the Bay of Christ."

EVANGELISTIC WORK IN CANADA.—The Board of French Evangelisation of the Presbyterian Church of Canada has just issued its report. There are at present seventy-eight preaching stations supplied by the Board. Twenty of the missionaries employed are ordained ministers, and thirteen of them conduct service in both French and English. Last year upwards of two hundred members were added to the French congregations, nearly all being converts from the Church of Rome. Eighteen colporteurs are continually at work, visiting from house to house in some of the most densely settled French districts, and in this way large numbers of the Scriptures, tracts, &c., are distributed. In the twenty-nine schools maintained by the Board there were last year nearly one thousand pupils. Communications should be addressed to Rev. R. H. Warden, 198, St. James-street, Montreal.

The Book World.

The Light of the World. 1d. Kensit, Paternoster-row. This vigorous little monthly, edited by Rev. Z. B. Woffendale, has in it much that will tend to the attainment of its object—the spread of Christianity and the cure of infidelity.

Twenty-five Years' Work of the C.E.T.S. By Canon Ellison. 4d. 9, Bridge-street, Westminster. An exhaustive history of the work of this Society is here presented in very attractive form. It is a record of temperance progress of a very encouraging character, and the various fields of labour are seen at a glance.

A-Fa; or, The Story of a Slave-girl in China. By Roderick Macdonald, M.D., of the Wesleyan Mission Hospital, Fatshan. 9d. T. Woolmer. A beautiful and touching story of a Chinese slave girl, most of the incidents of which have come under the author's own observation. The book has several original illustrations, and cannot fail to interest the young in mission work in China, where, says Dr. Macdonald in his preface, "the scope for Christian philanthropy is vast beyond description."

Life on the Congo. By Rev. W. Holman Bentley, of the Baptist Missionary Society. 1s. 6d. Religious Tract Society. This book is a valuable addition to the literature on the Congo. Here we have, in small space, and for little money, a graphic description of the vast country, its physical features, vegetation, climate, people, &c., with a sketch of mission work there. It has an excellent portrait of Mr. H. M. Stanley, and several good illustrations. There is an introduction by Rev. George Grenfell, who has done good service, both as a missionary and explorer in the country, and who has recently returned there.

The Philosophy of the Gospel. By Rev. Hugh McIntosh, M.A. James Nisbet & Co. The title of this book might lead the reader to expect a theological and learned, if somewhat dry, treatise; on the contrary, the discourses which compose it, while thoughtful and well-reasoned, are singularly lively and popular; and all through the volume the author's aim is successfully attained—namely, to show that the Gospel of God's grace is the one only remedy which meets human wants and woes. In three successive sections Mr. McIntosh illustrates (1) the Gospel's adaptation to the nature of man; (2) its application to human life; and (3) its relation to the Divine man. Without claiming for these discourses profound thought or faultless diction, one can well understand that their author, wherever he preaches, will be listened to both with pleasure and profit, for his style is picturesque, pointed, and persuasive, and his theology is eminently that of the old school, which is the school of the Bible and the Puritans.

MILDMAY MISSION TO THE JEWS.

The new premises at the German Church, Aldgate, of the Medical Mission, were dedicated to the Lord on Friday afternoon last. Rev. J. Wilkinson stated that the medical work was commenced in rooms belonging to the old German Church in Hooper-square, Leman-street, E., nearly eight years ago. Driven out by the railway extension, it was removed to Cannon-place, till the Germans, who have been good friends and landlords all along, and who offered to build rooms to its needs in proximity to their new church, completed both. Thus the Mission, without the initial cost of building, has at its disposal a lofty and airy suite of rooms, suitable in every way and in the heart of the Jewish quarter. A good-sized room for meetings is on the first floor, and a passage leading from this is flanked on one side by Dr. Dixon's consulting-room and a dressing-room, and on the other by the dispensary and a consulting room for the second doctor.

Dr. Dixon, in a short address, said the new rooms were much brighter and better. The poor people had sometimes to wait three and four hours before they could see the doctor. During this time, the missionaries speak with them, and ladies sing to them, but a few more Christian ladies are wanted to help in this way. Several friends engaged in praise for all the blessing vouchsafed to this Mission and prayer that it may be increased tenfold, upon each department and worker. May God grant, it for his own honour and glory and the good of Israel.

Letters to the Editor.

FEEDING THE HUNGRY.

Dear Sir,—In reference to the article in your issue of Sept. 2, headed "Knowledge or Food," I should like to show what can be done by private means.

Last winter a soup kitchen was opened in the neighbourhood of Clerkenwell, supported wholly by a gentleman whose heart went out to the hungry poor. 260 quarts of soup were sold daily at 1d. per quart, and by this means over 200 families were provided with good nourishing soup, whilst many a tale of distress came under my notice.

Hungry children were soon seen standing round the door, and the charity was increased by giving 100 children a daily dinner consisting of soup, with either jam or plum pudding. 5626 such dinners were given to these children from April to July last.

I quite agree with Mr. Eyre, M.P., that this work should be carried on by private charity if possible, and at least a similar work opened in every parish. There are many quietly doing this blessed work, but more are needed. If properly carried on, the expenses are not great, a few subscriptions covering the demands. Having had the privilege of being the honorary superintendent, it has proved one of the most deeply interesting works I have been engaged in, and I trust these few lines may enlist the sympathy of those whose time is unoccupied, that their hearts may be drawn out to help to feed the hungry ones during this coming winter.

I shall be pleased to give any information on the subject. Catherine Moore.

102, Regent's Park-road, N.W.

SUNDAYS IN SWITZERLAND.

Dear Sir,—I notice, in your issue of Sept. 2, a complaint from a correspondent as to the "dry bones" character of the sermons he has usually met with at the Continental chaplaincies in Switzerland. May I be allowed to say a word on the other side.

I have spent a good many Sundays at such places during the last few summers, and this year at Zermatt, the Riffel Alp, Zinal, the Eggischorn, and Grindelwald, and I think I never received more helpful spiritual teaching anywhere, at home or abroad, and I know many who can bear the same testimony.

I, for one, shall never forget a Sunday spent at Zinal. The Lord's Supper was observed at eight a.m. Special request was made by the visitors that the ten o'clock service should be held in the wood behind the hotel. The chaplain readily consented. A suitable spot was selected amongst the moss-covered boulder stones under the shadow of some beautiful fir-trees. One large boulder served as reading desk. The visitors selected their positions, two invalids being comfortably placed. Could this picture be described it would indeed interest all who love nature and nature's God. As the clergyman faced the little group in this delightful temple of nature he had the glaciers and snow mountains towering up into the sky about three miles distant on the right, although the distance does not seem so great, with other mountains capped with snow miles away down the valley on the left.

A glorious sun shining through the trees with a beautiful blue sky, making the scene one never to be forgotten. Most of the English speaking visitors in the hotel had come out to this service as well as a Swiss pastor and party who had just had a French service in the hotel. There were also in the group a vicar of an important London suburban parish, a curate of a large country town, a vice-principal of a boys' school, a London trademan, a mathematical teacher, a painter who is an exhibitor in the Royal Academy, and family, a musician, the son of a lawyer, with several ladies more or less engaged on the behalf of others when at home. In this little company almost every prominent view of religious thought was represented, and of various sections of the Church of Christ, yet here gathered to worship God in simplicity and sincerity

The text selected was, "Come, now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool" (Isa. i. 18).

It seemed comparatively easy to contrast the purity of nature with the impurity of unwashed, unforgiven, human mankind, and then to tell of the scapegoat carrying away the sins of Israel into the desert. Then the congregation were told of their need of Jesus, and how He had borne all their sins upon the tree, of the cleansing of his blood, and of the white robes. In such a place how pointed the way of life! Thus, in the midst of all these glories of God's Books of Creation, we still rejoiced in his glorious, Book of Revelation.

There are no doubt many instances such as your correspondent refers to, but it is not always the case.—I am, yours truly, W. Weston.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

South Norwood.—The tent services in connectiowith the London City Mission have been continued since June. Much blessing has resulted, many persons having given evidence of change of life. The meetings will be continued until the 20th inst.

Mr. Spencer Walton has been holding Bible-readings and open-air meetings at Brixton recently. The former were a great blessing to many of the Lord's children, and at the open-air meetings many hundreds gathered to hear the Gospel message.

Dublin.—Rev. Charles Inwood held a continuous mission in Harold's-cross, Dublin, during the month of August, in a tent erected for the purpose. Much good was done and many professed conversion. Not the slightest annoyance or molestation was experienced during the time.

Manchester.—A month's mission is being conducted at Ribchester, near Preston, by Mr. Augustine Wolfe, Diocesan evangelist. Meetings are held nightly. One evening, sixty men and women went into the inquiry-room to be spoken to about their souls, and over forty decided for Jesus; it was a time never to be forgotten. The mission is under the guidance of Rev. F. J. Dickson, rector of the parish, who enters most heartily into the work.

Messrs. Fullerton and Smith.—After a season of rest these brethren are again busily engaged in evangelistic work. They have just closed a successful mission at Bury St. Edmunds, and go thence to Stowmarket and Wisbech. The work at Bury has been marked by the happy, practical union of Christians of all denominations. Most of the meetings were held in Garland-street Baptist Chapel, and large congregations gathered to hear the Gospel. The closing services were crowded to excess, and a deep and widespread interest created. The inquiry-meetings were opportunities for leading many to decision for Christ, and the separate services for men only and women only (the latter conducted by Mrs. Fullerton) have been eminently useful in extending the interest and area of the work. M. Cumming.

Appeals.

Help is asked for the erection of a much-needed mission-room, near Walmer, Kent, in a district combining two or three parishes. Communications may be addressed to Col. Sladen, Ripple-court, Walmer; or to Earl Cavan, Weston-super-Mare.

Fuel for the Poor.—Rev. J. W. Atkinson, 308, Old Ford-road, E., appeals for funds, for the purchase of coal and coke whilst they are cheap, for distribution amongst the poor during the coming winter. Last year the Relief Committee was enabled to place an order for eighty tons, to be supplied in small sacks, and it is hoped that this year it may be possible to provide for the relief in this way of a much larger number of the destitute poor.

Seamen's Coffee Rooms, Calcutta.—A reading-room, with a library, is about to be added to these coffee-rooms, at 19, Lall Bazaar. A lady in America has gathered, among her friends, a number of books, but many others, papers, and tracts are also required. The book-post can be utilised for single books or small packets; boxes or parcels can be sent cheaply by freight. Rev. Ray Allen is the superintendent, and it is gratifying to state that it is said of this resort for sailors from all lands that "every sailor who goes there gets converted."

THE BIBLE IN IRELAND.—In a paragraph in our issue for Sept. 9, in reference to the work of the Irish Church Colportage Mission, the number of portions of the New Testament sold was by an error put at 558 instead of 7558. A very exceptional opening is now offering in many places for the furtherance of the work. In one county alone nearly three thousand books have been sold this year by one colporteur.

THE EVERLASTING LIGHT.

"The Lord....an everlasting light."—Isa. lx. 19.

God changes weal to woe, and sunny things makes dim,
Lest, loving earth below, our hearts be turned from Him;
Through pathways dark and strange, through sorrow, and through gloom,
He leads us to a realm of light, beyond the silent tomb.
And by each gloomy night He sends us kindly warning,
To wait the everlasting light that cometh in the morning;
And though our pathway wend through ways now dark and dim,
We know our Lord is at the end, and all is light with Him. Evan.

STRONG YOUNG MEN.

On Sunday evening, at the Presbyterian Church, Islington, Rev. Dr. Thain Davidson resumed his monthly sermons for young men, which for ten years have been a feature of his ministry in North London. There was a crowded attendance, mainly of youths from fifteen to twenty-five years of age.

Having read the story of Samson, Dr. Davidson addressed his young hearers from the words of 1 John ii. 14: "I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the Word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one." He took up the text under its three divisions, speaking first of the nature of the strength the Apostle was referring to, not so much physical and intellectual, important as these were, as moral and spiritual; secondly, of the secret of such strength, having the Word of God abiding within the soul; and thirdly, of the evidence of it, overcoming the wicked one in all the various forms, in which he seeks to destroy.

It was delightful to see so large a gathering of "City youths," and to mark the earnestness with which they listened to the affectionate appeals of the preacher.

"ONCE BETTER OFF."—In a notice of the work of the United Kingdom Beneficent Association, in our last issue, the number of annuitants was given as between forty and fifty. It should have been between four and five hundred. Communications should be addressed to Miss Bullar, Basset Wood, near Southampton.

CHINA INLAND MISSION.—A party of ten left England for China under the auspices of this Mission last week. Mr. Eldred S. Sayers, of Bing-yâi, near Wenchow, writes, on July 4:—"You will be glad to hear that the work is going forward. Nineteen have been baptized this year, and there are many inquirers. Many of the Christians are real, devoted, earnest men—entirely 'new men.'"

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on an eight days' mission at Lewes, conducted by Mr. J. B. Bain, Sept. 18 to Sept. 25.——For blessing on fourteen days' special services in Broomielaw Free Church, Glasgow.——For blessing on a mission at Brandeston, Suffolk, Sept. 18 to 25, to be conducted by Rev. W. Courtnall.——A lady requests prayer that the way may be opened up for her to go to India as a missionary.——Señor and Madame Rodriguez request prayer on their returning to work in Spain, after a brief sojourn in England.——For blessing on a mission at Cage-lane Hall, Plumstead, by Mr. Climie, Sept. 18 to 25.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL TRACT ENTERPRISE.—We have several times alluded to Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh's monthly paper, The Anti-Infidel, and its value in controverting the arguments of atheists. It should also be generally known that Mr. Bradlaugh is engaged in an arduous and important work—viz., the publication of anti-infidel tracts for circulation in India, Australia, and other countries. A correspondent, writing from India, says such tracts are much needed there, as "infidelity is growing among educated natives." This, alas! is almost universally true, and it is impossible to over estimate the value of the work Mr. Bradlaugh has undertaken. Information as to the terms on which parcels of these tracts are supplied can be had at the Anti-Infidel Tract Depôt, 70, King's Cross-road, W.C.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The work of the Church Army at St. Luke's, Cheltenham, is resulting in much spiritual blessing. Good open-air meetings are frequently held.

The Bishop of Lichfield says that £400,000 could be annually raised for church work, if every Church family in England contributed one halfpenny per week.

The vicarage of St. Mary's, Kidderminster, vacant by he death of Canon Claughton, has been accepted by Rev. Sidney Philips, M.A., rector of Nuneham Courtney, Oxfordshire.

Dr. Bardsley, the new Bishop of Sodor and Man, preached for the first time in the island on Sunday week. In the afternoon he addressed 10,000 people on Douglas Head.

At Egremont the Church Army have just started temperance meetings, and over thirty pledges have already been taken. At the Gospel meetings many souls have come forward seeking salvation.

Forty-nine lay readers recently went into residence at Keble College, Oxford, with the object of more fully preparing themselves for their work. Qualifications of the successful Sunday-school teacher, and the measure of the responsibility of the laity were amongst the subjects discussed.

The Bishop of Carlisle, in his sermon in Manchester Cathedral, preached in connection with the visit of the British Association to that city, declared that the priests of Christ and the priests of science must be fellow-soldiers and fellow-workers, because science was truth and Christ the spirit of truth itself.

The twenty-seventh annual conference of the Evangelical Union for the diocese of Carlisle will be held at Ulverston on the 20th and 21st inst. Rev. E. A. Stuart, vicar of St. James's, Hollowav, will preach the introductory sermon on the 19th, and during the conference Canon Fausset, of York, will read a paper on "Bible Exegesis."

At a meeting of the parishioners of St. Peter's, Carmarthen, it was resolved to build a new church for the accommodation of the Welsh-speaking people. The vicar, Dr. Rowlands, said, as the parish church was filled with English people, they were under an obligation to provide something better than a schoolroom for the Welsh. £500 is already in hand.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Dr. Thain Davidson's first sermon in Islington after returning from his holidays was from the words "Strength and beauty are in his sanctuary."

The current number of The Free Church Monthly has an admirable obituary notice of the late Rev. W. C. Forrester, of Auldearn, from the pen of Professor A. B. Davidson, of Edinburgh, the great Hebraist.

CONGREGATIONAL.

During the first year's pastorate of Rev. T. Johnstone at Knottingley thirty-three new members were admitted into the Church.

Mr. Anthony Rippiner, a member of the church at Oundle (Rev. J. Beaty Hart, pastor), after a course of study and evangelistic work at Creaton (Rev. W. D. McLaren, M.A., pastor), has accepted an unanimous invitation to labour as pastor evangelist at the Crozens, Hereford (Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion).

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

J. Rendal Harris has just paid a brief visit to Cambridge Meeting on his holiday trip from America.

"The proposed Biblical Department" of college education for those called to missionary and other active service in the church, still occupies the anxious thoughts of many American Friends. Not a few young people who have devoted themselves to Christ are deeply interested in the subject.

In laying the corner-stone of a new college at Earlham, Barnabas C. Hobbs most ably urged the educational and spiritual mission of Friends in America. "Let no disciple of Doubting Castle ever enter here to teach noble sons and loving daughters of Christian homes that there is no God; that scoff at salvation by blood upon the altar. We want here men and women of faith and prayer."

SALVATION ARMY.

The fifth anniversary of the Salvation Army in Canada has just been celebrated in Toronto.

In Northampton during the last five months, about two hundred persons have come forward as penitents.

At a recent demonstration of the Limehouse corps ninety per cent. of the enrolled "soldiers" joined in the procession.

At Zurich the Maréchale and Colonel Booth-Clibborn have had some blessed meetings, in one of which there were nine souls at the penitent form.

The new German-Swiss Training Homes are just opened at Zurich under the direction of Major Patrick, with twenty-two young men and women.

From Belfast and other parts of Ireland very encouraging reports are received. There are at present twenty-five unfortunates in the Rescue Home, which is doing good work.

BAPTIST.

Special services have been held by Rev. James Billington, of London, during the last three weeks, in the parish churches of Bervie, Peterhead, Laurencekirk and other places in Scotland; large congregations have gathered on each occasion.

Rev. Charles Spurgeon, son of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, will preach in Glasgow on Sabbath, October 9, and on the following evenings he will deliver some of his public lectures, notably, "Street Characters and Cries," and "Hoarding Information, or Lessons from Advertisements."

The autumnal session of the Pastors' College commenced on Tuesday, last week, when eighteen new candidates for the ministry were admitted. There are now over eighty students in the college. Mr. Spurgeon, in his address, expressed the hope that all could say, "As long as we live we will preach Christ crucified."

At a missionary conference in connection with the London Baptist Association, held in the chapel at Highgate, Rev. E. S. Summers, returned missionary from Serampore, Bengal, referring to the increase in the number of native Christians during the last few years, said no doubt if at the present day they could send out ten times the number of missionaries, the results would be proportionate.

METHODIST.

Mr. E. P. Telford, the Methodist evangelist missioner, is arranging to go on a mission tour in Canada and the United States.

The anniversary sermons in the new chapel in Garfield-road, Ryde, Isle of Wight, were preached by Rev. Mark Guy Pearse.

A nine days' mission, held in Castle-street Chapel, Saffron Walden, and conducted by Mr. W. Sampson, has been greatly blessed.

Southwark Chapel, which has just been reopened, has a membership of about 450, mainly artisans and labourers, who, out of their slender earnings, contribute largely towards its support.

On a recent occasion the Bedford Home Mission Band commenced one of their field-days with a prayer-meeting at six o'clock in the morning, when between seventy and eighty persons were present.

The Wrigley Mill Wesleyan Mission Band has during the summer been holding out-door services, in which the vicar and curate of the parish have heartily joined. There has been great blessing throughout.

In several Primitive Methodist circuits protracted services to continue every night for a week have been arranged for in the interests of the children of the Sabbath schools, in some cases to be followed by a second week in the interest of adults.

A new chapel, to seat three hundred persons, with Sunday-schools adjoining for two hundred children, is being erected at Millwall. The population between the East and West India Dock and the Millwall bridges is between 7000 and 8000, and at the present the total religious accommodation from all sources is for only about 1500.

As a complement to "The Sufferer's Bible," issued some time since, Rev. Thomas Champness has now published "The Old People's Bible." It contains a few wise words of introduction, and then there follows all that the Bible has said about old age, with special passages for their comfort. It is printed in large type, and on good thick paper.

Joyful News mentions the curious coincidence of three ministers who occupied the pulpit in a Wesleyan Chapel on the same day, each preaching from the same text, "Come unto Me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." The happy result was that at the close of the day four persons came to Jesus, one saying, "After three invitations from the same pulpit I could hold out no more."

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Rev. J. F. T. Hallowes, M.A., of Yorkshire, who recently conducted a series of successful mission services at Sligo, is conducting this week special evangelistic meetings in Donegal-street Independent Church, Belfast.

Several people have been led to the Saviour in meetings which are just now being held in the Methodist Gospel Hall, Lombard-street, Dublin, and the spiritual life of many of God's people has been greatly quickened.

The annual meeting of the Good Templar Grand Lodge of Ireland was held last week in Belfast, and a resolution approving of the reunion of the two branches of the Good Templar order on the basis of the Boston Conference was agreed to.

Successful Gospel temperance meetings have just been held at Carrickfergus. Appropriate addresses were delivered by Messrs. Samuel Glasgow, T. B. Herring, Daniel Bowman, and others, and much good is believed to have been done.

During the past month evangelistic services have been conducted at Bushmills by Messrs. Simpson and Ballentine, students of the General Assembly, and it is believed much good has been done. During the same time Gospel meetings have been conducted at Strabane by Mr. Thompson, and at Lisnafillan, near Ballymena, by Mr. Boyle, both of the Irish Evangelisation Society, with encouraging results.

The Evangelisation Committee appointed by the Dublin District Meeting has arranged to have a series of services for consecration during the second week of October, to be conducted by Rev. Charles Inwood, Conference evangelist, in different Methodist churches in Dublin. These services are to take the place of an all-day meeting such as was held last year. Arrangements have also been made for holding special missions on several country circuits.

"FALLEN ON SLEEP."

Rev. Peter Logan, for 35 years minister of the Abbey, Culross.—Rev. M. Whyte, minister, of Lockerbie.—Rev. Alex. Yule, Free Church minister, of Blairdaff, Aberdeenshire.—Rev. D. C. Porter, pastor of the Mount Holly Church, New Jersey.—Mr. Alexander Thorburn, for fifty-seven years an elder of the church at Stranraer.—Dr. Daniel Curry, one of the most prominent ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America.—Rev. John Johnstone, vicar of Haxey.—Rev. H. B. Britten, a veteran Wesleyan missionary.—Rev. Buchan Warren Wright, vicar of Norton Cuckney, Notts.—Mr. William Milner, for upwards of half a century an ardent member of the Methodist Society at Blackrod, in the Wigan Circuit.—Mrs. Glyn, wife of Rev. Carr John Glyn, rector of Witchampton, Dorset.—Mr. James A. Rickon, the oldest local preacher in the Chatham district.—Rev. Edmund Childs, incumbent of Swift's Alley Church, Dublin.—Mrs. Sawtell, who for many years took an active part in the work of the Home and Colonial Training College.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

HOME.

The Queen, a lady's newspaper, condemns grocers' licences as leading to female intemperance.

Vigorous opposition to the granting of new licences at the recent Brewster Sessions was generally successful.

At a special meeting of the Portsmouth Working Men's Liberal Union a proposal to establish a drinking-bar in connection with the Union was defeated by a very large majority.

The Manchester, Salford, and District Temperance Union has for sixteen consecutive weeks held open-air Gospel temperance meetings in Manchester and Salford, 400 pledges have been taken.

It has been decided to erect a memorial to the late Mr. James Barlow, and that this shall take the form of workshops and baths, to be erected at the Children's Home, Edgworth, at a cost of £2000.

The British Medical Association has presented a memorial to the Government asking for an inquiry into the mortality through drink, which, they assert, amounts to one-tenth of the total death-rate of the United Kingdom.

In a recent case at Southwark Police Court, Mr. Montagu Williams said he "should like to see police constables generally showing more regard for the public and less for beer-house keepers and licensed victuallers."

At the British Association, Manchester, several references were made to the evil fruits of drinking. Dr. Martin thought that until men became more conscientious and more elevated in tone they would become dissipated and drunken.

FOREIGN.

"The Curse of the World" is the title of an important new work on inebriety, by Daniel Wilkins, Chicago.

Out of one hundred Baptist periodicals in the United States, every one favours Prohibition on the liquor traffic.

Mr. Moody describes the liquor traffic as "hellish," and out of which men should get "as Lot out of Sodom."

Mr. Valentine, late M.P. for Cockermouth, writes from Tacoma, Wellington Territory, that the prohibitory law there works well for both the Indians and the settlers.

A petition in favour of total Prohibition of the liquor traffic is to be presented at the ensuing session of the Swedish Reichstag. It is said that 300,000 signatures have already been obtained.

Rev. G. T. Beatty, secretary of the Soldiers' Total Abstinence Society of India is to begin an extension tour on November 1, and in the interests of the Society will hold meetings at various important stations.

Vice-Consul Archer, of Porto Alegre, reports to Lord Salisbury that the British workmen who go to Brazil are generally given to drink, and are unsteady and unreliable. Even British employers there prefer foreigners.

During a Gospel temperance mission held in a large marquee at St. Alban's, Mr. William Forbes, at the Sunday night service, gave an address on "Heaven, and how to get there." So great was the assemblage that the sides of the tent were removed, and hundreds of persons stood outside.

An agent of the London Missionary Society, writing from Bengal, gives an account of a temperance society in India, which has on its Committee Hindoos, Mohammedans, and Christians. What India needs, he says, is regulation of the drink traffic in the interests of the people and not in the interests of revenue.

In Canada the churches are fully alive to the importance of the temperance question. In the Methodist church, which stands first in all the provinces except Quebec, every minister is a total abstainer. In the other churches it is difficult to find ministers who take intoxicants although there is no rule to bar their use.

An American professor recently published some interesting statistics about centenarians. It appears that the proportion of women to men among them is about two to one, which he attributes to their greater temperance both in eating and drinking, and their comparative immunity from the greater risks and perils of life. Some 25 per cent. prove to have been total abstainers for life, and the great majority are "small meat eaters." They are mostly spare people, accustomed to hard exercise and early rising, and, in fact, to healthy habits generally.

THE INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF ABOLITIONISTS.

The beautifully situated city of Lausanne was selected for this year's annual Convention of the British, Continental, and General Federation, on September 5, 6, and 7. The programme announced a meeting of the executive for ten o'clock on Monday morning; but they began their business at eight, and were engaged until noon. So numerous was the attendance that the hall engaged had to be abandoned in favour of the great hall at the Theatre Casino.

Mr. Percy Bunting was elected to fill the presidential chair, in the absence of M. de Levaleye, the president, who was ill. Mr. Bunting rapidly reviewed the past history of the Federation, during the eleven years of its existence; then passed on to describe the victory gained in England by the repeal of the laws which had attempted to regulate vice by a legalised protection, and regretfully alluded to the fact that notwithstanding the utter failure of those Acts to avert the evils they professed to cure, there still remained many scientific men who believed it possible to inaugurate some system of compulsory examination which would succeed. The Federation would not admit this possibility, on any argument whatever, for reasons founded on eternal principles of righteousness and justice, upon which their constitution and all past resolutions were founded.

M. Prof. Secretan delivered the address of welcome. This cannot be epitomised, but it is hoped an English translation of this and other noteworthy speeches may be supplied in some popular form.

Mrs. Josephine Butler succeeded these gentlemen with her opening address. She brought her hearers back to first principles, and reiterated the cry of danger from compromise, which has ever characterised her deliverances in England, both by voice and pen.

This meeting did not close till six o'clock, and at eight two other meetings were advertised; one, for men only, in the same theatre, was presided over by M. Delessert. The speakers were MM. de Paguy, of Brussels, Allier, Prof. Montauban, Roehrich, of Geneva, and Hirsch, of Paris. The audience was sympathetic, and the speeches were such that many an English pulpit might profitably resound with moral and Christian teachings as pure-toned, emphatic, and practical, in lieu of so many unpractical, unimpressive essays on theology.

The second meeting was for women only. It was held in the Methodist Church, at the other end of Lausanne. Above 500 women were present. Their voices sweetly blended in a tune familiar to English ears, as they sang the favourite French hymn similar in sentiment to our Te Deum. This reverential women's meeting reminds us of two devotional meetings previously held, which formed a fitting prelude to the week's convention.

On Tuesday, at 8 a.m., the Hygienic Section began its deliberations and its discussions. Here arose the anticipated storm. Members who had not been warned were indeed surprised to find an old foe not only resurrected, but arrayed in a new dress, and introduced with new apologies for its reappearance. A delegate from one of the Continental cities advocated that the State should retain a discretionary power for enforcing the medical examination of women in certain circumstances, whereupon Mrs. Josephine Butler rose and delivered an impassioned address, in a most uncompromising spirit, protesting against the visite forcée (enforced medical examination) under any form, as an outrage upon womanhood. At the close of her speech the entire female portion of the audience rose en masse, and with their hands raised above their heads exclaimed, "Au nom de Dieu," protesting in the name of God against the degradation of their sex.

No resolution could be taken, beyond appointing a special committee of seven, including the chairman of the Hygienic Section, Dr. Hochreutiner. English friends reassured themselves that no dangerous compromise would be effected, when they knew that our long-proved and fully-trusted leaders Prof. Stuart, Mrs. Butler, and Pastor Monod were on this special commission.

In the Legislative Section, Mr. Capper, with his big voice and cheery manner, introduced new life. His speech is indescribable. It may be compared to a sudden mountain breeze rushing through a stifling valley, where malarious vapours had accumulated; and when it has passed through, the fumes have vanished and life revives. So here, the previous part of the proceedings had created forebodings, and other evil thoughts, but his address was most refreshing, and, therefore, heartily welcomed.

Wednesday's doings can only be briefly noted. The hygienic discussion was renewed at 8 p.m. The special commission reported; and, finally, a resolution was almost unanimously passed to this effect, "That as the previous resolutions passed at Geneva, and repeated at succeeding conventions, had explicitly stated the principles of the Federation, as opposed to the proposed course, they could not now receive the suggestion." So, at great loss of time, and trial of patience, this old enemy was once more reinterred.

The Legislative Section resumed its deliberations, and Mr. Bunting's speech was the chief event of that session.

It was practical, logical, clear (even to nonlegal minds), and everybody was convinced of the necessity for a new International law to give power to arrest and punish the criminals now actively engaged in the modern White Slave Trade, but who defied detection because there does not exist legal authority to convict them even when caught red-handed.

Of the afternoon meeting, and the little storm which arose over the election of the president, and the final compromise which accepted the conditional presidency of our revered Mrs. Butler as the president if M. Laveleye really refused to continue, and the adieux, and the crowning meeting of all, which took place in the crowded theatre at night, what can be said? Only this, that as at the marriage feast the best was kept till last, so all said who heard the eloquent speeches of M. Steinheil from Alsace, of M. de Pressensé, Senator of France, and Mrs. Butler, that they excelled themselves and entranced the audience.

Mrs. Butler's brief but impressive speech, addressed mainly to the male audience, was as follows: In this Federation, she said, we stand on neutral ground in matters of religion, but come with me for a moment to the Temple at Jerusalem and behold a scene there. The Temple is crowded by men of all ages, from the father of the family to the youth little more than a boy, and there before them all is one woman, alone, bowed to the ground, her head bent hopelessly and helplessly, the gazing-stock of the pitiless throng. But near her we see another form—it is the Prophet of Nazareth. The crowd of men press round the two, eager to condemn her. They say how she has sinned—caught in the act. "What shall we do with her? The law says, Stone her, but what, Master, sayest thou?" Jesus of Nazareth stood long silent; at last came the words, so condemnatory in their very gentleness—"Let him that is without sin cast the first stone." In all ages, even to the present day, this scene has been repeated. The Church, Science, the State, Society, all say, "What shall we do with her?" "With her," mind you, not "with him," the partner of her sin; him they let go free, while they repeat the question, "What shall we do with her?" The law says, Stone her—the law of Society, the law of the Church. The same long silence! At last, in our days a voice begins to be heard. We are in a new era; the dawn begins, the woman is alone with Him, the only just judge. He speaks — He answers — and his answer vanquishes her accusers; they are speechless, they leave her to her God.

Now I would speak to you men. I beg you before you close your eyes in sleep this night to ask your own consciences what has been your part in this sad scene. If you flinch, if you refuse, you are not worthy the name of soldiers or of men. You are unworthy to wear the sword if you dare not first turn its point against yourselves. Without you men this woman would still have been pure, she would never have fallen. Think of it. Judge yourselves. I leave it to your conscience to answer.

Would that all English repealers had heard those speeches, and understood their burning words! Would that the battle-cry "To arms! To arms!" might speedily arouse and reunite the disbanded army of confederates in moral revolutionary movements in England and America! Then, indeed, would the eyes of the world rest upon English-speaking nations; and verily the ears of the world and the Governments thereof would tingle, and the reign of righteousness and truth be speedily ushered in. If English-speaking Christians everywhere would only act for one year the Gospel they profess to believe—would only work as they profess to pray, surely the kingdom of our Lord Christ would speedily come, and the nations would bow down to Him! Then should we be all included in one mighty International Federation of Abolitionists.

E. H. B.

A GERMAN CONFERENCE.

Last year a Conference of Christian workers took place at the mission-house, Blankenburg, Schwarzethal, Thüringen, on the principles of the Mildmay Conferences, and was attended with great blessing. This year the Conference took place on August 31 and September 1, and showed a large increase of attendance and interest. It was visited by ministers and laymen of various churches and denominations. Several of the leading evangelists in Germany took part. Dr. Ziemann presided.

The subjects under consideration were:—Our Position towards God, the Brethren, the World; Evangelisation of the World, and the Coming of the Lord. The spirit of unity was deeply touching, and every one left stirred to new devotion and service for the Lord. Surgeon-Major Latchford, of Aldershot, who was present, gave the testimony that, though he did not understand a word of German, he felt the power of the meetings, and was especially struck by the happy faces of those present. Much regret was caused by the absence of Dr. Baedeker, who is labouring in Russia.

This mission-house is open all the year round for visitors, and offers on moderate terms good accommodation. There have been during the past few Sundays English service, at the last of which Major Latchford gave testimony to Miss Daniell's work among soldiers at Aldershot.

LICENSING OF SIN IN INDIA.—A soldier who has spent some years in India, writing to us on this subject, makes some very serious allegations. He says that only 150 yards from the bungalow in which his company was stationed, opposite the left British Infantry lines, Peshawur, there was a row of small huts for native prostitutes. It is almost impossible for a soldier to escape from the importunities of these women, who in the bazaars and elsewhere are ever haunting and soliciting him. When moved to another place our correspondent says he found the condition of things just the same. Here, securely posted by the British Government, was a body of harpies only too ready to fan the lusts of the immoral, and to prey on those who might, but for such incitements, remain free from the fearful contamination surrounding them.

EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE.—The annual Conference of the British section of the Alliance will be held at Aberdeen on Tuesday, next week, and two following days. The Conference will open with a conversazione on Tuesday evening, followed by a public meeting, at which an address of welcome will be delivered by Principal Brown, D.D., on behalf of the local committee. Brief addresses by the President of the Alliance (Lord Polwarth) and others will follow. Morning, afternoon, and evening meetings will be held on the two following days, at which some of the speakers will be Professor Charteris, D.D., Rev. J. S. Russell, Dr. Sinclair Paterson, Rev. S C Morgan, D.D., Rev. W. S. Swanson (late of China), Rev. H. C. G. Moule, Principal Cairns, D.D., Rev. W. Wyatt Gill (late of Rarotonga, South Seas), Rev. C. M. Clemance, D.D., and Rev. J. M. Mitchell. The morning and afternoon meetings will be held in the hall of the Christian Institute, the evening gatherings will take place in the large music-hall adjoining, both buildings being in Union-street.

CHRISTIAN LIFE & CHRISTIAN EXPERIENCE

Four Days' Meetings

In connection with the above subject will (D.V.) be held in

THE ASSEMBLY ROOMS,
DEFOE ROAD, CHURCH STREET,
STOKE NEWINGTON, N.,
OCTOBER 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th.

BIBLE READINGS each Afternoon, at 3.30.
ADDRESSES each Evening, at 7.30.

Rev. F. D. Sanford,
Of Boston, U.S.A., who is associated with the well-known Dr. CHAS. CULLIS, of the "Work of Faith," Will Conduct the Meetings.

DR. WOODS SMYTHE
And others are expected to take part in the Services.

THAMES CHURCH MISSION

(Instituted 1844).

The Secretary will be very glad to preach or lecture, or attend Drawing Room Meetings on behalf of the Society. An excellent set of Dissolving Views may be arranged for.

The Committee ask not only for contributions, but also prayer, and this is in no conventional spirit. Recognising the intense reality of their service, they long for the earnest and hearty prayers of the Lord's people on behalf of Mission work on the River and in the Docks.

All who have the highest interest of Sailors at heart are cordially invited to join the T.C.M. Prayer Union, and pray for the prosperity of the Mission at least once a day. A card of membership will be supplied to all who join this Union.

Rev. H. BLOOMER, Secretary.
Offices: 31, New Bridge-street, E.C.

Tinted Covers, 2s. Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.
Presentation Edition.—Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

D. L. MOODY At Home.

HIS HOME AND HOME WORK.

Containing a description of the Educational Institutions established at Northfield and Mount Hermon: together with some Account of the various Christian Conferences, and Reports of some of the most striking of the Addresses.

WITH EIGHT FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE IMPORTANT EDUCATIONAL BUILDINGS.

"A delightful picture of the American Evangelist amidst home surroundings. His educational institutions at Northfield and Mount Hermon are described. To illustrate their spirit take the pledge card nailed inside most of the domitory rooms. 'God helping me, I, a disciple of Jesus Christ, agree: (1) To judge not; (2) To try to bring at least one soul to Christ each year; (3) To observe regular seasons for secret prayer, to be made more Christlike, and that in my work for others I may depend upon the Holy Spirit; (4) To engage in no amusement where the Saviour could not be my companion;' &c. The account of Christian Conferences, and helpful thoughts expressed at them, is very edifying. Mr. Moody's own 'Bible Nuggets' are among the best in the volume."—The Rock, July 29, 1887.

"This is a capital and useful book. Mr. Moody stamps all he does with his own vigorous personality, and a description of the work carried on near his home in Northfield, Mass., is interesting as evidencing the intensely practical character of one who is certainly no mere roving evangelist."

Methodist Recorder, July 7, 1887.

"This is no mere biography. It is a faithful, full, and fervid picture of Mr. Moody at work in his various organizations at his own home. . . . This beautifully got up and nicely illustrated volume ought to be in the hands of all Christian workers. It will be of the highest service to them. It teems with all kinds of useful hints suggested by an almost unique experience."

Oldham Chronicle, June 25, 1887.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

ESTABLISHED
A.D. 1793
FLANNELS. DRESS FABRICS. BLANKETS. SERGES.
HADDON & SON
TRADE MARK.
ROYAL WELLINGTON WOOLLEN COMPANY.

UNDER ROYAL & IMPERIAL PATRONAGE.

HADDON'S SHRINKLESS FLANNELS

PURE WOOL FLANNELS of every description, well shrunk, from the heavy makes suitable for Charitable Societies to those of the finest texture.
Prices from 6½d. yard.

"ROYAL CLAREMONT" FLANNELS are the only PURE WOOL Flannels manufactured that will NOT SHRINK WHEN WASHED.
Special Makes for Morning and Walking Gowns.
Patterns Post Free. Any Length Cut.
Carriage Paid on 20s. Parcels.

HADDON & SON (ROYAL WOOLLEN COMPANY), WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.

Fry's Cocoa

·Pure·
·Concentrated·
·Cocoa·

33 PRIZE MEDALS
awarded to the Firm

FRY'S
PURE
COCOA

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR A SAMPLE & TESTIMONIALS

J. S. FRY & SONS, BRISTOL, LONDON, and SYDNEY, N.S.W.,
Makers to the Queen and Prince of Wales.

CONSUMPTION CURABLE!

"MR. G. T. CONGREVE on
CONSUMPTION
AND ITS SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT.
Showing that direful disease to be curable in all its stages; with observations on
ASTHMA, CHRONIC BRONCHITIS, ETC."

SIXPENCE (Post Free), or Large Edition (cloth), 1s. 3d., from the Author, Coombe Lodge, Peckham, S.E., and Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.

The Twenty-second Series of Weekly Cases is now publishing, from August to October.

NOTICE TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN," WHO MAY BE PERSONALLY OR RELATIVELY INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED in this journal BEFORE, EVERY WEEK.

CASES FOR THIS WEEK.

"SAVED FROM AN EARLY GRAVE." TESTIMONY OF MR. CUNNINGHAM.

This gentleman writing me July 19, 1887, says:—"I thank my Heavenly Father for saving me from an early grave by your advice and medicine. Four doctors before that could do nothing for me. One said I should die in three months.

"You may use my name when and where you wish.—Samuel Cunningham, 69, Dover-street, Belfast.

CASE OF A CHRISTIAN WORKER—MR. E——. LETTER DATED MARCH 1, 1887.

Mr. Congreve has a letter which was addressed to the Editor of a leading religious weekly, from which the following is an extract:—

"I think, in justice to Mr Congreve, some grateful recognition of his services should appear. The weekly advertisements in The Christian World are sufficient evidence of the usefulness of his treatment, but many cases have come under my personal notice of those who have been greatly benefited thereby, and I have often heard persons say that they honestly believed it saved their lives at some critical period.

"I myself, a few years back, had several attacks of hæmorrhage from the lungs, and after being given up by my own doctor was several months in hospitals, but on trying Mr. Congreve's treatment found great benefit, with the result that I was able to resume business (from which I was absent twelve months), gradually progressing, till I now feel in good health. I am actively engaged in mission work, having conducted the services at a mission-hall for many months past, not being absent on a single occasion throughout this severe winter.

"Asking your favour of the insertion of this letter in justice to Mr. Congreve, and enclosing my card,—I am, Sir, yours faithfully, &c., Grateful.

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

Third Edition. Post Free, Twelve Stamps.

SKIN DISEASES.

ECZEMA, PSORIASIS, ACNE, &c.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE explaining the Causes, Treatment, and Cure of these Diseases; with directions for Diet and Baths. These Essays describe fully all the various forms of skin diseases. By Dr. S. BERRY NIBLETT. Published by Mr. Williams, 10, Oxford Terrace, Hyde Park, London.

FIVE GOLD MEDALS AWARDED.

Goddard's Plate Powder

NON-MERCURIAL.

FOR NEARLY HALF A CENTURY this Powder has sustained an unrivalled reputation throughout the United Kingdom and Colonies as the Best and Safest Article for Cleaning Silver and Electro Plate. Sold in Boxes 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Chemists, Ironmongers, &c.

CONTINENTAL & FOREIGN NOTES.

THE twenty-second Protestant Church in Rome is at present in course of erection.

SIR R. N. FOWLER has been informed in the Commons that the Pope and the propaganda have not secured a grant of land in New South Wales.

NEW YORK.—It is reported that Billy McGlory, for many years keeper of a gambling, drinking, and dancing house in Hester-street, has transformed his establishment into a place for mission labours, and has himself become a missionary after the example of the late Jerry McAuley.

GREENLAND.—Dr. Robert Brown, who has visited Greenland for botanical and geological investigations, says that mission stations are now scattered at intervals, and from being a simple missionary, the Greenland priest has become the "parish minister"; for there is not one professed pagan in all Danish Greenland.

CHINESE IN AUSTRALIA.—There is in Sydney, N.S.W., a Chinese Y.M.C.A., which was organised some months ago by Rev. George Soo-Hoo-Ten, a Chinese missionary, and now numbers one hundred members. It combines the advantages of a friendly society with those of a more strictly moral and religious character. It need hardly be said that no gambling or opium smoking is allowed, and in case of sickness or need help is afforded. We trust that the Association will have a lasting influence for good on those who visit the institution, and be the means of leading many of them to the Saviour.

A GRAND REVIVAL.—The Moravians have an important mission on the Moskito Coast, Central America, among a mixed population of Indians, Creoles, and Spaniards. It was begun in 1849. Down to 1881 it had been quite successful, and at the beginning of that year there were about a thousand communicants. A most remarkable religious awakening then occurred, all classes were seized with an overpowering conviction of sin. The result of that revival was the adding of 1,500 or more to the list of communicants. Few have fallen away, and the field of the mission has been greatly extended.

SIGNOR CAPELLINI has once more gone on his mission of visiting the grand reviews and campi d' instruzione which are being held at this time of the year. Fifteen years of experience have shown that religious literature is a great help in the diffusion of Christian truth. The spoken word reaches but the few comparatively of those soldiers of the King's army whose souls and welfare are so dear to Signor Capellini's heart; but Bibles, religious books, leaflets, &c., can be spread among the ranks by thousands; and, with a view to a copious distribution, he has gone forth, with six cases of books of all kinds, to his mission.

BUDDHISM IN JAPAN.—The Japanese Gazette regrets "to say that Buddhism cannot long hold its ground, and that Christianity must finally prevail throughout all Japan. Japanese Buddhism and Western sciences cannot stand together. They are inconsistent the one with the other." The Buddhists continue to make a most vigorous effort to counteract the spread of Christianity in Japan, and the Honganji sect was never so busy. One school in Kioto alone is to be rebuilt at a cost of twelve thousand dollars, and other Buddhistic seminaries and colleges are being started in various parts of the country.

IMPRISONMENT OF AN EVANGELIST.—In the Hungarian town of Mako a young baptized Jew, twenty-four years of age, Joseph Greger by name, has been summoned to appear before the civic tribunal to answer for having engaged in a propagandist work "in favour of a religion not recognised by the State." M. Greger, once an atheist, was converted to Evangelical Christianity by the perusal of a New Testament given him by a fellow-passenger in the course of a railway journey. The missioner and his associates have been condemned to an imprisonment of some weeks. The action was set on foot by a Catholic employer of labour, whose anger was roused by the refusal of a convert to work on Sundays.

"THE INDIAN METHODIST TIMES" states that in the three provinces of Su-chuan, Kwi-chow, and Yunnan, to which access has now been obtained by the annexation of Upper Burmah, there is a population of a hundred millions! And yet, in the second of these, at least there are millions of acres of fertile soil uncultivated for want of inhabitants. Our contemporary then asks whether it is a Utopian dream to think that the divided Methodists of some English town might come together, bury their differences, sell their superfluous meeting-houses, set free one or two preachers, and send them out to proclaim the Gospel. The question with its suggestion, on behalf of these millions, may have interest for others besides Methodists.

JAPAN, says The Japan Gazette, bids fair soon to rival the most favoured nations of the West in her religious progress, as well as in her advancement in educational and Governmental affairs. The Mildmay meetings, and all the great religious Societies' anniversaries held in England and America, in the month of May, have already their counterpart in Japan. This year the tide of these has been at its flood for nearly the entire month in Tokio and vicinity. The meetings may be said to have commenced with the fourth Biennial meeting of the General Assembly of the United Church in Japan, where fifty-seven churches, represented by their delegates, and a nearly equal number of natives and foreign ministers met in Tokio, and a large number of clergymen of other churches were invited to sit as corresponding members. The proceedings were marked by the utmost harmony. Following this was the fifth general Conference of the Japanese Evangelical Alliance, made up of representatives of all the Protestant churches in Japan. The meetings were very largely attended: the discussions were mostly on methods of church and mission work.

FORTHCOMING CONFERENCES.

SUBJECTS OF CONFERENCE.

Wakefield, September 20, 21, 22.

Subjects: Peace and Position, Surrender and Sanctification, Conflict and Conquest, Unction and Usefulness. Closing day—Evangelisation of the World. Mission subjects: Railway Mission, Bible Carriage Work, Church Army, North Africa, China Inland Mission.

Dundee, September 20, 21, 22.

Subject: The Man of God completely furnished by the Word—(1) for the New Life, (2) for Holiness, (3) for Service.

Forthcoming Meetings.

The Evangelisation Society will send evangelists to any part of England, Scotland, and Wales on due notice. Hon. Sec., 21, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.

The Irish Evangelisation Society will send evangelists to any part of Ireland on due notice. Apply to Mr. J. Barton, Hon. Sec., Dundalk, Ireland.

The Church Army will send evangelists (working-men) to any clergyman on due notice, for short or long missions. Hon. Sec., 128 and 130, Edgware-road, W.

The Metropolitan Tabernacle Evangelists' Association will send lay preachers and evangelists to any chapel or hall of any evangelical denomination in London. Hon. Sec., 121, Camberwell New-road, S.E.

Y.M.C.A., New Metal Exchange, Whittington-avenue, E.C. — Daily Prayer-meeting, 1 to 2, St. Peter's, Cornhill. Gospel services at Y.M.C.A. Mission Hall, Bermondsey, Sundays, 7 p.m., and Thursdays, 8 p.m. Mission work at Whitechapel, Limehouse, Bermondsey, Canning Town, &c.

Conference Hall and Y.M.C.A., Stratford, E.—Sunday evenings in September, 7 p.m., Mr. Finlay Gibson. Young Men's Foreign Mission Society, Mondays, 8.30 p.m.; Tuesday, 8.15 p.m., young men's Bible-reading; Wednesday, Tract Society, 8.30 p.m.

Y.M.C.A., The Priory, 193, Upper-street, N.—Thursday, September 15, 8.30 p.m., address, Rev. Talbot Hindley; Sunday, Sept. 18, 3.15, Bible-class, subject, Eph. i. 15—23, Mr. S. Pewtress; 8 p.m., open air meeting; 8.30 p.m., evangelistic meeting; Wednesday, 6 to 10, welcome to strangers and anxious inquirers.

Zenana Medical College.—The Saturday Bible-reading and Prayer-meeting will be resumed on Sept. 24.

Mr. Ned Wright will preach on Sundays during September at Earlham Hall (formerly Maberly Chapel), Balls Pond-road, at 7 p.m.

Edinburgh Castle, Limehouse, E.—Sunday, Sept. 18, 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., Mr. H. Grattan Guinness; 3 p.m., Rev. Henry Bright.

Great Assembly Hall, Mile-end-road, E.—Sunday, September 18, 11 a.m., and 6.30 p.m., Mr. Joseph Clarke.

Clapton Hall, Cazenove-road, Upper Clapton, E.—Sundays, 6.30 p.m., Fridays, 7.30 p.m., Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, during September.

Children's Special Service Mission.—Mr. J. H. Greene at St. Leonard's and Hastings from Sept. 9. Mr. Spiers, now at Dover.

Y.M.C.A., Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C. — Mr. Henry Thorne will give an address entitled, "From the Stage to the Cross; or, the Story of my Life," on Thursday, October 6, 8 p.m. Dr. Henry Grattan Guinness will commence on October 16 a four months' mission in Exeter Hall on Sunday nights.

Union Hall, Carlisle-street, Edgware-road, N.W. — Meetings for praise, prayer, and conference, and for hearing accounts of the Lord's work in London and the country will be held on Thursday, September 22, 4 p.m.; tea, 5.30 p.m.; evening meeting, 7 p.m.

Home of Industry, 60, Commercial-street, Spitalfields, E.—Monthly meeting for Christian workers, Wednesday, September 21; tea at 6 p.m.; meeting, 7 p.m. Mr. Gawin Kirkham will give an address, subject, "The Example of Jesus in Work and Worship."

Open-air Mission.—Mr. C. H. Spurgeon will address open-air preachers on "Winning Souls for Christ" at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, on Monday evening, October 3. Tickets may be had at the office, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, W.C.

St. George's Hall, Langham-place, W.—F. C. Bland will preach during September, Sundays, 11 a.m., 7 p.m.; Wednesdays, Burlington Hall, 8 p.m.

Christian Life and Christian Experience. — Four days' meetings in the Assembly Rooms, Defoe-road, Church-st., Stoke Newington, N., Oct. 4, 5, 6, 7. Bible-readings, 3 30 p.m.; addresses, 7.30 p.m. Rev. F. D. Sanford, of Boston, U.S.A., Dr. Woods Smythe, and others.

Coming Conferences.—Wakefield, September 20—22. Dundee (Kinnaird Hall), September 20—22. Evangelical Alliance, Aberdeen, September 20 — 22. Yorkshire Evangelical Union, autumn Conference, Bridlington, September 22 and 23. Salisbury, September 26 to October 2. Glasgow (Queen's Rooms), September 27—30. Dublin (Christian Union Bldgs.), September 27—29; Y.W.C.A., 30. Blackheath Y.W.C.A., Alexandra Hall, Secretaries and Members, October 3—5. Belfast, Convention for the Promotion of Practical Holiness, October 3—8. Clifton, Bristol (Victoria Rooms), October 4—6. Leamington, October 18—20.

Notices.

Will Mr. Jas. L. Hunt, Bristol, please send full address.

Communications Received with Thanks.—W.S.W. E.J.B. J.A.J. L.F. L.C.K.N. F.C.B. M.F.N. E.B. A.H.G. C.C.L. E.L.R. L.C.M. L.O'C. A.V.W. J.D. M.B. E.W.M. F.B.M. A.L.S. H.E.B. R.D.F. C.J.A. W.L. J.E.L. R.G.W.R. R.C. H.P. A.W. G.H.S. J.L.S. D.S. H.M. A.G.B. L.P. G.K. W.W. L.M.H. J.G.H. C.P.T.L. H.V. R.C.B. R.B. S.H.W. J.W.A. J.E.B. G.M. R.D. R.C. W.I. H.H.E. J.T.D. G.F. R.B.P. J.W.L. E.H.B. J.B. A.B.P. L.L. C.M. R.B. J.P.H. M.L.T. M.C. C.F. W.N.C. F.G. J.B.H. L.L. L.P. J.H. F.S.Y. J.B. W.L.L. J.D. C.M. H.E. C.R.H. T.D. E.H.K. F.G. H.T. J.S. W.G. G.F.T. F.H.W.

Applicants for Tracts. — A. Tull, 40, High-street, Andover; F. C. Young, 151, Cable-street, St. George's, E.; T. Glover, Grange House, Eastbourne; M. C. Coates, Gloucester, West Bournemouth; Mrs. Brenton, Dodbrooke, Kingsbridge, Devon; C. Brabazon, 12, Bridge-street, Birkenhead, Cheshire; A. Ferrie, 49, Virginia street, Glasgow; Pastor F. E. Marsh, Sunderland.

[As it is found that infidels and others send tracts to the persons whose names are inserted here, it is most important that all books and papers received should be carefully read before being given away.]

Subscriptions Received by Messrs. Morgan & Scott to Monday, September 12, 1887.

 We would respectfully urge all our friends, when remitting to us, to make Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders payable to Morgan & Scott, and to cross them "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss of same.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders, not by stamps.

	£	s.	d.
Dr. Barnardo's Homes—E.K. 3s; A.D. £5; L.H. £1; Thank-offering, £2 2s.; Rho. 10s.; Well Wisher, £2; B. £1 10s.; C.H.S. £2 ..	14	5	0
Mildmay Mission to Jews—R.P. 5s. 6d.; Misses C. £1	1	5	6
St. Giles' Christian Msn.—C.W.H. £5; A.D. £1	6	0	0
Aged Pilgrims' Friend Society—C.W.H. £3; A.D. £1	4	0	0
Sailors' Welcome Home (Miss Child)—C.W.H...	5	0	0
Central Vigilance Society—C.W.H.	3	0	0
China Inland Mission—C.W.H. £5; Meta, £2..	7	0	0
Mr. Fenn's Work, Spain—C.W.H.	3	0	0
Mr. Rabinowitz's Work—C.W.H...	3	0	0
Bible and Colportage Society, Ireland—C.W.H..	3	0	0
Day in the Country Fund—Elitta, 5s.; Misses C. £1; M.E.B. 5s...	1	10	0
Miss Sharman's Orphans' Home—Elitta	0	6	6
British Syrian Schools—Misses C.	1	0	0
Home for Aged Blind Chrsn. Women—Misses C.	1	0	0
Miss Leigh's Work, Paris—Misses C.	1	0	0
Kabyle and Berber Mission—Misses C.	0	10	0
Girls' Orphge., Clifden, Connemara—Misses C..	0	10	0
Free Distribution of the Scriptures—Misses C ..	1	0	0
Mrs. Mumford's Work, Philippopolis—Misses C.	1	0	0
The Christian Tract Fund—J.H.	0	0	6
Rescue Society—A.D...	1	0	0
George-yard Ragged Schools—A.D.	1	0	0
E. London Training Institution—A.D. £1; (Congo Mission) Meta, £2..	3	0	0
Gray's-yard Casuals—Friend..	0	2	6
Ragged-sch. Union—Friend, 2s. 6d.	0	2	6
Bristol Orphan Houses—Anon., £5; C L.M.T., £	6	0	0
Anti-Slavery Society—E.V.	1	0	0
Dock Labourers (Mr. Coleman)—C.H...	0	5	0
Sufferers by Fire at Exeter—E.T...	1	0	0
Families of Men lost in "Breeze"—Collected M.M.M.	0	5	6
Mr. Fegan's Boys' Home—C.H.S...	2	0	0
Friendless and Fallen—C.H.S.	2	0	0
Theatrical Mission—C.H.S.	2	0	0
Destitute Children's Dinner Society—C.H.S. ..	1	0	0
Birds' Nest Mission, Dublin—C.H.S.	2	0	0
Mr. Toye's Orphanage—C.H.S.	1	0	0
Bridge of Hope, Ratcliff—C.H.S...	1	0	0
Scripture Readers' Society, Ireland—C.H.S. ..	2	0	0
Mons. Coillard's Zambesi Mission—S...	0	10	0
Damage to Gospel Tents by Storm—E.A.	0	10	0
Railway Mission—E.A.	0	10	0
My Little Cripple—T.H. 10s.; Widow's Mite, 2s. 6d...	0	12	6
Suppression of Opium Traffic with China (Travelling Agent)—C.M. 10s.; W.S. £1	1	10	0
	£87	15	6

[Advertisements.]

Spitalfields Gospel Mission—Scotland, Box of Clothes; C.H., Great Yarmouth, 5s.

Anxious Inquirers—Praise is offered for the many who have written lately. All are earnestly invited to write. Address—Evangelist, Clapham, S.W. (1 Tim. i. 15).

Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen—Miriam, £5.

GEORGE YARD RAGGED SCHOOLS, &c., Whitechapel, E.

GEORGE HOLLAND sincerely thanks F. M. P. for £1; "Gertrude," for Cuttings from Plants, &c., for the gardens, at the "Homes," and at the Orphanage, so acceptable.

The Infant Day Nursery. Free Ragged Day Schools, Classes for Rough Boys. Sunday and Week-evening Schools. Band of Hope. Children's Services. Day Industrial Classes for Boys. Mutual Industrial Classes for Lads. Library for Lads. Classes, Meetings, and Library for Girls. Mission to Inebriate Women. Mothers' Meetings. Women's Bible Classes. Temperance Meetings. Men's Bible Classes. Room to Room Visitation. Servants' Training Institute for Motherless Girls, and other missionary agencies in operation.

Friends are invited to visit the institution any day but Saturday.

Post-office Orders should be made payable at 66, High-street, Whitechapel, E.. Letters and Parcels should be addressed to GEORGE HOLLAND, The Ragged Schools, George Yard, High-street, Whitechapel, London, E.

THE BENEVOLENT OR STRANGERS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

Treasurer, Ald. Sir R. N. Fowler, Bart., M.P.
J. H. Anderson, Esq., Chairman.
Clarence Smith, Esq., J.P., Hon. Secretary.

For 101 years this Institution has visited and relieved the destitute sick, by an entirely unpaid agency, consisting of over 240 Christian men and women.

Funds are urgently needed.

The Committee will be thankful for the Society being remembered in the testamentary arrangements of the benevolent.—Office of the Society, 52, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

ANXIETY OF SOUL. — Any to whom the way of salvation is not clear, are invited to communicate, either personally or by letter, to W. S., care of Evangelistic Secretary, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

CONVALESCENT HOMES, at Bournemouth and Sandgate.—For particulars apply to Mr. JOHN JAMES JONES, Director of the London Samaritan Society, 98, High-street, Homerton, London, E.

THE TYNDALE MEMORIAL CHURCH will be "a witness for the Reformation." It will stand between the Homerton Roman Catholic Church at one end of the Brookfield-road, and the St. Augustine's Ritualistic Church at the other end. Nearly five hundred pounds is already subscribed. The total cost of the entire premises will be £1000. Donations should be sent immediately. "The King's business requires haste."—Rev. JOHN FLETCHER PORTER, 59, Driffield-road, North Bow, London, E.

BARBICAN MISSION TO THE JEWS, E.C.—Our Mission having for some time past been suffering through the death of some of our warmest supporters, as also through the depression of trade, felt alike by many organisations, we find it needful to make a special effort for increased funds on behalf of our work in the East Central District, by holding a Sale of Useful and Fancy Articles at the end of October (D.V.). The kind contribution of articles by Christian friends towards that object, or other help, is earnestly requested in the interest of God's ancient people.—Parcels to be sent to Mrs. WARSCHAWSKI, 11, Torriano-avenue, Camden-road, London, N.W.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF CLOTHING for distribution among the poorer patients and their families are earnestly solicited by the Committee of the Ladies' Samaritan Society, National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, Queen-square, Bloomsbury.—Parcels should be addressed to Miss S. WHITMORE, Clerk to the Ladies' Committee, at the Hospital. Donations in money will also be thankfully received.

FUEL FOR POOR.—While Coals and Coke are still cheap, will the readers of THE CHRISTIAN again help our Mission Committee to place a substantial order for same, for distribution in small sacks among the deserving East End Poor during the coming winter months. By purchasing at once, great saving effected. Every gift will be promptly acknowledged by Rev. J. W. ATKINSON, 308, Old Ford-road, London, E.

SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION on the Continent.—Special fund devoted to this work now exhausted. Seventeen missionaries employed, but Committee without means to pay salaries falling due, and other grants already pledged. Appeals therefore, to all friends of religious education for immediate and generous assistance. Contributions gratefully received by Mr. J. E. TRESSIDER, Financial Secretary, Sunday School Union, 56, Old Bailey, E.C.

THE SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING FEMALE WELFARE has several excellent Matrons, useful Maids and others on the books, now waiting for engagement. Also well qualified Governesses and Companions. For application an Introduction required from a member, or Evangelical Clergyman.—Miss HUTCHINSON, 22A, Devonshire-street, Harley-street, W.

HOME FOR BLIND CHILDREN, College-avenue, Hackney.—A Jubilee Extension Fund has been started to obtain a larger house, which is absolutely necessary for the health of the children.—Contributions gratefully received by Miss RYE, or Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT.

BUNYAN BICENTENARY.—Powis Hall, Talbot-road, Bayswater. A Lecture, entitled, "John Bunyan and his Book," will be given (D.V.) on Monday, September 26, 1887, at 7.30 p.m., by Mr. FRANK H. WHITE. Illustrated by many beautiful and costly Dissolving Views, all hand-painted, specially prepared for this Lecture. Admission 6d. Proceeds to Building Fund.

MRS. BOTTING earnestly appeals for Warm Clothing, Blankets, or contributions to get them, for the extra little orphans received in her Home.—23, Ridley-road, Dalston, London.

THE PARKHALL CONVENTION will be held (D.V.) on the 21st, 22nd, and 23rd instant. Mr. Bowker, the Rev. Wm. Haslam, Rev. Evan Hopkins, and others will take part in the proceedings. Conveyances will meet visitors at Polmont Station.

HOME HOSPITAL, 9 and 32, Lupus-street, St. George's-square, S.W., for Ladies and Children (medical, surgical, and confinement cases). Private wards. Ladies taken as dispensing and midwifery students. The Trustees ask help for free bed.—Address LADY SUPERINTENDENT.

URGENT APPEAL.—CLOTHING.—Help earnestly solicited for the many necessitous and invalid gentlewomen and children known to Miss FAITHFULL, The Institute, 136, Regent-street. The need is great. See Report.

FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED for the Enlargement of a Sunday-school carried on by a working-man. Contributions will be thankfully acknowledged.
J. FIDGE, 5, McKerrell-road, Peckham.

THE LONDON SAMARITAN SOCIETY for Convalescent Homes at Sandgate and Bournemouth.—Miss H. M., 5s.; Mrs. M., 5s.; Mr. H. C., 5s.; J. S. W., Esq., £1 1s.

THE BETHSHAN, Leeds.—Meetings for Holiness and Divine Healing, Sundays and Tuesdays, 2.30 p.m.; Thursdays, 7.30 p.m. Christians wishing for teaching on Divine Healing, can be received into the house.—Miss GIBBS, 10, St. John's-terrace, Bible Vue-road, Leeds.

DIVINE HEALING and Power for Service.—Meetings conducted by the Rev. JOHN ALLEN or his workers. Bishopsgate (32, Spital-square), Tuesdays, 7.30 p.m. Camberwell Gate (The Hall, Horsley-street). Tuesdays, 7 p.m. Hackney (Trinity Church, Triangle, Mare-street), Sundays, 3 p.m.; Mondays, 7 p.m.; on Fridays, Baptism of the Spirit, 7 p.m.
Postal address, Balclutha Lodge, Southgate, N.

Educational.

SEASIDE EDUCATION.—An Officer can highly recommend a Christian Home School at Southsea for a few Girls of good position. Pupils have successfully passed R.A.M. and R.C.P. Examinations. Terms very moderate. Terms 40 guineas to fill a vacancy.—INSPECTOR-GENERAL GORDON, R.N., View Bank, Brechin, Forfarshire, N.B.

HOME SCHOOL for Girls. Limited number of Boarders. Good education, based on Bible teaching, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness." Pupils prepared for the various Exams. Kindergarten for Juniors. Terms inclusive. Recommended by R. C. Morgan and parents of pupils.—Mrs. SILVESTER, Clarence House, Pellatt-grove, Wood Green.

SUPERIOR EDUCATION for young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. WATKINS, F.S.Sc., Dyreham College, North Finchley.—Pupils prepared for public examinations. Fees, including music, French, and drawing, 14 and 16 guineas per term, prepaid.

"I have the greatest pleasure in recommending Mrs. Watkins' School to parents seeking a good Christian home and a high-class education for their daughters. The School is situated in a fine healthy neighbourhood."—Josiah Spiers, Children's Special Service Mission.

MORAVIAN LADIES' SCHOOL, St. Peter's, Bedford.—Accommodation for a limited number of Boarders and Day Pupils. Pupils prepared for Cambridge Local Examinations. For terms and all particulars, apply to
Miss SEIFFERTH, Principal.

BELLE VUE, AMBLESIDE.—Good School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. FLEMING. Healthy and beautiful situation; large rooms, garden, tennis. Careful Christian training, and thorough teaching. Cambridge Examinations. Resident foreign and English governesses. Masters. 50 to 60 guineas. Reduced terms for children under 12.

HIGH-CLASS CHRISTIAN SCHOOL for the Daughters of Gentlemen. — Miss PENN receives a limited number of pupils. Efficient resident governesses and visiting masters. Individual Christian influence. Home comforts. Large house and garden. Entire charge taken of pupils from abroad. Languages and music specialities. Young Ladies are also received to pursue certain studies only, or to take lessons in dressmaking, cooking, &c.
St. John's de Ocklynge, Eastbourne.

BRIGHTON.—High-class School for Girls. Healthy situation. Home comforts. Every educational advantage. Terms moderate. Good references to clergymen and parents of pupils.—The Misses NORTON, Farndon House, Stanford-road, Brighton.

ILFRACOMBE, 2, Oxford-park.—Home School for Girls. Principal, Mrs. RICHARD WARE. Careful Christian training and thorough teaching. Motherly care taken of delicate children. Good references.

SOUND EDUCATION FOR GIRLS.—Ascham School, Oxford.—University masters. Special advantages for science, languages, music, and art. Arrangement for Anglo-Indian children. Terms moderate. Vacancy for governess-student. Reference kindly permitted to Rev. Canon Christopher, Oxford.—Address, PRINCIPAL.

EDUCATION.—Germany.—Count and Countess Korff highly recommend Fräulein HERMANNI'S School in Wiesbaden (formerly Hermanni and Brügelmann). Fräulein HERMANNI receives a limited number of pupils. There is a resident French governess, and best professors attend. Excellent Christian influence. Great advantages for languages, music, singing, and painting.—Fräulein HERMANNI, Dotzheimer Strasse 10.

New Hall College, SUTTON COLDFIELD, WARWICKSHIRE.

Head Master, Mr. W. P. HUTTON, B.A.; Second, Mr. S. H. ALLISON, B.A., with other efficient Resident and Visiting Tutors. Twenty acres of grounds and woods. Special classes in Chemistry, Carpentering, Engineering, Shorthand, and Drawing. Distinguished successes in London Matric., Oxford Local, College of Preceptors', and Science and Art Department Exams., and above all, sound Christian training.
Principal, FREDK. W. W. HOWELL.

FRENCH EVANGELICAL HIGH SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Terms moderate and strictly inclusive.—Applications to be made to the HON. SECRETARY, Springfield, Reigate.

KEMPLEY HOUSE, Bristol.—Mrs. PRESCOTT, Principal. — Prospectus sent. The education of Her Majesty the Queen was conducted on the principles of moral education; and Her Majesty has been pleased to accept a copy of Moral Education by Rev. P. Prescott, and Sir Henry Ponsonby has received the Queen's commands to thank him for the book. A GOVERNESS-PUPIL wanted.

COOMBE LODGE SOUTH, Hamilton-road, Reading. — Miss PUGH receives into her parents' home a few Girls for instruction. Domestic arrangements those of a comfortable home. Situation healthy. Large play garden.

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, Warminster, Wilts.—Healthy neighbourhood, house detached, tennis lawn, &c. Masters from Clifton, Bath, Salisbury. The usual Public exams. Resident French governess. A few vacancies.—For prospectus, &c., address the Misses CRUSE, Cambridge House.

SUPERIOR EDUCATIONAL advantages for young Ladies, combined with Christian training and home comforts. Little boys also received, with entirely separate supervision. House beautifully situated in its own grounds. Lovely scenery. Health resort for delicate children. Inclusive terms, 15 to 21 guineas per annum.
PRINCIPAL, Broomfield Villa, Henfield, Sussex.

EASTBOURNE. — Ladies' College (for the daughters of Gentlemen). Established 1871. A few Boarders received. The College is examined by the University of Cambridge. Referees, Rev. W. Bathurst, vicar of Holy Trinity Church, parents of pupils and others.—For prospectus, &c., apply to the PRINCIPALS, the Misses Deacon, Grassington-road, Eastbourne.

HAMMERSMITH HIGH SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.—Pupils successful at Cambridge, St. Andrews, and Royal Academy Local Examinations, and London Matriculation. Boarders received in the house of the Head Mistress at moderate terms.—Full particulars on application to Miss MARY E. PAGE.

BOURNEMOUTH.—MOIRA COLLEGE for Ladies.—Principals: Miss CONNAH and Miss INGHAM. Children requiring care receive especial attention. References to well-known gentlemen, and to the parents of past and present pupils. Prospectuses on application.

BRIGHTON.—2, Sussex-square.—Miss GOULTY'S Educational Home for Young Ladies. Terms vary according to the individual requirements, and the accomplishments needed. The Rev. J. B. Figgis, of Brighton, is kindly willing to bear his testimony to the School. Pupils can prepare for the Cambridge Examinations.

SPA, BELGIUM.—A few young gentlemen would find a comfortable Home, with the advantage of learning French and German, in a Protestant family.—Apply to Monsieur REUTER, Professeur, Charmilles, Spa. References kindly permitted to Monsieur le Pasteur, Nicolet, Spa.

MOUNT RADFORD SCHOOL, Exeter.—Boys are prepared for business or professional life. Many matriculate at the various universities. During the last twelve years pupils have obtained more than two hundred certificates (many passing in honours) in the Oxford, Cambridge, College of Preceptors', and London University Examinations. Special attention paid to juniors, who are taught by a lady. The Word of God is made the sole basis of a careful moral and spiritual training, and none but Christian teachers are employed. Cricket, athletics, &c.
Head Master, E. H. VINE, M.C.P.

HOME AND EDUCATION for the Sons of Gentlemen under twelve years of age, 74, Broadhurst-gardens, South Hampstead. Principals, the Misses DOUGLAS MCMILLAN, assisted by three certificated lady teachers. Pupils prepared for the public schools. The children of Anglo-Indians received for education and entire management during absence of parents. Referees: The Venerable Archdeacon Philpot, Surbiton; the Recorder of London; and James Ewen Mathieson, Esq., Mildmay.

CHIPPENHAM. — An excellent School for Boys. Healthy and beautiful country. First-class gymnasium. Tennis ground. A bathing place near. Greatest attention paid to character and Bible teaching. Terms very moderate.
H. B. BARDWELL, Orwell House.

SELECT GIRLS' SCHOOL,

Cambridge House, 113, Green-lanes, London, N.

Christian training. Motherly care. Home comforts Healthful situation. Preparation for Public Examinations, at which all the Pupils entered last Christmas passed. Reference to Rev. Gordon Calthrop, 3, Highbury-grange, N.; Doctor Pittock, Margate; and to other parents of present pupils.—Further particulars on application to the Principal,
Mrs. BRODIE.

HARRINGAY SCHOOL, Green-lanes, N.—Sound Christian education, for professional or commercial pursuits. Careful supervision, plentiful dietary, healthy locality, easy of access. Terms moderate from entry. Principal, J. S. COOMBES.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL.

WELLINGTON, SHROPSHIRE.

Principal: DR. CRANAGE, M.A.

EDUCATION.—High-class School for Young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs. HALE, A.C.P., 1, Carlton-mansions, Clapham-rise, London, S.W.—Visiting masters, certificated governesses, and careful personal supervision with home comforts. Pupils prepared for any examination. Instruction made pleasant, and no overworking countenanced. French, German, Latin, drawing, class-singing, and drilling are included in the school fees, which are moderate. Highly recommended by parents of pupils, and Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. Prospectus and testimonials on application to Principal.

"Balham, May 29, 1880.

"I am very reluctant to recommend schools, because I am not always able to judge of the interior arrangements; but in this case I have the utmost pleasure in standing as reference. I can highly commend Mrs. Hale, and have the greatest confidence in her capacity, management, and character, having known her for several years."
C. H. SPURGEON.

LOWESTOFT. — CLAREMONT HOUSE.—The Misses BIGNOLD receive a limited number of gentlemen's daughters as Resident Pupils. Careful Christian training, with thorough education and home comforts. References kindly permitted to the Bishop of Exeter; the Rev. J. B. Pelham, Norwich; J. C. Worthington, Esq., Lowestoft; E. Courthorpe Todd, Esq., Macready House, Covent-garden; and other friends and parents of pupils.

YOUR BOYS will have a happy Home and sound Education with Mr. and Mrs. DIXON, Middle-class School, Kingston-on-Thames. Christian influence; unlimited diet; beautiful neighbourhood. 20 to 25 guineas.

MORAVIAN BOYS' SCHOOL, Ockbrook, near Derby.—Pupils prepared for London Matriculation and other examinations. Ockbrook presents the advantages of central position, and beautiful rural neighbourhood.—For prospectus apply to Rev. J. M. MALLALIEU.

HIGHBURY HOUSE SCHOOL, St. Leonard's-on-Sea.—Boys prepared for commerce, public schools, or the universities. Upper, middle, and preparatory departments. Seven resident masters. The junior division taught by ladies. Delicate boys, requiring a mild climate, receive every kindness and constant care. The autumn term will commence on September 17.—For prospectus apply to Mrs. DUFF, the Lady Principal.

PREPARATORY SCHOOL (near Brighton).—Home comforts. Christian training. Special attention to delicate, backward boys. Visiting masters. Preparation for public schools. Twenty guineas. Indian children received.—LADY PRINCIPAL, Hamilton Lodge, Hurstpierpoint, Sussex.

WINCHESTER HOUSE, Kingston-hill, Surrey.—Mr. LUSCOMBE, M.R.C.P., receives Gentlemen's Sons, and to the advantage of a thorough education (modern and classical), careful training, and individual attention, adds the comforts of a very healthy, well-ordered home. Terms moderate. Autumn term, September 19.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED ON HIGH GROUND, WITH VIEWS OF THE SEA, on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and a first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this school that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS, together with the papers of Examinations passed and Honours gained, should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. THORN, Paddington, London.

NEW COLLEGE, Cliftonville, Margate.—Principal: Rev. G. H. JONES, F.A.S. High-class education, with individual attention. Prep. for exams., and commerce. Christian training. Splendid premises, loftily situated, close to sea. Moderate fees.

BRIGHTON.— EDUCATION.— Mr. ALFRED CLARK, B.A. (Lond.), receives about twenty Sons of Gentlemen, from seven to fourteen years of age. Terms from 45 guineas. Pupils are thoroughly grounded in English subjects, Latin, Greek, French, German, and mathematics, and have been successful at Cambridge Local and other Examinations. Personal care, Christian influence, and a healthy, happy home.—85, Buckingham-road, Brighton.—Referees: Rev. W. Poole Balfern, Brighton; Rev. F. Cruse, Christ Church Vicarage, Worthing; Rev. J. B. Figgis, Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, Harley House, Bow-road, London; Rev. W. Haslam, 66, Marina, St. Leonard's. Term commences on Friday, Sept. 9.

THE PRINCIPAL of a high-class Private School wishes to meet with a Christian Graduate in Arts as a Junior Master, capable also of taking the higher forms in Latin and Greek.—Address, stating qualifications, &c., HEADMASTER, 13, Rose-street, Newgate-street, E.C.

EDUCATION IN HIGHGATE.—The Rev. G. D. BARTLET, M.A., receives ten Pupils (from 10 years) to board and educate for Commercial or Professional life, or for Public Schools. Individual attention, thorough grounding, careful Christian training, with the comforts of a superior home, are afforded. Fees from 20 guineas per term. Highgate is strongly recommended by the medical profession.

THE RECTOR of a parish, one hour from London, M.A. Oxford, married, can receive one Boy to educate. Preparation for public school or examination, or as required. Training for God on Evangelical principles.—RECTOR, care of P. C. F. Tatham, Esq., 11, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.

SEAFORD COLLEGE, SUSSEX.

A High-class Private School at Moderate Fees.

The finest and healthiest site on the South Coast. Twenty acres of grounds close to the beach. University masters. Good moral, physical, and intellectual training.

All information from the PRINCIPAL.

UN PENSIONNAT Delles. Françaises (fondé 1863) recevrait deux sœurs ou cousines (l'aînée au pair).—Ecrire pour details, FERRIER-ROMAN LACROZETTE, Valence, Drôme. References échangees. Cours du College. Prix modérés. Ladies received.

LITTLE BOYS, Brighton.—Inkerman House, Lansdowne-road. The Misses ASHBY prepare young gentlemen for senior schools. The pupils are governed by kindness, and cheerfulness is encouraged. Careful instruction. Constant supervision. Home comforts. The situation is very healthy, near the sea.

HOME, WITH THOROUGH TEACHING, offered to a well-connected Girl, for 36 guineas per annum, in a small finishing school, South Coast, to fill an unexpected vacancy. References to clergymen and officers of high rank, whose daughters are pupils.—LADY PRINCIPAL, 46, Medora-road, Elm-park, Brixton-rise, S.W.

IN THE COUNTRY.—A Gentleman wishes to place his Son, aged 17, with a Clergyman, Minister, or Tutor, of decided Christian character and Evangelical views, residing in the country, to prepare for London University Matriculation.—Reply, stating particulars and terms, to B., care of Mr. Collins, 319, Oxford-street, W.

EDUCATION.—A young Lady, experienced in teaching, wishes for an engagement in a good family of Evangelical sentiments, where intellectual culture and Christian principles will be appreciated. She holds a diploma, is certificated, and has resided two years in France. References exchanged, and good salary.
F. E. L., 9, Norfolk-crescent, Bath.

EXPERIENCED GOVERNESS (27), Architect's Daughter, Nonconformist, seeks re-engagement. Thorough English, arithmetic, fluent French (France), German (Germany), Latin, music, singing, harmony, drawing, needlework. Three years' reference. £50 to £60.—E. HOOPER, Governess' Home and Institute, Compton-terrace, London, N. No charge to parents. English and Continental schools recommended. Vacancy for Governess-Student in high-class Hanoverian school. Premium 24 guineas. Also, two sisters can be received in same school on reduced terms. Escort next month. English references.

AN EFFICIENT GOVERNESS, Practical Housekeeper, or Companion. Held similar positions. References. English, French (eight years in France), German, music, needlework, cooking. Moderate salary.
Miss BAYLEY, 28, Kilburn-park-road, N.W.

A GERMAN LADY (19), well educated, desires a situation as Governess in an English family. English, French, and music.—Apply, in first instance, to Mr. SCHWEICHHARDT, 129, Cheapside, London, E.C.

KINDERGARTEN.—A young Lady seeks an engagement as Resident Kindergarten Teacher in a good school. Country or seaside preferred. Elementary Froebel certificate. Good testimonials.—B. P., Miss Moffat, 14, Blythe-villas, West Kensington-park, W.

GOVERNESS, well connected, desires re-engagement, small school or family. Certificated English, French, music, drawing, and mathematics. Elementary Latin. Knowledge of Kindergarten. Children under 12. Christian home desired.
IMMEDIATE, 11, Frederick-place, Clifton, Bristol.

FRENCH LADY, experienced in teaching, desires engagement in Christian family as Governess. English, French, music. Highest references. Moderate salary.—C. McDOUGALL, 56, Keston-road, Peckham Rye, London.

A FRENCH LADY, used to travelling, as Companion for this winter. Board and lodging required. Good references, both English and French.
M. U., Maison de la poste, Chabeuil, Drome.

LADY, certificated, experienced, and highly recommended, teaches thorough English, French (Paris), music, singing, drawing and painting, and needlework. Used to parish work. Resident. Good remuneration.
R. H., 1, Edwardes-terrace, Kensington, W.

A LADY IS ANXIOUS to get a situation for a Swiss Governess in December. Teaches music, and four languages. Scotland preferred. Highly recommended. Diplomée.
Mrs. COLE, Stoke Lyne, Exmouth.

A YOUNG TUTOR required for little Boys, eight and nine years. Daily or afternoons. Must be Christian, just from college.—Apply by letter, SIGMA, 4, Cranley-gardens, S.W.

PARENTS, GUARDIANS.—Home offered, with education, every attention, Christian training to young children by a Lady, who with sisters conducts small select Day School. Terms moderate.—ALPHA, 32, Mall-road, Hammersmith.

TUTORSHIP.—Assistant Tutorship or Secretaryship required by Oxford Graduate (married). Some years' experience in tuition. Home or Continent.
W., 3, Zingari-villas, Gipsy-road, West Norwood.

MARRIED GRADUATE prepares Backward Boys for different examinations. Home comforts.—M. A., 14, Regent-street, Cambridge.

NURSERY GOVERNESS.—A young Lady desires appointment to teach two or three young children. Terms moderate. Excellent references.—N. G., care Lee & Nightingale, Advertising Agents, Liverpool.

CHRISTIAN NURSERY GOVERNESS.—Take charge two little girls. French and music required. None need apply who have not been out before. State terms.—Mrs. TISSINGTON TATLOW, St. Thomas, Rathfarnham, Dublin.

GOVERNESS-STUDENT required, in select finishing school, near London. English, French, music, German, and drawing under first-class masters. Premium 18 guineas. Light duties. Home comforts.—MATERNAL, care of Mr. Pond, Stationer, St. Peter's-road, Holloway, London, N.

ARTICLED PUPIL required (not under 14), in a small first-class school, South Coast, to assist one hour daily. Happy home with superior advantages offered. Preference to officer or clergyman's daughter. Premium 25 guineas.—LADY PRINCIPAL, 46, Medora-road, Elm-park, Brixton-rise, S.W.

RESIDENT GOVERNESS.—A young Lady, late Student of Queen's College, London, desires a re-engagement after the holidays. Acquirements, thorough English, music, drawing, painting, French, and the rudiments of Latin. Good testimonials.
A. B., Bockleton, Tweedy-road, Bromley, Kent.

GOVERNESS-STUDENT required in Ladies' College. High-class advantages, with the comforts of a refined Christian home. Royal Academy professors attend. Fees nominal.
A., Westwood College, Stroud, Gloucestershire.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Wanted.

A GOSPEL TEMPERANCE WORKER is now open to conduct lively services, or to take charge of a Mission for a few months. Well recommended. Terms moderate.
LINDSAY, 4, Kingswood-road, Clapham-park, S.W

WANTED BY A YOUNG GENTLEMAN, aged 24. The position of Secretary, or Assistant Secretary, to a Christian Institution. Experienced, evangelical. Total abstainer and non-smoker. Salary moderate.
PITMAN, The Old Hall, Wellington, Salop.

A LADY, Principal of a large and important Girls' School, is desirous of finding an appointment for her nephew, aged 26, in Bank, Insurance Office, or Counting House. Some experience. Good character. In return for bonâ fide situation, she offers, board, lodging, and first-rate education to a young Lady.—KENT, care of Messrs. Relfe, 6, Charterhouse-buildings, Aldersgate, E.C.

AS BUTLER, or single-handed, by a respectable, steady, married Man, with one child. Height 5 ft. 7 in. Age 35. Good references.—B. J., 88, Arthur-street, Fulham-road, South Kensington, London, S.W.

YOUNG MAN, 24, seeks situation in Coffee Tavern. Three years' experience. Or Christian work, alone or combined, under an Evangelical clergyman. Good reference.
A. B., Crown Coffee Palace, South Norwood.

YOUNG MAN seeks employment as Missionary, Secretary, Collector, Clerk, &c. Country town or village (any needy place). Remuneration, moderate.—EBENEZER, Box P., 2,000, Smith's Advertising Agency, 132, Fleet-street, E.C.

LIGHT SITUATION wanted, by young Man, aged 21 (served apprenticeship to Ironmonger). Salary no object, if with a Christian family in the country.—J., care of Mr. Thomas, 444, Kingsland-road, London, E.

GROOM AND COACHMAN.—Christian man, married, desires situation as above. Single or pair. Town or country. Willing to be useful. Good references.
J. BENNETT, 2, Albion-terrace, Leytonstone, Essex.

CHRISTIAN MAN seeks situation as Lodge-keeper, Gardener, or otherwise. Either town or country. Wife would assist in light duties. References from Ministers.
J. B., 151, West Ferry-road, Millwall, E.

GARDENER, single-handed or otherwise. Christian, abstainer. Good character. Wife willing to be useful, dairy or small laundry.—C. SEARLE, Church-road, Little Heath, Potter's Bar, Herts.

HOME WANTED, for a young Woman, not strong enough for housework, but could take a place as Children's Maid, or any light work. First-rate needlewoman (machine and hand-sewing). Good, trustworthy, and respectable. Country preferred.
Miss BEVAN, Trent Park, New Barnet, Herts.

TO PRINTERS.—Situation wanted as Manager or Overseer, having had considerable experience.—R. R., 9, Pentonville-road, opposite "Angel," London, N.

YOUTH wants a situation as indoor Apprentice to a Grocer and Tea-dealer. Excellent character. Christian home desired. London or country.—F., care of Rev. F. A. Warmington, Broad-street, Lyme-Regis, Dorset.

AS COMPANION or Travelling Companion to a Lady, by a young Lady. Bright disposition, and thoroughly domesticated. Salary £20.—G. A., care of Mr. Eeles, High-street, Uxbridge, Middlesex.

COMPANION.—A Lady by birth and education, with good knowledge of German, French, and Italian, seeks a situation as above. Age 40.—T. M., Park Hill, Tooting.

COMPANION TO A LADY.—A young Lady who has the highest recommendation, desires to find a situation as above.
The Rev. PREBENDARY WILSON, Tottenham.

A DOMESTICATED MUSICAL LADY will give her services, as Companion or Housekeeper, for a comfortable home.—E. B., Mr. Dorrofield, 38, Queen-street, Watford, Herts.

HIGHLY RECOMMENDED, an earnest Christian young Lady, very cheerful, as Useful Companion to a Lady interested in Christian work. Good correspondent. Willing to assist young ladies with lessons. Daily engagement preferred, W.
A. B., Adams' Library, Stratford-road, Kensington.

A GENTLEMAN'S DAUGHTER desires a Christian home for the winter in Switzerland or France, as a Companion to a young Lady. Conversational instruction in English given in exchange for board.—X. Y. Z., Bethany, Felixstowe.

A LADY DESIRES an engagement, as Companion to a Lady, invalid or otherwise. Fond of children. Would go as Lady's Help.
H. B., Nye's Library, Tunbridge Wells.

MOTHER'S HELP, or Nursery Governess, and care of young children. Daughter of English Officer. Church of England (evangelical). Very successful. Last situation three years. Highest references.
LAWFORD, Benavon, Lisburn, Ireland.

A LADY WISHES to recommend a valuable middle-aged person to wait on an elderly lady.—C. C., care of Mrs. G. Lunell, 24, Montpelier, Weston-super-Mare.

WOULD ANY LADY going to New Zealand, take a respectable Woman, as Nurse or Attendant on the voyage. An early answer.—Miss HAMMOND, 114, St. Donatts-road, Lewisham High-road, S.E.

MIDDLE-AGED (country) Woman, as Companion-Attendant, or Housekeeper to invalid or elderly Lady, where servant is kept. Excellent references. Small salary.
M. D., 22, Mostyn-road, Brixton, S.W.

SUPERIOR PERSON, aged 42, decided Christian, desires re-engagement as Useful Maid, Working Housekeeper, or any place of trust, where the duties are light. Is thoroughly trustworthy, domesticated. Good plain needlewoman. Salary moderate. Good references.—E. A. T., 37, Southwold-road, Upper Clapton, London, E.

AS COOK, where kitchenmaid is kept.
M. E., Beaconsfield, Cambridge-park, Twickenham.

A LADY SEEKS situations for two respectable Girls, 19 and 20; been in service, in or near London. Also first places for two, 15 and 17. Country.
Miss MOORE, Maulden Cottage, Ampthill, Beds.

VOYAGE TO INDIA.—Young Lady seeks engagement as Companion to Elderly Lady, or to assist in care of children, in return for half passage money. Conversant with English, German, French, and Hindustani. Musical. References.—A. B., care of Foy & Lewis, Solicitors, 46, Gresham-street, London, E.C.

Appointments, Situations, &c., Vacant.

LADY AND GENTLEMAN, Christians and abstainers, to assist in the management of the South Devon Health Resort.—C. F. CARPENTER, Bishops Teignton, South Devon.

HENSHAW'S BLIND ASYLUM, MANCHESTER.—Sighted Certified Schoolmaster and Schoolmistress wanted.—The Schoolmaster must qualify himself to teach the boys and girls the usual branches of a good elementary education by means of the appliances used for instructing the blind, which are easily acquired. He will be required also to perform such other duties as are specified in the regulations of the Board. Salary £60 per annum, with board and residence in the institution. The Schoolmistress must also be similarly qualified. Her duties will be to instruct the pupils, under the supervision of the Schoolmaster, and to teach the girls sewing, knitting, netting, and woolwork, also to assist the Matron in the general discipline of the establishment. One having a knowledge of the "Kindergarten" system preferred. Salary £35 per annum, with board and residence in the institution. Married couples, if qualified teachers and without children, are eligible. Applicants must state their age and send testimonials (copies only), addressed to the Secretary, Bloom-street, Salford, on or before Monday, September 26th inst.—By order,
JAMES W. RATTRAY, Secretary.
Manchester, September 7, 1887.

A FEMALE MISSIONARY required to work in connection with a Baptist Church.—Apply by letter to Rev. W. BROCK, Hampstead.

MISSION WORK.—The Committee of a charitable institution desire to meet with a Lady about 30, to collect and canvass for subscriptions in the morning, taking partial charge of an infant's nursery later in the day. A Christian woman, fond of Mission work, would find this a congenial sphere of usefulness. Salary and commission about £60 a year.—Apply by letter, stating particulars, to HON. SEC., 4, Maitland-park-road, Haverstock-hill, N.W.

TO CHRISTIAN PARENTS.—The Principal of a long-established Newspaper and General Printing concern is prepared to receive a Youth of good character, fair education, and with good literary tastes, as Apprentice for five years. Every facility would be afforded for his acquiring a knowledge of the entire management of a newspaper, including the practical part of printing. Premium required.—Address, in the first instance, A. B., care of Mr. J. Wass, 2, Brookside-villas, Lordship-lane, Wood-green, London, N.

MATRON REQUIRED, for Earlswood Idiot Asylum, near Redhill, Surrey. Ladies, either widows or unmarried, should be about 35 to 40 years of age, of good presence and administrative ability. Salary £80 per annum, with board and residence in the Asylum.—Applications, with testimonials and carte-de-visite, to be forwarded on or before the 26th instant, to the SECRETARY, 36, King William-street, near London Bridge, E.C., from whom printed particulars of the duties may be obtained. The successful candidate will be required to enter upon her duties forthwith.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
September 12, 1887.

TO GARDENERS.—Required, for a public Institution. Must be of consistent Christian character, abstainers, and competent for hot-house, fruit, flower, and general gardening. Preference will be given to those who have been accustomed to the discipline of boys.—Apply by letter to
A. B., 11, Albert Mansions, Victoria-street, London.

ORPHANS' HOME.—Wanted, a Work-room Mistress, thoroughly competent to instruct in the very best plain needlework. She must be actuated by Christian principles, and plain in her style of dress.—Apply by letter, with copies of testimonials only, to Miss SHARMAN, 20, West-square, S.E.

MATRON required (middle-aged) for Christian Association of Young Men in Paris, to superintend small sleeping accommodation branch. Salary £24. Knowledge of French preferred.—Apply by letter, with full particulars, to Y. M., 12, Gloucester-road, South Kensington, S.W.

MAN AND WIFE wanted, without children, as Housekeepers, at small Institution, near Mildmay, for Young Men. Man to take oversight at meals, &c. Wife to cook (no dinners), mend, &c. Both must be earnest, even-tempered, evangelical Christians, and abstainers. Kitchen and bed-room provided, also gas, firing, and small weekly salary.—Apply by letter only to W. MOC., 6, Balfour-road, Highbury New Park, N.

UNDER-MATRON.—Wanted immediately, for a small Rescue Home, Eastbourne, an experienced Laundry-Matron. Total abstainer.—M. O., West Down House, Cornfield-place, Eastbourne.

A YOUNG MAN wanted, light weight, as Coachman, and to do odd work. One horse. Clothes, live and sleep in the house. £20 a year.—O. BUCKINGHAM, Runnymede Park, Egham, Surrey.

COACHMAN WANTED.—Single man. Total abstainer. Must be willing to make himself generally useful. Age under 35. References and application to be sent in at once to H. GRATTAN GUINNESS, Jun., Harley House, Bow, London, E.

PARISH NURSE.—Wanted, hospital trained Nurse. Christian person who would seek the spiritual as well as physical welfare of the sick. Salary £60.—Apply, with references, The VICAR, St. Stephen's Vicarage, Tunbridge.

HOUSE-PARLOURMAID, for a family of four. Age over 23. Wages £16. Early riser. Church of England. Good plain needlewoman. Able to take care of good plate and furniture.
60, Shooter's-hill-road, Blackheath.

A PARLOURMAID wanted. Abstainer. Must have good references and experience. Christian preferred. Age under 30.—Apply at once to Mrs. H. GRATTAN GUINNESS, Jun., Harley House, Bow, E.

GOOD PLAIN COOK wanted, on September 29, for a quiet private family. Age about 40. Total abstainer.—Miss SMITH, Bracicombe, The Drive, Hove, Brighton.

A DECIDED CHRISTIAN wanted, as Cook and Housekeeper. Age about 30. Strong and active.—General GRAYDON, Stafford House, Tudor-road, Upper Norwood.

COOK AND HOUSEMAID required, in a private family of two. Must have good characters and be abstainers.—Write, stating wages required, and all particulars, to R. C., Porchester Lodge, Lancaster-gate, London.

GOOD PLAIN COOK, for a family of four. Early riser. Church of England. Wages £18, no beer, all found. Two other servants kept.
60, Shooter's-hill-road, Blackheath.

A SUPERIOR HOUSEMAID wanted. Age under 35. Total abstainer. Good references. Able to do needlework. Wages according to ability.—Apply at once to Mrs. H. GRATTAN GUINNESS, Jun., Harley House, Bow, E.

GOOD PLAIN COOK wanted very shortly, for large but quiet family. Must be thoroughly recommended. Help after 12 o'clock. Wages £28, all found but beer.—Apply on 22nd inst. to Mrs. H., 43, Hertford-street, Mayfair, W.

A TRUSTWORTHY, MIDDLE-AGED COOK wanted, for a Ladies' Home at Tooting. Wages £20. Total abstainer preferred.
Mrs. PALMER, Park Holme, Upper Tooting.

COOK WANTED.—Strong, active, middle-aged Woman, for a large family. Baking, no dairy. Kitchenmaid kept. Must be a decided Christian, with good references.
Colonel SLADEN, Ripple Court, Deal.

COOK (plain) and HOUSEMAID wanted, at once, for small family near London. Good character needful.—Write, stating wages, to Mrs. HAWKINS, Hillside, Pinner, Middlesex.

USEFUL MAID. Good needlewoman. Willing to wash flannels, &c., and make herself generally useful. Wages according to capabilities. Church of England. Age over 28.
60, Shooter's-hill-road, Blackheath.

USEFUL PERSON wanted, to assist in domestic duties. Farm-house.—Mrs. RICHARDS, Bridge House Farm, Coates, Whittlesea.

A GENERAL SERVANT wanted; a quiet, comfortable home. Must understand plain cooking. Not under 20. Abstainer. Nurse kept. —M. J. M., 58, Wharton-road, West Kensington-park, W.

UPPER HOUSEMAID wanted in gentleman's family. Thoroughly conscientious; must be experienced, accustomed to good furniture. Excellent references required.—Apply, stating age and wages, to Mrs. M., Juniper Hall, Dorking.

GOOD PLAIN COOKS wanted (town and country), House-Parlourmaids, Nurses, good General Servants.—Miss MAULDEN'S (late missionary) Registry and Home, Church-street, Paddington-green. Please send stamped envelope for reply.

To Let, Apartments, &c.

PERCY'S HOTEL, LONDON.

40, Bedford-place, Bloomsbury-sq., W.C.

This First-class Private Hotel is highly recommended by the Bishop of Algoma; Rev. M. E. Thorold, M.A., Leicester; Dr. Georgens, Ouchy, Lausanne; J. Bevan and Mrs. Braithwaite, 312, Camden-road, and many others. Beds from 1s. 6d. Tea, 1s. 3d. Tariff on application.
Mrs. LLOYD HARRIS, Proprietor.

LONDON.

WEST CENTRAL HOTEL.

(First-class Temperance), 97, 99, 101, 103, Southampton-row, Russell-square.—Highly commended by Sir William Fox, K.C.M.G.; Rev. Charles Williams; Rev. John Cairns, D.D.; Rev. A. B. Grosart, D.D.; Rev. H. S. Paterson, M.D.; Rev. Forbes E. Winslow, M.A.; T. W. Russell, Esq., M.P.; Dr. Norman Kerr; Frederick Sherlock, Esq.; Dr. Ziemann; Miss Haslam, C.E.T.S.; Mrs. Lucas Shadwell, &c., &c. Plain Breakfast or Tea 1s. 3d. Beds, 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. Printed Tariff on application to FREDERIC SMITH, Proprietor.

HUTCHINSON'S PRIVATE HOTEL, 24, Guildford-street, Russell-square, the most central position for all parts of London; and at 24, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C. Extensively patronised and strongly recommended. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Weekly boarders taken.

W. TAVERNER, Temperance Hotel, 41 and 43, Judd-street, Euston-road, London, W.C. Five minutes from G.N., Mid., and N.W. Railways. Beds from 1s. 6d. Plain breakfast or tea, 1s. Tariff and testimonials on application. Patronised by ministers of all denominations.

LONDON.—Insull's Temperance Hotel, 20, 21, Burton-crescent, Tavistock-square, W.C.—Five minutes' walk or 1s. cab fare from Euston, St. Pancras, King's Cross Railways; easily reached from other stations. Patronised by readers of THE CHRISTIAN.

BUXTON.—A really comfortable Home offered in a Gentleman's family for one or two Ladies (sisters), with or without maid. Within three minutes' walk of baths and gardens.—Apply in the first place to
Mrs. M., Bow Wood Farm, Cromford, Derbyshire.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Clergyman's Widow, who has had great experience in nursing, would gladly receive two or three Ladies, invalid or otherwise, in her comfortable home. Terms from 25s. South aspect.
Mrs. H., Estens, Surrey-road South, Bournemouth.

ILFRACOMBE.—Foster's Boarding House. Close to sea. Home comforts. Highly recommended by Clergy and Ministers. Conducted on Christian and Temperance principles. Terms, 42s. per week. No extras.

BRIGHTON.—Sussex House Boarding Establishment, pleasantly situated in the Old Steine, having a sea view, and the beautiful Steine Gardens in front. Near to Pavilion, Aquarium, and piers. Liberal table, with every home comfort.
Mr. & Mrs. BOX, 53, Old Steine.

MRS. PARSONS returns sincere thanks for all kindness from Christian friends, and begs to say she has removed to larger premises.—(Private) Convalescent Home, Shaftesbury House, Seaside-road, Eastbourne.

INTEMPERANCE.—A private Home at the seaside for limited number of the upper and higher middle classes in a cheerful little spot where Dipsomania, Choralism, Nervous Debility, &c., has been long and successfully treated. Christian influence; home comforts and amusements; highest references.—MEDICUS, Messrs. Pascoe, 28, Stokes Croft, Bristol.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—Boarding Establishment, Meliora House, 20 and 21, Carisbrooke-road. Conducted by the Widow of the late Rev. F. WAGSTAFFE, and Mrs. LOCKE. Good table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Near sea, gardens, and rail.

WORTHING HOME OF REST for Christians. Close to sea, with good garden. Every comfort. Services on the ground. Terms 25s. to 2 guineas.—LADY SUPERINTENDENT, Rutherford Lodge, Worthing.

INTEMPERANCE.—Private Home for six Ladies. Terms from 1½ to 3 guineas weekly. Highest professional references given, for which, with other particulars, apply to
Miss PUDNEY, Buxton House, Earls Colne, Essex.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Mancetter, West Cliff.—Superior Boarding House. Best position. Close to the sea. Very comfortable house. Moderate terms.—PROPRIETRESS.

BOURNEMOUTH.—First-class Boarding-house. Beautifully situated; close to and facing the sea; every room commanding charming sea-views. Good table. Terms moderate.
Ben Wyvis, West Cliff.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Large and airy suites of Apartments. Close to principal churches, and near pier and gardens. Hot and cold baths. Terms moderate.
Mrs. MOON, Ootacamund, St. Peter's-road.

BOURNEMOUTH, East Cliff.— Well-furnished Apartments with south aspect. Situation cannot be surpassed for winter visitors. Good cooking and attendance. Moderate and inclusive terms.
Mrs. CLARKE, Borrowdale, York-road.

BOURNEMOUTH.—WESTON HALL. —En Pension. In best position. Newly furnished. Six public rooms. Forty bed-rooms. Lawn tennis. Excellent cuisine. From 44s. per week, inclusive.
Mr. and Mrs. E. L. RATCLIFFE.

BOURNEMOUTH.—ADEN COURT, Durley-gardens.—The comforts and convenience of (high-class) private home, at moderate cost. Board or otherwise. Sea view from every window.
Address PROPRIETOR.

RAMSGATE.—A Family Residence to Let, standing in about one acre of land. Kitchen and flower garden, lawn, pasture, and stable. Three sitting-rooms, six bed-rooms, and attic. Kitchen on ground floor. Rent £75. Also a Villa with seven small bed-rooms and three sitting-rooms, standing in its own garden, £52. Also Houses of less rent.
Rev. J. B. WHITING, St. Luke's Vicarage.

HERNE BAY.—St. Helier's Boarding Establishment.—Best situation in town. Close to sea. Liberal table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Private sitting-rooms if desired. Special terms for winter boarders.

LOWESTOFT.—To Let for any period, a pretty little House, well furnished, every convenience. Close to sea and country. Very moderate terms to careful tenant.
Mr. JOHNSON, Sailors' Missionary, Lowestoft.

SEAFORD.—Boarders received by a Widow Lady. Best aspect. Every home comfort. Terms only £1 per week.
WIDOW, 10, Pelham-place, Seaford, Sussex.

MATLOCK, DERBYSHIRE.—A Lady residing at Matlock would be glad to meet with a Lady boarder. Scenery very fine.
Miss STEVENS, Tor View, Matlock Bank.

VENTNOR, ISLE OF WIGHT.— "Pelham Villa," eight rooms to Let, Furnished, during winter months 31s. 6d. (with services of housekeeper 40s.) weekly.—Mr. CATLIN, 17, Claremont-square, Pentonville, London, N.

SHIRLEY, SOUTHAMPTON.—To be Let, unfurnished, on lease, a Gentleman's Residence, six acres, fruit and kitchen garden, tennis lawn, terrace, south aspect, beautiful climate, grand soil. Four reception-rooms, ten bed-rooms, dressing-rooms, three w.c's., heated throughout; good water, drainage perfect; near church, post; trams every 10 minutes to Southampton. Rent £130; taxes low.
Messrs. FURBER, Agents, Above Bar, Southampton.

BRIXTON.—Large, well-furnished sitting-room and double-bedded bed-room, for two Gentlemen. Inclusive terms, including gas, breakfast and tea, 25s. each. Close to 'bus, rail, and tram. No children. Strongly recommended by Mr. Frederic Smith, West Central Hotel, London.
Mrs. E., 28, Speenham-road, Brixton.

WINTER HEALTH RESORT.—Subscriber will be glad to hear from any of the Lord's people seeking comfortable boarding during part or whole of winter months.
C. CAMPBELL, Argyle Lodge, Rothesay, Scotland.

WANTED, BY A LADY, three good-sized unfurnished Rooms, with attendance, in St. John's Wood, or Hampstead; or would share a house with an evangelical Christian Lady. Excellent references given and required. State terms and particulars to A. B., 42, High-street, Bromley, Kent

BROADSTAIRS.—Seafield Boarding Establishment.—Best situation in town. Close to sea. Liberal table. Home comforts. Terms moderate. Highly recommended by all who have visited. Special terms for permanent boarders.

BANKS OF THE WYE.—Hoarwithy. —Harp Temperance Hotel. Comfortable boarding house for a quiet family. Terms very moderate.—Apply to the Manageress, Mrs. Shaw, Hoarwithy, Ross.

HYDROPATHIC HEALTH RESORT FOR CHRISTIANS.—Charming scenery. Moorland air among the Cotswold hills. Highly recommended.—For prospectus and terms, apply to S. PYALL DIPROSE, Pitchcombe View, Stroud, Gloucester.

BEXHILL.—Residential and temporary Home of Rest, for Christians, Station-road. Bracing air. Sea views. Pretty scenery. Including board 1 to 2 guineas per week. Reduction in exceptional cases.

"A HOME FROM HOME FOR YOUNG MEN."
THE "JOHN FOWLER HOUSE," 66, Mount Pleasant, Liverpool.—This House has been specially furnished and prepared as a Home for Youths and Young Men occupying situations in Liverpool, but whose homes are at a distance from the city. "Home from Home" for Young Men, governed on Christian principles, strictly unsectarian. Young Men desirous of securing accommodation should apply at once for terms.

LADY BOARDERS.—A few Ladies can be received in an English family in France. House stands in large garden. Every comfort. References exchanged.
META, Post-office, St. Servan, Brittany, France.

BED-ROOM, for Christian Woman, engaged during day, 3s. 6d.; friends sharing bed, 5s. 6d. One minute from 'bus and rail.—EDWARDS, Draper, 3, The Terrace, Parsons-green-lane, Fulham.

FRITHVILLE GARDENS, Shepherd's Bush.—Comfortable Christian Home, with partial board, use of piano, for two Gentlemen; in a superior residence. Terms moderate. No other lodgers.
M. T., 109, Uxbridge-road, Shepherd's Bush.

APARTMENTS WANTED, near London. Would share sitting-room with another, or board with Christian family (Church preferred). Kindly state full particulars.
Mr. H., 27, Mortimer-road, Kingsland, N.

A YOUNG WIDOW would like to Let two Furnished Rooms for the winter months, or permanent. No children. Either Lady or Gentleman. Terms moderate.—Mrs. DOWDY, 11, Howard-place, Littlehampton, Sussex.

TO BE LET, Furnished bed-rooms, for one Gentleman, or two friends. Near railway-station. No children.
14, Newlyn-road, Bruce-grove, Tottenham.

REQUIRED, in a Christian family, for a Gentleman's Son, partial board, early in October.—E. G., Fair Lawn, Weston-road, Bath.

VERY PLEASANT HOME offered in Ladies' School to one or two Ladies. Excellent house, good grounds. Close to town, church, and station. Beautiful and healthy locality. Very moderate terms.
A., Westwood College, Stroud, Gloucestershire.

Miscellaneous.

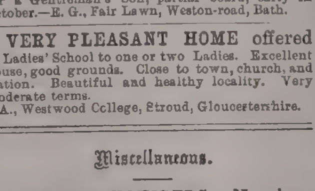
ANXIOUS INQUIRERS.—Numbers have received blessing through writing. All anxious ones are invited to write.—2 Cor. 1. 3, 4.
EVANGELIST, Clapham, S.W.

ASTHMA.—Persons suffering from Asthma, Difficulty of Breathing, &c., are invited to try (free of charge) a remedy for affording immediate relief.—C., Mr. G. A. KEYWORTH, Hastings.

UMBRELLAS RE-COVERED FROM 2s. EACH.

IF YOUR UMBRELLA WANTS RE-COVERING send it by Parcels Post (with Postal Order enclosed) to STRONG BROS., Umbrella Makers, Redhill, Surrey, who will re-cover it and return it as good as new by next post, carriage paid. Good strong twill, ladies', 2s., gents', 2s. 6d.; good alpaca, ladies', 3s., gents', 3s. 6d.; strong durable silk, ladies', 4s. 6d., gents', 5s. Patterns post free. Reference kindly permitted to the Rev. W. J. Fowell, Redhill.

BYWATER, TANQUERAY & CO., 79, Queen Victoria-street, London (late BYWATER, PERRY & CO.), are Agents for Residents abroad Missionaries, Chaplains, &c., in every part of the world. Goods and Outfits supplied at Wholesale prices. Shipping and passages arranged. Banking in all its branches. Full descriptive Catalogue post free. Specially appointed Agents to seven of the leading English and American Missionary Societies. 2000 References.



MOLLER'S
COD LIVER OIL.
WRITE FOR PAMPHLET, 43, SNOW HILL, E.C.

COLONIES.—Openings for Pupils on good stock and grain farms, and larger estates in Canada, the United States, and Tasmania. Pamphlet free.—FORD, RATHBONE & CO., 21, Finsbury-pavement, London.

BEETHOVEN ORGAN.—Handsome panelled walnut case, five stops, knee swells, powerful pipe tone, £9 5s. Warranted 6 years. Mr. Kirkham, Secretary, Open-Air Mission, writes: "I can speak from experience as to the excellence of your instrument." Portable harmoniums, &c., from 95s.
CHARLES YOUNG, 21, High-street, Kingsland.

FOLLOWING PLANTS, and imported bulbs, 15s.; half 8s. Satisfaction guaranteed. 8 choice Hyacinths, Crocuses yellow, splendid purple, Aconites, double Snowdrops, Irises, Tulips, Anemones choice, Tritelia, 32 of each; Wallflowers double, single, Lupins, Antirrhinums, Canterbury Bells, Sweetwilliams, Brompton Stocks, 12 of each.—C. SIMCOX, 180, King's-road, Cardiff.

125 MEN'S CLOTH-SLEEVED WAISTCOATS, thick and warm, 4s. 6d. each, by the dozen only; lined Trousers, 5s., unlined 4s. 6d. each, by the half-dozen; Suits, 18s., singly. Carriage paid. Cash with order only.
W. LEE, 21, Chesilton-road, Fulham-road, S.W.

RENTS COLLECTED, and the general management of large and small estates in town and country undertaken by a Christian Gentleman. The highest references and security. —P. E. W., The London Institution, Finsbury-circus, E.C.

IRON CHAPEL to hold not less than 100.—Has anyone as above for sale cheap, for a very neglected country district.—CEPHAS BUTLER, The Laurels, Shirley, near Birmingham.

TO LADIES WITH LIMITED MEANS. —The Advertiser's son, a tea planter, seeks well recommended Agents for the sale of his Teas. Liberal commission.
Colonel MORTON, 2, Priory-parade, Cheltenham.

IRON MISSION ROOMS, &c., erected on the most reasonable terms, by R. SAUNDERS, 127, Hungerford-road, London, N. Estimates and designs free. 25 years' practical experience. Also Churches and Schools, &c. Best workmanship.

FOUR LECTURES.—A Voice from the Wilderness. The Experience of Israel, a Comfort and Warning to God's People.—Further particulars, G. REYNOLDS GILL, Lady Margaret-road, London, N.W.

O'BRIEN'S IRISH SHIRTS

UNSURPASSED FOR VALUE.

Their "SPECIAL," 39s. per half dozen, Carriage Paid. A Sample Shirt, 6s. 9d. Sizes 14 in. to 16½ in. neck. Shirts made to order.

GEORGE O'BRIEN & CO.,
MANUFACTURERS, BELFAST.

NEAVE'S

FOR INFANTS,
INVALIDS,
GROWING CHILDREN,
AND THE AGED.

FOOD.

Publications.

17th Thousand. Price 1d.

THE NEAR RETURN OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST. By CHEYNE BRADY.
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & CO.

MRS. GRIMKE'S TEXT CARDS.— To be had from Mrs. GRIMKÈ, Prestwich, Manchester, who likes orders sent to her direct, or from E. KAUFMANN, 129, Cheapside; or booksellers.

CARDS,

PRINTED IN BLUE AND GOLD,

2s. 6d. per 100, or 18 for Sixpence.

1. Six Short Rules for Young Christians. By BROWNLOW NORTH.
2. Rules for Daily Life.
3. Oh! for a Perfect Trust.
4. The Christian's Entrance into Glory.
5. Which?
6. My Prayer.
7. Pray, Always Pray.
8. Wishing You a Happy New Year.
9. Our Warrant for Coming to Christ.
10. Eight Loving Hints.
11. To Know Thee More.
12. Make Sure of Christ.
13. Looking unto Jesus.
14. Grace for the Graceless.
15. Peace, Perfect Peace.
16. My Heart's Desire.
17. "Who Loved Me."
18. Jesus is Near.

Packet of 18, assorted, 6d.

DRUMMOND'S TRACT DEPOT, Stirling.
London: S. W. PARTRIDGE & Co.

TRACT DISTRIBUTION.

Tracts at 4d. per 100; 6d. per 100; 8d. per 100; 1*s. per* 100; 2*s. per* 100. Over Three Hundred different sorts. Specimen Tracts of either price sent free on application to MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.

NEW COPYRIGHT TREATISE.

BY A PRACTISING PHYSICIAN.

DYSPEPSIA:

WHY SUFFERED.

Also reliable and fully detailed Dietary and Medicinal Treatment of Indigestion and associated disorders, affording an absolute remedy and cure.

64 pp. 8vo., 1s.; smaller size, 2d. post free from Publishers,

HAMILTON & CO., Oxford-street, Southampton.

Terms for Advertisements

"The Christian"

(PREPAID)

Miscellaneous Advertisements in small type are charged at the following rates:—

Not exceeding 30 Words 3 0
„ 39 „ 3 9
„ 48 „ 4 6

And 9d. for every additional line of nine words or under, the address being in all cases charged for.

DAILY LIGHT ON THE DAILY PATH.

IN THE VERY WORDS OF SCRIPTURE.

Two Volumes. Morning Hour, and Evening Hour. Sold separately or in sets.

"These are very precious little books, and few more suitable gifts could be found." Christian.

Small Edition, each volume, cloth, 1s.; French morocco, gilt edges, 2s.
Large Type Edition, each volume, cloth extra, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.
Various Styles in calf, morocco, and German calf.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, 15, Paternoster-row.

DAINTREE & CO., DYERS, LONDON.

The LARGEST WORKS IN LONDON for Dyeing and Cleaning in every Branch.
98, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.; 365, Southwark-park-road, S.E.; 44, Leicester-square, W.C.

Carts Collect and Deliver to all parts.—PRICE LISTS BY POST.

Cloth Limp, 1s.

THE KING'S PALACE.

A Series of Readings for each Day of the Month. By Rev. J. H. ROGERS, M.A. With Carmine Borders. 4th Thousand.

"This is a very prettily got-up book, and its matter well deserves its dainty surroundings. The volume consists of brief meditations for each day of the month, and is divided into six sections: the Heart, Lips, Eyes, Ears, Hands, Feet. The meditations are based on some appropriate text, beginning with: 'A broken and a contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise;' and ending with, 'They that wait upon the Lord shall..walk, and not faint.' It would be a very nice and helpful present for a young disciple."—Christian Miscellany.

Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

THE KING'S PALACE.

A Series of Readings for each Day of the Month. By Rev. J. H. ROGERS, M.A. With Carmine Borders. 4th Thousand.

"This little book offers to busy people one thought each day in connection with the service of our bodies, and gives a few words of prayer as suggesting a particular petition. The arrangement is simple, each week being devoted to a particular part of the body. It is calculated to protect from wearing temptation, and to guide in the way of practical holiness."—Christian Age.

Cloth Boards, with gilt edges, 2s.

THE KING'S PALACE.

A Series of Readings for each Day of the Month. By Rev. J. H. ROGERS, M.A. With Carmine Borders. 4th Thousand.

"This book has a practical reference exclusively to Christian service. and touches upon the parts which the heart, the lips, the eyes, the ears, the hands, and the feet, are to play therein. There is much freshness and force, both in the idea and its treatment, and we think it will hold its own with its many competitors."
Sword and Trowel.

Leather Binding, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

THE KING'S PALACE.

A Series of Readings for each Day of the Month. By Rev. J. H. ROGERS, M.A. With Carmine Borders. 4th Thousand.

"We are very pleased with this little book. Sound in its teaching, and thoroughly practical in its method, it at the same time presents the truth touching the daily walk n a striking and an interesting form."
Life of Faith.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

GAZE'S ORIENTAL TOURS.—Annual Autumn Tour leaves London October 24, for Alexandria, Cairo, Pyramids, Suez Canal and CAMPING TOUR THROUGH PALESTINE, returning via Asia Minor, Turkey, Greece, &c.—H. GAZE & SON (Originators and First Conductors of Oriental Tours), 142, Strand, London.

J. CURWEN & SONS'

SACRED MUSIC LEAFLETS,

IN EIGHT PARTS, 6d. EACH.

Over 250 Leaflets are now ready, Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations back to back. Suited for every Sunday School purpose.

PRICE OF LEAFLETS, 1s. PER 100.

J. CURWEN & SONS, 8 & 9, WARWICK-LANE, E.C.

The Bible Remembrancer.

A Complete Handbook to the Old and New Testaments.

By means of this Handbook any Biblical incident or event may be readily referred to.

WITH TWELVE BEAUTIFULLY COLOURED MAPS.

Special Cheap Edition.

Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

"A more helpful book for Sabbath-school Teachers and others we can scarcely think of."—Presbyterian.

SUPERIOR EDITION—Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, 2s.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.; Cloth Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

ISRAEL: A Prince with God.

The Story of Jacob Re-told.

BY REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE RIVER JORDAN AND JACOB'S WELL.

CONTENTS.

I. First Impressions.
II. The Sale of the Birthright.
III. The Stolen Blessing.
IV. The Angel-Ladder.
V. The Noble Resolve.
VI. The Education of Home.
VII. The Mid-Passage of Life.
VIII. The Stirring - up of the Nest.
IX. The Midnight Wrestle.
X. Failure.
XI. Back to Bethel.
XII. The School of Sorrow.
XIII. Glimpses of the Israel-Nature.
XIV. Rest, and the Rest-Giver.
XV. Home: at Last.
XVI. The God of Jacob.

"Exceedingly good. Not only spiritual, as everything from our brother Mr. Meyer would be, but also thoughtful, fresh, suggestive, thoroughly practical.

"We rejoice at every remembrance of the good work done in Melbourne Hall, Leicester, by this laborious worker; and we are glad to see that Mr. Meyer is likely to be useful with his pen, as well as with his tongue. Oh that hundreds of our younger men gave signs of such real godliness, such true devotion, and such clear knowledge of the Gospel as we see in this pastor."—Sword and Trowel, Sept., 1887.

"The addresses which compose the book flash with the brightness of evangelical truth, expressed in clear and graceful diction.

"No Christian is likely to read the volume with a due measure of care without being wiser, and purer, and happier, and more devoted to his Master. It surpasses any book we have seen on Jacob and his eventful career. Its perusal makes us feel that Jacob was a man of like passions with ourselves, and that the record given us of him is given for our instruction. Most heartily do we commend Mr. Meyer's book, and hope that our readers will obtain copies for themselves."
Irish Baptist Magazine, Aug., 1887.

"With admirable tact the conduct of Jacob is depicted, and the application of its lessons to present day life vividly shown."—Footsteps of Truth.

"The portraitures of the leading characters in this book are drawn with peculiar force and accuracy. We quite agree with the author in his opinion that, upon merely human grounds, Esau was a better man than Jacob. It was grace, and grace alone, that made the difference. Isaac's pandering to his fleshly appetite, Rebecca's favouritism, and Jacob's subtlety, may well suggest the need of watchfulness, and prompt the cry 'Lead us not into temptation!' With the exception of a statement here and there, we cannot but regard this work as one well worthy of a deliberate and most thoughtful perusal. It abounds with lessons of greatest moment and importance, and is worthy of a place in every household. We have read the work throughout with deepest interest, and, can most strongly recommend it."—Gospel Magazine, July, 1887.

"A noble book, calculated to be of the highest usefulness, and we are thankful of the opportunity of commending it."—Baptist Magazine.

"A very successful attempt is here made to reproduce the striking features of Jacob's life, presenting much that not only brings the story vividly before us, but draws out its lessons and meanings."
The Rock.

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

BONUS YEAR, 1887.

FUNDS, £4,280,000.
CLAIMS PAID, £6,800,000.
Profits Declared, £4,300,000.

NATIONAL PROVIDENT INSTITUTION

FOUNDED 1835.

FOR MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE.

NEXT DIVISION OF PROFITS—NOV. 20, 1887,
In which all insuring previously will participate.

ARTHUR SMITHER,
48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C. Actuary and Secretary.

BALDWIN & WALKER'S KNITTING AND FANCY WOOLS

TRADE-MARK
REGISTERED

HIGHLAND WOOLS
FINGERING WOOLS
MERINO WOOLS
SHETLAND WOOLS
In Great Variety

Special makes for Machine Knitters
Prices and Patterns of which on Application.

SOLD BY ALL LEADING DRAPERS & HOSIERS.
If any difficulty is found in obtaining apply to Manufacturers, who will gladly send address of nearest Retailer.

ESTABLISHED 1836 WEST CROFT MILLS, HALIFAX, YORKSHIRE.

GOLD MEDAL LIVERPOOL, 1886.

INDIAN MUSLIN.

Pure Cream-coloured Muslin (25 inches wide).
Washes well. Useful for

DRESSES,
CURTAINS,
BLINDS,
DRAPERIES,
SHADING, &c.

45 Yards for 6s. 6d. Free per post on receipt of Postal Order.

90 Yards for 12s. 6d. Free per post on receipt of Postal Order.

And in Colours. Much used for Decoration, Bazaars, Entertainments, &c. Beautiful Effects at a Small Cost. Novelties also in Useful and Fancy Fabrics for Dresses and Draperies.

Patterns and Prices Post Free.

JOHN KAY AND SONS, BURNLEY WOOD MILLS, BURNLEY.

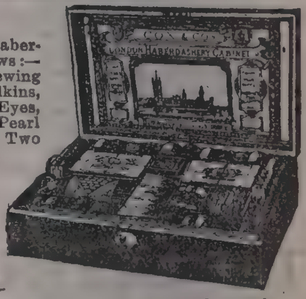
THE

LADY'S "GUINEA CABINET"

(Size, 16 by 10 by 4 inches.)

21/-

REALLY INVALUABLE TO EVERY LADY



Which contains a Year's Supply of Useful Haberdashery and Needlework Requisites as follows:—Black and White Sewing Cotton, Coloured Sewing Cotton, Sewing Needles, Darning Needles, Bodkins, and assortment of Twilled Tapes, Hooks and Eyes, several Cards of Linen Buttons (different sizes), Pearl Shirt Buttons, Black and White Linen Thread, Two Boxes of Mixed White Pins, Black Pins, a Card of Round and Flat Elastic, Garter Elastic, Hair Pins, Embroidery Cotton, Darning Cotton, a Measure, Silvered Thimble, &c., in a Handsome Walnut Cabinet with Lock and Key. These very complete Cabinets are forwarded to any part of the world on receipt of P.O.O. for 22s., which includes a shilling for packing case.

COX & CO., 99 & 101, New Oxford Street, London.

MUSIC FOR THE HOME CIRCLE.

MUSIC IN THE HOUSE

AN UNPARALLELED OFFER to the READERS of "THE CHRISTIAN."

MAKES CHEERFUL HAPPY HOMES.

OUR GRAND PRIZE MEDAL 'MINIATURE' MELODEON,
With Two Sets of Broad Reeds, Organ and Celestial Tone, and the Charming Bell Accompaniments, sent carefully packed and Carriage paid to any Address in Great Britain and Ireland on receipt of P.O.O. for 9s. 6d.

OUR GRAND 'PARAGON' MELODEON.
'By Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent,' with Patent Visible Double Valves and Two Stops, Organ and Celestial Tone and Charming Bell Accompaniments, sent carefully packed and Carriage Paid to any Address in Great Britain and Ireland on receipt of P.O.O. for 13s. 6d.

OUR GRAND 'FAVOURITE' MELODEON.
'By Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent,' with Patent Visible Double Valves, Two Stops, Organ and Celestial Tone and Charming Bell Accompaniments, sent carefully packed and Carriage Paid to any Address in Great Britain and Ireland on receipt of P.O.O. for 15s. 6d.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND of our Patent Broad Reed Melodeons HAVE BEEN SOLD, and we have received the unprecedented number of ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND TESTIMONIALS and PRESS NOTICES from all parts of the world. Before purchasing a Musical Instrument of any other description, send for our NEW PRIVILEGE PRICE LIST for 1887, entitling the holder to have any Instrument mentioned in the List sent, carefully Packed and Carriage Paid, to any Address in Great Britain and Ireland, at the very low price quoted. This valuable List contains numerous Illustrations of the Leading and most Popular Musical Instruments of the day, and is a Complete Guide to the purchase of Musical Instruments. All lovers of Music will find this Illustrated Catalogue a valuable acquisition. Upwards of One Hundred Thousand sent out yearly. Sent on receipt of One Penny Stamp to CAMPBELL & CO., Musical Instrument Makers, 116, TRONGATE, GLASGOW. Established Fifty Years.

"NOVELTIES" IN KNITTING WOOLS

In many Charming New Colours, Shades, Mixings, Spot Marls, and Heather Tinted. New Price List now ready for Present Season, and will be sent to any part of the World post free.

"EXCELLENT" "REAL SCOTCH" Fingering Yarns,

In 2, 3, 4, and 5 Ply, in all shades, Mixed and Heather Tinted.

SPUN, MANUFACTURED, and FAST DYED by the most Eminent Spinners in Scotland.

REAL SCOTCH WHEELINGS AND PETTICOAT WOOLS; ALSO

Berlins, Shetlands, Andalusians, Fleecys and Lady Betty Wools,

With every other description of FANCY OR KNITTING REQUISITE. Orders sent us by Post—with prepayment enclosed—receive careful and prompt attention.

WAKEFORD BROTHERS,

Artistic Needlework Wool, Knitting Yarn, and Fancy Emporium,

104 & 106, KING'S ROAD, SLOANE SQUARE, LONDON.

TO MOTHERS!

WOODWARD'S GRIPE WATER, OR INFANTS' PRESERVATIVE.

For all Disorders of Infants and Children, especially difficult TEETHING.

From Dr. GORDON STABLES, M.D., R.N.—"I have lifted up my warning voice against the drugging of children. 'Woodward's Gripe Water' is the only Safe Medicine for Infants. It contains NO OPIUM, and is recommended by the Profession."

From Rev. W. WALKER JUBB, Independent Minister.—"It has been given to all my children. Its general beneficial results upon their health and vigour have convinced me that it is unequalled. Its administration to the youngest child is perfectly safe."

Bottles 1s. 1½d., from all Chemists and Stores.

LONDON DEPOT: Messrs. SANGER, 489, Oxford Street, W.

The Christian:

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED "THE REVIVAL."

A Weekly Record of Christian Life, Christian Testimony, Christian Work and Missionary Enterprise.

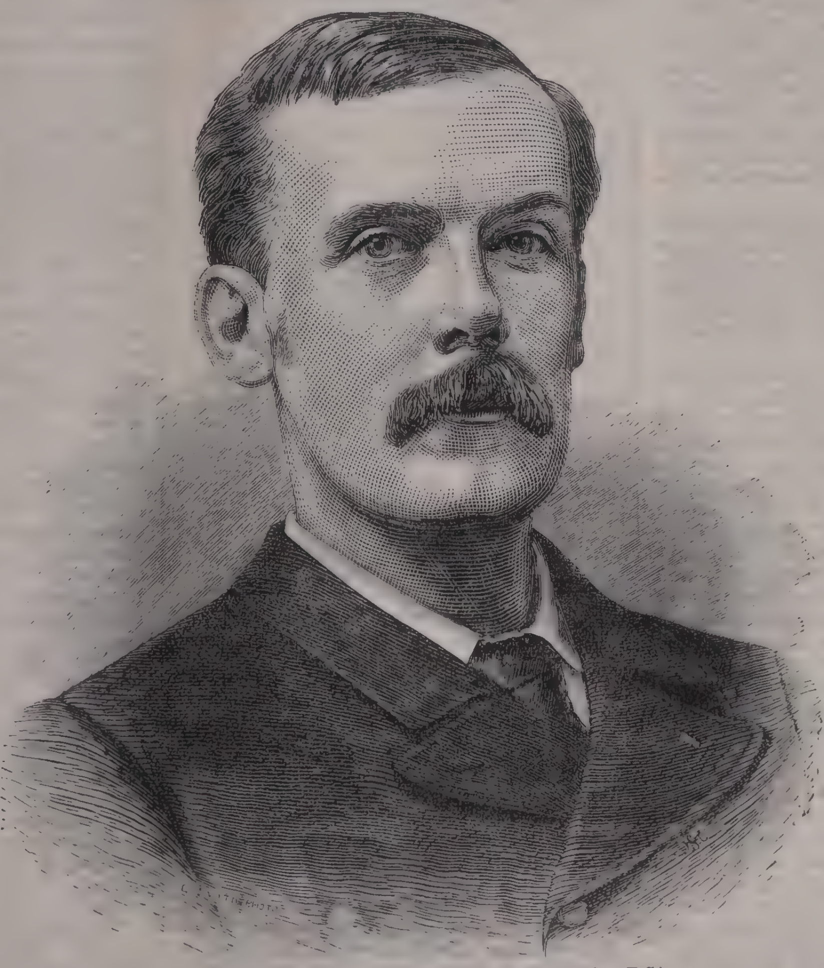
No. 921.] London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C. FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1887. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper. [ONE PENNY. POST FREE, 1½d.

MR. FREDERICK N. CHARRINGTON,

Tower Hamlets Mission, Mile End.

THE career of this true-hearted soldier of Christ has been an extraordinary one since the hour when, as a young man, light first broke in upon his soul. His earliest thought then was "Christ died for us, and we ought to do something for Him," and he at once set to work in a night-school for lads, afterwards joining Mr. Kerwin in an evangelistic effort amongst rough boys in a hay-loft. It was not long before the rubicon of his life was reached. As the light grew brighter and his conscience was touched by the misery and wretchedness with which he was brought in contact—misery caused by strong drink — he resolved to give up his connection with the great firm of which his father was the principal, and to relinquish the golden prospects to which by birth he could look forward.

Seven years after this resolution he had an opportunity, under his father's will, of returning to the place in the brewery which he had given up. But the glittering fetters, having been once shaken off, had no attraction. In the meantime his convictions had been deepened and strengthened, and he was more than ever determined to devote his whole life to the service of God. Such decision as Mr. CHARRINGTON had displayed marked him out as a man of firmness of character and strength of conviction, with a will made ready by grace to act out that which he knew to be right. And since the time when his great decision was taken, he has stood forward as a bold and fearless champion of truth; as one of the foremost and most active evangelists in the East of London as the denouncer of those who in various ways, though too often behind the scenes, are the aiders and abettors of evil.



(From Photograph by Mr. Edward Smith, Cheapside, London, E.C.)

Two or three illustrations of how fearlessly he has bearded the lion of strong drink in its den must suffice, though many might be given. During his connection with the brewery he was elected on the House Committee of the London Hospital which, strangely enough, then as now, was composed almost entirely of great brewers and distillers. With his new-born abstaining zeal, Mr. Charrington was not long in showing his colours, and one day moved that the committee should be instructed to inquire how many patients were in the hospital directly through the drink traffic. Of course the suggestion was not very favourably received. On another occasion, when the committee had resolved upon an appeal to the public for £100,000 to build a new wing, Mr. Charrington directly taxed some of the members of the board with creating, by the drink which they sold, the necessity for the enlargement, which, he added, if they would do as they ought, they should pay for themselves.

Later on, our friend interested himself in another matter of considerable importance to the hospital, which brought him again into conflict with the majority of the House Committee, by whom the appointment of a young Ritualistic curate to the chaplaincy of the hospital had been determined upon. To defeat this purpose Mr. Charrington did what had not been done for a hundred and sixty years previously. On the day when the question was to be decided, the House Committee found themselves confronted with a crowded meeting of Governors, in whom the power of veto is vested; and the victory was won.

The School Board election of 1881 afforded Mr. Charrington an opportunity for protesting against brewers and distillers representing the Tower Hamlets at the Board. Having nominated Miss Hastings, a well-known Christian worker in Whitecross-street, he went to a large meeting at the Bow and Bromley Institute. Arriving at the moment when Mr. William Hoare, the brewer, was saying, "We must do something for these wretched, ragged children," Mr. Charrington mounted one of the back seats, and exclaimed:—

> You, Mr. Hoare, and you, Mr. Buxton, with your beer, and Sir Edmund Currie with his gin—it is you who make all these wretched, ragged children; and I am ashamed to see Christian ministers and clergymen, and even temperance men, on the platform backing up these brewers and distillers.

There was a momentary silence; then the whole audience broke into ringing cheers. The result of this action was that Miss Hastings was returned at the head of the poll, while Mr. William Hoare was defeated, and Mr. Edward North Buxton, then Chairman of the Board, retained his seat by only four votes.

We must not close this part of the subject without reference to one of the most difficult fights in which Mr. Charrington has engaged, known at the time as "The Battle of the Music Halls." A pamphlet with this title (price 1d.) may still be had at the Book Saloon, 31, Mile End-road, E. Several sad cases in which both men and women had been ruined through going to these low places of entertainment, having been brought to his notice, Mr. Charrington determined to investigate the matter for himself. He found things much worse than he had imagined, and then with evidence enough, according to the terms of the Act in that case made and provided, to close the several places arraigned, he went to the Quarter Sessions at Clerkenwell, and opposed the granting of the licences. But the magistrates, with a few honourable exceptions, renewed the licences, though Mr. Charrington's case was fully proved.

Another memorable protest on behalf of public morality was witnessed in November last at the Mansion House, when Mr. Charrington created much consternation among many of those assembled, by his persistent demand that intoxicants should not be sold at the People's Palace, not then opened. Thanks to his faithful testimony and that of other Christian workers in the East-end, the directors yielded the point, and this popular place of resort is free from the allurements of the drink.

These examples of how much can be achieved by bold and decided action, as well as his recent success in securing the closing of houses which had long been dens of infamy, should encourage others to stand up against the evils which are pressing hard on every side.

Of the work at the Great Assembly Hall, which is itself an evidence of the truth of those words, "Them that honour Me, I will honour," so much has from time to time been said that it is needless to speak of it at any length here. A new feature of the work is the formation of a body known as "The Crusaders' Band," which is to be a distinctly aggressive force, pledged to fight against intemperance and impurity, and also to influence the working-class vote at municipal and other elections, in favour of those whose principles are acceptable and sound. The Sunday gatherings in the Assembly Hall must be seen to be rightly appreciated. Some have wondered at the respectable appearance of a great number of the audiences, but this, in itself, is a tribute to the work done; for having been changed in heart, the people have been changed outwardly; they were filthy and ragged once, now they are clean and well clothed. There is, however, a great ingathering still going on, for already this year the names of nearly four hundred anxious inquirers have been taken, and these are regularly visited. In the Sunday-schools there are upwards of six hundred children, and evangelistic meetings for young people are held every Sunday morning and evening, with an attendance also of about six hundred. Many other agencies—band of hope, mothers' meeting, &c.—are in full operation.

Another new feature of the work is the taking of a coast-guard station for the purpose of a Convalescent Home. It is delightfully situated close to Rottingdean, near Brighton, surrounded by the Downs and facing the sea on the top of a high cliff. This will be a great boon to many toilers connected with the Hall.

Special mention must be made of the Rescue Home, which has accommodation for fifteen inmates, and which has proved a very effective aid to the work. In another direction, so also is the provident club, established ten years ago. That the advantages of this club, which "shares out" every year, are well understood by the working people of the district, one fact will suffice to prove. Last year the sharing out amounted to £2000, but the next distribution will, it is expected, reach £3000.

We must not omit to add that a determined effort is now being made to reduce the heavy debt on the Great Assembly Hall—an effort to which we wish all success.

◆

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The new era in foreign missions has begun. Its signs multiply. Precursors have been following each other rapidly, or springing up simultaneously in many lands. Churches in the United Kingdom and the United States are fired with new zeal to aim at fulfilling the royal commission of our risen Lord. The supporters of missions have been startled to find how little, comparatively speaking, has been done, and how much remains to be accomplished. The spirit of self-sacrifice is deepening and extending. Men and women are consecrating themselves in increasing numbers to go to "the uttermost ends of the earth" in the service of the King. Volunteers multiply for the foreign field as never before, in Britain and America, ready to go, paid or unpaid, or under-paid, when the way opens.

The grace of giving does not develop so rapidly as the readiness for personal service. Hence many excellent societies have a difficulty in extending their operations. But in this matter, too, there are signs of a new departure. Men of large means, and some of them of high rank, are giving up a too expensive style of living that they may give more largely for the missionary enterprise. Others with large and loving hearts, having less to give, are preparing to take their part in the world-wide work. Many do give up to their ability; but this cannot be said of all who profess to love the Lord. We need a deepening of the spiritual life that Christians may "abound in this grace also." There is need that millions be added to the Churches of Christendom, not only that they may themselves be saved, but that they may come "to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

Meanwhile let earnest Christians remember that in reference to the duty of self-denial "every man must bear his own burden." There is no substitution here. To admire the self-denial of others, and to make it an excuse for withholding "more than is meet," not only tends to spiritual poverty but transmutes a stimulant into a sedative.

Much wisdom is needed by leaders of thought and action in the Churches to direct the intensified zeal of many, whether for personal service or the support of the great work. There should be much prayer for "the wisdom that cometh from above" for the Directors of missionary societies, and for all who are helping on the new departure.

The fields of action are vast and various; but I may refer to India, with which I am best acquainted. India has special claims on British Christians. Its missionaries are numerous from the United Kingdom and the Continent, the United States and Canada; but even if doubled, there would be much land to be possessed, so vast is our Eastern Empire. The great question is how new efforts can be turned to the best possible account—whether by aiding and extending existing societies or otherwise?

All the Protestant Churches have missions in India, and some of them have many stations. All who are qualified and called for the work may therefore find spheres in connection with their own Churches. Every Society has a base of operations, and some have many well-organised centres with branch stations. To supplement these by new recruits and larger means, would be more practicable and extensively effective than any new effort. Facilities for acquiring new languages are at once available, and experienced missionaries would be ready to welcome and guide young and fervent evangelists.

I am aware that some object to present modes of missionary action in India, and especially the educational; but even those who have done most for schools and colleges have purely evangelistic work also. I think with the movers in the new departure that evangelistic work should be greatly and rapidly extended; but this can easily be done in connection with existing societies. The Foreign Mission Committee of the Free Church of Scotland, whilst maintaining its educational institutions, has resolved to increase its evangelistic work. For this object one generous friend has given £1000, and others are ready to follow. In London the directors of one of our greatest societies are seriously considering a plan in harmony with recent appeals; other committees are probably equally ready to advance.

Some would prefer an undenominational society. There are societies that accomplish their objects best by being undenominational, or, as a missionary at Bombay happily expressed it, "pan-denominational." Such are the Bible, Tract, Christian Vernacular, and Anglo Indian Evangelisation Societies. But the existence of so many admirable missions makes it important for harmonious action, and in the interests of Christian union, that an earnest effort be made to extend all these missions.

Whilst I would urge the rapid extension of purely evangelistic work, I would not depreciate other modes of action. In evangelistic tours during fourteen winters in nearly all parts of India, and in Burmah, I have been a witness of the work and the fruits of many missions; and my conviction is that the Lord has signally owned the efforts of his servants whether evangelistic, educational, literary, or medical, or in Zenanas, and that all these plans are mutually supplementary, and working together for India's good.

The facilities all over India, and in Burmah, for honorary volunteers, for fully qualified missionaries, and for those who feel called of the Lord to go forth two and two simply as evangelists, must be reserved for another paper. JOHN FORDYCE.

◆

ELIJAH THE PROPHET.—19.

BY REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A., LEICESTER.

THE TRANSFIGURATION.

LUKE IX.

WORDSWORTH and all his followers were students in the school of Jesus Christ. Never breathed a more enthusiastic lover of Nature than He. Lilies could not grow at his feet, or birds wing their homeward flight over his head, without attracting his swift attention. His daily talk was of wandering sheep and whitening corn; of living wells and summer rain, and the changing hues of morn and eve. We cannot wonder therefore at his snatching brief opportunities for communion with the scenes of natural beauty; or that He often climbed the everlasting hills—the natural altars of the world; obviously intended not for habitation but for worship.

Such an occasion is the one referred to here. Wearied with his toils, and requiring time for private intercourse with his friends, to prepare them for the approaching tragedy, of which they were strangely unconscious, He travelled northwards with his disciples, avoiding the larger towns, until they reached one of the smaller villages, nestling on the lower slopes of Mount Hermon, which towers into the clouds, and forms a majestic barrier on the northern frontier of Palestine. There they seem to have rested for about a week. Think how they may have spent those days! Watching the snows on the upper peaks flush in the dawn; and glow in the sunset, as if aflame. Revelling in the fertility, which centuries before had been compared to the fragrant oil, anointing the high priest. Visiting the ancient forest of cedars, from which Hiram's servants had hewn the beams of Solomon's temple, or the mountain springs, where the familiar Jordan had its source. A week would quickly pass amid engagements such as these, blended as they must have been with intercourse on the loftiest themes.

After eight days Jesus took with Him his three mighties, Peter, James, and John; and as the evening shadows darkened over the world He led them up to some neighbouring summit, removed from the sight and sound of men. He went to brace Himself for the coming conflict by prayer, and perhaps for the earlier part of the night the favoured three bore Him fellowship; but they soon grew weary, and presently as afterwards in Gethsemane, were wrapt in heavy sleep; though dimly conscious of their Master's presence, as He poured out his soul with strong cryings and tears. We know not how many hours elapsed ere they were suddenly startled from their slumbers, not by the gentle touch of morning light, but beneath the stroke of the unbearable glory, which streamed from their Master's person. The fashion of his countenance was altered; the deep lines of care that had seamed it were obliterated; the look of pensive sadness was gone. "His face did shine as the sun," not lit up as that of Moses was by reflection from without, but illumined from within, as if the hidden glory of the Shechinah, too long concealed, were bursting through the frail veil of flesh; kindling it to radiance as it passed. "His raiment," the common homespun of the country, "became white and dazzling," more resplendent than the glistering snow above, and as though angels had woven it of light. But perhaps the greatest marvel of all was the presence of the august pair, "which were Moses and Elijah; who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease [his exodus—out of death into new and resurrection life] which He was about to accomplish at Jerusalem."

I. CONSIDER THE PROBABLE REASONS WHY THESE TWO, AND ESPECIALLY ELIJAH, WERE CHOSEN ON THIS SUBLIME OCCASION.—The first reason might have been that they should attest the dignity of the Lord Jesus.—He was approaching the darkest hour of his career, when his sun should set in an ocean of ignominy and shame; and it seemed as if heaven itself were astir, by embassy, or delegation, or deputation, to assure his friends, and to convince the world, of his intrinsic worth. Should seraphs be commissioned? Nay, for men, unable to realise their rank, would be simply dazzled. Better far to send back some of the human family, who had passed into the unseen, but whose illustrious deeds still lived in the memory of mankind, giving weight to their witness. Yet who should be selected?

There might have been a fitness in sending the first Adam to attest the supreme dignity of the second; or Abraham, the father of them that believe. But their claims were waived in favour of these two, who might have more weight with the men of that time, as representing the two great departments of Jewish thought and Scripture; Moses the founder of the Law; Elijah the greatest of the Prophets.

It is impossible to exaggerate the prominence given to Elijah in the Jewish mind. At the circumcision of a child a seat was always placed for him, and at the annual celebration of the Passover in each home, wine was placed for him to drink, the cup for which, among richer Jews, was made of gold, set with jewels. And it was universally believed that he was to come again to announce the advent of the Messiah. It would, therefore, have great weight with these disciples, and through them with after-ages, to feel that he had stood beside Jesus of Nazareth offering Him homage and help. And it was partly the memory of the allegiance rendered by Elijah to his Master that led Peter to say, in after-years, that he had been an eye-witness of His majesty.

Astronomers tell us that our sun, with its attendant worlds, is only a satellite of some other mightier star; and that these wondrous orbs are circling round some far-distant centre, known as Alcyone. If this be so; and if our mighty sun is only a satellite, what must not be the glories of the central body, whose majestic progress it attends! And if Elijah were so illustrious, what must not be the glories of that wondrous Being, to whom he was only a servant amongst many!

Another reason may be found in the peculiar circumstances under which they left the world.—Moses died, not by disease, or by natural decay, but beneath the kiss of God. His spirit passed painlessly and mysteriously to glory, whilst God buried his body. Elijah did not die. Disease and old age had nothing to do in taking down the fabric of his being. He did not sleep. but he was "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." We may not penetrate into the secrets of that mysterious border-land, which these two passed and repassed, in their holy ministry to the Saviour's spirit. But we feel that there was something in the method of their departure from our world, which made that passage easier.

Yet another reason is suggested in the evident fulfilment of their ministry.—They had been originally sent to prepare for Christ. "We have found Him," said Philip, "of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write." "Moses." said Jesus, "wrote of Me." "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." But the Jews were in danger of forgetting this, and of attaching more importance to the messengers than was justifiable. They clung to the stars even when the sun was steadily climbing up the sky. It was the death-warrant of Stephen, that he seemed to them to slight the Old Testament, by hinting that it would be abrogated and superseded by the New. Peter himself was quite prepared to treat Moses and Elijah on an equality with his Master, by building three tabernacles, one for each. This could not be, and therefore they were swept away by a cloud, and Jesus only was left, and the voice of God was heard insisting that they should listen to Him alone. It was as though God said (uttering words that lifted a dispensation from its hinges), "As ye have listened to the Law and the Prophets, so now listen to my Son. Do not put yourselves again under the law, or rest content with the prophets, however lofty their ideals and burning their words, but give to Him all the veneration and attention that you have been hitherto wont to reserve for them. Pass from the anticipation to the reality, from the type to the perfect fulfilment. They are taken, but all that made them helpful is left."

We, too, must sometimes climb transfiguration mounts, and see our beloved caught away from our gaze, and then return towards an unkindly and wrangling world; but let us remember that our hearts are bereft of their supports, to drive them to find all and more than all in Jesus. He is enough for any heart, however lonely and desolate. He suffices for heaven, and surely He can for earth. All that is good in anyone was first in Him, and remains in Him for ever without alloy. And as one after another is caught away, we are still rich with unsearchable wealth, we are still able to cope with all the devils that await us in the vales beneath, though we have "no man save Jesus only."

Such may have been some of the reasons that led to the appearance of these men on the transfiguration mount. Standing there for a moment and then receding into the land of glory, from which they came. Attesting his dignity, and then withdrawing, that the interest excited by their presence might not be focussed on themselves, but turned at once and more intensely on the person of Jesus Christ.

II. CONSIDER THE THEME ON WHICH THEY SPOKE.—They spoke not of the latest tidings of heaven, nor of their own wondrous past, nor of those high themes that engage celestial interest, but of the decease (the exodus) which He was to accomplish so soon at Jerusalem.

Great men love great thoughts.—And where could there have been found a greater subject than this wondrous death, and of his glorious resurrection, which was to affect all worlds, and to involve the Son of God in shame and sorrow so unfathomable. Herein they fitly precede the greatest thinkers of mankind—

Galileo, Kepler, Newton, Milton, Faraday, who have sought in the Gospel of the Cross the sea-room needed by their leviathan intellects.

Heaven was full of it.—Angels, forsaking all other interests, were absorbed in wonder, awe, and love, as they watched each step towards the destined goal. May we not imagine all the life of heaven arrested and pausing before that stupendous tragedy? It was natural, then, that these latest comers from those shores should talk of the one all-engrossing topic in the land which they had left.

Their own salvation depended on a successful issue.—If ever there were men who might have stood a chance of being accepted on their own merits, surely these were such. But they would have been most particular in disclaiming any such distinction. Looking back on their careers, they were deeply sensible of their imperfections and their sins. Moses remembered the petulance of Massah. Elijah recalled the faithlessness and fretfulness of the desert. And, in the light of eternity, they saw evil in many things which had seemed passably good in the twilight of earth. Should Jesus fail in his undertaking, they must resign their seats. Their only hope of salvation lay where ours does, in his overcoming the sharpness of death, and opening the kingdom of heaven to all believers.

And surely our Lord would lead them to dwell on a theme so constantly present to his mind.—He had always anticipated the hour of his death. It was for this that He had been born. But now it seemed very near. He stood within the shadow of the cross. And it must have been grateful to Him to talk with these lofty spirits of the various aspects of the joy that was set before Him. Moses might remind Him that if, as God's Lamb He must die, yet as God's Lamb He would redeem countless myriads. Elijah might dwell on the glory that would accrue to the Father. These thoughts were familiar enough to the mind of our blessed Master, yet they must have gladdened and strengthened Him, as they fell from other lips. The more so, when they conversed together on the certain splendour of the resurrection morning that should follow his decease.

Let us learn how men view the work of Christ in the light of eternity.—They do not dwell primarily on the mystery of the holy incarnation, or on the philanthropy of his life, or on the insight of his teachings. All these things are dwarfed by comparison with his death. That is his masterpiece—the Mont Blanc of the glorious range of his achievements in our mortal flesh. Here the attributes of God find their completest and most harmonious exemplification. Here the problems of human sin and salvation are met and solved. Here the travail of Creation meets with its answer and key. Here are sown the seeds of the new heavens and earth, in which shall dwell righteousness and peace. Here is the point of unity between all ages, all dispensations, all beings, all worlds. Here blend men and angels, departed spirits and the denizens of other spheres; Peter, James, and John, with Moses and Elijah, and all with the great God Himself, whose voice is heard falling in benediction from the opened heaven.

The nearer we get to the Cross, and the more we meditate on the decease accomplished at Jerusalem, the closer we shall come into the centre of things, the deeper will be our harmony with ourselves, and all other noble spirits, and God Himself. Climb that mountain often, in holy reverie, and remember that in all the universe there is no spirit more deeply interested in the mysteries and meaning of our Saviour's death than that noble prophet who now seeks no higher honour than to stand for ever as near to the beloved Master, as he did, for one brief space, on the Transfiguration Mount.

☞ Next week will appear the last of these chapters on Elijah. The whole will shortly be published in book form. Early orders are requested.

◆

LETTERS FROM NORTHFIELD.—5.

One evening during the Convention a very striking deliverance was made by Rev. Dr. Strong, on the present position and future prospects of the United States. He described the extent and resources of the great Republic, her States and her Territories, in such vivid colours, statistically, socially, politically, and poetically, that one almost began to wonder how the Creator made room for so great a nation on so small a planet.

Nevertheless, all that he said was true. And here it may be well to remark that what often seems to an islander mere bounce and exaggeration, is the natural form of expression to the inhabitant of a great continent. Our ideas accord with our surroundings, and an untravelled Englishman, who has scarcely room to move in this thickly peopled little garden, where we tread one another down, cannot understand the effect produced upon the mind by a vast extent of country where there is room and a welcome for everyone who is able and willing to work.

Dr. Strong is the author of a book published by the American Home Mission Society, entitled "Our Country," of which his lecture was an epitome. In his first chapter he argues that the closing years of the nineteenth century are one of the great focal periods of history. This is illustrated by a graphic sketch of the progress made during the century, and specially during the past forty years. He says:—

Anyone as old as the nineteenth century has seen a very large proportion of all the progress in civilisation made by the race. When seven years old, he might have seen Fulton's steam-boat on her trial trip up the Hudson. Until twenty years of age he could not have found in all the world an iron plough. At thirty he might have travelled on the first passenger-train. Fifty years later the world had 222,000 miles of railway. In the first thirty-three years of his life he had to rely on the tinder-box for fire. He was thirty-eight when steam communication between Europe and America was established. He had arrived at middle life (forty-four) when the first telegram was sent. Thirty-six years later the world had 604,000 miles of telegraph lines. Our century has been distinguished by a rising flood of inventions. The English Government issued more patents during the twenty years succeeding 1850, than during the 250 years preceding.

With the exception of astronomy, modern science is almost wholly the creation of this century. Another evidence of progress is found in the great ideas which have become the fixed possession of men within the past hundred years—individual liberty, and consequent abolition of slavery; honour to womanhood, whose fruitage is woman's elevation; the enhanced valuation of human life, &c., &c.

The next step of our author is, quoting an English writer, that "ten years in the history of America is half a century of human progress." And then that ten years in the West are equal to half a century East of the Mississippi. There is there a tremendous rush of events, startling even in the nineteenth century. The Times has described this development of the West as undoubtedly the most important fact in contemporary history, and without any cognate phenomenon in the past. And as it is without a precedent, so it will remain without a parallel, for there are no more new worlds to conquer.

The next step of the argument naturally is the vastness of the domain and the resources of the United States. As to size. Take Great Britain and Ireland. France, Germany, Austria, and Italy; add Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Denmark, and Greece. Weld them into one mighty empire, and you could lay it all down, three times over, in the United States, west of the Hudson River. This vast territory is compact, unified by railways, rivers, and lakes. As to resources, there are 2,970,000 square miles, of which 1500,000 are arable, and in excess of those of China by hundreds of thousands of square miles. Its agricultural resources could sustain and its manufacturing resources enrich a population of 1000,000,000. The United States raise half the world's supply of gold and silver; iron ore is mined in twenty-three States; the coal beds are inexhaustible, and while English coal-pits are being deepened and cost of coal increasing, here there is coal enough near the surface to last for centuries. Already the mining industries exceed those of Great Britain, and are greater than all Continental Europe, Asia, Africa, South America, and the British Colonies collectively.

As to manufactures, cotton is being manufactured where it grows. Wool, woods, hides, metals, the best machinery and tools, and the most ingenious and intelligent operatives in the world are found in the United States. Herbert Spencer testifies, that "beyond question, in respect of mechanical appliances, the Americans are ahead of all nations." Matthew Arnold has said, "America holds the future."

We do not wonder, therefore, that "it is proposed to show that the progress of Christ's kingdom in the world for centuries to come depends on the next few years in the United States."

But just as the States as a whole cast Europe into the shade, so the Eastern States will be overshadowed by the Western States and Territories; for with more than twice the room and resources of the East, the West will have probably twice the population and wealth of the East. By the West is meant the portion west of the Mississippi, and not including Alaska. Beyond a peradventure the West is to dominate the East. By reason of her greater population in the future, "the West will elect the executive and control legislation. The West will direct the policy of the Government, and, by virtue of her preponderating population and influence, will determine our national character, and therefore destiny." The star of empire, rising in the East, has ever beckoned the wealth and power of the nations westward, until to-day it stands still over the cradle of the young empire of the West, to which the nations are bringing their offerings."

But there are perils peculiar and imminent. (1) Immigration. (2) Romanism. (3) Mormonism. (4) Intemperance. (5) Socialism. (6) Wealth. (7) The City.

There are expellent forces in Europe and attractive forces in America; and it is to the West rather than to the East that immigration makes its way. Immigration is demoralising. A good deal of piety even in our churches will not bear transportation. In spending a few summer weeks at a watering-place it is commonly left at home. A considerable element of the American-born population are apparently under the impression that the Ten Commandments are not binding west of the Missouri. Is it strange, then, that those who come from other lands, whose old associations are all broken and whose reputations are left behind, should sink to a lower level? Accordingly the foreign element supplies 75 per cent. of the crime, 63 per cent. of the wholesale dealers in liquors and wines 75 per cent. of the brewers and maltsters, over 60 per cent. of the saloon-keepers.

The other perils noted above are thus summarised as to the political aspect. "Immigration has fed fat the Liquor power; and there is a Liquor vote. It feeds Mormonism; and there is a Mormon vote. It is the strength of Romanism; and there is a Romish vote. It is mother and nurse of American Socialism; and there is to be a Socialist vote. Immigration tends strongly to the cities and gives them their political complexion. And there is no more serious menace to our civilisation than our rabble-ruled cities."

All these perils are intensifying in the West, with this disadvantage that whereas New England was slowly peopled, under the initiative of a God-fearing original stock, speaking the same language, the West is being settled at unexampled speed, by well nigh every variety of race, representing every variety of religion and irreligion—peoples different in antecedents, language, customs, habits, ideas, character—and agreeing only in the universal and unbending purpose to make money.

If then, as Milton says, "Childhood shows the man, as morning shows the day," what will be the manhood of the West, unless the churches of the East are speedily aroused to some appreciation of their opportunity and their obligation to evangelise the West?

Then follows a very optimist chapter on the Anglo-Saxon race as the hope of the world's future. It is said that every great race has been the representative of some great idea: Egyptians—life; Persians — light; Hebrews — purity; Greeks—beauty; Romans — law. The Anglo-Saxon is the representative of two great ideas closely related—civil liberty, and pure, spiritual Christianity. The result of the competition of races will be the "survival of the fittest," i.e., the Anglo-Saxon race. "Is there room for reasonable doubt that this race, unless devitalised by alcohol and tobacco, is destined to dispossess many weaker races, to assimilate others, and to mould the remainder, until, in a very true and important sense, it has Anglo-Saxonised mankind?"

Till the war-drum throbs no longer, and the battle-flags are furled
In the Parliament of man, the federation of the world.

These are the links in the chain of the author's reasoning: "The Anglo-Saxon holds in his hands the destinies of mankind for ages to come. The United States is to be the home of this race, the principal seat of its power, the great centre of its influence. The great West is to dominate the nation's future. This generation is to determine the character, and hence the destiny of the West. Then may God open the eyes of this generation. From the pyramid top of opportunity on which God has set us we look down on forty centuries. It is in the hands of the Christians of the United States, during the next fifteen or twenty years, to hasten or retard the coming of Christ's kingdom in the world by hundreds, perhaps thousands, of years."

That is a grand conception. Whether it is according to the Scriptures of truth is another question. But so far as preaching the glad tidings to every creature, preaching the Gospel of the kingdom for a witness to all nations, we should act as if it were.

The last discussion is on "Money and the Kingdom." For Christians to apprehend their true relation to money, and the relation of money to the kingdom of Christ and its progress in the world, is to find the key to many of the great problems now pressing for solution. God's claim to the whole rests on exactly the same ground as his claim to a part, therefore every dollar and cent we possess is to be employed in the way that will best honour God. Missionaries are called to make great sacrifices to God. But the rich man has more power to send than the missionary has to go; he can, perhaps, send one, two, or twelve. He is called to make as great sacrifices in sending as the missionary in going. The needs of the world to-day are boundless; hence every man's obligation to supply that need is the full measure of his ability.

"But," says one, "I must not give of my capital, because that would impair my ability to give in the future." True, giving one dollar out of capital may prevent your giving five, fifteen years hence. But for missionary work one dollar now is worth ten dollars fifteen years later.

This principle is not acted on. There are many noble gifts and givers; but they only help to demonstrate that great multitudes in the Church have not yet learned the first principles of Christian giving. Ten million professing Christians between 1870-80 gave on an average fifty-five cents each for home and foreign missions. But hundreds of churches give nothing; and of those that do many members give nothing. A church in Hartford gave 1100 dollars to home missions. Said one lady to another, "Didn't we do well this morning?" "No, not as a church," was the reply; "for one lady gave 600, and one gentleman 300." The great majority of church members give only a trifle or nothing at all for the work of missions.

The wealth of Church members in the United States of America, in 1880, was 8728 million dollars. Of this one-sixteenth of one per cent., or one dollar out of 1586, is given in a year for the salvation of seven or eight hundred million heathen. The annual increase of wealth of Church members from 1870-80 was 391 million dollars, over and above all expense of living and giving; while the annual contributions to missions, home and foreign, were five and a half million dollars.

When the heathen come to the light they are much more Christian in their conceptions of duty and privilege, and shame us by their giving. It is an amazing circumstance that in 1881 the 1200 members of the United Presbyterian Board in Egypt—most of them very poor men and women—raised £4546, or more than 17 dollars each, for the support of churches and schools. But it is far more amazing that Christians in rich America should give only fifty cents each to missions.

Most Christians give something or nothing as they feel like it. They might as well attempt to live a Christian life, and be honest or not as they felt like it. The reformation must begin with the pulpit. Too many ministers have not laid hold of this truth about giving; or at least, it has not laid hold of them.

Duty and danger alike call to adequate and unstinted giving. "The saving power of the Church is its sacrificing power. The Church's remedy for social discontent and dynamite bombs is Christianity as taught in the New Testament." The present danger of the civilised world is knowledge multiplied and popularised, and wealth multiplied and centralised.

Immorality and crime increase much more rapidly than church membership. "Our churches are growing, our missionary operations extending, our benefactions swelling, and we congratulate ourselves upon our progress; but we have only to continue the same kind of progress long enough, and our destruction is sure."

He who receives but does not give is like the Dead Sea. All the fresh floods of Jordan cannot sweeten its dead salt depths. So all the streams of God's bounty cannot sweeten a heart that has no outlet; that is ever receiving yet never full and overflowing.

These facts all deserve and demand our best consideration, for what is true of the churches in America is true also in England.

We need not show that Dr. Strong's facts refute his theory as to the Anglo-Saxon race and the coming kingdom, and the next twenty years. The facts are real, however unreal the theory may be. And what he says about the duty and privilege of giving, and the dangers and disasters consequent on not giving, is all true; but our hope is in God, and it would be an injustice to Dr. Strong not to state that in the beginning of his dissertation on money he says:—"God forbid that I should attribute to money power which belongs only to faith, love, and the Holy Spirit. In the problem of Christian work money is like the cipher, worthless alone, but multiplying many fold the value and effectiveness of other factors."

A few weeks ago some young workwomen wrote to Mr. Goss, the minister of the church originated by Mr. Moody at Chicago, representing their isolation from genial and appropriate social intercourse, and asking if he could not do something to meet their needs in this respect. My last interview with Mr. Moody was at the train when he was going to Chicago under the circumstances stated in the following extract from the American notes in our contemporary, The Nonconformist and Independent:—

"Rev. C. F. Goss, the pastor of Mr. Moody's church at Chicago, recently preached a sermon, in which he described, in very appropriate terms, the special temptations to which working girls in that city are subject, suggesting the necessity of making some healthful provision in the case of those who are living in great cities without the safeguards of home, and proposing an organisation, with an adequate building, on a site adjoining the church. The details of his scheme, and how it should be carried out, were embodied in the discourse of Mr. Goss. Some members of the church, including six members of the church committee, objected to this sermon, the objection being, not so much to any specific utterances in the sermon itself, with which, indeed, in form and phraseology, no fault could be found, as to the treatment of such themes in the pulpit; in other words, to the introduction into the pulpit of anything except what are called simple Gospel sermons. Mr. Goss thereupon resigned, and Mr. Moody promptly went to Chicago to give him his cordial support. In a special sermon founded on the whole of Luke's Gospel the evangelist said, 'I believe firmly that the cause of Jesus Christ has suffered more in the last sixty years by one worker pitching into another than by any other thing. If a man doesn't preach just your way, don't pull him down. Don't get a harp of just one string, and then harp, harp, harp all the time on that.' As a result, the church, by a vote of 380 to 18, declined the resignation of the pastor, and accepted that of the six objecting members of the committee."

We need to correct the narrow and unworthy view of the Gospel which practically denies that godliness "has the promise of the life that now is as well as of that which is to come." How much of the narrative of the four Evangelists would be open to objection on this false principle!

R. C. Morgan.

◆

CLEANSING AN AUGEAN STABLE.

"This is a grand victory!" we involuntarily exclaimed, as last week we looked upon a row of fifteen closed houses that had long been used as places of evil resort. For forty years Lady Lake's Grove, Mile-End-road, has been notoriously the most disorderly and irreclaimable of any of the streets or by-lanes of East London. The houses were the resort of the lowest and vilest people. They have been a crying scandal to the neighbourhood all these years; yet the local authorities, who had the power, moved not a hand to remedy the evil. Until the passing of the Criminal Law Amendment Act two years ago, private individuals were powerless to act.

At length Mr. F. N. Charrington was impelled to intervene. He took out summonses against the owners of these houses, and at a trifling cost a clean sweep has been made of all their inhabitants. Even before the date when the summonses were returnable, fourteen out of fifteen of the houses were vacated, and the only woman who refused to leave was sentenced by Mr. Lushington, the magistrate, to three months' hard labour. Mr. Charrington several times visited the people, bearing earnest testimony against the wickedness that was going on, while assuring the girls of his desire for their welfare. Ultimately, twenty-five of them accepted his invitation to a breakfast in the Assembly Hall. Difficult as it was to secure their serious attention, they at last listened quietly to questions as to their future prospects, and whether they intended to continue their dreadful life. It is satisfactory to state that several have since been received into the Rescue Home connected with the Hall and that three or four of the keepers of these houses have resolved to abandon their shameful calling.

Y.W.C.A., PLYMOUTH.—This Association has lately received a large increase of members, compelling the resolution to secure larger premises. In the new Institute twelve boarders will be received. The members are principally connected with the large houses of business in Plymouth, and every effort is made to reach young servants, for whom it is hoped, when the new premises are entered upon, to form a junior branch, especially for apprentices and girls just leaving school. Communications should be addressed to the president, Mrs. Laycock, Charles Vicarage, Plymouth.

PERTH CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

Last week we have had the privilege (writes an esteemed contributor) for the twenty-fifth time of attending this annual gathering at Perth. The interest in the meetings was in no wise abated; the warmth of Christian fellowship was as intense and as happy as ever. The prevailing feeling at the closing of the three days was expressed in the words, "The last was the best." Very much of the presence and power of the Lord was enjoyed. While some speakers failed who were expected, others were sent providentially at the time they were needed, and their message was peculiarly seasonable and instructive.

The subject of the Conference this year was "The Kingly Office of Christ." The confident hope that He shall soon return to reign was impressively vindicated in this year of national jubilee. During these three days of privileged ministry and meditation the leading elements of the Kingly office and work of Emmanuel were dwelt upon; notwithstanding diversity of thought, in respect to the future manifestation of the kingdom, a feeling of unity of spirit and brotherly confidence prevailed. One thing we were thankful for, that in many of the addresses the "blessed hope" was prominent, so that, while active in the Master's service, believers are to be looking for, and waiting for, his appearing.

The Conference commenced on Tuesday forenoon. In the much-regretted absence of Lord Polwarth, Mr. Ferguson, of Kinmundy, took the chair. He spoke a loving welcome to all present, and then introduced the subject on the programme. While we cannot think too much, he said, of Christ as Prophet, and of Christ as Priest, because of his atonement for sin, yet to think of Him as King enhances the other offices He came to fill. Christ is the Saviour-Prince, and at the same time the princely Saviour. As the lowly Saviour He came to earth, and laboured and died, but He is the Prince still.

Rev. J. Wilkinson, of Mildmay, with all his characteristic zeal, gave from Old Testament prophecy, striking testimony to the Person of the King, and to the purpose of God to bring all things in subjection under Him. So replete was the address in bringing out the wonderful harmony of Scripture that it seemed as if a fresh mine of Divine truth were struck. Quoting with facility the Hebrew, he found complete harmony between the "Jehovah Angel" of the ancient patriarchal and prophetical cycles, and the New Testament, "Jesus, the Christ." So clear and effective was the exposition that we felt we could revel more than ever in the beautiful consistency of inspired revelation concerning the adorable Person, and the kingdom of our Lord.

Principal Cairns followed, and spoke of the duties and privileges of those who are the subjects of the King; closing with an earnest expostulation.

In the evening Mr. Stuart Gray, of Kinfauns, presided. Mr. Arnold, of the Evangelical Alliance, took up the important subject of "The union of all Christians," giving illustrations of the power and beauty of oneness in Christ. He was followed by Rev. Sholto Douglas on "The Keeping Power of Christ," as brought out in John xvii., this great purpose being expressed in the 26th verse, "That the love wherewith Thou hast loved Me may be in them, and I in them." Mr. Wilkinson in the closing address of the evening presented the Apostolic order for evangelisation work—"beginning at Jerusalem."

A large gathering again filled the City Hall on Wednesday forenoon, Lord Kinnaird in the chair.

The first speaker was Dr. Herdman, of Melrose, who took up the subject of "Christ as King, in Relation to the Salvation of Souls." He spoke of many as willing to rely on Christ's atonement for salvation, but not willing that He should be King over them. When Jesus comes, however, He comes to reign as the King of Glory. In the second part of his address he pictured the blessedness of having such a King to defend us from all enemies, to provide out of his boundless resources for all our need; One who is able to keep us from falling, and to present us faultless before the presence of his glory, all power having been placed in his pierced hands.

The second address was by Rev. Mr. Collinson, Rector of Walton. His subject was "The duty and privilege of the King's people to rejoice in Him" (Ps. cxlix. 2). Three texts in connection with Christian joy were given: Phil. iv. 4; Rom. xiv. 17; Gal. v. 22. Then followed some precious words on the reasons why we should be glad. There is joy when an heir is born. Then the King knows all that concerns us; He loveth his people. He knows, and loves, and preserves his people, and gives them the power to rejoice in Him.

The forenoon meeting was closed by Rev. J. Hudson Taylor in an address full of practical wisdom and encouragement. Duty and privilege, he said, could not be separated. Every duty must be an unspeakable privilege, and every privilege a duty. God our Father wants to link us to Himself; He would have full possession of our hearts. He wants all our affections, and then we will have a key to his mysteries. God has linked duty and privilege so closely, that if we want a full blessing we must take care to have it in God's way. He wants us to draw what we will from his treasure, and then give out to others. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," is his law; so if we would have the blessing of the receiving, we must have the giving too. The speaker adapted the beautiful similes of the living water, and the vine and its branches, with their growth and fruitfulness, to the activity of the Christian life, and closed with a practical application drawn from the experience of the Bride in the Song, for the conduct of the Church in these days.

On Wednesday evening Dr. Sinclair Paterson gave a stirring address on Gospel Temperance, and pleaded for the Gospel as the Divine and perfect provision for deliverance from drunkenness. Mr. H. Grattan Guinness spoke on the prophetical aspect of Christ's kingdom, and Mr. W. Lane closed with a most heart-stirring word to the unsaved. Mr. Guinness showed most clearly from Scripture that though in the present dispensation the kingdom of Christ is a spiritual kingdom, running alongside of all other secular governments, yet that in the future this kingdom is intended to destroy and replace all earthly governments, when the stone cut out of the mountain without hands shall break in pieces the great image of Daniel, and fill the whole earth.

Thursday forenoon brought us to the closing part of our glorious subject. We were shown first, by Mr. W. Balfour, who occupied the chair, the result of all the Church's conflicts and trials and discipline on earth, when she shall be presented "a glorious Church" before the presence of the King's glory. When the holy angels shall gaze on her with admiration, they shall be able to say, "How like Christ she is."

Rev. J. Fordyce, looking through the telescope of promise, as he called it (while he left his friend, Dr. A. Bonar, to use the telescope of prophecy), sought to make these glorious hopes tell on our present position in the world. The prospect of being more than conquerors, the certainty of victory, &c., bring a power to bear upon our present work, so that with the Apostle Paul we can say:—"I reckon that the sufferings even of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us" &c. (2 Cor. iv. 17, 18; 1 John iii. 3).

Then followed the venerable Dr. Andrew Bonar, who in his own fervent, simple style held up before believers present the mirror of the Word, and showed us reflected in it the glory of the kingdom yet to be revealed, when "the kingdoms of this world shall have become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ." In Ps. lxxii. we have the glory of the kingdom dwelt upon, when this earth shall be the dwelling-place of the righteous, and when Jerusalem shall be the City of the Great King; when seraphs shall behold from heaven and see our earth glittering afar in its new glory; when one spot in it shall be brighter than any other, to mark the spot where the God-man died, where the atoning sacrifice was offered, and where God had been most of all glorified. In this new earth rivers of gladness shall flow, the reproach of barrenness shall be past; one song shall be on all lips, "Worthy the Lamb that was slain." "The vales shall shout and sing, the very atmosphere shall be changed, when the blight of the curse is gone. The glory of the kingdom we can feebly imagine, but who can describe the glory of the King? On his resurrection morning even, we have no description of his glory, though it is said of the angel who rolled away the stone from the sepulchre, that "his countenance was like lightning." So we need not try to describe it. "But when He shall appear we shall be like Him." Dr. Bonar urged Christians to tell out the Gospel of the Atoning Blood over all the earth, and to shun all teaching where that is left out. He closed by reminding us how near the time of Christ's kingly manifestation may be, when the prayer shall have been answered—"Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

The Communion of the Lord's Supper, which as usual closed the Conference proper, was a very hallowed and refreshing hour. Dr. Herdman presided, and gave an affectionate and solemn word, well suited to the memorial feast. After the Supper, Rev. Mr. Collinson commended the love of Christ, and the believer's rest and joy in that love. Many, we believe, felt it to be a season of real communion.

At the evening meeting Sir Robert Phayre presided, and in fine sympathy of spirit referred to the subject of the day. The first address was given by Mr. Wilkinson, on the present movement amongst the Jews, indicating much more sympathy with and inquiry into the truth of Christianity. He was followed by Dr. Sinclair Paterson, who set forth the atoning work of Christ as the only ground of the sinner's salvation. The closing address by Mr. W. R. Lane was a most fervent and awakening appeal to the unconverted, founded on Rev. xx. 11.

Numbers remained to an after-meeting each evening, and some, we believe, were led into the joy of sin forgiven. Many left the Conference with thankfulness of heart for such a refreshing season.

MR. WILLIAM NOBLE will conduct a Gospel temperance mission from September 24 to October 11, in a marquee to be erected upon a plot of land in Gillespie-road, Highbury-vale, N., placed at the disposal of the large and representative council which has been formed, by Mr. H. C. Stephens, M.P. An attractive programme of meetings has been prepared, the speakers including many of the best known advocates of the cause, and a hearty interest is apparent amongst the workers of the district.

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY IN CHINA.—This Society has during the past year added to its list of publications the Book of Psalms in Shanghai Colloquial, and the latter half of the New Testament in Canton Colloquial, besides other editions of portions of the Scriptures. 234,894 volumes have been distributed, nearly 190,000 of these by colporteurs, who visited close upon 7,000 places, and travelled 99,000 miles. There are 52 native colporteurs, superintended by eleven foreigners, besides eight others, mostly Englishmen. The visitation work of these men, including that of junks and steamers, is of the most interesting character.

NATIONAL BIBLE SOCIETY OF SCOTLAND.—Mr. A. S. Annand, the second of the two young men who have lately been accepted for service in China, sails on the 26th inst. for Hankow, whither his companion, Mr. James Murray, had already preceded him. Rev. Dr. A. N. Somerville made a statement in reference to the mission he is about to undertake in certain provinces of Austria, in which the Board agreed to give him all the assistance in their power. Encouraging reports have been received from Pernambuco and Sitapur, India, where Bibles sold by the Society's colporteurs had been instrumental in much good. It was reported that Bibles had been supplied to 110 widows, orphans, and other sufferers from the recent explosion at Udson Colliery.

The Christian.

September 23, 1887.

CONTENTS.

Mr. F. N. Charrington 1
Foreign Missions 2
Elijah the Prophet.—19 3
Letters from Northfield.—5...... 4
Cleansing an Augean Stable 5
Perth Christian Conference...... 6
Notes on Scripture Readings 8
Another "John Three Sixteen".. 9
"Little Women" 9
From the Dominion 9
A Prophetic Letter 10
A Reminiscence of Revival 11
Doncaster Races 11
Notes and Comments 12
Official Corruption 14
The Figueras Mission 14
"A Little Pot of Oil" 15
"A Work of Death"............15
Evangelisation in Basutoland....15
Work among Factory Girls 15
Evolution 16
The Village Poor 16
Died at his Post................16
Evangelistic Notes..............16

TRACT DISTRIBUTION

Tracts at 4d. per 100; 6d. per 100; 8d. per 100; 1s. per 100; 2s. per 100. Over Three Hundred different sorts.

Specimen Tracts of either price sent free on application to MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C.

The King's Palace

Cloth Limp, 1s.

THE KING'S PALACE.

A Series of Readings for each Day of the Month. By Rev. J. H. ROGERS, M.A. With Carmine Borders. 4th Thousand.

"This is a very prettily got-up book, and its matter well deserves its dainty surroundings. The volume consists of brief meditations for each day of the month, and is divided into six sections: the Heart, Lips, Eyes, Ears, Hands, Feet. The meditations are based on some appropriate text, beginning with: 'A broken and a contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise;' and ending with, 'They that wait upon the Lord shall..walk, and not faint.' It would be a very nice and helpful present for a young disciple."—Christian Miscellany.

Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.

THE KING'S PALACE.

A Series of Readings for each Day of the Month. By Rev. J. H. ROGERS, M.A. With Carmine Borders. 4th Thousand.

"This little book offers to busy people one thought each day in connection with the service of our bodies, and gives a few words of prayer as suggesting a particular petition. The arrangement is simple, each week being devoted to a particular part of the body. It is calculated to protect from wearing temptation, and to guide in the way of practical holiness."—Christian Age.

Cloth Boards, with gilt edges, 2s.

THE KING'S PALACE.

A Series of Readings for each Day of the Month. By Rev. J. H. ROGERS, M.A. With Carmine Borders. 4th Thousand.

"This book has a practical reference exclusively to Christian service and touches upon the parts which the heart, the lips, the eyes, the ears, the hands, and the feet, are to play therein. There is much freshness and force, both in the idea and its treatment, and we think it will hold its own with its many competitors."
Sword and Trowel.

Leather Binding, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

THE KING'S PALACE.

A Series of Readings for each Day of the Month. By Rev. J. H. ROGERS, M.A. With Carmine Borders. 4th Thousand.

"We are very pleased with this little book. Sound in its teaching, and thoroughly practical in its method, it at the same time presents the truth touching the daily walk n a striking and an interesting form."
Life of Faith.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.; Cloth Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

ISRAEL: A Prince with God.

The Story of Jacob Re-told.

BY REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE RIVER JORDAN AND JACOB'S WELL.

CONTENTS.

I. First Impressions.
II. The Sale of the Birthright.
III. The Stolen Blessing.
IV. The Angel-Ladder.
V. The Noble Resolve.
VI. The Education of Home.
VII. The Mid-Passage of Life.
VIII. The Stirring-up of the Nest.
IX. The Midnight Wrestle.
X. Failure.
XI. Back to Bethel.
XII. The School of Sorrow.
XIII. Glimpses of the Israel-Nature.
XIV. Rest, and the Rest-Giver.
XV. Home: at Last.
XVI. The God of Jacob.

"Exceedingly good. Not only spiritual, as everything from our brother Mr. Meyer would be, but also thoughtful, fresh, suggestive, thoroughly practical. We rejoice at every remembrance of the good work done in Melbourne Hall, Leicester, by this laborious worker; and we are glad to see that Mr. Meyer is likely to be useful with his pen, as well as with his tongue. Oh that hundreds of our younger men gave signs of such real godliness, such true devotion, and such clear knowledge of the Gospel as we see in this pastor."—Sword and Trowel, Sept., 1887.

"The addresses which compose the book flash with the brightness of evangelical truth, expressed in clear and graceful diction. No Christian is likely to read the volume with a due measure of care without being wiser, and purer, and happier, and more devoted to his Master. It surpasses any book we have seen on Jacob and his eventful career. Its perusal makes us feel that Jacob was a man of like passions with ourselves, and that the record given us of him is given for our instruction. Most heartily do we commend Mr. Meyer's book, and hope that our readers will obtain copies for themselves."—Irish Baptist Magazine, Aug., 1887.

"With admirable tact the conduct of Jacob is depicted, and the application of its lessons to present day life vividly shown."—Footsteps of Truth, July, 1887.

"The portraitures of the leading characters in this book are drawn with peculiar force and accuracy. We quite agree with the author in his opinion that, upon merely human grounds, Esau was a better man than Jacob. It was grace, and grace alone, that made the difference. Isaac's pandering to his fleshly appetite, Rebecca's favouritism, and Jacob's subtlety, may well suggest the need of watchfulness, and prompt the cry 'Lead us not into temptation!' With the exception of a statement here and there, we cannot but regard this work as one well worthy of a deliberate and most thoughtful perusal. It abounds with lessons of greatest moment and importance, and is worthy of a place in every household. We have read the work throughout with deepest interest, and, can most strongly recommend it."—Gospel Magazine, July, 1887.

"A noble book, calculated to be of the highest usefulness, and we are thankful of the opportunity of commending it."—Baptist Magazine, July, 1887.

"A very successful attempt is here made to reproduce the striking features of Jacob's life, presenting much that not only brings the story vividly before us, but draws out its lessons and meanings."
The Rock, June 17, 1887.

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Tinted Covers, 2s. Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.
PRESENTATION EDITION.—Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

D. L. MOODY At Home.

HIS HOME AND HOME WORK.

Containing a description of the Educational Institutions established at Northfield and Mount Hermon: together with some Account of the various Christian Conferences, and Reports of some of the most striking of the Addresses.

WITH EIGHT FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE IMPORTANT EDUCATIONAL BUILDINGS.

"A delightful picture of the American Evangelist amidst home surroundings. His educational institutions at Northfield and Mount Hermon are described. To illustrate their spirit take the pledge card nailed inside most of the domitory rooms. 'God helping me, I, a disciple of Jesus Christ, agree: (1) To judge not; (2) To try to bring at least one soul to Christ each year; (3) To observe regular seasons for secret prayer, to be made more Christlike, and that in my work for others I may depend upon the Holy Spirit; (4) To engage in no amusement where the Saviour could not be my companion;' &c. The account of Christian Conferences, and helpful thoughts expressed at them, is very edifying. Mr. Moody's own 'Bible Nuggets' are among the best in the volume."—The Rock, July 29, 1887.

"This is a capital and useful book. Mr. Moody stamps all he does with his own vigorous personality, and a description of the work carried on near his home in Northfield, Mass., is interesting as evidencing the intensely practical character of one who is certainly no mere roving evangelist."—Methodist Recorder, July 7, 1887.

"This is no mere biography. It is a faithful, full, and fervid picture of Mr. Moody at work in his various organizations at his own home. . . . This beautifully got up and nicely illustrated volume ought to be in the hands of all Christian workers. It will be of the highest service to them. It teems with all kinds of useful hints suggested by an almost unique experience."
Oldham Chronicle, June 25, 1887.

LONDON: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Notes on Daily Readings.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 25.—ISAIAH XXXI.

"WE have here a brief summary of what has been so frequently set forth about Samaria, Jerusalem, and Assyria. Samaria, in spite of her Egyptian alliances, shall fall; Jerusalem shall be protected by Divine love; while the Assyrian shall be driven away in terror."—S.C.

1.—Stay on horses, and trust in chariots.—"Egypt was noted for chariots and horses from the earliest times, and they are the most marked feature in its monumental remains. The law of God had an express warning against trust in these chariots and horses of Egypt (Deut. xvii. 16; Psalm xx. 7)."—Birks.

2.—Yet he also is wise.—"These words are ironical. The All-wise has at least a share in the wisdom they claim so proudly."—Ibid.

5.—Passing over He will preserve it.—"There is a plain reference to the deliverance out of Egypt; for the word rendered 'passing over' is the one used in Exod. xii. 13, 23, 27. The very land to which they resorted for help ought to have reminded them of God's love and power."—Kay.

6.—Turn ye unto Him from whom the children of Israel have deeply revolted.—The allusion to the Passover recalls the whole history of Israel's revolt from the God who then delivered them.

8.—Then shall the Assyrian fall.—The primary fulfilment was the destruction of Sennacherib. The final one is that of Antichrist.

MONDAY, SEPT. 26.—ISAIAH XXXII.

"The mighty king of Assyria and his princes have disappeared. In their stead is seen (as by the rapid change of a dissolving view) the righteous King and his princes. See as a parallel the transition from the fall of Asshur in x. 33, 34 to the reign of Messiah in xi. 1—10."—Kay.

2.—A man shall be as a hiding place from the wind.—"This man is represented as exercising Divine prerogatives. The Lord Himself is said to be 'a refuge from the storm' (xxv. 4), and 'a shadow from the heat.' The righteous King is Immanuel."—Ibid.

5.—The vile person shall be no more called liberal.—"This reign of the promised Messiah is to be marked by a higher and purer standard of moral uprightness and benevolence. Hateful sins shall no longer be disguised under specious titles. The flatteries of the world shall cease. Counterfeits of goodness will be exposed, and sin be seen in its true light."—Birks.

9.—Rise up, ye women that are at ease.—"The promise of the Messiah's kingdom in the preceding verses is like a gleam of bright sunshine in a stormy sky. But the prophet reverts at once to his office of a watchman, to warn his people of the coming evil."—Ibid.

15.—Until the Spirit be poured upon us from on high.—"The desolations caused by national sin will cease only when true repentance has followed the promised outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Such a Pentecostal blessing still awaits the land of promise at the final recovery and ingathering of Israel."—Ibid.

19.—The city shall be low in a low place.—"'The city' must be Jerusalem, whose course from the false peace to the true lay through a humiliating punishment."—Delitzsch.

20.—Blessed are ye that sow beside all waters.—"Such was Isaiah's work: to scatter the seed of the word during the stormy years of Assyrian invasion. His teaching took root in Hezekiah's heart, so that his affiance in God seemed to Rabshakeh either folly or fanaticism (xxxvi. 4, 5). Yet through that seeming 'folly' Hezekiah won deliverance."—Kay.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 27.—ISAIAH XXXIII.

1.—Woe to thee that spoilest.—"This woe refers plainly to the overthrow of the Assyrians, on which all these earlier predictions converge, while the later ones diverge from the contrasted event of the Babylonish captivity."—Birks.

14.—The sinners in Zion are afraid.—"Even for the sinners in Jerusalem there is no abiding in the presence of the Almighty and Just One who has judged Assyria; the act of judgment is regarded by the prophet as having just occurred. They must either repent or they cannot remain in his presence who is a 'consuming fire' (Deut. iv. 24, ix. 3)."—Delitzsch. Comp. Num. xvii. 12, 13.

15.—He that walketh righteously, and speaketh uprightly.—"The words are not an answer to the previous questions, but a transition from the deep alarm of one class to the peaceful security of the other. How safe are they whom his favour encompasses like a shield. Their wants even in this life shall be provided for."—Birks.

17.—Thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty.—The New Testament reiteration of this promise is in our Lord's own words in John xvii. 24.

18.—Thine heart shall meditate terror.—Better in R.V., "Shall muse on the terror." "Freed from danger the faithful will reflect with wonder on their deliverance."—Birks.

20.—Look upon Zion.—"The figure changes to a city seated by some noble river which fertilises the land and brings to it a world-wide commerce, while no hostile ship can gain access thereby."—Ibid.

22.—The Lord is our judge, the Lord is our lawgiver, the Lord is our king.—This threefold view of the Triune Jehovah strikingly corresponds to the New Testament revelation of the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ who has both judged and justified his people in Him; of the Son of God who says, "If ye love Me keep my commandments;" of the Holy Spirit who, as King, leads (Rom. viii. 14), and leads to victory.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 28.—ISAIAH XXXIV.

This and the next chapter are entitled by Delitzsch, "Finale of the judgment upon all the world, more especially upon Edom, and redemption of the people of Jehovah." Those expositors who can never rise above the historical events which occurred in the prophet's lifetime, are here much perplexed; but those who recognise the Spirit's mode of using present events as typifying greater things to come, admit that "we are here entirely carried away from the stage of history. We are transported directly into the midst of the last things."—Delitzsch.

4.—All the host of heaven shall be dissolved.—The New Testament references to this verse are Matt. xxiv. 29; 2 Pet. iii. 10; Rev. vi. 13, 14. The agreement of the Greek with that of the LXX. in the last-quoted text is important as showing that the Sixth Seal refers to the same great event, rather than to mere political convulsions in Constantine's time.

5.—Idumea...the people of my curse.—Literalism here fails, but the mystical interpretation is consistent, and is abundantly confirmed by other Scriptures. Edom (Esau in contrast to Jacob) typifies professing Christendom in contrast to the true Church or people of God. Edom, in Isa. lxiii., corresponds to "the vine of the earth" in Rev. xiv. 18, which is evidently the professing Church. See Matt. xxv. 41, for "the people of my curse."

8.—The day of the Lord's vengeance.—"The words recur lxiii. 4, where the context assigns them to the last days."—Birks.

9.—The streams thereof shall be turned into pitch.—These words describe "A bituminous conflagration. Of such a change Petra and its neighbourhood offer no trace; while the words which follow answer strictly to the account in the Apocalypse of the fall of that mystic Babylon, which is also the mystic Edom."—Ibid.

16.—Seek ye out of the book of the Lord.—"It is plain that the prophet notes his own prophecy as part of a greater whole, to which it belonged beforehand, and in which it would be reckoned."

THURSDAY, SEPT. 29.—ISAIAH XXXV.

1.—Shall be glad for them.—R.V. omits "for them" and so does Delitzsch, as not being justified by the Hebrew.

3.—Strengthen ye the weak hands, &c.—"The Apostle in Heb. xii. 12 quotes these words and applies them anew. His mention of Esau (xii. 16) perhaps alludes to xxxiv. 5, while the charge to follow after holiness (Heb. xii. 14) alludes to the highway named in ver. 8."—Birks.

5.—Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened.—"The miracles of our Lord are here foretold, including his higher mercies to the souls of men."—Ibid. And, it may be added, including, and perhaps principally alluding to, his highest mercies to the bodies of his saints in resurrection glory. "He will come and save you" points to this. See Phil. iii. 21; 1 Cor. xv. 42, &c.

8.—It shall be for those.—The Hebrew will bear being rendered, "He is for them" (or theirs). Comp. Rom. viii. 31, "If God be for us who can be against us." See, too, Ps. lvi. 9, "'He Himself is theirs.' He is their guide, they cannot possibly go wrong. So of old (remarks Calvin) He who redeemed Israel out of Egypt Himself guided them."—Kay. The wayfaring men though fools.—The expression "the wayfaring men," refers to whoever is in the way spoken of. "Whoever walks the road, even simple ones, do not go astray."—Delitzsch.

9.—No lion shall be there.—Bunyan's lions were chained, and Christian, by keeping "in the midst of the path," got no harm. To those who are in Christ—the true way of holiness—Satan, the roaring lion (1 Peter v. 8), cannot approach, although he "goeth about seeking whom he may devour."

FRIDAY, SEPT. 30.—ISAIAH XXXVI.

"The four chaps. which follow, xxxvi.—xxxix., are found nearly all in 2 Kings xviii.—xx. They consist of two portions: xxxvi. and xxxvii. contain a history of the event which had been predicted nearly thirty years before (viii. 5—10), and frequently alluded to afterwards (x. 12—19, xiv. 24, xxx. 28, xxxi. 8). It was stated definitely that the stream of Assyrian conquest, after it had overflowed Samaria, would 'reach even to the neck' of Judah (viii. 8), and then be suddenly turned back. The fact of the prediction is unquestionable. The actual overthrow of the Assyrian is as certain as any event in the world's annals. These two chapters then are the historical goal of chaps. vii.—xxxv."—Kay.

5.—On whom dost thou trust, that thou rebellest against me?—"The words are not an inquiry, but a haughty defiance. What simpletons you must be to trust in the help of your God against so mighty a king."—Birks.

7.—Is it not He, whose high places and whose altars Hezekiah hath taken away?—"Rabshakeh knew that the reform which put down the high places in Judah was odious to a strong heathenising party."—Ibid. He thus seeks to weaken the allegiance of Judah to their king.

10.—The Lord said unto me, Go up against this land.—"Isaiah, thirty years before (x. 6—8), had summoned the Assyrian in God's name to tread down Israel 'as the mire of the street.' Rabshakeh knew the Jewish language, and this prediction may easily have come to his ears. But the half truth became practically an utter falsehood."—Birks. He overlooked the promise of mercy to the house of David, and to "the remnant that was left" (xxxvii. 4).

SATURDAY, OCT. 1.—ISAIAH XXXVII.

1.—Hezekiah...went into the house of the Lord.—"Hezekiah thus appealed to God's own promise (2 Chron. vii. 15, 16). His prayer (ver. 17) alludes to this promise. Faith is soon followed by triumphant victory."—Birks.

4.—Lift up thy prayer for the remnant that is left.—There is an allusion here to the distinct promise to "the remnant" as opposed to the mass of the nation who had been given over to judgment (vi. 13, x. 21).

7.—He shall hear a rumour, and return to his own land.—"The report, first of the advance of Tirhakah (ver. 9), then of the destruction of his own army. The promise is at first given in indefinite terms. A fuller revelation will be given in answer to his later prayer."—Kay.

18.—Of a truth, Lord, the kings of Assyria have laid waste.—"Faith does not seek to evade any seemingly adverse facts."—Ibid.

22.—The virgin, the daughter of Zion.—The Lord puts the answer to Sennacherib's blasphemies into the mouth of the faithful Church represented by "the virgin" (2 Cor. xi. 2), "the daughter of Zion" (in Isa. i. 8, 9, a parallel expression for the "very small remnant").

31.—And the remnant that is escaped...shall again take root downward, &c.—Never did this remnant so fulfil its destiny as when "the corn of wheat" (John xii. 24) fell into the ground and died; then, indeed, it bore much fruit upward.

For the Young.

ANOTHER "JOHN THREE SIXTEEN."

This story is true, and I have tried as nearly as possible to tell every word and incident just as they occurred.

Mary and Jennie sat in Jennie's room in their night-dresses, toasting their toes by the fire. They had undressed and put up their hair, which was to fluff out into frizzes and crimps at school the next day, and now Mary was wondering why in the world Jennie didn't put out the light, so that they could go to bed.

The girls had not known each other very long, but they had "taken to" each other at first sight, and the liking had increased with their intimacy. They were both away from home at a finishing school, and Mary was staying with Jennie that night.

But Jennie did not put the light out just then, as Mary was thinking she would, but reached over to the table and got her Bible. "Shall I read for both?" she said. Mary nodded assent.

Mary was a Church member, but had not thought of her Bible till she saw Jennie take hers. When Jennie had read her chapter, she said, "Shall we pray together, Mary?"

Mary nodded again, thinking they would kneel in prayer. But when Jennie added, "And will you lead us, dear?" she only stammered, "Oh, no-o, no-o; you do, please!"

They knelt, and Jennie prayed just as she had been used to do at home, and they went to bed. It did not occur to her that she had done an odd or unusual thing. She had come from a sweet Christian home, where the heavenly Father was daily called upon in simple and unaffected fashion.

Long after Jennie had gone to sleep Mary lay awake, thinking more seriously than she had ever done before of all her light, careless life.

Presently Jennie heard a little moan. Mary had complained of her tooth during the evening, and Jennie thought she was suffering again.

"Does your tooth ache so badly, dearie? Just you lie still a minute, and I'll have a hot flannel ready in half a minute."

"No, no, Jennie," putting out her hand to stop her, "it's not my tooth. I'm so unhappy; it's my heart that's aching"; and with that Mary put her arms around her neck, and cried as if her heart was breaking indeed. Jennie, awe-struck and wondering, could not say a word, but presently Mary found voice to say—

"It all comes of what happened before we went to bed. You know I belong to the Church, and even go to communion, but I never realised that I wasn't a Christian at all, till then. You know your Bible, and then you asked me to pray and I couldn't. I never had anything make me feel so in all my life. I thought how dreadful it is for me to pretend to be a Christian, when I didn't know even how to pray when you asked me. It cut me like a knife, and I've felt it ever since, I couldn't endure it any longer, without talking to you about it. Oh, Jennie dear, I am so unhappy!"

"Have you prayed?" said Jennie.

"Oh, yes, over and over again, but I don't seem to get any help or comfort. Do you think I've been so wicked that God can't take me?"

"No, no, no!" cried Jennie. "Don't you remember what Jesus said, 'I came not to call the righteous, but sinners'? Don't you want to be a Christian?"

"Oh," groaned Mary, "I think I'd give my right hand to know that my sins were forgiven."

"Do let's pray," said Jennie. And with her arms around Mary, she asked God, "for Christ's sake, to help Mary to trust in Him, and to forgive her sins." Then she said, "Don't you remember that verse, Mary, 'For God so loved the world, that He gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life'? Just think, whosoever—whosoever believeth."

There was a silence, during which Jennie was earnestly praying in her heart for Mary. Oh, how we can fancy we hear her, in simple words, but with entreaties, pleading with Jesus that by his Spirit, He would just make it all clear to Mary. Yes, and poor, broken-hearted Mary, how she was longing to know what Jennie knew so well. And the evil one, how he would be trying to make it more cloudy and difficult than ever. However, it did not last long that night; for God's Holy Spirit soon made it all so clear and simple, that presently Jennie felt Mary's arms tightened about her, and the hot tears dropping on her shoulder.

"Oh, Jennie," she sobbed, "I'm crying for joy; I see it all so clearly now. He died for me, for me. I know my sins must be all forgiven, for his sake. He died for me. Oh, I am so happy!"

"So am I!" cried Jennie, her tears flowing also for pure joy. "But isn't it simple, when you come to it? Just believe, and let Jesus save you. Just believing that He has done it all."

"Oh, I could die for Him," said Mary; "couldn't you?"

"Yes; but I think He wants us to live for Him," said Jennie softly.

The girls, as they lay talking and rejoicing, did not think that just then there was a new jubilee in heaven over another sinner brought in; but so it was.

It was a new lesson to Jennie, the experience of that night. She had never before realised so much how true it was that Jesus had taken her place and Mary's place, and died in their stead. It was now so simple to Mary, but doubly so to her, and they both rejoiced together.—Indian Witness.

"LITTLE WOMEN."

Mrs. Hilton, of the Stepney Crèche, has issued her new annual report, and our young readers will expect to be furnished with the details she gives of the progress of the children in the Home under her motherly care.

Annie, a little curly headed child of three, was brought to us by her grandmother, who begged us to take care of her, as her mother was in the habit of coming home at night intoxicated and beating the little thing violently. We did not have to keep her long, as the idea that she was not considered fit to have charge of her own child, seemed to take such hold on the young mother that she dropped her evil habits. She was induced to sign the pledge, and in a short time we were able to give her little child back to her, feeling that she would be safe and happy.

A dear baby, aged eight months, was received while her mother was in London Hospital with inflammation of the knee. She was very ill for a long time, but finally recovered, and received her baby back looking plumper and rosier than when she left it.

Julia and Maggie, whose mother is dead, are with us while their father is in University College Hospital. He is dying of consumption. Little Mary is with us while her mother is in St. Luke's Nursing Home. Florrie, four years old, was received while her mother was in a hospital. Rose and Alice, aged four and two years, were brought to us when their mother died, as their father could not take care of them.

Willie, aged nine months, father dead, mother homeless. Mother and child were found sleeping on the steps of a lady's house. The mother was very ill. The lady undertook to care for her if we took the baby. In a few weeks his mother was able to take charge of him. John, Mary, and Mabel, received while their mother went into London Hospital. Their father was unable to take care of them, as he suffers from chronic rheumatism.

Florence, aged three years, received while her mother went into Victoria Park Hospital. The mother has since died, so Florence is now one of our permanent cases.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sunday, September 25, Matt. xxvii. 15—26; Monday, September 26, Matt. xxvii. 27—38; Tuesday, September 27, Matt. xxvii. 39—54; Wednesday, September 28, Matt. xxvii. 55—66; Thursday, September 29, Matt. xxviii. 1—10; Friday, September 30, Matt. xxviii. 11—20; Saturday, October 1, 2 Sam. i. 1—12.

FROM THE DOMINION.

With our family of fifty-five we sailed from Liverpool on August 18, and arrived at Stratford, 640 miles inland, August 28, ending the entire journey of 3500 miles, and startling Mrs. Merry with a right royal English "Hurrah" in the middle of the night. Beds were ready for the young travellers. As all along the railway journey they had been well fed, nothing but repose was required.

Our Home here is most lovely for situation—a place of rest indeed! Our boys and girls are having the London life of hurry and sorrow blotted out while they make the acquaintance of Canadian ways among the animals, or in the garden and orchard. Mrs. Merry has neither gardener nor stableman; all is done by the boys. The conservatory is filled with flowers that can be cultivated in the farmhouses to which these lads are wending. The parlours are covered with notable Canadian rag carpets, and they see all bespeaking economy and making the best of everything. Simplicity marks the table as well as the house. One realises that the blessing of the Lord rests upon the Home.

A week of pleasant intercourse and a public meeting in the Town Hall next Sunday—then the distribution commences. In the prospect of this locating and the long-expected start in life for themselves, each young heart throbs keenly. For this we have prayed, and now expect wisdom to the rightly placing each. It is blessedly happy work, although involving much toil. The work among the young is now looked upon as one of the very best ways of filling up the country with the very best kind of citizens. There is room for thousands more—not the lazy and idle witless, drunken noodles, who live by begging that they may simply eat and drink.

A note received from a youth who came out last spring indicates the possibilities of this emigration work. He writes:—"I get along splendidly with farming, and like it immensely. I am going to stay here all winter for my board, and I am going to school, as I wish to prepare myself, and then offer as a missionary for the heathen. I think the country is beautiful, and I was never so well in all my life as since I came out here." This youth has not only got rugged physical health, but the desire for mental improvement. His call to the foreign field will be tested by the society he may offer himself to.

As a thankoffering to the Lord for his manifold loving kindnesses, we have had a Bible carriage built, suitable for the country. We hope to attend the autumnal fairs at Toronto, &c., during September, and to sail on October 6 by the Parisian for the dear old dens of the East of London, where we expect to seek to win a few more jewels for the diadem of our Lord and Master.

Canada is rich just now in lovers of the young as visitors. But the country is all too large for any chance of our meeting Mr. Quarrier, Dr. Barnardo, and many others who are on this side, opening up fresh districts for the receiving and supervision of the many more to follow. The Canadians are excellent judges, and prefer quality to quantity. We ask continued prayer for the 4455 now brought to Canada from the Home of Industry. Pray especially that the Bible carriage may be greatly blessed in the spread of the Scriptures.—Yours, a servant on behalf of children,

Annie Macpherson.

MR. W. E. BAILEY.—We regret to learn that this earnest evangelist is suffering from over pressure of work; he is now seeking renewed strength in complete rest, and would be thankful to have an interest in the prayers of our readers.

BURNHAM, SOMERSET.—A children's service was held on the sands of Burnham every morning during the month of August and part of September; they were conducted by Mr. A. C. Trew, of the Country Towns Mission Society. Great spiritual blessing attended these meetings; many of the little ones testified to the good they received, and not a few adults were impressed.

A PROPHETIC LETTER.

[The following letter from Anthony Norris Groves to J. N. Darby, written fifty years ago, is reproduced by request.]

My Dear Darby,—As the stormy weather threatens a little delay, I am not willing to leave England without a few words in reply to your note, and a short explanation of some other points that interest me. I have ever regretted having had so few opportunities of seeing and conversing with you since my return to England, and thereby explaining many things that might have allowed us to depart on the whole more happily than now, yet I wish you to feel assured that nothing has estranged my heart from you, or lowered my confidence in your being still animated by the same enlarged and generous purposes that once so won and riveted me; and though I feel you have departed from those principles by which you once hoped to have effected them, and are in principle returning to the city from whence you departed, still my soul so reposes in the truth of your heart to God, that I feel it needs but a step or two more to advance, and you will see all the evils of the systems from which you profess to be separated to spring up among yourselves.

You will not discover this so much from the workings of your own soul as by the spirit of those who have been nurtured up from the beginning in the system they are taught to feel the only tolerable one; that not having been led like you, and some of those earliest connected with you, through deep experimental suffering and sorrow, they are little acquainted with the real truth, that they may exist amidst inconceivable darkness; there will be little pity and little sympathy with such, and your union daily becoming one of doctrine and opinion more than life and love, your government will become — unseen, perhaps, and unexpressed — yet one wherein overwhelmingly is felt the authority of men; you will be known more by what you witness against than what you witness for, and practically this will prove that you witness against all but yourselves as certainly as the Walkerites or Glassites: your Shibboleth may be different, but it will be as real.

It has been asserted, as I found from your dear brother W—— and others, that I have changed my principles; all I can say is, that as far as I know what those principles were in which I gloried on first discovering them in the Word of God, I now glory in them ten times more since I have experienced their applicability to all the various and perplexing circumstances of the present state of the Church; allowing you to give every individual, and collection of individuals, the standing God gives them, without identifying yourself with any of their evils. I ever understood our principle of communion to be the possession of the common life or common blood of the family of God (for the life is in the blood); these were our early thoughts, and are my most matured ones.

The transition your little bodies have undergone, in no longer standing forth the witnessess for the glorious and simple truth, so much as standing forth witnesses against all that they judge error, have lowered them in my apprehension from heaven to earth in their position of witnesses. What I mean is, that then all our thoughts were conversant about how we might ourselves most effectually manifest forth that life we had received by Jesus, knowing that that alone could be as the Shepherd's voice to the living children, and where we might find that life in others; and when we were persuaded we had found it, bidding them, on the Divine claim of this common life (whether their thoughts on other matters were narrow or enlarged), to come and share with us, in the fellowship of the common Spirit, in the worship of our common Head; and as Christ had received them, so would we to the glory of God the Father; and farther, that we were free, within the limits of the truth, to share with them in part, though we could not in all, their services. In fact, as we received them for the life, we would not reject them for their systems, or refuse to recognise any part of their systems, because we disallowed much. Trusting that if this inter-communion could be established, to effect all we desire by being upheld by God, in walking in the light, as the Christ-like means of witnessing against any darkness that might be in them, according to the rule of the Lord; John iii. 19:—"This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil, neither will they come to the light lest their deeds should be reproved." A more difficult ministry of witness than a preaching one of words, or separating one of persons, yet possessing a much more mighty power over the hearts of others, and a much more influential one in blessing; and which, dear brother, I know no heart more ready to acknowledge than your own.

The moment the witnessing for the common life as our bond gives place to a witnessing against errors by separation of persons and preaching (errors allowably compatible with the common life), every individual, or society of individuals, first comes before the mind as those who might need witnessing against, and all their conduct and principles have first to be examined and approved before they can be received; and the position which this occupying the seat of judgment will place you in will be this: the most narrow-minded and bigoted will rule because his conscience cannot and will not give way, and therefore the more enlarged heart must yield.

It is into this position, dear Darby, I feel some little flocks are fast tending, if they have not already attained it. Making light not life the measure of communion. But I am told by our beloved brethren, C. and H., that if I give up this position of witnessing against evil in this PECULIAR WAY OF SEPARATION from the systems in which any measure of it is mixed up, I make our position one of simple, unpardonable schism, because we might join some of the many other systems.

I cannot be supposed, of course, to know fully their ground of acting, but I thought I knew yours, at least your original ones. Was not the principle we laid down as to separation from all existing bodies at the outset, this: that we felt ourselves bound to separate from all individuals and systems, so far as they required us to do what our consciences would not allow, or restrained us from doing what our consciences required, and no further; and were we not as free to join and act with any individual, or body of individuals, as they were free not to require us to do what our consciences did not allow, or prevent our doing what they did? and in this freedom did we not feel brethren should not force liberty on those who were bound, not withhold freedom from those who were free?

Did we not feel constrained to follow the apostolic rule of not judging other men's consciences, as to liberty, by our own; remembering it is written, "Let not him that eateth despise him that eateth not; and let not him which eateth not, judge him that eateth; seeing that God hath received" both the one and the other?

Now, it is one of these two grounds; their preventing me from, or demanding from me, other than the Lord demands, that divides me in a measure from every system; as my own proper duty to God, rather than as witnessing against THEIR evils. As any system is in its provision narrower or wider than the truth, I either stop short, or go beyond its provisions, but I would INFINITELY RATHER BEAR with all their evils than SEPARATE from THEIR GOOD. These were the then principles of our separation and inter-communion; we had resolved never to try to get men to act in UNIFORMITY, further than they FELT in UNIFORMITY; neither by frowns or smiles; and this, for one simple reason, that we saw no authority given us from God thus to act; nor did our experience lead us to feel it the best means at all of promoting their blessing or our common aim of a perfect spiritual uniformity of judgment; whilst to ourselves it afforded a ready OUTLET to the PROPENSITIES of the FLESH, under the appearance of spiritual authority and zeal for the truth.

But in all these matters we desired that our way might be bright as the light, and our words drop noiselessly as the dew, and if, at the last, they remained "otherwise minded," we would seek of God, that He should reveal even it unto them. There is something at present so like building what you destroyed, as if when weak you can be liberal and large, but when holpen with a little strength, the true spirit of sectarianism begins to bud; so that being "one of us" has become a stronger bond than oneness in the power of the life of God.

I know it is said (dear Lady Powerscourt told me so) that so long as any terms were kept with the Church of England, by mixing up in any measure with their ministrations, when there was nothing to offend your conscience, they bore your testimony most patiently, but after your entire rejection of them, they pursued you with undeviating resentment, and this was brought to prove that the then position was wrong, and the present right.

But all I see in this is, that, whilst you occupied the place of only witnessing against those things which the divine life within themselves recognised as evil, and separating from them ONLY SO FAR as they separated from Christ, you established them as judges of themselves, and of themselves they were condemned; and at the same time you conciliated their heavenly affections, by allowing all that really was of the Lord, and sharing in it, though the system itself in which you found these golden grains, you could not away with. But the moment your position and your language implied a perfect separation, alike from the evil and the good, and a rejection of them in consequence of their system, without discrimination, you no longer had their consciences with you, but they felt that though only a brother in a Father's house, you exercised more than a Father's power, without a Father's heart of mercy, and they, therefore, appealed from you to your common head, both in behalf of themselves and their systems.

There is no truth more established in my own mind than this, that to occupy the position of the maximum of power, in witnessing to the consciences of others, you must stand before their unbiassed judgment as evidently wishing to allow in them more than their own consciences allow, rather than less, proving that your heart of love is more alive to find a covering for faults, than your eagle eye of light to discover them. I send you this letter as we were the first to act on these principles, rather than to H—— and C——, whose faith and love I do so truly desire to follow. They have written to me two very long and kind letters, which I purpose more effectually and fully to answer by meeting the positions contained in them in a little tract, which I hope to prepare on the voyage, and finally to publish.

I particularly regret not meeting you at Bristol, as I had much to say to you relative to Rhenius and other things connected with India, for my heart would naturally seek sympathy and fellowship with you and those dear brethren with whom I have no dividing thoughts relative to the great bearings of truth, or the truths themselves, in which lie the power and peace of the Gospel—neither in the objects or principles of ministry do I differ; my difference with you is only as to the manner in which you maintain your position of witnessing for the good against the evil. I feel no one ever expects me, when an acknowledged visitor in the house of another, to be answerable for the ordering of that house, or as thereby approving it—they would naturally come to the house in which I had control, and where the acts were looked upon as mine, to form such a judgment; and even in such a case, if I was but one among many in the government, no honest mind would make me responsible for faults, against which, in my place and according to my power, I protested; because I submitted to those acts of others, rather than forego a greater good or incur a greater evil. If it is said man cannot discriminate, nor feel the force of my witness, unless I separate, not by heart and life, but by contiguity of person, altogether from all kinds of false systems, my answer is, that

He, whose place it is to judge, and to whom we are called to approve our hearts, can, and to Him, in this matter, I am content to stand or fall.

Some will not have me hold communion with the S——, because their views are not satisfactory about the Lord's Supper; others with you, because of your views about baptism; others with the Church of England, because of her thoughts about ministry. On my principles I receive them all; but on the principle of witnessing against evil, I should reject them all. I feel them all, in their several particulars, sinning against the mind and heart of Christ, and letting in, in principle, the most tremendous disorders; and it is not for me to measure the comparative sin of one kind of disobedience against another. I make use of my fellowship in the Spirit, to enjoy the common life together, and witness for that, as an opportunity to set before them those little particulars into which, notwithstanding all their grace and faithfulness, their godliness and honesty—they have fallen. Nor shall I ever feel separation from the good for the sake of the evil, to be my way of witnessing against it, till I see infinitely clearer than I now do, that it is God's. I naturally unite fixedly with those in whom I see and feel most of the life and power of God.

But I am as free to visit other churches, where I see much of disorder, as to visit the houses of my friends, though they govern them not as I could wish; and, as I have said, I should feel it equally unreasonable and unkind, for any brother to judge me for it, though I leave him in perfect liberty to judge himself. You must not, however, dear brother, think, from anything I have said, that I shall not write freely and fully to you, relative to things in India, feeling assured in my own heart, that your enlarged and generous spirit, so richly taught of the Lord, will one day burst again those bands which narrower minds than yours have encircled you with, and come forth again, rather anxious to advance ALL the living members of the living Head into the stature of men, than to be encircled by any little bodies, however numerous, that own you for their founder. I honour, love, and respect your position in the Church of God; but the deep conviction I have that your spiritual power was incalculably greater when you walked in the midst of the various congregations of the Lord's people, manifesting forth the life and the power of the Gospel, than now, is such that I cannot but write the above as a proof of my love and confidence that your mind is above considering from whom these remarks came, rather than what truth there may be in them.

Yours very affectionately in the Gospel,
A. N. GROVES.

Milford Haven, March 10, 1836.

EASTBOURNE HOUSE OF REST.—Dear Sir,—I have lately been privileged to spend a week at Miss Mason's House of Rest for Christian Workers at Eastbourne. It would be difficult to give an adequate idea of its happy society and hallowed atmosphere. I cannot conceive of an institution commending itself more warmly to a generous nature for support than one that cherishes the valuable lives of those whose mission it is to seek and to save the lost.—Yours very truly, C. S.

MOTHERS' LYING-IN HOME, SHADWELL.—Some papers giving details of the work here show how blessed an influence it exerts upon the women and their husbands. The kindness received, and the comfort enjoyed, with the good food, produce often a wonderful effect upon the poor woman, who, before she leaves, becomes bright and cheerful, and eager to go back to struggle again for her little ones. Many a husband, too, has been so much impressed by the cleanliness around him, and by the evident improvement in his wife's state, that he has gone back to his home resolved to do better by "the missus" in future, while husband and wife join in exclamations of thankfulness "for them as keeps such places up." Most distressing is the condition in which these poor women are often found when first visited—in many cases almost starving. The visitors do much in supplying clothes for the infants when necessary, and in keeping up the good change wrought by residence in the Home. Mrs. M. Lily Ashton Warner is the lady superintendent and secretary.

A REMINISCENCE OF REVIVAL.

IN connection with the brief sketch, given in our last issue, of the life of Principal Brown, of Aberdeen, we may mention the following facts relating to a work of grace in which he took an active part:—

During the Cattle Show, held in Aberdeen in 1857, the late lamented Mr. John Gordon, of Pitlurg and Dyce, started a daily prayer-meeting—an entire novelty at that time. He rented a small room to begin with, confident, though few others were, that it would succeed. Such was its success that the numbers were crowded out of one place after another. Mr. Brownlow North then began to preach to immense audiences; after him, Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, and the late Mr. Macdowall Grant, of Arndilly, held crowded meetings every evening, while the days were spent in dealing with the awakened, and the Sunday services extended from morning to night. The movement did not sensibly rise above the lower strata of the middle class and working classes, but the results were very real and deep. As one instance it may be stated that, whereas the lads in almost every draper's shop of the principal street would, before this, be found on the Saturday nights either in the theatre or in the public-house, now, if you wanted one to conduct a prayer-meeting, you could hardly go wrong by going to one of these lads. It was on the departure of Messrs. Grant and Radcliffe that Dr. Brown was asked to take charge of the Sunday morning service, which they left crowded. He continued to conduct it for the long period of twelve years.

The statement in our sketch that Dr. Brown "joined" the Free Church of Scotland at the Disruption in 1843 is liable to be misunderstood by those not conversant with the circumstances of that stormy period in Scottish Church history. As one of those who, at that time, and in obedience to the call of conscience, left office and emolument in the Establishment, Dr. Brown, of course, bore his part in the founding of the Free Church, which has since then done so nobly in ministering to the spiritual needs of the Scottish people.

Requests for Praise and Prayer.

PRAISE.—The family and friends of Miss Marsh wish to express their gratitude to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN who have joined with them in prayer to God that her precious life might be spared, and also their deep thankfulness in being able to tell of the gracious answer He has sent, in the improvement in her state, which now gives hope of a measure of recovery; and they venture to ask for a continuance of those kind and still much-needed prayers.

PRAYER.—For blessing on a mission at the Y.M.C.A., Birkenhead, Oct. 9 to 24, to be conducted by Mr. Henry Thorne.——For blessing on mission work in Scotland, by Mr. M. L. Gillanders.——For blessing on services held at Ruspidge, Forest of Dean, Sept. 17 to 20; at Blakeney, 20 to 24, and at Sydney, 24 to 28, by Mr. Opie Rodway.——For blessing on special services at Tresham, Gloucestershire, by Mr. J. Hixon Irving, Sept. 24 to 29.——For blessing on evangelistic services by Mr. George Williams, at the Presbyterian Church, Bristol, for a fortnight, beginning Sept. 20.——For an awakening at Kenninghall, Norfolk, that the Lord will lead souls to Himself.——For blessing on evangelistic meetings, to be conducted by Messrs. Gourlay and Falconer, beginning on the 26th inst., at Scalloway, Shetland.——For blessing on testimony given at Homburg during the past fortnight, and that several undecided ones may be brought out.——For blessing on Lord Radstock's proposed visit to Spain.

BURSLEM.—All the Nonconformist ministers and churches in Burslem are uniting in a great evangelistic mission to the people, to take place next month. The services, which will be preceded with a week of prayer, will be carried on simultaneously each evening in all the chapels. The whole town has been mapped out for house-to-house visitation for all the people, rich and poor.

DONCASTER RACES.

BY GAWIN KIRKHAM.

THE awful railway accident which ushered into eternity twenty-three souls on their way to the races will make "the St. Leger week" of 1887 a sadly memorable one. But few people at a distance, and especially those not interested in racing, can have any idea of how Doncaster is wholly given to the idolatry of the race-course during this race-week. A few years ago a police inspector said to me while I was giving tracts at the entrance to the course: "Sir, if you wish to see the greatest example of folly on the part of the British nation, come to Doncaster on a Leger day."

The following facts will help to illustrate the truth of this assertion. During the four days of the races last week between 1400 and 1500 railway trains stopped to set down passengers at Doncaster Station, requiring the aid of 130 additional hands. Imagine the numbers that drive and walk, and some faint idea may be formed of the vastness of the crowd. In addition to the ordinary police of the town, 280 extra men from the West Riding were brought in to regulate the traffic and look after the crowd on "the Leger day." Sixty-three special telegraph clerks were employed, and twenty-six messengers, and on the first two days 20,707 messages were despatched, containing 150,953 press words. During the first three days the receipts from stands, paddocks, and enclosures were £10,462 16s. Think of that in these times of agricultural and commercial depression! More than ten thousand pounds spent in three days, for sitting and standing room to see horse-racing!

But that fact pales before the possibilities of the winnings at this great carnival. The owner of the winner of the chief race won £25,000, and another gentleman won £14,000 by the same race. The money question comes to the front in another way also. It is the custom to sell a number of horses after the races, and on this occasion I noticed that one had fetched £3,000. Is it any wonder, therefore, that there should be such a fascination about horse-racing, and that so many should be drawn into it to their ruin? Some of the newspapers have discussed the question as to whether the fame of the St. Leger is on the wane. Royalty was not represented this year; but in an alphabetical list of the company, published by a local paper, and occupying a column, nineteen letters of the alphabet commence with the nobility, giving scores of names of dukes, marquises, earls, and baronets.

With such a tremendous tide of worldliness, it may reasonably be asked of what use a Christian open-air mission is at such a time. I answer, it is of value, first as a testimony. It is necessary to remind these gamblers and pleasure seekers of eternal realities, and many of them are only to be met with on such occasions, as they never voluntarily put themselves under the sound of the Gospel. It is interesting to note that Canon Tebbutt, the vicar, preached a sermon on the evils of gambling in the parish church on the previous Sunday; text Matt. xvi. 26. Again, this work is comparatively easy. My friend, Mr. W. W. Waters, of Southport, and myself were able to preach on the course itself before the racing began, and had a good hearing. And under the able leadership of Dr. A. Christie Wilson very encouraging meetings were held in the streets each night, at which some ladies rendered admirable service, both by singing and speaking. A well-attended afternoon prayer meeting was held each day in the Y.M.C.A. rooms. Tract distribution is also wonderfully easy. I have given tracts at Epsom races at the rate of 1000 an hour, but at Doncaster at the rate of 2,000 an hour, each tract being given to a separate person.

The success of the work is another reason for these efforts at races. It was in connection with mission work at Doncaster races that Mr. Edwin Kerwin, now so prominently connected with the Tower Hamlets Mission in London, was brought to the Lord. And from time to time souls are thus gathered into the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we hope to give portrait and sketch of Rev. S. Macfarlane, of the London Missionary Society, New Guinea. The number will be enlarged to thirty-two pages, and will contain a special report of the Evangelical Alliance Meetings at Aberdeen.

The statement made in a letter from Liberia, inserted on another page, calls for the earnest attention of all who value the good name of Great Britain. It is nothing less than infamous that, for the sake of gain, British shippers should compass the ruin of these West African natives in the way described. We have not given the name of the Steamship Company mentioned by the writer, but can communicate it to any friends who are interested in this deplorable business.

We note with satisfaction that the special commissioner whom the proprietors of The Pall Mall Gazette have despatched on an interviewing tour round the world is to make strict inquisition into the present aspects of legislative iniquity in Hong Kong. It is only by letting in the wholesome light of day into such nests of corruption, that there is any hope of seeing them cleansed, and we hope that may prove to be the result in this dependency of the British Crown.

Rev. F. E. Wigram, one of the secretaries of the Church Missionary Society, who has lately returned from a visiting tour in the East, sends an account of his impressions to The Record. He says there is scarcely a mission field he visited that is not undermanned. Surely this fact gives point to the earnest appeal by Mr. Fordyce, on a previous page, that the churches should advance in the grace of giving, so as to enable the many volunteers to be despatched to the places that need them so much.

Quite apart from its political bearings, the generous gift of Mr. Brunner, M.P., of £1000 as the nucleus of a relief fund for poor and distressed Irish, during the coming winter, is much to be commended. In his letter Mr. Brunner says:—

> The prolonged drought of this summer has compelled a large proportion of the small farmers of Ireland to sell their cattle at ruinous loss, and the people are poorer to a considerable extent than they were twelve months ago.

We do not wish to trench on debatable ground, but we imagine all shades of politicians will agree that one way of lessening the strained relations between the English and Irish peoples is to minister to the genuine wants of the latter. Irish discontent ought not to stop the flow of Christian charity.

In view of the approaching Christian Conferences at Dublin and Belfast, we would suggest that these gatherings be made the occasions of special and united prayer, that the work of God may be greatly revived throughout the sister island; also that wisdom and directing grace may be given to all who have any part in the government of the country.

The fact that the Irish Sunday Closing Bill has been extended for another year, is something to be thankful for in face of the growing drink bill, which, on the authority of Canon Wilberforce, "is now £2,250,000 per annum in excess of the whole rental of the island."

The machinery for "extension of time" in public-houses seems to be in as unsatisfactory a condition as most of our chaotic liquor laws. It is extremely difficult to conceive a case in which "extension of time" is defensible at all. Everyone is equal before the law, and none, however exalted, can claim exemption from its sanctions. The doors of the ale-house are very properly closed at certain hours to the labouring man, but a practice has arisen, when a mayor or a magistrate is dining in licensed premises, to override the law, and grant the special privilege of extension of time for the occasion. Public attention ought to be called to the impropriety and unfairness of such proceedings, and to the harmful example that is being set to those who already find it no easy task to withstand temptation. If local magnates wish to frequent public-houses and taverns, they ought to do so under precisely the same conditions as their poorer neighbours.

Some suggestive statistics as to cigarette smoking in America have recently been published. It appears that this form of smoking is immensely on the increase. This is a momentous fact when it is considered that cigarette smoking, even as compared with other forms of smoke consumption, is especially deleterious. An eminent physician is of opinion that the harmfulness of the habit is to be measured by the amount of nicotine absorbed, and the intensity of the heat carried into the lungs, and that in these two points the cigarette is most injurious of all.

Smoking we believe to be a bad habit, under the most favourable conditions. But if people will smoke, common prudence would dictate that the indulgence should take the least hurtful form. Happily, the public opinion of society in this country has as yet confined smoking to the male sex. In Russia, we believe, the smoking of cigarettes is an almost universal habit among women, even the educated and otherwise refined.

In a paper by Rev. A. Robertson, which appears in The United Presbyterian Magazine, there is an account of the condition of the patients in the Civil Hospital at Venice, and the facts are far from creditable to the authorities. Of the wards set apart for the Roman Catholic patients, Mr. Robertson says, "Such wards we had never before seen;" and he adds, "All are airy, spacious, and well lighted, and the floors, furniture, and pretty, soft, white-covered beds are of the most exquisite cleanliness. The patients are well cared for, and look contented, as well they might be."

This is very gratifying, but when Mr. Robertson asked if there were any Protestant patients, the reverse of the medal became visible, for he was shown a separate ward, and "instead of fifty beds where a hundred could be, here are twenty in a space fit for but ten. No more soft spring mattresses and white coverlets, but bedding of rough maize leaves, and coloured cotton, workhouse-looking quilts." Cannot some Protestant residents in, or visitors to, Venice, look into this?

We congratulate the Metropolitan police authorities on the acumen and zeal displayed in connection with the arrest of the batch of men and boys at a gambling club in South London last week. Evidence is constantly coming to light that these so-called clubs are wholesale centres of demoralisation, and we trust there will be no slackening of the crusade against them. If our police protectors were half as earnest in coping with social immorality as they appear to be just now in hunting the gamblers, we should soon see an outward improvement, at least, in the aspect of our city streets.

Mr. Stewart Headlam is not the only clerical champion of the stage. Preaching at Plymouth the other evening Rev. C. R. Chase defended the theatre as being calculated to do as much good as the church. A very grave responsibility rests upon ministers who, by utterances such as this, place a stumbling-block in the way of their flocks. The fact that the clergyman sees no harm in the theatre is only too readily seized upon by those who would fain justify their indulgence in this morally and religiously unhealthy amusement. For either clergy or laity to patronise the theatre as a school of morals is like going down to the Philistine camp to sharpen the sword; the result is not a raising of stage life, but a lowering of the Christian standard.

The words of Richard Cecil on this subject, uttered eighty years ago, are as true now as then. Speaking before the Eclectic Society, and acknowledging that he himself had been "an old play-goer," he said:—"I do not give people credit for either piety or good sense who pretend to justify the play, and yet hold religion. I know what the atmosphere is. As to serious people, it is impudent hypocrisy for them to attend plays, if we know what is meant by spiritual religion."

At the recent Trades Union Congress one of the London delegates said that the working men were not in favour of the Sunday opening of museums and art galleries, whilst another asserted that they had decided unanimously in favour of it. If this latter statement be true (which this very difference of official opinion, on the face of it, renders more than doubtful), the feeling of the working classes has marvellously changed for the worse since 1882, when half a million of working men deprecated Sunday opening, and supported Mr. Broadhurst in opposing it in the House of Commons. We prefer to believe that the great bulk of them are at heart opposed to this secularisation of the Lord's day.

The working men are being made the stalking-horse for the wealthy and leisured and fashionable classes, who would like to see the Continental Sunday acclimatised in England. The Sunday Museum is the thin end of the wedge for the Sunday forge or factory. Were the employer to run his works seven days per week, it would only be pushing the principle to its logical conclusion. It is significant that the working classes on the Continent have had enough of this, and are demanding their day of rest. That the open art gallery will be an antidote to the public-house is an obvious fallacy, for the closing time of the former would dovetail with the opening hour of the latter, and among many Continental nations, notwithstanding these Sunday amusements, drunkenness is on the increase.

A suggestion is made in an Irish contemporary that a short service in the Celtic tongue in a number of churches in Ireland might be "a testimony in the right direction, and an evidence of a desire to meet the spiritual requirements of the Irish in their own tongue." The experiment is one worth trying, for with the Latin of the Mass on the one hand, and the English of the Protestant service on the other, there must be many people in the sister island to whom, even if they are to some extent bi-linguists, the Gospel message would come with power if spoken in their own tongue.

Dr. Martineau's admission that Unitarianism in England is losing ground is not difficult of proof, and an Irish contemporary has not hesitated to state that "in Ireland Unitarianism will soon be extinct." We cannot agree with Dr. Martineau that the cause is to be found in "defective organisation," for the real weakness of Unitarianism lies deeper than that, and is to be found in the fact that the living Christ is absent from its teaching. "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto Me," Jesus said; and all organisations which fail to present Christ as the Divine Redeemer, bearing our sins "in his own body on the tree," must necessarily fail in attracting lost and weary sinners.

The terrible disasters which have recently happened in this and other lands cannot but remind us that there is a God that judgeth in the earth. Jesus has, by his lesson concerning the eighteen on whom the tower of Siloam fell, forbidden us to judge that those who have been burned in blazing theatres, or crushed in railway collisions, or scalded to death by steam, or blown to atoms by explosions, were greater sinners than other men. Often, as in the earthquakes last spring, the heaviest calamities have fallen upon those who seemed the least guilty. Our deepest and kindliest sympathies are evoked for those who have suffered in all these catastrophes, and for bereaved survivors; but it would not be wise to forget that in all such events God is speaking to us, not so much to shun seismic centres for building sites, or to provide our public places with sufficient means of egress, or to avoid the madness of suspending precautions for safety when the danger is most imminent—though all these may be included. But the first and most imperative warning surely is, "Except ye repent, ye shall all in like manner perish"—and the catastrophe by which the soul perishes is infinitely more terrible than any which can happen to the body.

The Independent leads the van in opposing the new departure at Andover Theological Seminary, favouring the notion of a second probation for the heathen after death. It gives extracts in uncompromising condemnation of the theory, from twenty-four evangelical papers of all denominations, which by no means exhaust the stock of clippings. And it has, besides, a large batch of letters from the best-known clergymen and laymen in the country. Except one [The Christian Union, formerly edited by Rev. H. Ward Beecher], it believes "the entire evangelical press of the country to be opposed equally to the business methods of the Andover Theological Seminary in the misuse of the trust funds of that institution, and to its new theological speculations concerning future probation."

It may not be uninteresting to quote the following passage from Fichte, in connection with the note in our issue of last week, as to the Temporary Dwellings Bill:—

> Christianity yet carries in its breast a renovating power of which we have no conception. Hitherto it has only acted on individuals, and through them on the State indirectly. But whoever can appreciate its power, whether he be a believer or an independent thinker, will confess that it is destined some day to become the inner organising power of the State, and then it will reveal itself to the world in all the depth of its ideas and the full riches of its blessings.

When that day comes, and we pray that it may be hastened, our rulers and legislators will find time to deal with the questions which affect the moral and spiritual well-being of the people, recognising primarily the Divine law that "righteousness exalteth a nation."

A question once put by Rev. F. Arnold to Canon Mozley is not unworthy of the consideration of the three bishops who preached before the British Association at Manchester, and, directly or indirectly, commended the modern theory of evolution. The conversation had turned upon Darwin's views, and Mozley had remarked that they enabled us to understand better the Mosaic cosmogony, when Arnold pithily said, "I would just like to ask you in what stage of development, from the ascidian to the ape, and from the ape to savage humanity, did God say, 'Let us make man in our image?'" Mozley replied at once that this difficulty was insuperable.

It is painful to think of the wrongs that are done in the blind pursuit of wealth. A gross example has recently been unearthed in the north of Scotland by a correspondent of The Scotsman. At Fraserburgh during the herring season some 2500 young women are imported into the town from distant places, to assist in preparing the fish for the market. The fish curers undertake the responsibility of housing these workers; this is how they are reported to do it:—

> It is said to be no uncommon thing for nine or twelve women to be put into one room, which is sometimes not more than fourteen feet square. In none of the houses (referring to a particular street) are there lavatories. It is easy to imagine, but too much for the imagination to dwell upon, the picture the correspondent asks us to draw—of the ten or a dozen "gutters" coming into one of these fourteen feet square rooms on a rainy day, with their clothes wet and filthy from their work, and spending the night there without any sanitary conveniences. It hardly needs, as a finishing touch, to suppose the addition for a time of masculine visitors, with pipes and whisky, to thicken the atmosphere. Pity for the girls will move most people who hear of such a state of things; but with what sort of feelings are we to regard the capitalists who house the women in this way?

It is to be hoped that publicity may produce a wholesome revolution in this urgent matter; but it reflects great discredit, not only on an honourable calling, but on the sanitary authorities and the Fraserburgh community generally, that such a scandal should have been allowed to exist.

There have been many expressions of regret that the splendid (Large) Exeter Hall could not be more frequently utilised for Sabbath evening services for the people. Our readers will note with pleasure that Dr. Grattan Guinness is to commence a Sunday evening Gospel campaign there on October 16, to extend over the winter months. We trust that prayer and effort will go hand in hand in making this special mission an undoubted success.

This year of grace will long be famous for its memorial celebrations. Last week our American children were celebrating the centennial of their national constitution. The marvellous progress the United States have made during their brief national career, and the gigantic strides they are seemingly determined to make in the near future, are dwelt upon in the current editorial "Letter from Northfield," on a preceding page. May our friends across the Atlantic have the grace to use aright their wonderful opportunities.

Next week the Jubilee of Phonography will be observed at an International Shorthand Congress in London. Mr. Isaac Pitman, the inventor of the phonographic system of short and swift writing, has unquestionably been one of the great benefactors of his generation. At the Congress next week his many friends will present his bust to his family; he well deserves the honour. Very appropriately at this time, the Book of Common Prayer is just issued by Messrs. I. Pitman & Sons in beautiful phonographic dress, as a companion volume to the New Testament, published a few months since by the same house. These volumes ought to be possessed and studied by every young man who practices, or is acquiring the knowledge of this popular system of stenography.

Temperance sentiment is very strong in the United States. The Third Party—i.e., the Prohibition Party—has just held an enthusiastic Convention at Syracuse, New York; out of more than 800 delegates, 637 were formerly Republicans, and 134 Democrats. The New York Independent on this reads a lesson to the Republicans, of which these are the heads:—

> (1) The Third Party was made possible by the blunders of the Republican Party. Its leaders sought to maintain friendly relations with the Saloon and anti-Saloon elements, which so disappointed and disgusted earnest Temperance men that the Third Party is the result.
>
> (2) The Third Party is maintained largely by the blunders of the Republican Party—their broken pledges to submit a constitutional amendment weaken the faith of Temperance Republicans, and they secede to the Third Party.
>
> (3) The majority of the Third Party can be brought again into the Republican fold when that party severs its alliance with the Saloon, and enters into an alliance with the people against the Saloon, instead of manœuvring for party advantage.
>
> (4) The longer the Republican Party plays fast and loose with this issue, the more difficult will the Third Party make it for it to redeem any pledges it may make.
>
> Let the Republican Party announce as a fundamental principle of its creed that the people have a right to deal with the Saloon as they will, and that the Saloon must submit to the fiat of their votes, either through Local Option, or State Prohibition, and it will take an impregnable position. Let it accept honestly and positively the platform of the anti-Saloon movement, and the Third Party will soon cease to trouble it.

It would be well for Great Britain and Ireland if the temperance sentiment were half as strong here as in America. It is a rare thing there to find a non-abstaining Christian family.

A correspondent of The Daily News calls timely attention to the brutalities inflicted upon animals during transit across the sea. The picture he draws, from personal observation, is a most revolting one, though it applies to the comparatively short water trip from Cork to Bristol. Those who read it may imagine what are the sufferings of cattle during the fortnight's voyage across the Atlantic. Some of the details that have been communicated to us, as to the wanton cruelties exhibited by the drovers towards these unfortunate beasts, are too horrible for repetition in print. We believe the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals take some steps to prevent needless cruelty in process of landing; there seems to be great need for reform in the treatment during shipping, and passage across the ocean.

One custom is a peculiarly barbarous one. If an animal is killed on the voyage, the insurance is lost. To save the insurance, animals wounded from the action of storms or from any other cause, no matter how terrible the hurt, are allowed to linger on in their agony till death mercifully releases them. Can anything be more unrighteous, from the standpoint of the Scripture truth that "the righteous man regardeth the life of his beast"?

"REPLENISH THE EARTH."

Those people who urge that the earth is rapidly becoming over-populated may find food for wholesome thought in Mr. William Hoyle's last little work, published since his death, "Wealth and Social Progress in relation to Thrift, Temperance, and Trade." Mr. Hoyle shows pretty conclusively that the earth, if properly cultivated, is capable of supporting a population one hundred times larger than it now does, and that the harvests of the sea could support three times as many more.

The painful fact that one-sixth of our population in Great Britain and Ireland is living in dire and constant poverty, and another third always on the verge of destitution, is attributed by Mr. Hoyle to the huge national waste of £400,000,000 per annum in various ways, and to our national expenditure upon the drink bill, the yearly loss from which is set down as £210,000,000.

Mr. Hoyle had no sweeping remedies to propose. Looking on the drinking habits of the age as responsible for most of the national poverty and degradation, he urged sobriety and self-denial, and in his figures and arguments there is much to encourage those who, in working upon total abstinence lines, believe that they are helping to remove that which is not only a barrier in the way of our national prosperity, but also in the way of the spread of Christ's kingdom.

VALLADOLID.—The work here is not prospering; the difficulties are great. Many souls for fear of losing their means of livelihood dare not declare themselves as Protestants. Yet the Lord blesses evangelists amongst the villages, where, as a rule, they are well received. The little meetings are sometimes crowded, and the kitchens too small to contain those who come to hear. A sober-minded industrious man at one of these meetings saw that the preacher possessed something that he had not; the Holy Spirit worked within him, and at another meeting he fell upon his knees, and prayed to be delivered from the burden that oppressed him. His wife also was converted.

MISSIONARY CONVENTION.—At Lakeside, Ohio, recently, thirteen missionaries, on furlough from China, India, and Africa, met twenty-seven missionary candidates, some already under orders, and others still in various educational institutions or in business, but regarding themselves as called of God to the work. Dr. Thoburn, the veteran Indian missionary, presided, and his earnest, sensible, practical words were of great value to all present, as were also the addresses of the other returned missionaries. But the meetings, which lasted a week, were not mainly for speech-making, but rather for counsel. In the convention, questions on climate, languages, food, clothing, studies, native etiquette, methods of work, and many other matters were asked and answered without number. Months of reading and correspondence would have been of less value. Yet, throughout, the supreme stress was laid on the Divine call, and the spiritual equipment. All went away enlarged in mind, strengthened in purpose, and quickened in faith.—British Weekly.

OFFICIAL CORRUPTION.

One of the great social sores of our day is the corruption that prevails in official circles. This is one of the principal root sources of many of those evils which have so long baffled philanthropists and Christian workers.

In the course of recent inquiries, we came across some facts that too fully bear out this statement. It is an undoubted fact that many of our public civic offices are filled by men who have no principle to guide them other than that of self-interest. Anyone who will investigate the affairs of those districts where social evils abound will be horrified to find that much of the real blame lies on the shoulders of men of prominence, on the Vestry or Board of Guardians. "Who is the absolute owner of those houses?" we lately inquired, with respect to a number of closed houses of ill-fame. The answer was, "A vestryman!" In some way this man, years ago, got into office, and his official position gave him a security in promoting his self-aggrandisement which he could not otherwise have had. In the recent disclosures at Newcastle, and, indeed, in hundreds of other cases, the miscreants who fatten on the evils that are poisoning our social and civic life, are men in places of authority and power, against whom, in too many cases, even the police are afraid to move.

"In our Vestry," said a friend, "there is a regular clique who support each other, and work into each other's hands." At some meeting a majority will condemn certain houses. Some member of the ring will buy them next day, their value being now greatly depreciated. By this fraudulent ruse a considerable sum of money is often made. Even members of Christian churches, we are credibly informed, will not scruple, in their official capacity, to make money by thus setting at nought the laws of God and man.

It is amazing how apparently respectable men, when in such positions, seem altogether to ignore conscience. The medical officer of a large parish in East London, with a salary of some £500 a year, was maintained in his position by such a clique as that we have alluded to, long after it was found that he was utterly unfit for the place. The recital we heard of the way in which he misused his power amongst the poor, was such as to excite our utmost horror. Yet it was only after a long struggle that he was dislodged from his post, though his gross misconduct was well known to all the Vestry officials.

What is needed is that Christian people should recognise and exercise their stewardship in local government. Two or three men who would act as in the sight of God, might do wonders at any vestry or board of guardians, as we could adduce instances to show. If our local parliaments were cleansed of those whose object is to advance self-interest, or to pander to lust, we should soon find many an Augean stable cleansed. Never was there a time, we think, when it more behoved Christian people to take their full share in governing, whether in these local assemblies, or in the Imperial Parliament. "Righteousness exalteth a nation" is not the motto by which hundreds of our public men are guided. The public conscience is being aroused, as it has seldom been before, with regard to the prevailing evils at home and abroad. But that is not enough. Feeling must be translated into action, and action of the right kind will only be taken by those who fear God and regard man.

THE FIGUERAS MISSION.

Every second Wednesday in the month a missionary meeting is held at Clapton Hall, Stoke Newington. At the meeting held on the 14th instant, we had the pleasure of welcoming our friends, Mr. and Mrs. Rodriguez, who have been carrying on for some years the Spanish Evangelistic Mission at Figueras, N.E. Spain. Mr. Rodriguez spoke a little in Spanish, which his wife translated, telling of God's faithfulness in this work, but we were particularly interested in hearing the details from Mrs. Rodriquez. Their latest effort, she said, is editing and publishing a small monthly paper, El Heraldo, by which means they hope to carry the Gospel message into the houses of rich and poor, thus reaching people where neither they or their helpers can enter. El Heraldo has only existed about a year, and has already five hundred subscribers. Mr. and Mrs. Rodriguez circulate many more copies by freely using the post.

The work at Bisbal commenced in a humble way, with one convert who walked from that town to Figueras, a distance of thirty-six miles, whenever he could attend their Sunday meetings. On refusing to give up his Bible to be burnt by the priest, he was excommunicated, and his wife commanded to leave him. His position was lonely and difficult: after a time he gathered a little band round him for the study of God's Word. Mr. Rodriguez received an invitation to go and speak to them, and, accompanied by his wife, he went there. There are now twenty-one believers, gathered out amid much opposition; they much need a hall. The work at Vilabertran has been carried on for some years. The hall where the meetings were held has been lost through the influence of the priests, and services are held in the top rooms of a house belonging to a Christian Spanish lady. It is greatly desired to erect a hall to seat about three hundred. Towards the needed £400, the sum of £150 has been subscribed.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodriguez return to their happy, though difficult work on September 28. I am sure I may ask the prayers of your readers for much increase of blessing, that they may be used in turning many from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God.

Henry Llewellyn Shelton.

28, Lordship-park, Stoke Newington, N.

FUNERAL SERVICE IN A LODGING-HOUSE.—Recently, in one of the lodging-houses at the East-end, known as "The Prince of Wales," a service of a very unusual character was conducted by members of the East London Evangelisation Society. Every Sunday evening some of the lodging-houses in the neighbourhood of Flower and Dean-streets are visited by these workers. On this occasion, the proprietor of the house having died shortly before, it was resolved that the service should be of a special character. The congregation assembled in the kitchen. Those who at first seemed indifferent, soon assumed a reverential attitude, whilst many joined heartily in the responses to the prayer. Mr. Harvey, secretary of the Society, gave a practical and touching address.

WIDOWS' FRIEND SOCIETY.—This Society visits "the widow and fatherless in their affliction," and in so doing confers benefits upon individuals and society the value of which it is impossible to estimate. The poor widow, with her little ones, almost half starved, are cheered and helped by the assistance given to keep the home together, and often but for their help there would be no alternative but the workhouse. Last year relief was granted in eighty-five cases, this relief being of a permanent character, such as providing in whole or in part washing utensils, sewing machines, &c., and thus enabling the widow to secure a maintenance for herself and children. The thankfulness expressed by many of these poor people for this assistance is of the most touching kind, and if more widely read would move many to take a part in this beneficent work, which accomplishes so much at a little cost. The office is at 27, King-street, Cheapside, the secretary being Mr. M. Kenchington.

"A LITTLE POT OF OIL."

O Lord, it cannot really be
Of use to any, nor to Thee or me:
Why send me then
To borrow now again
From this and that,
Who coldly looked on me before
And turned to all I had to say
So deaf an ear?

Ah! me, but He has said,
And I must go, and quick obey;
Haste, lads, and borrow not a few,
But empty vessels
Mind they all must be,
And bring them here to me.

They come and now the door is shut;
Mother and sons are busy there within
Pouring the oil,
That blessed oil of Heaven.
They, the starving ones,
Are pouring out their all
Into these empty vessels;
All are full,
And not one drop has stayed

Till all are full.
Ah! precious measure
Of his heavenly grace,
Fulness itself,
Fulness of grace.

E. H. G. W. D.

"A WORK OF DEATH."

The following painful facts are extracted from a etter recently received by Mrs. Robertson, of Hampstead, from Miss M. A. Sharp, of the American Mission in Liberia:—

I have in former letters mentioned that the heathen were eager listeners. They are like the young man who came to Jesus to know what he must do to be saved. He heard attentively, but went away sorrowfully. So they turn away and come again; but even then the truth is sapping the foundations of their beliefs and superstitions, and their customs are undergoing a change: the way of the Gospel is being prepared. "Christian England" helps to keep them in their degradation. English steamers stop and take in Kroo men here, to do the work of the steamers while on the south coast. They try to make the Kroo men take their pay entirely in rum. Some steamers have refused to hire unless they would agree to take their pay in rum. Then, for the space of a week after the men return home, the scene beggars description. Men and women are given up to drunkenness day and night, during the time. I go to the town to teach, but the din and drunken orgies are deafening and disgusting. Then there is a cessation and decent times till the next steamer returns with Kroo men.

The companies may not know of this; it may be the greed of the steamer officials. I wish the attention of some of the temperance people in London could be called to it. Of course the heaviest cargo is rum and gin, but what I speak of is paying off labourers in this nefarious stuff. Public sentiment in England should be aroused to the work of death that England is doing on the West Coast of Africa. The heathen are bad enough, but when a great Christian nation will bring them still deeper down in degradation by her greed of gain it is dreadful. O for the time when the commerce of the seas shall be His. If you were to put a check to this terrible plague you would be doing a grand work toward hastening on the redemption of this dark land.

NEW SOLDIERS' INSTITUTE, GIBRALTAR.—Sir A. E. Hardinge, Governor and Commander-in-Chief, opened the new Soldiers' Institute on the 8th inst. The building is most substantially erected and admirably fitted up. It consists of library, refreshment bar and kitchen, reading-room, quarters for the Superintendent, lecture-room, bath-room and accessories. In the afternoon over 100 men partook of tea. In the evening a crowded and enthusiastic meeting was held.

EVANGELISATION IN BASUTOLAND.

Rev. H. Moore Dyke, writing to us from Morija, Basutoland, says this station was commenced by the Paris Mission in Basutoland in 1833, and has always been a most important centre of evangelisation, there being a large population in the neighbourhood. The church numbers upwards of a thousand communicants; but, owing to the impossibility of all these assembling at one time, several out-stations have been formed, at the largest of which the Lord's Supper and baptism are occasionally observed. On Sunday, July 17, a very numerous congregation assembled at one of these, called Kolo, about fifteen miles from Morija, many heathen being attracted by curiosity to witness the baptism or confirmation of thirteen adults. Of this meeting an interesting account is given by Rev. A. Mabille, who conducted it. He says:—

"Seeing such a large concourse of heathen, I said to them, when concluding the morning service, that I would much like to meet with them in the chapel, the service, for want of room, having been held in the open air. I told them I had some special words to say to them, and that the Christians would do well to remain outside and pray for the conversion of the heathen. As soon as the baptismal service was ended a great number of the heathen flocked into the chapel. There was no need to urge them, they themselves saying to the Christians, 'You are not to come in, it is our meeting and we wish to be alone with the teacher.' I went in with a fellow-missionary, and a native evangelist, my wife, and a very few Christians. I was quite astonished to find about 400 heathen. I told them I had a special message for them, but that first I wished them to answer a few plain questions.

"My first was, 'Do you believe that the God of whom you have heard from the missionaries is truly your Creator?' There was a very general answer, 'Yes, we believe this.' My second question was, 'whether they regularly came to the services on the Lord's Day to pray to God their Creator.' Some replied 'Yes'; but others (the greater number), 'No.' I therefore repeated my question in plainer words, asking whether their not keeping the Lord's Day was not a transgression of the law of God?—'Yes.' I proceeded to ask whether they did not know they were continually transgressing God's law; that they knew God had told them not to lie, not to steal, not to commit adultery, and I then put the question in plain terms, 'Do you not tell lies? Do you not steal? Do you not commit adultery?' To this there was a general reply, 'Yes.' My astonishment increased at every answer, for the Basutos are most unwilling to bind themselves to any statement by giving a straight-forward answer. Generally speaking, when we, after an exhortation, ask them to tell us what they think, instead of a plain answer, they will say, 'We know that you teach us God's truths, we wish to be saved, but do not know what prevents us from being converted; God likes some and hates others;' but, as to answering a plain question by a simple yes or no, this is almost unheard of.

"I then observed, 'As you confess that you have broken God's laws, do you believe there must be a judgment day fixed by God for you?' 'Yes, we believe it?' My fellow labourer here added a few words about the reality of that judgment. Feeling this was a glorious opportunity for drawing in the net, I then asked, 'If there be any here who truly desire to be converted, let him lift up the hand.' Several lifted up their hands, some timidly, some courageously. After prayer, the meeting having dispersed, about forty remained behind for further instruction—men, young men, women, and girls, mostly adults.

"I again asked them whether they had well understood what I had said. They replied, 'O yes, we understand.' My wife went from one to another warning and exhorting them, 'Do not trifle with the Lord God; this is a serious matter.' 'Yes, yes, we understand. We wish to be saved.' 'Will you allow me to write your names down, that we may know where you live, and that we may follow you and visit you.' Hearing this, about four went out; I was surprised not to see them all go out, for generally they are much afraid of having their names written down. I took down thirty-five names, twenty-seven of these were of people living at Kolo, or in the neighbourhood; six of them came from other out-stations in the vicinity; and two from more distant villages. They then promised to attend a special meeting to be held the following week, as to the result of which from their behaviour on the occasion referred to I cannot doubt."

Mr. Dyke adds that several young men who had been trained in the schools at Morija, having returned to their native land, are now most earnestly labouring to raise their fellow-countrymen. Several of these are attached to the Swiss Protestant Mission, whose stations are in the most northern part of the Transvaal Republic in the Zoutpansbergen, above the tropic of Capricorn. One of these young men who left a few months since with a Government certificate of competency as a teacher, has been appointed by the Swiss brethren to take charge of one of their out-stations. Several letters written by him to old friends at Morija are of great interest, breathing, as they do, the spirit of humility and devotion to the work of evangelisation in which he is engaged.

WORK AMONGST FACTORY GIRLS.

Miss Meredith Brown, Hon. Secretary of the West London Institute for Factory Girls, writes as follows, from 20, Upper Montagu-street, London, W.:—

Just before leaving London for two months' rest, I learned that one of our girls in whom I had been much interested had attempted to commit suicide, and that she lay in the hospital in a precarious condition. As soon as she was convalescent I sent for her. "Did you intend to take your life?" I inquired. "Yes," she said; "my mother had not been sober for seven weeks, her abusive language was unbearable, and she kept food from me too. My father also drank, and there were seven of us in two small rooms, and I could stand it no longer." A lady in the south of England, to whom I telegraphed, kindly took her under her care, and after a few weeks' rest and medical treatment, a place was got for the girl. Another girl came to me a few weeks ago for shelter. "I went to a music-hall," she said. "I didn't pay, I was treated—and—I never went home again . . ."

It is to counteract the terribly degrading and demoralising influences of these low theatres, music-halls, and dancing saloons—the only recreation of 150,000 young factory girls—to afford innocent and healthy amusement and instruction and fit them for the duties of life, and to provide a temporary shelter for those whose homes drive them to such terrible extremities as I have described, which is the object of this effort.

The response to our appeal from all quarters has been most encouraging, and it will interest those friends who have so kindly contributed towards the effort to know that we have got the sum required for the purchase of the buildings, which have been secured for £750; but £800 in addition is needed to adapt the premises to a factory girls' institute, and for fitting and furnishing. Of this sum we have in hand about £150. I shall be glad to send collecting cards or a dozen copies of "Only a Factory Girl" for gratuitous distribution for 2s. post free.

HOME FOR INVALIDS, HASTINGS.—The third anniversary of the Home in Quarry-road was held last week, and the workers were much cheered by the kind sympathy and interest expressed by those present. Rev. Mr. Bolton presided and gave encouraging testimony of the work from his own observation, having watched its development from the beginning. The room was well filled with servants in the evening, who were addressed by Mrs. Thorpe and Miss Langham.

Letters to the Editor.

EVOLUTION.

Dear Sir,—Now that even bishops in their sermons have taken to commending evolution, it may be well to remind ourselves of two things.

(1) What it is that evolutionists really mean. The followers of Haeckel and others do not hesitate to assert that "worms, originated by means of spontaneous generation from the inorganic compounds of carbon, &c., are the direct ancestors of man." Observation, however, goes to prove that life is only derived from life. Again, we are told, "the evolution theory is perfectly irreconcilable with the idea of a personal Almighty Creator." And "Darwin's theory turns the Creator out of doors, and leaves no room for the agency of such a Being."

(2) That evolution is, up to the present moment, only an unproved theory. Evolution is, as you truly observe in your last issue, "founded on hypothesis, and buttressed by assertion." (a) In the current number of The Nineteenth Century, the Duke of Argyll points out that Mr. Darwin was entirely mistaken in his theory of coral reefs. It has been quite exploded by the researches of Mr. Murray in the Challenger expedition. Well may the Duke head his article "A Great Lesson." (b) Sir William Thomson, from a study of solar phenomena, utterly denies the possibility of that infinite series of geological ages, which is the first demand of the evolutionist. (c) Professor Max Müller, of world-wide reputation, points out that the crowning faculty of articulate speech constitutes an impassable barrier between man and beast. (d) Dr. Carruthers, of the British Museum, states that the whole testimony of the vegetable kingdom entirely contradicts the hypothesis of evolution. (e) Professor Owen says:—"No instance of change of one species into another has ever been recorded by man." And again, "Man is the only species of his genus." (f) The eminent Professor Virchow, of Berlin, declares that "Man has not descended from the ape, or from any other animal whatever." (g) The famous scientists Humboldt, Brewster, Agassiz were also opposed to this unsound and degrading doctrine.

In these circumstances the premature conversion of the bishops seems even more to be lamented than the flippant tone and temper of leading advocates of this pernicious materialism.—I am, yours faithfully,

H. Heber Evans.

P.S.—The above quotations are taken from an interesting pamphlet, "Mr. Gladstone and Professor Huxley on the Mosaic Cosmogony," by Rev. B. Wray Savill, Rector of Shillingford. Third Edition. 1s. 6d. Longmans.

THE VILLAGE POOR.

